The newspaper is specific circulation in a territory you desire to reach. One can buy the circulation in the communities or sections he desires to reach by using the newspaper mediums in that community or that section. The whole question is approached in much the same manner as one approaches a problem involving the sale of any commodity. Commercial successes can be credited to the newspaper by the hundreds. Communities are recognizing the value of the newspaper.

The newspaper is a community force. The editor puts human interest into his editorial and news columns. Much can be accomplished if factionalism is not allowed to interfere with the policies.

INLAND TO PREPARE MANUAL OF METHODS FOR NEWSPAPER COST ACCOUNTING

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb.—Waste and direct cash losses in newspaper making through the lack of knowledge of production costs were stressed when members of the Inland Daily Press Association discussed cost finding at their annual meeting.

C. R. Butler

By unanimous vote the meeting Wednesday adopted a resolution providing that the Cost Committee of the Association prepare a manual of methods for uniform cost accounting for the newspaper industry and employ an accountant for consultation in this work.

The resolution, proposed by C. R. Butler of the Mankato (Minn.) Free Press, answered the vital point raised in the animated and enthusiastic discussion of cost finding.

The point was that while many newspapers are working under cost finding systems today, lack of uniformity of methods of allocating costs in accounting often render the compiled returns of individual newspapers of no real statistical worth to the industry as a whole.

Speakers emphasized that as long as cost accounting systems are not uniform no morals can be drawn from averages taken from production cost statistics of a group of newspapers.

A summary of other points advanced in discussion follows:

1. Newspapers exist which are operating without more than the vaguest idea of their production costs. There is wide divergence of method among newspapers operating with cost finding systems, but these newspapers know momentarily where they stand on every point, and are able to weather depression swings of the business cycle.

2. Federal taxation has made knowledge of costs and full and accurate accounting essential. The newspaper without an adequate accounting system may be paying unnecessary taxes through lack of knowledge of its own fiscal position.

3. Composite statements—average figures of costs by departments in large groups of newspapers of similar circulations and relatively similar operating conditions—can be of inestimable value to the individual publisher who, analyzing them, can find out what leaks are draining his own profits.

4. Composite statistics, however, are useless unless reached from cost statements prepared on a uniform basis, the condition the inland's projected manual of methods is designed to attain.

World interest among publishers in cost finding was demonstrated when Wil V. Tufford, of Clinton, Ia., secretary-treasurer of the Inland stated that he received requests for information on the cost finding program from South Carolina, Honolulu, New York and an organization enquiring on behalf of newspapers in Australia.

C. F. Karstaedt, of the Beloit (Wis.) News delivered the first address of the day on "What Real Accounting Means to a Publisher." He outlined the detailed accounting system of the Beloit News, and cited examples showing where the News had profited by accurate accountancy methods.

"We know to a certainty what our costs are, and while conditions have sometimes interfered with our collecting what we know should be a fair rate, yet the fact remains that we know what we should get," he said.

Karstaedt explained that the News uses the accrual method of accounting which requires that earnings of a given period be shown as such, even though not realized in cash in a later period. This requires setting up as assets in the balance sheet items of income accrued but not yet received. It demands, he said, that one keep accurate accounts of one's own business.

"All of you know how much others owe you, no doubt, and how much you owe others," he said, "but are you good stewards with yourselves? Do you know what the business owes you to a certainty?"

He told how the News received a refund of $8,000 in Federal taxes when, after having made an excess profits return in which, through lack of information, full credit was not obtained for amounts to which the newspaper was entitled, checking of accounts enabled the News to present the government with data which made rectification and the refund possible. Had full books not been kept the data would not have been available.

Under the accounting system used on the News, he said, earnings are classified under local advertising less allowances, classified advertising less allowances, city circulation earnings and country circulation earnings and miscellaneous revenues.

Under expense accounts, or cost accounts the News has first, editorial; second, composing; third, press and stereotyping; fourth, local advertising cost; fifth, classified advertising cost; sixth, foreign advertising cost; seventh, city circulation cost; eighth, country circulation cost.

These are the direct departmental newspaper expense accounts.

Then there are two overhead expense accounts called plant and office expense, and furthermore bad accounts, Federal income tax and depreciation, also interest, if any.

H. W. Henry of Ernst and Ernst, Chicago, addressed the meeting on "Uniform Accounting Methods and Comparatives."

"In many lines of business it is more or less difficult to determine profits each month," he said. "This is not true of your business. You can ascertain your operating results 12 times each year instead of once, and profit by the information obtained. It is not difficult to take an inventory of newsprint, ink material at the close of each month and this is the extent of physical inventory involved."

Among facts which he said should be revealed monthly by books are: "Statement of condition as reflected from the balance sheet and profit and loss from a statement of operations.

"Comparative schedules of expenses in detail, classified with respect to departments.

"Analysis of income from circulation and advertising. Correct ascertainment of income from circulation giving effect to deferred income arising from prepaid subscriptions. Analysis of advertising income by classifications in terms of lines or inches or amount.

"Average cost per line or inch of advertising, and average mechanical department cost per page. These are averages only and should be considered as such."

He urged compilation of newspaper cost data.

"If you install a uniform system of accounts and submit periodically the percentage reports called for by the prescribed questionnaire (of the Inland) a mass of vital statistical information will be obtained which will be of the greatest possible value to every one of you," he said.

Francis H. Bird, director of the department of research, United Typothetæ of America, spoke on "Research Work on Cost Finding."

Outlining the elaborate cost finding work done by Typothetæ, he told how voluntary returns had been furnished the headquarters office from member organizations since 1913, and how annual composite statements were made showing costs in the industry.

Printing executives found in these reports material of aid in formulation of future plans and policies, he said. Such questions as what ratio of rent to sales was proper a member's office might be answered by the member's study of the average figure, he said. All other phases of the industry are demonstrated in averages drawn from member reports of production costs.

Keen interest and desire for wider knowledge of cost finding methods marked discussion from the floor after the addresses.

RESEARCH NEWSPAPER'S GREATEST FUNCTION, SAYS UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT

The following address on "Newspapers and Universities," quoted in part, was delivered by Ernest DeWitt Burton, president of the University of Chicago, before the Inland Daily Press Association meeting in Chicago this week.

PERHAPS the conjunction of terms in the title of my address may strike you as a bit peculiar, bringing together things that are too remote to be related. I contend, however, that newspapers and universities have a good deal in common.

In the first place, they are both large consumers of printer's ink and white paper, and by this I mean more than the mere physical fact. I mean that both are dealers in ideas, and the expression of them in legible form. In other words, they are both in the true sense of the words "Educational Institutions"; they are stimulators and directors of thought, formers of public opinion, and directors and builders of character.

But perhaps a more important point of resemblance is that they are both public service corporations. The justification of their existence is that they serve the public. It is true that the newspapers are, as is well known, great money makers for their proprietors, while the universities' only dividends are knowledge and character and they pay these to anybody that will prove his capacity to carry them away. Yet this is a minor difference. Neither a newspaper nor a university has any right to exist wholly for private profit, but must vindicate its right by its real service to the community.

But it is of research as a function of both institutions that I wish especially to speak, not because research is necessarily more important than education and publication, but because it is most fundamental both for the newspaper and for the university, and because it is perhaps least understood and its importance most likely to be overlooked.

Research is the pursuit of the unknown. It is the resultant of three causes—human need, human curiosity and a world capable of satisfying the former and of exciting the latter.

Research, has enriched the world immensely both materially and spiritually; but the spiritual benefits always outweigh the material, and the material have their chief value in that they enable us to avail ourselves of the spiritual.

Now what has this to do with newspapers? This: that research is the fundamental task of the newspaper and that every newspaper man is engaged in research. He does not, indeed, cover the whole field of research, but neither does any prosecutor of research. The chemist is not also a sociologist, and the historian is not also a physicist.

The newspaper man is engaged in a particularly difficult kind of research, and one that is preeminently entitled to be recognized as research. He is dealing with the facts at first hand.

To be sure, he cannot always be accurate. Perhaps he does not always try to be so. But possibly we shall have to

(Continued on page 29)

SPIRIT OF THE WEST IN LIFE OF M. H. DE YOUNG

Pioneer Newspaper Publisher, Dead at 75, Launched San Francisco Chronicle on Borrowed $20 Gold Piece—Was a Political as Well as a Journalistic Figure—Built Success by Sheer Force of Indomitable Personality

THE column rules of San Francisco Chronicle were turned on Monday of this week. The broad black lines announced to the people that M. H. de Young, founder and publisher of that newspaper, was dead, at the age of 75, following an emergency operation for an acute intestinal condition.

The news swept over the country, for there is not a city where M. H. de Young did not have friends or acquaintances, through his broad newspaper associations, his patronage of the arts or his devotion to political objects.

He was a valiant newspaper figure, strikingly typical of the spirit of the golden west. His life story is a remarkable romance, reading in this prosaic day more like fiction than fact. A glimpse of his amazing ability to succeed is had from the single fact that the Chronicle was launched on a borrowed $20 gold-piece that was returned within a week.

Eleven pages of the Chronicle, of this week, were required to record the history of the pioneer and his works. The news deeply stirred California and there were many manifestations of grief at the parting and many testimonials to honor the memory of one who had contributed richly to the city and the people of the far west.

On Wednesday a low mass, the most simple of the rites which the Catholic Church accords its dead, was held in St. Mary's Cathedral. Mr. de Young had wished for a simple ceremony.

Mgr. Charles A. Ramm, who recently baptized Mr. de Young into the Catholic Church, administered the last rites. The Most Rev. Edward J. Hanna, Archbishop of San Francisco, pronounced the final blessing. There was no eulogy.

The procession from the residence to the cathedral was led by a company of police and two companies of firemen. There was no procession. Interment was in Holy Cross Cemetery.

On Feb. 19, the Chronicle announced that George T. Cameron, Mr. de Young's son-in-law, would assume charge with the title of publisher and president of the Chronicle Publishing Company.

Meichel H. de Young, was the son of a banker and merchant of Baltimore, of the same name. His mother was born in Bordeaux, France. The son was born Sept. 30, 1849, and when he was five years of age his father and mother decided to take up their residence in California. The household goods and the father's stock of merchandise was shipped on a clipper ship, voyaging around the Horn, and the family started west, via the Mississippi River to New Orleans. En route the father suddenly died.

Mrs. de Young and her remaining family halted for a time in Texas, and finally, with great hardship, made their way to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama, where the railroad was then being constructed by the French. Part of the dangerous trip was made on mule back.

Mr. de Young received his education in the public schools. With his brother he published a small school paper, where he learned to set type. His first money was earned as a carrier boy for the San Francisco Sunday Mercury, and so large was his route that he was compelled to work all night to cover it.

Mr. de Young's brother Charles and he started the San Francisco Dramatic Chronicle in 1865, on borrowed money, printing it in a job shop on Clay street. It was little more than a program and was distributed free by the publishers.

The paper soon got a reputation for its little squibs and facetious attacks upon the town's notables and Mark Twain, attracted by it, made his headquarters in the office and occasionally wrote for the little paper. He attracted other Bohemians of that day, including Bret Harte, and the paper took on a real literary quality.

Typical picture of M. H. de Young, at his office desk, surrounded by treasured portraits and art objects.

From these small beginnings the San Francisco Chronicle evolved, being published as a daily in 1868. Writing of the incidents of the early days some years ago Mr. de Young gave this incident:

"The Bulletin and the Call made a deal to smash us. It was not unexpected, as their threats had given us plenty of warning. But it turned out to be the greatest thing that ever happened to the Chronicle among the many things that have happened during its career.

"The Call and the Bulletin arranged with a large number of the interior papers of the State for a simultaneous attack on the Chronicle. The stories published attacked the reliability of the paper, of its news, and particularly of its news of prize-fights and sporting events, with which, at the time, we were having a great deal of success in arousing the interest of the public.

"The outcome was something entirely different from what the Call and Bulletin had expected. Their attack made the Chronicle as a newspaper. The stories they published about us, the wide publicity they gave us, interested the public in the Chronicle and made the readers investigate.

"The Call and Bulletin did not carry the battle very far. They found out at once that the attack was a mistake and had only advertised to the whole State a San Francisco paper that previously had not been very well known. We got a tremendous country circulation out of the curiosity aroused by this statewide attack. That was the beginning of our country circulation.

"This was a bright spot in our career—we have had bright spots all the way through, as well as great troubles—but this was the one that brought us to success."

A little touch of his business genius was shown when the Chronicle was started as a daily. The brothers determined to borrow no money. To raise money they sold their circulation routes in advance of publication of the daily.

From that day to this the paper has been a live factor in the field, until today it is housed in the recently completed Chronicle plant, said to be the finest modern newspaper building west of Chicago, with the paper at present at the peak of its influence and commercial success.

From an editorial, evidently expressing the feeling of the staff, published in the Chronicle on Monday, the following summary of events is taken:

"M. H. de Young was the last representative in America of an era that is past, the era of personal journalism, so-called, that brilliant nineteenth century period in which men like Dana, Bennett, Pulitzer, Medill, Watterson and the de Youngs built from the ground up commanding newspaper institutions by the sheer force of their personalities. He was until yesterday the sole survivor of that historic group. With his passing that epoch comes to its final end.

"This is a far different age in the newspaper world. It is no longer possible to do what the de Youngs and the other great newspaper builders of their time did. Never again will a metropolitan newspaper be launched, as the Chronicle was, on a borrowed $20 gold piece that had to be returned within the week. The complexity of the modern newspaper bars repetition of these romances of the past.

"M. H. de Young lived through that older period and far into the new. Nor did the modern change set him at all out of place in his world. Alone of all his group he has been a figure in this present no less than in the past which formed him. He was able to be because his brain and spirit never hardened into the mold of a particular period, but remained plastic and responsive to the impress of changing conditions. The surviving figure of an era that is past, he died a modern.

"The figure of M. H. de Young was national in many other views than the journalistic. In politics he was a Republican leader for decades, for many years a national committeeman, a leader in five Presidential conventions, and the dominant figure in one. In many ways his share was large in shaping national Republican policies and candidacies.

"In the art of international exhibitions Mr. de Young was America's foremost exponent, with a wider experience than that of any other man of his country. He was national commissioner to two Paris expositions and to the Chicago World's Fair; organizer, president and director-general of the California Midwinter Exposition; California's commissioner-general at the Omaha Exposition, and vice-president and director of concessions of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition of 1915.

"He founded and built up, with ever-increasing generosity, a museum which now has national rank, the Museum in Golden Gate Park, which a grateful city has now called by his name.

"Again in the newspaper world, Mr. de Young was an organizer and for twenty-four years a director of the Associated Press, the greatest news-gathering organization in the world. His was a vital part in the shaping and the building of what is the model and the conspicuous success among news-collecting agencies.

"These are views of merely the large activities of a notably many-sided man. The public saw these, and realized the man of affairs. It never realized the many other sides on which Mr. de Young's energy and interest found expression.

"With all his immense labors as a newspaper builder, as a political leader, as a manager of expositions. Mr. de Young found time to cultivate an unusual number of other interests.

"He was an art collector of experience and judgment, familiar with the contents of the world's museums and known and respected by every European dealer and many in Asia. It seems almost impossible now that he could ever have found time to do it, but somehow he managed to make more than a score of collecting journeys to Europe for the benefit of the Museum.

"It will be remembered that the Chronicle began as the Dramatic Chronicle. Though it soon ceased to be the chief concern of his newspaper, the drama, with music, remained all his life

(Continued on page 10)

View of magnificent new San Francisco Chronicle building, which now stands as a huge monument to the late M. H. de Young.

THREE UNITS IN NEW JERSEY JOURNAL HOME

Office Building, Executive Departments and Machinery Housed in Articulated Structures on Magnificent New Thoroughfare — Several Novel Mechanical Ideas Appear

PRESENT needs and future growth are both provided for in the new building which will house the Jersey City Jersey Journal on and after Tuesday, Feb. 24. The present building was erected only a little over 12 years ago, across the street from the new home. The block on which it is located has been condemned by the city for conversion into a plaza. This plaza, known as "Journal Square Plaza," is 400 feet square and will join a new $2,000,000 bridge over the Pennsylvania Railroad cut at Journal Square tube station. The new Jersey Journal building is located at the head of the square with a fine outlook over the plaza and the new bridge.

The new home embodies the latest features in newspaper building, including a three-phase alternating electrical system, "straight line" copy routine, oil-heating plant, fire-sprinkling system with central controls, and expansion reserve. The approximate floor area is 250,000 square feet, a 150 per cent increase over the old building. It may be described as a three-unit structure 313 feet long.

Fronting on Journal Square is an office building, 70 x 83 feet and five stories high. Facing on Newkirk street at the rear is the building housing the pressroom, composing, stereotyping, delivery, paper storage and boiler rooms and which measures 108 x 146 feet. This is three stories high.

Connecting these two buildings is another, 38 x 84 feet, and also three stories, and housing the editorial, executive, and business offices. This unique layout is made possible because of the fact that the plot is somewhat in the form of capital I.

To provide a site for a building giving additional paper storage space the Jersey Journal has acquired a plot, 60 x 100 feet extending from the "neck," joining the two larger buildings, to Enos place on the side, thus giving outlets to three of the four streets forming the block in question. The office building fronting on Journal Square is finished in brick and granite and is so erected that ten more stories can be added. The remaining buildings are finished in brick. The construction throughout it of steel and reinforced concrete, completely fireproof. The buildings are so constructed that there will be room for new equipment at all points as needed.

Shower baths for the mechanical force and a kitchenette and rest room for women employes are among the features calculated to provide maximum comfort to the workers.

One of the most interesting mechanical features of a comprehensive lighting and ventilating system is the use of iron grill work in the first floor press room, permitting both light and air to enter the reel room. There is a cork inlay about the bases of the presses which eliminates vibration.

The buildings are surrounded by courts. Storage space permits the housing of 23 carloads of paper, 10,000 gallons of fuel oil, and two large ink tanks. Two superimposed water tanks of 15,000 gallons capacity are for a fire sprinkler system. The tanks are enclosed in a tower as a protection from the elements. The presses have a two-source power system connecting them with sub-stations all less than a mile distant. The new plant will consume so much electricity for light and power that a wholesale rate will be obtained from the Public Service Corporation supplying it. The current is brought into the building at a voltage of 2,400. It passes into a room equipped with six large transformers and thence "stepped down" to a 220 volts. In the control room adjoining there is a switchboard 13 feet long and well supplied with switches and the other devices necessary for the automatic operation of the intricate electrical system.

For ordinary purposes, three transformers will be of sufficient capacity. The presses "hook in" to three other transformers by long distance control through switches in the pressroom. By using these three latter transformers only while the presses are in operation there is avoided transmission loss in current consumption when the presses are not running. A seventh transformer is a "reserve," to be used in event of one of the other transformers giving out. By a system of electrical duplication throughout the plant, a breakdown will bring only momentary difficulties as there are two independent sources of power supply. The current supply is three phase, 60 cycle, 220 volt.

The transformer vault and switchboard room are in the cellar where also are the boiler, waste paper and paint storage rooms, the oil and ink tank rooms, reel room, and paper storage room having an area of 11,000 square feet. Paper is lowered from the street by a gravity chute.

All storage rooms housing combustible materials, including oil, waste paper, gasoline and kerosene, either are outside of the buildings or are insulated by fire doors and walls.

On the first floor, the general business offices are located just back of the lobby of the office building. Behind the business offices is the press room, housing two Hoe superspeed octuple presses. There is room for another unit on each press, and for a third press.

Between the business office and the press room is a covered driveway for staff cars with a separate room for washing and repairing cars. Beyond the press room is the delivery room supplied from presses by conveyors, a loading platform and driveway—recessed into the building—for delivery cars, capable of housing more than a dozen trucks. The driveway faces on Newkirk street.

Circulation office, mailing room and filing room are a part of the second floor of the printing building. A balcony for spectators has been built around the presses. In addition, there are complete machine shops, stock rooms, welding, electricians' and air compressing rooms.

On the second floor of the executive building are located the telephone exchange, the business manager's quarters, other private offices and the women's rest room and kitchenette.

The third floor is given up to the editorial department. In the rear of the editorial department on this floor the composing room and stereotyping departments are located. The composing room is equipped with 19 Intertypes, 3 Linographs and 2 Lanston Monotypes. Provision has been made for a total capacity of 34 machines.

The composing room has an area of 9,000 square feet and the stereotype room is 24 by 106 feet in area, with a 17-foot ceiling. A water-cooling system supplies both rooms.

The stereotyping room is equipped with five steam tables, one Junior Auto Plate, and a Semi-Auto Plate, removed from the old building and being held as a reserve pending later installation of the second caster.

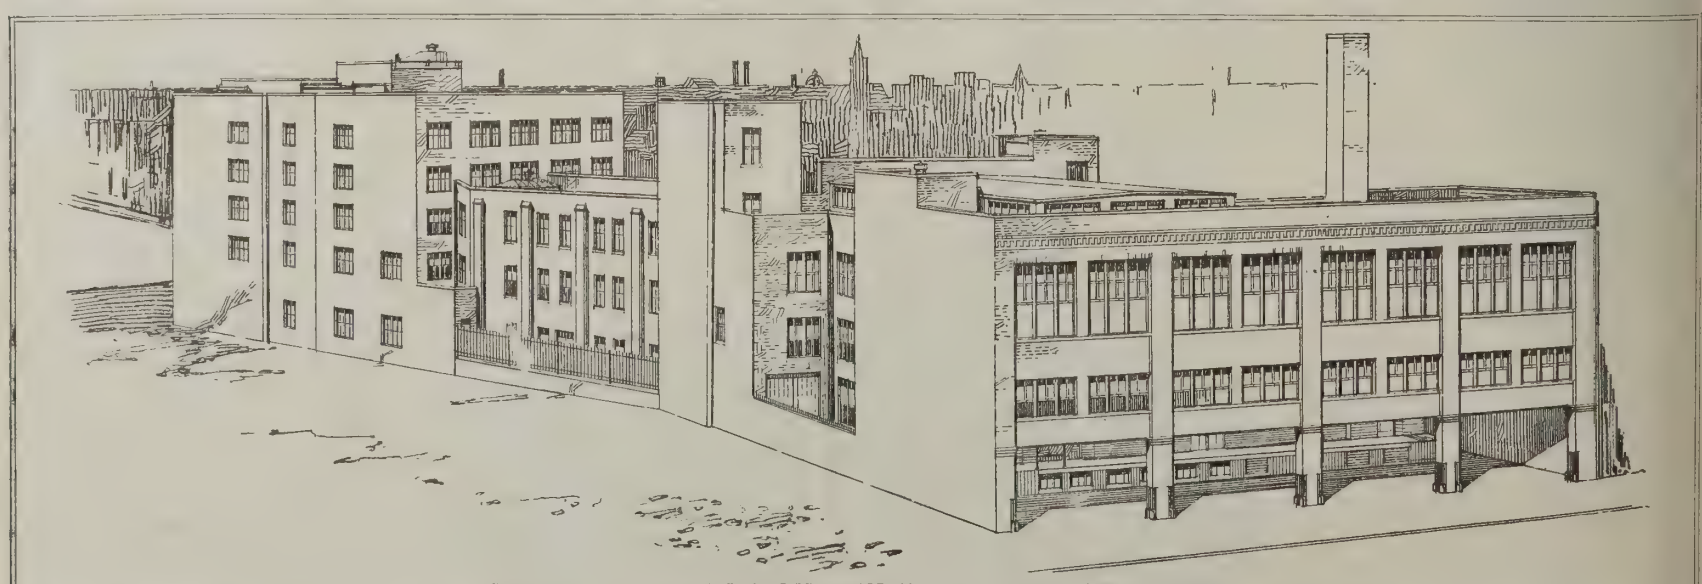
The direct movement of copy has been worked out to the finest detail. Lamson pneumatic tubes, used for communication in all parts of the building, carry copy from the editorial and advertising departments to the composing room. The correction and proof-readers' rooms are in line. Forms are pushed across the composing room on tables which never leave the room. Apertures in the wall permit the forms to be pushed into the stereotype room, directly onto the mat tables. Mat dryers, casting machines, etc., are all in line, the plates passing down to the press room on a pneumatic gravity conveyor which works automatically.

The new plant was designed by John T. Rowland, Jersey City architect, and was constructed by W. H. & F. W. Cane Jersey City builders. The many innovations will be of special interest to newspaper publishers attending the annual session of the American Newspaper Publishers Association scheduled for New York in April, and these publishers are invited to inspect the Jersey Journal's new home.

The Jersey Journal was founded in 1867. It was incorporated as the Evening Journal Association ten years later The late Joseph A. Dear, father of the present owners, was the business manager from 1868 to his death in 1908. He was succeeded by two of his sons, Joseph A. Dear, jr., and Walter M. Dear.

The paper was located at 37 Montgomery street, near the waterfront for 37 years but moved to Journal Square in 1912.

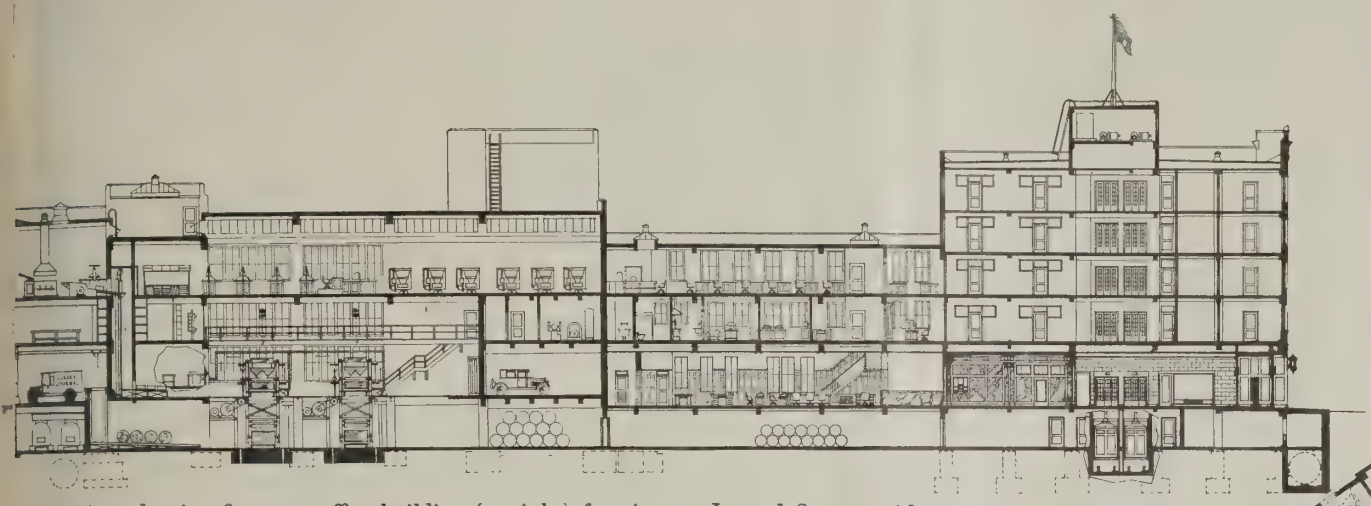
School Adopts Seitz Suggestion



As a result of the suggestion by Don C. Seitz of the New York World, that community newspapers throughout the state have a column of brief items of national and world importance summarized each week, students in the Department of Journalism at Syracuse University started the service this week. Each student in the community newspaper class is assigned to a newspaper and the items are gleaned up to the end of each week. Small dailies as well as weeklies may have the service upon application to Professor John O. Simmons. The suggestion was made by Mr. Seitz in his address at the annual meeting of the New York State Press Association and a number of editors have already received the service.

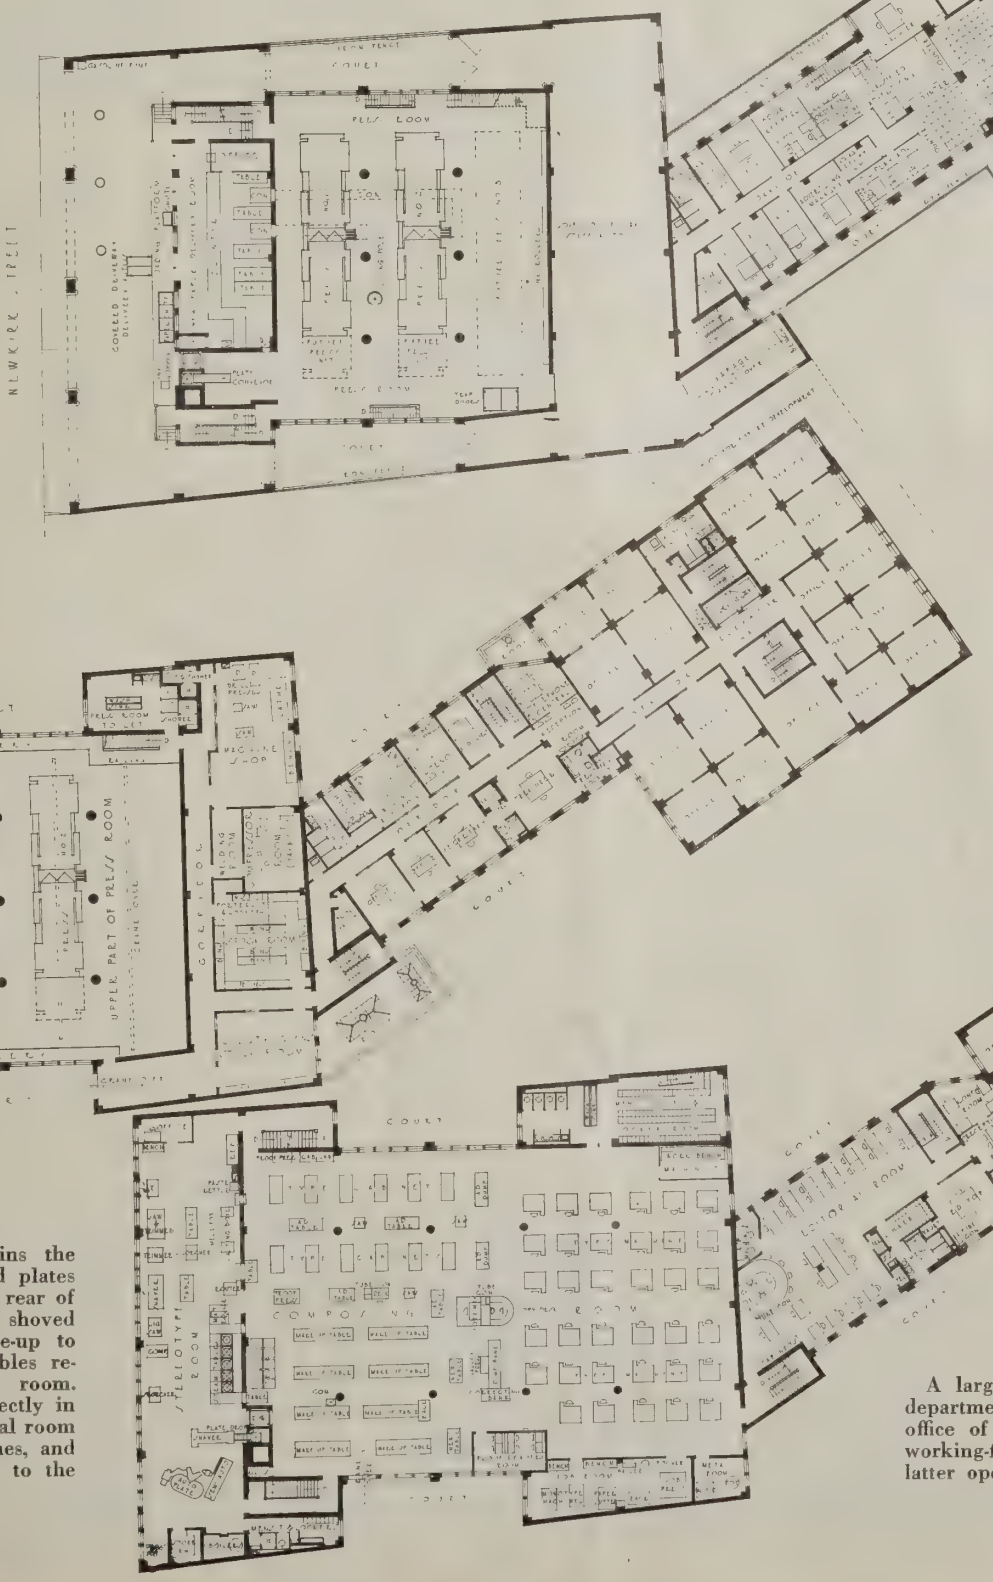
Mergenthaler Pays Dividend

The board of directors of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company this week declared an extra dividend of 1¼ per cent on the capital stock of the company, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. Both dividends are payable March 30 to stockholders of record March 4.



Syracuse Journal Company Elects

At the annual meeting of the Syracuse Journal Company, Louis D. Burrill was chosen secretary of the company to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Howard Burrill. Other officers are: Alexander T. Brown, chairman; Harvey D. Burrill, president and publisher; Stewart F. Hancock, vice-president; M. M. Andrews, treasurer.



SIDE AND REAR VIEW SHOWING UNITS OF NEW JERSEY JOURNAL HOME.

FLOOR PLANS OF JERSEY JOURNAL'S BUILDING

Cross section, showing five-story office building (at right) fronting on Journal Square, with executive offices and plant behind it. Note the spacious storage rooms for paper.

Presses are at street level, with ample room provided for additional machinery. The plan (at right) of the ground floor shows two enclosed driveways for staff cars and trucks, and the convenient access given the latter to delivery room. White paper, as shown directly above, reaches the basement by a gravity chute. Stores occupy the front building and the advertising and accounting forces are housed in the central structure.

Second floor plan (left) shows public offices in the Journal Square building unit, behind which are the offices of the newspaper's business directors. The upper part of the pressroom, with the public gallery and electrical control and storeroom, machine shop and mail room are included on this floor. Six pillars extend the two-floor height of the pressroom, so placed as to consume the least possible floor area. Spacious side windows assure abundant air and light.

Stereotype machinery adjoins the composing room, and finished plates are dropped two floors to the rear of the press-line. Forms are shoved through apertures from make-up to steam tables, the make-up tables remaining in the composing room. Proofreaders are enclosed directly in line of operations. The editorial room adjoins the composing machines, and has pneumatic tube-conveyors to the copy-cutter's desk.

A large reception room connects the editorial department with the public office building. The office of the editor is accessible both from the working-floor and the reception room and the latter opens also upon a conference chamber.

N. Y. DAILIES PROTEST A. B. C. REPORT

Members Look With Disapproval on Report Broadcast by Newspaper Committee — Matter for Directors, They Say

Following the conference between officials of the Audit Bureau of Circulations and its New York and Brooklyn daily newspaper members, held in New York, Jan. 7 and 8, on a question of interpretation of A. B. C. auditing rules, it was this week learned that the Bureau had broadcast to all newspaper members a statement which has called out another protest from the New York publishers.

The New York and Brooklyn members had objected to a request for an examination of certain books and accounts, which, it was held, did not concern circulation.

It appears that the management of the A. B. C. referred the disputed point to the Newspaper Divisional Committee, which met in Chicago, and considered the question. A result of this meeting was the broadcasting of a report to all A. B. C. newspapers, containing the following recommendation:

"That in order that the Bureau may function to the greatest efficiency in determining circulation data, a newspaper publisher shall submit to the Bureau, when requested to do so, in the course of an audit and following a circulation ramification, all his payrolls, general books and ledgers and all other records in his possession that may have any bearing whatever on a proper audit, provided that when the publisher deems fit to submit such information only to the managing director, the chief auditor, or one of his immediate assistants, he shall have the privilege of so doing provided he pays all the additional expenses of having the managing director, chief auditor, or one of his immediate assistants to come to perform such work."

In reply to this the New York members declared in a letter to Stanley Clague, managing director sent Feb. 12:

"At a meeting of the New York members of the A. B. C. we were instructed to write you as follows:

"To your letter of Jan. 28, is attached a report of the 'Newspaper Divisional Committee.'

"Paragraph 3 of the report refers to the rights of the Audit Bureau of Circulations to examine all books and records in the case of an audit, with further provisions applying if a publisher should question the right of an auditor to examine 'all his payrolls, general books and ledgers, and all other records, etc.'

"The New York members of the A. B. C. look with disapproval on the issuance of such a communication, in view of the fact that the question of the scope of examination is still, on your agreement, a matter to be considered by your board of directors and a committee representing the New York members.

"The attitude of the New York members has in nowise changed since the meeting of Jan. 8, with you and your associates, and they herewith repeat their disagreement with and protest against the attitude of the A. B. C. and of the Newspaper Divisional Committee as expressed in the report broadcast by your office.

"The New York members do not consider the action of the Newspaper Divisional Committee binding and await the result of the agreed meeting in New York of their committee with your board of directors before expressing their attitude more explicitly."

The New York committee is headed by J. F. Bresnahan, business manager of the New York World. Other members are: Howard Davis, New York Herald Tribune; Fred A. Walker, of the Munsey newspapers; J. C. Dayton, New York Journal, and Edwin G. Martin, Brooklyn Eagle.

E. Lansing Ray, of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is chairman of the Newspaper Divisional Committee, which consists of Gardner Cowles, Des Moines Register and News-Tribune; Hugh A. O'Donnell, New York Times; T. R. Williams, Pittsburgh Press, and Galt Burns, Washington Star.

STORY OF M. H. DE YOUNG'S CAREER

(Continued from page 7)

long a highly placed interest of Mr. de Young. It was to him and to his brother, Charles, that San Francisco was indebted for its earliest first-class theater, the California. He was an ardent reader, also, and, as his memory was extraordinarily retentive, he was extremely well informed on a great variety of subjects.

"Of the personality of Mr. de Young few but those close to him ever obtained a proper picture. He was a positive character in every sense of the word. He was a straight thinker, and his will to carry out that which he thought the right thing to do was strong, and found expression in extreme directness.

"Mr. de Young was essentially a kind-hearted man. He was extremely reluctant to hurt the feelings of another. There were cases, well known to the staff of his newspaper, where he permitted his interest to suffer severely rather than hurt the feelings of men for whom he had regard; there are many individuals who experienced his kindness and who mourn for him now.

"The public picture ever contained the beautiful lights of Mr. de Young's extraordinary tenderness toward his mother and his wife and children. The consideration both he and his brother showed to their mother was extreme. She was their sweetheart as long as she lived. Nothing was permitted to interfere with the nights appointed in each week for dinner at home with their mother. On the night of the greatest crisis in the life of the Chronicle, the night that decided whether the Chronicle was to be crushed out of existence by the great constitutional fight of 1878, the de Young boys dined at home with their mother.

"Deep, too, was the affection Mr. de Young bore to his wife and children, and tender his care of them. His children, and later their children, were the joy and solace of his life. In the end he lived for them. The loss of his only son, on whom he had built his hopes and to whom he was just then preparing to transfer his active responsibilities, was the heaviest blow of Mr. de Young's life. It is doubtful if he was ever quite the same man after his son died.

"These are intimate lights. But without them it is impossible to understand and appraise the personality of the man.

"On another side is the enterprise always shown by Mr. de Young, the sound eagerness with which he kept abreast of progress in everything connected with his business. He had a sense uncanny of the practicability or impracticability of new inventions and methods. He was quick to seize on every useful one.

"He put in the first electric lights in San Francisco, installed on of the first, if not the first, of San Francisco's telephones, built the first metal frame, fireproof building on the Pacific Coast, was the first in America to use illustrations with news, and when he died had completed building the first modern newspaper production plant west of Chicago.

"On the public side his patriotism is unquestioned. He believed in the destiny and mission of the United States. If his political partisanship was pronounced, it was because his sincere conviction was no less so. He was positive in it because it was not in his nature to be negative.

"M. H. de Young was a San Franciscan of San Franciscans. He loved this city. Its every success was a personal triumph to him, its injuries wounded him. In this is an explanation of the strong position he and his newspaper displayed in San Francisco matters.

"Mr. de Young engaged in many bitter struggles in a period when battles, political and otherwise, were not conducted with the amenities of the present. Few of the participants engaged—and all were strong men—escaped the general barrage of calumny.

"The older generation has forgotten, the younger knows nothing of, the extremity of bitterness and calumny that was engendered by this violence of the political warfare of the epoch that is past. It is sufficient to say that out of a period in which irresponsible slander was the common ammunition of all warring parties, M. H. de Young came through to a time when men are accepted for what they are and when reputations depend upon those who know most and not upon those whose malignant imaginations are most vivid.

"In the Chronicle the name of M. H. de Young can never be forgotten. His history and that of the newspaper have been one and inseparable. It is impossible for an outsider to know how dearly he regarded this, his creation. Nothing can be more moving than his own recital of the gray morning in 1906 when he looked down upon the burned city where all his property lay in ruins; when he pondered whether, with his subscribers and his advertisers all scattered and out of business, it were possible to reconstruct his newspaper, and when at last his pride in the Chronicle as his own child determined him to rebuild it at any cost or go down with it."

The editorial concludes with a touching personal farewell.

MICHIGAN WOULD BAN GAMBLING NEWS

Senator Introduces New Bill to Prohibit Publication of Betting Odds—Replaces Defeated Measure Sponsored by Detroit News

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 19.—Prospects of a renewal of the old newspaper fight in Detroit over publication of racing forms and betting odds generally are seen in the introduction Wednesday by Senator Joseph Bahorski of another anti-gambling bill to replace the Vorrhies Bahorski Act, passed at the last session of the Legislature, but thrown out on a technicality by the state Supreme Court.

Senator Bahorski, a Detroit man, has designed his new bill to be an almost exact replica of the old law, changing only a few minor portions of the measure. A clause is also added to provide that in event certain portions of the act be declared unconstitutional other sections remain in effect.

This, however, would not prevent upsetting the law on similar grounds to those employed before, when the Supreme Court found an error in the procedure of passage.

The bill, which is said to be the most stringent except for its predecessor ever proposed in the nation, not only prohibits publication of betting odds before a sporting event but afterward, and it bars entrance into this state of any publication carrying such gambling information. This feature was opposed before by the Detroit Times, in the evening field, and the Detroit Free Press, in the morning, while the Detroit News strongly sponsored such prohibition.

FURTHER EXTENSION GRANTED

Replies to Federal Trade Commission's Agency Complaint Due March 16

All three respondents in the complaint issued by the Federal Trade Commission, alleging conspiracy in restraint of trade in connection with certain advertising practices, were granted further time extension to March 16 to make replies, it was announced this week.

The three respondents are the American Association of Advertising Agencies, the American Press Association, and the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Prints 80-Page Auto Section

The Grand Rapids Herald on Feb. 9 published an 80-page automobile section.

SENATORS MAY INSIS ON ODDIE CLAUSE

Senate Conferees Indicate They Fav Postal Amendment — Publishers' Appeals Against Rate Boost Swamp Congress

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 19.—Repr sentatives of the publishing interes launched a final drive this week to pr vent enactment of the House postal ra and wage increase bill which was se to conference with the Senate measu the House rejected.

Appeals poured in upon the Senate a House conferees from newspaper a magazine publishers, individually and c lectively, not to report the House leg lation which would boost second cla rates approximately fifty per cent.

The pointed warning was repeated th if the House bill were to become a la many newspapers would be compelled withdraw from the mails.

In some quarters the belief was e pressed that the House bill would nev get past the Senate, nor the Senate b past the House.

With but two weeks of the prese Congress left the thought was also a vanced it might prove impossible to e fect a compromise between the tv branches despite orders of administrati leaders that the proposed postal wage i crease must be taken care of.

The conferees—Senators Moses, New Hampshire, Phipps, of Colorad and McKellar, of Tennessee and Co gressmen Paige, of Massachusetts; Kel of Pennsylvania, and Bell, of Georgia got together for the first time Thursd at a luncheon with Senator Moses.

It was indicated that the Senate confe ees would insist upon the Oddie amen ment, although it seemed probable t House conferees might remain adama against this or any of the other Sena proposals for keeping second class rat virtually where they are.

C. Williams, manager of the Southe Newspaper Publishers Association a rived on the scene Thursday for a seri of conferences with Southern Senato and Congressmen in the hope of helpi to block the House bill if it did for t basis of a conference report.

There was no indication how long t conferees would remain at their task attempting to adjust the radical diffe ences between the Senate and Hou measures, or whether or not they wou be able to reach an agreement befo Congress adjourns sine die on March 4.

Both Senator Moses and Mr. Kelly e pressed the opinion, however, some ki of legislation would be woven into conference report which the Senate a House could then vote up or down.

Congress continued to ignore con pletely the flood of protests from new paper publishing interests still pourir in upon both branches.

Members of Congress were again a vised some of the smaller daily new papers are already contemplating wit drawal from the mails in the event t postage rates are increased.

E. J. Ottaway, publisher of the Po Huron (Mich.) Times-Herald sent letter to the Michigan delegation e plaining how his paper intends to ove come the handicap of increased rates.

The Times-Herald is now employir six trucks throughout the thumb distric traveling almost 1,000 miles each day expedite the delivery of the papers. M Ottaway believes with the addition another two trucks all the distributi problems of his paper would be solve Furthermore, he believes by this priva method of distribution the Times-Herai would reach subscribers many hou sooner than through the post office "an the ever-decreasing steam railway se vice."

Shipping Board to Advertise

The Shipping Board will soon advertis its entire fleet for sale, T. V. O'Conno chairman, announced in Washington. Ac vertisements will be inserted in new papers throughout the country under t terms of the merchant marine act.

The Cleveland PLAIN DEALER

Goes into the Home and STAYS there—

91.9% of all Plain Dealers which are delivered into the home stay in the home all day 8.1%*

*Of the 8.1% Plain Dealer circulation taken away from the home, 3.2% is always returned to the home.

The Plain Dealer has the BUYERS

Somebody once said that very few morning papers stayed in the home.

Which may be a fact—but not in Cleveland.

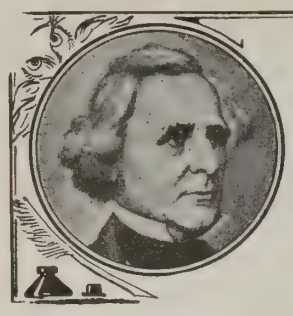
The Plain Dealer has proven otherwise. In this great market, women as well as men read their Plain Dealers. They read the news, the features, the editorials—and what is most important to newspaper space users—the advertisements.

The confidence its readers have in the Plain Dealer is reflected in as great a confidence by the advertisers.

1586 national advertisers believe that the Plain Dealer has the BUYERS; they were responsible for 51% of the total national lineage in Cleveland newspapers in 1924, being placed in the Plain Dealer ALONE. 965 used no other Cleveland newspaper.

J. B. WOODWARD
110 E. 42nd St.,
New York



WOODWARD & KELLY
350 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago
Fine Arts Bldg., Detroit

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
Times Building
Los Angeles, Cal.

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market Street
San Francisco, Cal.

The Plain Dealer

The Plain Dealer* ALONE *Will Sell It

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN-41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Bennett Moves His Editors Like Pawns on a Chess Board—Pulitzer Buys the World, and Warfare Begins

THE "Commodore," as Mr. Bennett was familiarly known, now began to manifest a disposition to make startingly sudden and arbitrary changes among the members of his editorial staff—the victims of his policy naturally resenting the sudden demotions or dismissals, and an undercurrent of uneasiness was apparent all along the line—no one knew upon whose neck next the axe might fall.

Mr. William J. C. Meighan, who had been appointed city editor in 1877, probably, held that difficult post about as long as anyone, while Edward T. Flynn, as managing editor of the Evening Telegram, with the able assistance of G. A. Shaw, ran it for eight years on the most economical basis possible.

In August, 1881, a special cable in the World announced that Mr. Bennett had invited Frank Lawley, of the London Telegraph, to take general charge of the Herald. Mr. Connery had held that responsible position ever since the retirement of Mr. Hudson, but latterly had not approved of Mr. Bennett's vigorous attacks on Kelly and incidentally Tammany Hall, with its influential political coterie, and also on the Catholic Church. Lawley, however, never accepted Bennett's offer. The dispatch went on to say that Mr. Meighan, then city editor, would be sent to represent the paper in London, while Charles Nordhoff, formerly of the Evening Post, was to be the principal editorial writer in place of the late Mr. Chamberlain, with the aid of John R. Young and Joe Howard, Jr. The latter statement was correct, and with this brilliant staff the Herald continued its meteoric career.

In this connection mention should be made of Ivory Chamberlain, the political leader writer and for a time the night editor. He was a tower of strength in the office, and Mr. Bennett wisely manifested the utmost confidence in his politics.

A native of New Hampshire, he became a teacher, and as the principal of the Buffalo High School, he contributed articles to the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, resulting in his becoming a member of its staff in 1855. In 1863, James R. Spaulding, editor of the World engaged him, and he controlled that paper's political columns until 1874, when he accepted an attractive offer from Mr. Bennett. He literally died in harness, his last leader appearing shortly before his death on March 9, 1881, due to pneumonia. The Herald, in its lengthy obituary, said:

"Few men in America have exercised as great an influence in moulding the politics of this generation as he.

"To speak the truth, and so to speak that the world would know it to be the truth was his one aim."

Finally on December 23, 1882, Mr. Connery tendered his resignation, and it was immediately accepted. He told his friends that after 12 years of continuous strain as managing editor, he needed a rest. Joe Howard at the time said:

"The idea that there is any quarrel or trouble between him and Mr. Bennett is absurd. He has illustrated the best qualities in journalism in his distinguished position, and he leaves a great post for needed rest, with the respect of all, and the affectionate regard of many of his associates. His successor is Edward Flynn. Flynn is a Herald boy, who has made a great reputation as editor of the Telegram for eight years."

"Eddie" Flynn, as he was familiarly known, was appointed managing editor a few hours after Mr. Connery had cleared out his big desk in the inner sanctum, and announced jubilantly that he had been given control of every department of the Herald. Mr. Shaw succeeded him as editor of the Telegram, while Mr. Meighan was retained as city editor.

It was at this time that another name, famous in the annals of journalism, was added to the Herald's payroll; it was that of Ballard Smith, member of a distinguished Kentucky family, and who was known as "one of Col. Henry Watterson's young men." He had resigned the managing editorship of the Louisville Courier Journal to come to New York as city editor of the World. He set a new pace for his rivals, and it is memorable that he received an unusual welcome from his fellow workers, for a dinner was given him at which every city editor in town was present. Later he was managing editor of the Sun for two years, and his excellent work attracting Mr. Bennett's attention, he came to the Herald under rather peculiar circumstances. Mr. Bennett got the idea in his head to have two city editors on the staff, and for a time W. J. C. Meighan and Ballard Smith alternated at the desk; each when on duty being known as city editor, with full powers, each independent.

Things ran along smoothly for a few months thereafter, when another drastic "shake-up" occurred. A lot of good men were let go and for the third time in twelve months the Herald had a new managing editor in the person of Ballard Smith, who succeeded Edward Flynn on Nov. 21, 1883.

Mr. Flynn was suddenly summoned by cable to Paris for a conference with Mr. Bennett on the causes which had led up to the implacable war that had developed with the newsdealers. Bennett expressed his indignation that the news company he had a hand in organizing through Tyson, should have merged with the American News Company. Poor Flynn hesitated to obey the summons, but finally had to go.

In this connection the World noted how rapidly the New York newspapers were passing under the control of Western men.

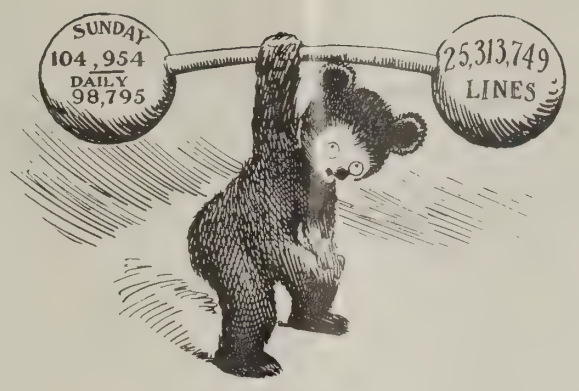
"Mr. Ballard Smith is in the Herald's editorial chair; Whitelaw Reid, of Ohio is in charge of the Tribune; Carl Schurz, of Missouri, is in the Evening Post office and the World, we may modestly remark is essentially saturated with the spirit of Western journalism. By the way, Brother Dana of the Sun is an ex-Chicago editor; and Bromley, the new editor of the Commercial Advertiser, is an Ohio man. We feel moved to congratulate Brother Bennett on the promptness with which he caught the progressive step!"

(To Be Continued)

The Loud Speaker of Radio Advertising

Speaking of radio, which everybody is doing nowadays, brings up the subject of radio advertising. Cincinnati, which not only manufactures more radio equipment than any other city but also is the home of three of the greatest broadcasting stations in the country, is naturally a tremendous market for radio merchandise. Cincinnati fans can tune-in on good programs three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. This means a steady demand for sets and parts and a steady response for local newspaper radio advertising.

It is perfectly natural that the Times-Star should be carrying more radio advertising than any other Cincinnati newspaper because the Times-Star is the one outstanding newspaper of selected home circulation in the city and territory immediately adjacent to it. The Times-Star reaches daily, except Sundays, every family in this territory that has enough money to be a purchaser of radio goods. Its waste circulation is practically nil.



With such a circulation it was also natural that the Times-Star should have been the first Cincinnati newspaper to publish a regular radio section. That it would publish the greatest amount of radio advertising was a foregone conclusion. With 60,345 lines of radio advertising in December and January the Times-Star led the second evening paper by 28,400 lines. Its lead over the leading morning paper on the same publication days was 55,388—over the same paper, including its Sunday editions, six days against seven its excess was 7712 lines.

The Times-Star is the loud speaker of the Cincinnati market in radio as in most of the important fields of merchandising.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

THE REAL REASON

That The Star with its practically complete coverage in circulation—Evening and Sunday—should carry nearly a MILLION LINES MORE advertising last year than all the other papers here combined is only natural. But that is only one reason.

The real reason is that with its vastly larger circulation it combines READER CONFIDENCE—which gives its advertising an influence more important than mere circulation volume.

25,313,749 lines is the record of 1924

An analysis of the Washington Market and how The Star completely dominates it, making it both easy and economical to cover, is very interesting. Yours for the asking.

The Evening Star.
WITH SUNDAY MORNING EDITION

WASHINGTON, D. C.

NEW YORK OFFICE
Dan A. Carroll
110 E. 42nd Street

CHICAGO OFFICE
J. E. Lutz
Tower Building

FARMERS SELLING PRODUCE DIRECT THROUGH CLASSIFIED COLUMNS

Potency of This Medium Attested to by Those Who Have Tried It Successfully—Some Typical Ads Shown

By F. L. THOMSEN

ONE of the main difficulties in the way of direct marketing has been the lack of means for getting the farmer and consumer together. One way of overcoming this difficulty has been found in the want-ad sections of daily newspapers. The merchant and city dweller have long recognized the value of this medium in getting in touch with each other at the least possible outlay of time and expense. If the farmer is to enter the field of business through direct marketing, why should he not "do as the Romans do"?

At least, so thought E. T. Brown, of Hart, Mich. While located a considerable distance from Chicago, he reads the daily papers of that city, and ran across a section in the classified advertising columns headed "Parcel Post and Express." He has about 300 apple trees just coming into bearing. Owing to the late frosts, the crop was small and on top of this he was offered only 50 cents a bushel in the local market. Inserting a small ad in the Chicago paper in November, he had enough orders to move the crop at $2 a bushel, being compelled to return some of the money and orders unfilled. Expenses of shipping and advertising were about a dollar a bushel, leaving a dollar net for the apples, or about twice as much as could be obtained locally. He plans to do a great deal more business in this way in the future.

This method of reaching consumers has been tried in many other instances. The classified manager of a large city newspaper reports that "We have a list of more than 200 who use our columns during the season for selling their products. Many of them have told us voluntarily of replies and sales they have made in this way."

Another way in which the classified sections have been utilized is in connection with marketing "at the farm." Thousands of city people go for evening or week-end drives on country roads. They are potential customers for all kinds of non-processed farm products. But it must be remembered that they do not know where to go for the things they want, when they can get them, and what products are available at what price. City consumers are accustomed to convenience in buying, and if the farmer is to sell to them direct, it is necessary to furnish this information. Want-ads inserted in the local papers a few days in advance is an easy, satisfactory, and inexpensive way of doing this.

Practically all the products of a 700-acre farm near Springfield, Mass., are disposed of to consumers right on the farm. City people are invited out to see the haying and other farm operations, and they usually take a load of produce home with them. Twenty acres of potatoes, dug by machine, were advertised; people came out, had the fun (Yes, city people think it's fun!) of picking them up, and saved considerably over the store price. This farm ran regular ads in the local papers, and had no trouble to dispose profitably of its various products in this way.

J. S. Roherty, Jr., who has a farm near Janesville, Wis., became dissatisfied with marketing conditions in his community. Apple growers were faced with apples rotting in the orchards, while consumers in town were paying above $3 a bushel. He began advertising in the local paper in September, and sold more than $500 worth of apples and cider from a farm of which the orchard was a side-issue. While this involved considerable work, as Mr. Roherty did the picking and sorting himself, he reports that "people do answer want-ads, and if you can produce a quality product at a reasonable price, you can build up a big trade, as people prefer the clean, fresh product, and some will pay a premium for it."

R. T. Glassco, county agent at Janesville, Wis., reports that "a small ad in the local paper does a vast amount of good. A large number of our farmers use this method of selling their surplus, and almost any issue of our paper contains such ads."

Newspapers at Ottumwa and Davenport, Ia., instituted a farm products section in the classified columns which met with good success. Some merchants objected to the idea, thinking it would take business away from them, but if properly approached, they can be made to understand the situation. Newspapers who fear the wrath of advertisers, in this connection, have simply not put the matter up to them in the right way.

Some products which can be marketed on the farm through the use of want-ads are:

Onions, rhubarb, asparagus, radishes, lettuce, sweet corn, peas, beans, cabbage, watermelons, canteloupes, potatoes, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, huckleberries, tomatoes, peaches, pears, cherries, apples, plums, grapes, honey, eggs, poultry, butter, cheese, cider, nuts, preserves, jellies, meat products.

The advantages which come from using want-ads in marketing these products may be summarized as follows:

First, when the farm is not on a good road, near a city of 5,000 population or more, they enable the producer to get into touch with consumers in the city, who can be supplied by parcel post, freight, and express.

Second, for farms which specialize in certain products, such as eggs, they furnish a means of getting in touch with retail stores, which may be supplied by parcel post, freight, express, or by personal delivery. Many farmers load up and "hawk" their produce from one store to another until everything is disposed of. If want-ads were used to get in touch with stores, they would know just where to go, and their list of customers would be constantly added to, with a consequent saving in time and enlargement of business.

Third, many farmers with a good location near a city can advertise their products for sale "on the tree" or "in the field." Consumers, being notified ahead of time, can take containers with them on their trips, and do their own picking. This arrangement would be almost impossible without want-ads. This avoids one of the main objections to direct marketing, namely, the time taken from farm work.

Fourth, if roadside markets are desirable, an increased volume of business is made possible by the use of want-ads, because the city consumer likes to go to a denifite place for a definite article at a definite price. In addition to this, the necessity of staying open all the time is avoided, as a certain time during the day may be specified in the ad.

Fifth, on all farms there are certain products, produced in small quantities for home consumption, of which there is usually a surplus. The latter is often too small a quantity for marketing through the regular channels, and want-ads in connection with parcel post or "at the farm" marketing can be used effectively to dispose of them.

In writing the ad, the farmer should get the assistance of the advertising people of the paper. It should, above all, be interesting, with a "farmy" touch to it—human interest. Before writing the ad, jot down the important things you wish to mention, then choose the most interesting point for the first sentence. Use short, snappy words, and finish up with some positive suggestion to get action. The advertisement should give a description of goods, price, and full directions as to location of farm, especially where the parcel post is to be used. Several examples follow:

"Ripe, juicy melons, all kinds of vegetables, right from the garden, at Sunrise Farm's roadside stand. Four miles out on Highway Twelve. Drive out tonight."

"Delicious grapes—pick 'em yourself at Sunrise Farm. Best for jellies and jams. Bring your own container, save money, and have loads of fun. Four miles out on Highway 12."

"Fun-exercise-economy. Get your winter's supply of potatoes now. Pick-em-up at Sunrise Farm, 4 miles out on Highway 12. We furnish the sacks. Save —— a bushel and enjoy an outing on a real farm."

"Our Plymouth Rocks are proud of the eggs they lay for you. Strictly fresh, prepaid by parcel post. Send ——— for ——— dozen. Fairview Farm, Blank, Ia."

Woman Becomes City Editor

Mrs. Roy W. Lewis, formerly a reporter on the Marion (O.) Star, has become city editor of the Bellefontaine (O.) Index-Republican.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

Feb. 23-24—Advertising Managers of New York State Dailies, Geneva, N. Y.
Feb. 25-27—Iowa Press Assn., annual meeting, Des Moines, Ia.
Feb. 27-28—11th District, A.A.C.W., annual convention, Boulder, Colo.
Feb. 27-28—Assn. Managers, A.A.C.W., meeting, Traymore Hotel, Atlantic City.
March 1-3—Fourth District, A.A.C.W., annual convention, Jacksonville, Fla.
March 6-7—Osark Press Assn., 15th annual meeting, Springfield, Mo.

Applegit Resigns from Brooklyn Eagle

Elmer M. Applegit, feature and radio editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, has resigned after 15 years' service to be associated with the Vacuum Oil Company in charge of publications.

MOST of the far-sighted publishers who were quick to recognize the economies of the Associated Press in its infancy have again shown their alertness by obtaining the exclusive rights in their respective cities to the Consolidated Press—the first service designed to avoid duplication and to furnish instead a distinct supplement to "spot" news reports.

The Consolidated Press Assn.

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New classified ads that won't stick aren't worth any more than that kind of friends

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

FEG MURRAY

A Champion Athlete and A Champion Sports Cartoonist

ACTION!

And he does it in only 2 columns with a 4-col. Saturday spread.

Murray also knows what he's writing about; and he can write.

For sample proofs and for terms Wire to

METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
MAXIMILIAN ELSER, JR., General Manager
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK CITY

And now the best is also the cheapest

Newspapers cannot afford to burn their bridges behind them by scrapping steam tables, using narrower paper, and making their plants solely dependent upon a supply of dry mats without being absolutely certain of the supply and of the uniform quality of the mats. That nearly 400 newspaper publishers have already done so shows their faith in the WOOD DRY MAT and their confidence in the people behind it.

Wood Flong Corporation can truly say that never once in its twelve years of existence has it failed to promptly ship any quantity of dry mats ordered. During the war and post-war period when print paper was almost unobtainable at any price WOOD DRY MATS were in ample supply and at a level price.

This Corporation does not and never has made special runs of samples, free or otherwise. Every WOOD DRY MAT is a sample of the one before and the one behind it. Quality and uniformity in product come first. Low selling price comes not from cheapening materials or manufacture but solely from increased production of a superior dry mat.

Wise publishers appreciate the comfort and sense of security that comes with their use of WOOD DRY MATS. They know that "free samples" are extremely costly in the end as invariably they misrepresent quality and uniformity of thickness. The confidence in us of hundreds of publishers has not been gained by the distribution of "free samples," specially made for demonstrating purposes.

They know this Corporation is a solid and reliable concern which makes the best possible dry mat and in ample supply, and voluntarily gives its customers the full benefit of decreased manufacturing costs as soon as effected.

The WOOD DRY MAT is not the only dry mat, but it is the only safe one for the newspaper to use. And in this commodity the best is also the cheapest.

WOOD FLONG CORPORATION

501 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

NEW JERSEY EDITORS MEET IN TRENTON

Round Table Discussions Supplant Set Program of Speeches at Mid-Winter Gathering of Dailies and Weeklies

(Special to Editor & Publisher)

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 17.—With the largest attendance in its history the annual mid-winter business session and luncheon of the New Jersey Press Association was held here yesterday in the Stacy-Trent Hotel. At the business session there were two round table discussions. R. E. Lent, of the Passaic Daily News, president of the Association, announced that a departure from the practice at other winter meetings had been taken this year, which eliminated from the program prominent men in the field of journalism and turned the business session over to a discussion of methods used in getting out a newspaper.

There were two round table discussions along this line. One for the New Jersey dailies was led by William D. Bryant, of the Paterson Press-Guardian, and the other for the weekly publications by D. H. Moreau, of the Hunterdon County Democrat. The program for each of these classes was not confined to strictly business topics, but was open to anything that an editor had on his mind to suggest. This produced a wide range of subjects.

One of the most interesting discussions among the dailies was provoked in response to the query: "Co-operation and Merchandising. How Far Should a Newspaper Go?" The thought was expressed that the publisher of the daily newspaper is not expected to go out and sell the advertiser's goods for him and put them on the counter. That is not the function of the newspaper. But it might be very helpful all around to determine whether a national advertiser's goods have really reached the city and been distributed ready for sale before the advertising campaign begins. Otherwise, the effect may be lost and the concern taking the space may blame the newspaper for his advertising vehicle and mark it down as a poor medium if business does not result.

The thought was also expressed that it is legitimate co-operation to furnish mailing lists of retailers and other local available data of advantage to the national advertiser when he wants to market his wares in a publisher's particular territory.

The consensus of opinion heard from the weekly editors was that chain store advertising is a good proposition and pays. If postal rates discriminate against the country weekly and in favor of the magazines, it is because the latter maintains a stronger lobby at Washington. If a member of the Association cuts the rates for legal advertising he should not be permitted to remain a member, it was stated.

A school of journalism at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, is being backed by the New Jersey Press Association. The organization is now in its greatest strength, having more than 200 members. For his work in devolping the Newspaper Institute held for several years at Rutgers College, under the auspices of the New Jersey publishers, Carl Woodward, of the college, was made the recipient of a handsome gold watch.

Two deans of the profession, Samuel L. Garrison, of the Boonton Bulletin, and Eugene K. Burke, of the Hackensack Republican, were felicitated upon having reached the 80th milestone of life, in resolutions adopted.

Governor George S. Silzer, of New Jersey, and the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, well known Brooklyn clergyman, were the chief speakers at the luncheon held in connection with the meeting.

Among the new members announced were Lionel Scheurer, of the Amusement Publishing Company, Atlantic City; Alva E. Lamberton and Ernest H. Smith, Morristown Daily Jerseyman; George W. Swift and Elmer E. Stanion, of the Elizabeth Daily Journal.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

Written Exclusively for Editor & Publisher

By Henry Edward Warner

SOME PEOPLE FRET

Some people fret when things go wrong,
When things go wrong in the shop;
The tremolo sticks in the daily song
And the office boy pushes the tears along
At the end of the office mop!
They weep and fret and cuss and swear,
But it never seems to get 'em anywhere.

The City Desk is a roaring howl
When something goes on the skid!
It's something fearful to hear the yowl
And to tremble with fear at the M. E.'s growl
When a bad scoop lifts the lid!
They pass the buck, and they kill life's joy
From the editor-in-chief to the office boy.

Some people fret; as for me, I sit
And smile as the wails pass by!
It doesn't seem to worry me a bit,
For tomorrow is another day for all of it,
And we all gotta live till we die!
So weep and fret if you like, and swear,
It'll never, never, NEVER get you anywhere!

COOLIDGE AT PRESS BANQUET

Staff of Washington Evening Star Holds Annual "Speechless" Affair

President Coolidge and other government officials attended the annual "speechless" banquet of the Washington Evening Star Club, Feb. 11.

Among notables present were: Senator Arthur Capper; Postmaster General Harry New, formerly of the old Indianapolis Journal; Senator George Moses, formerly of the Concord (N. H.) Monitor; Senator Carter Glass, Lynchburg News; Frank Kent, Baltimore Sun; Richard Probert, of the Associated Press Washington bureau; and David Lawrence, of the Consolidated Press.

Frank B. Noyes, president of the Evening Star Company, and Rudolph Kauffman, the Star's managing editor, had seats of honor.

Instead of speeches, the Morning Star, a replica of the evening newspaper, replete with gibes and satire, in print, cartoon and photograph, was distributed to guests.

Officers of the Evening Star Club, which is composed of employes and officials of The Evening Star Company, are:

C. Fred Cook, president; Royal E. Corwin, vice-president; J. Emory Ellett, secretary; Neville D. Miller, treasurer, and these members of the board of governors; William H. McLean, junior past president; Henry G. Hanford, Edward E. Miller, T. Doran McCarty, Gilbert H. Crim, Charles D. Keller and Roy K. Whitford.

CALL BUYS NEW EQUIPMENT

Allentown Daily Installs Speedaumatic Machine for Mailing

The Allentown Call Publishing Company, publisher of the Allentown Call has just purchased a complete installation of Speedaumatic equipment to perfect the delivery of their subscription mail. Call claims to be the first paper in Pennsylvania to utilize this service.

This is the same type of equipment operating in the New York Times, Christian Science Monitor, Chicago Tribune and other large metropolitan dailies. The large mail circulation of the Call makes this method of benefit to a considerable percentage of the subscribers in their trading area.

Mr. Publisher

The value of your staff of reporters would be increased if they read

GETTING THE NEWS

By William S. Maulsby

Buy a copy for each!

$2.25

Harcourt, Brace & Co.

Hodapp Joins New York Group

Henry G. Hodapp, advertising manager of the Wells-Dickey Company and the Wells-Dickey Trust Company of St. Paul for the past ten years, has joined the advertising department of the National City organization of New York. Mr. Hodnapp is president of the Advertising Club of Minneapolis and vice-president of the Financial Advertisers' Association.

IOWA PRESS TO AWARD CUPS FOR MERIT

Community Service and General Excellence to Win Prizes at Annual State Meet in Des Moines Feb. 25-27

The Iowa Press Association will present four cups to state publishers for outstanding newspaper endeavor during the year and the announcement of the awards will be a feature of the annual association meeting in Des Moines, Feb. 25-27. The publication with the most noteworthy community service in 1924, in both the daily and the tri-weekly, semi-weekly or weekly group will receive a cup; the third cup goes to the paper with the best front page and general excellence in the smaller paper field and the fourth cup, donated by the Des Moines Register and Tribune-News to the paper in a city of more than 1,000 for the best general newspaper excellence. The first two cups will be given by the Iowa State Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, journalistic fraternity and the third cup is from the association itself.

Principal speakers at the first day's meeting will be George F. Thayer, of the Marshalltown Times-Record on the cost of securing out-of-town subscribers; Lafe Young, Jr., Des Moines Capital, will discuss the postal rates increase and Joe Carmichael, former business manager of the Davenport Times but now director of public utilities information bureau will talk of the relationships between the utilities and the newspapers. The second day, Ben J. Gibson, state's attorney-general, will talk of "Iowa Banks and Newspapers."

Ad Manager Made City Editor

James A. Beach, advertising manager of the Gloversville (N. Y.) Morning Herald has been made city editor. He is succeeded by Lauren K. Hagaman.

An Unusually Fine Outfit For Sale

Plant of

ALBANY EVENING JOURNAL.

The Albany Journal having been sold to The Evening News through the agency of Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer, the entire mechanical outfit has been placed in our hands for sale.

Hoe Sextuple Web Press with complete stereotype equipment

2 Model 8 Linotypes
2 Model 9 Linotypes
1 Model 17 Linotype
5 Model 1 Linotypes
1 Model C Intertype
1 Linotype Slug and Border Caster
1 Ludlow Typograph with 4 matrix cabinets

Complete outfit of Hamilton Steel cabinets, desks, tables, etc.

Furniture of editorial and business departments, desks, safes, typewriters, etc.

This entire equipment (except the Model 1 Linotypes) was purchased new in 1918 or later, and is in fine condition in every respect.

For appointment to see the equipment or further details, wire or write

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER
350 Madison Avenue
New York

BAKER SALES COMPANY
200 Fifth Avenue
New York

MIXED FACES

Continuously Composed—Continuously Distributed

WITHOUT removing his hands from the keyboard, the operator of a Model 26 Linotype can set intricate catalogue, directory or advertising matter in which several different faces are combined in the same paragraph or even in the same line. He can set it practically as fast as straight matter because the matrices from the two main and two auxiliary magazines can be mixed at will and are automatically returned to their respective magazines.

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

820.24.11-F

Composed on the LINOTYPE in the Caslon No. 3 Series, with hand-lettered title line

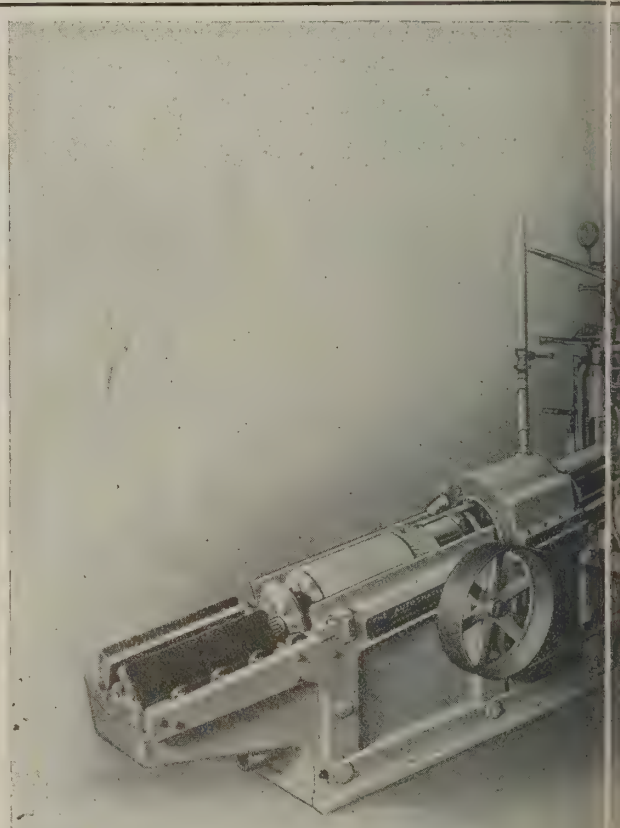
THE DOUBLE JUNIOR AU



Is the Standard Platema

It is built for heavy production, and is capable
Its capacity is six

The extent to which the modern metropolitan daily has found it necessary to develop its platemaking capacity is illustrated by the following facts:

The PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER, the PHILADELPHIA EVENING BULLETIN, and the CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, have each five Double Junior Autoplate-Autoshaver units with a capacity of thirty plates a minute, while the NEW YORK TIMES, the NEW YORK AMERICAN, and the CHICAGO TRIBUNE have each four units with a capacity of twenty-four plates a minute.

Other newspapers having in use from one to three Double Junior Autoplate-Autoshaver units are the ATLANTA JOURNAL, the BALTIMORE SUN, the BALTIMORE AMERICAN, the BALTIMORE NEWS, the BOSTON POST, the BOSTON GLOBE, the BOSTON HERALD, the BOSTON AMERICAN, the BIRMINGHAM NEWS, the BROOKLYN EAGLE, the BUFFALO NEWS, LA NACION, Buenos Aires, the CINCINNATI POST, the CINCINNATI TIMES STAR, the CLEVELAND NEWS LEADER, the CLEVELAND PRESS, the CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER, the CHICAGO HERALD EXAMI-

It embodies the fruits of th

NER, the COLUMBUS DISPATCH, the DAY
DAILY NEWS, the DETROIT FREE PRESS

Remember, upon the volume per minute of your pla press

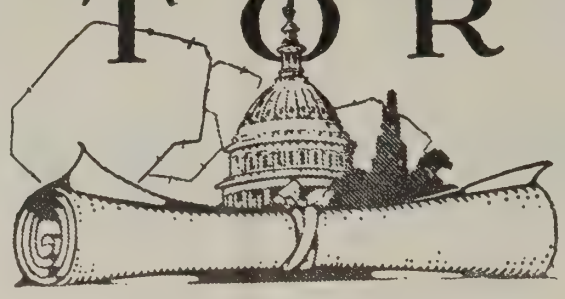
WOOD NEWSPAPER M

501 FIFTH AVI

PLATE-AUTOSHAVER UNIT

Equipment of the World

curing long periods of hard work at high speed.
ed plates a minute.



rce of all who have used it.

ETROIT NEWS, the DETROIT TIMES, the ALAS NEWS, the DENVER POST, the FORT WORTH STAR-TELEGRAM, the HAMILTON SPECTATOR, the HOUSTON CHRONICLE, the HOUSTON POST DISPATCH, the HARTFORD TIMES, the INDIANAPOLIS NEWS, the KANSAS CITY POST, the KANSAS CITY STAR, the LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL, the LOS ANGELES HERALD, the LOS ANGELES EXAMINER, the LOS ANGELES TIMES, the MILWAUKEE JOURNAL, the MILWAUKEE SENTINEL, the MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE, the MINNEAPOLIS JOURNAL, LA PRESSE, Montreal, the MONTREAL STAR, the NEWARK EVENING NEWS, the NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE, the NEW YORK TELEGRAM-MAIL, the NEW YORK SUN, the NEW YORK EVENING POST, the NEW YORK NEWS, the NEW YORK WORLD, the NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE, the NEW YORK DAILY MIRROR, the OAKLAND TRIBUNE, the PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER, the PHILADELPHIA RECORD, the PITTSBURGH GAZETTE TIMES, the PITTSBURGH PRESS, the PROVIDENCE JOURNAL, the RICHMOND NEWS LEADER, the ROCHESTER TIMES-UNION, the SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER, the SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE, the SAN FRANCISCO CALL, the SEATTLE TIMES, the ST. LOUIS POST DISPATCH, the ST. LOUIS GLOBE DEMOCRAT, the ST. LOUIS STAR, the ST. PAUL NEWS, the ST. PAUL DISPATCH, the TORONTO GLOBE, the TORONTO TELEGRAM, the TORONTO STAR, the WASHINGTON TIMES, the WASHINGTON POST, the WASHINGTON STAR.

capacity must always depend the celerity of your away

INERY CORPORATION
EW YORK CITY

EDITORIAL

Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds;
And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him:
And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness.
And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be yet thankful.—Colossians; III, 9-10-14-15.

HOAX HOAXING

KIPLING has said "any horror is credible." For torturing suspense the Kentucky cave tragedy has no parallel in modern news annals. The fate of the obscure country boy, Collins, became the intimate, personal concern, through newspaper communications, of perhaps two-thirds of the population of the globe. The agonizing experience of the trapped lad called out the sympathy of mankind.

It remained for a single reporter, although privileged to be at the scene, to play a stupid part of skeptic. With abundance of authentic information upon which to base the primary fact that Collins was in the tomb, this newspaper man, whether from genuine doubt or to whip up a fake "exclusive," took the pathetically puerile hoax angle. The press in general immediately challenged this view with definite facts and authentic statements, but an official investigation was required to set aside this false notion.

True enough, there are plenty of rogues capable of impudent advertising plants. Reporters are required to sense such impositions. But it seems incredible that a discriminating man at Cave City could have gone so far wrong as to play, in good faith, a hoax angle on this story. The official report indicates that it was a deliberate and conscious fake. The reporter is alleged to have defended news faking as an institution. He failed to appear before the Governor for an open hearing. Such work, compared with the really heroic enterprise of the correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal and the patient night and day work of the other men on the assignment, was shabby stuff indeed. The official condemnation of the hoax story needs no embroidery here. The newspapers of the country did well to give full publicity to the official finding that this silly fake was the crude work of a single individual.

Many newspapers spend more than $10 per year to get, serve and hold a country subscriber. It's worth it only if the advertising department is capitalizing such circulation.

A TECHNICAL OBJECTION

SIDNEY THATCHER recently said, in an EDITOR & PUBLISHER interview, that "certain English men and women have found that their views are wanted by American newspapers and have set and demand their own price," * * * "it is quite easy for an American newspaper man in England to obtain an 'exclusive interview' with an 'authority' if he is willing to lay the cash down on the table for it."

The Labor Government, Lloyd George and Winston Churchill, were mentioned, but The Newspaper World, of London, declares it an "unfounded statement."

The denial appears to be technical. Interviews with Mr. George or Mr. Churchill may not be paid for, but there is a procedure something like this: A reporter calls for an interview. Comes a good question. Mr. George or Mr. Churchill may say: "Let me consider that; I might like to write an article on it." There are authentic instances where Mr. Churchill has been paid $250 for a newspaper length article; Ramsay Macdonald, $500; Lloyd George is now under contract to write regularly for the American press.

But, why all this denying and explaining? Bradford Merrill, of the Hearst newspapers, this week said: "We have paid as high as 85 cents per word for interviews or statements from British celebrities, and were glad to. We do not criticize the system. Lloyd George is an excellent writer and he has to earn his living. Writing is Macdonald's profession. Churchill was once employed by the New York World to report the Boer War as a staff correspondent. Lady Astor requests pay for interviews, negotiates, although her husband's income is estimated as between $500,000 and $1,000,000 per year. People have a right to sell their words, or opinions, as a commodity."

Every newspaper editor in New York has had experience in dealing with British authorities on special subjects, such as Shaw and Wells. The system is not uncommon in America. Nearly 20 years ago we recall visiting Lincoln, Neb., for an interview with Bryan and returning with a "signed statement" for which a check was written.

NOT A SUBSTITUTE

JUST what do you think is meant by the following statement contained in the newly adopted code of ethics of the Wisconsin Press Association: "We believe that no propaganda or publicity matter should be published unless it contains information to which readers are entitled, and that whenever such material is printed, its source should be plainly indicated."

We are convinced that it was accepted in the best of faith, but it is the sort of declaration which suits the artful publicity exploiter of the press to perfection. It is exactly what the ponderous, ingratiating "public relations" expert asks for. His argument that his publicity is "news" fits in nicely. He has no objection to being quoted, although his name may carry no conviction to the reader nor absolve the newspaper if statements are challenged. His business is to stand between some employing person or industry and the public press, and although he may assume to be a proper news source, he may easily be repudiated, as we well know. He is not in the position of a lawyer representing a client, although he often assumes that stand. A lawyer is an officer of the courts, responsible and checkable. A propagandist or press agent, here today and there tomorrow, is responsible to no one.

There is no substitute, in prescribed rule or regulation, for the practiced, balanced, intuitive selective sense of the individual editor on the job. Intelligently he discriminates between right and wrong, fit and unfit, "propaganda" and "news." Rules need not be made for his guidance.

We agree that science has something to tell police authorities and newspapers concerning unsolved crime mysteries—in fact, the investigator who deals with crime in true terms of psychoanalysis should prove the greatest detective of the age.

February 21, 1925 Volume 57, No. 39

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Bldg.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London: The Advertising World represents EDITOR & PUBLISHER for the British Isles, 14 King Street, Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34 rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokio: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50.

GOOD CANADIAN SENSE

THE clearest statement we have so far seen o the issues in the agitation for a pulpwood em bargo by the Dominion of Canada is the repor on page three of this issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHE of a meeting at Toronto under the auspices of th Canadian Pulpwood Association. Here you hav representative Canadian pulp and lumber men, speak ing plainly of conditions which they well understand These statements indicate the character of the propa ganda that has been fostered in Canada during th past six months, until it has become a political issue

We agree that it is a Canadian problem, fo Canadians to solve. The propaganda has been nois and clamorous, but we are convinced that any dis tortion of facts, particularly as regards conservatio of resources in relation to spruce cut for pape uses, is apparent to the government and the cool headed business men of our good neighbor across th northern boundary.

The wonder among radio men, experts and novices, is how a radio amplifier connected with the electric light wire which stretched through the earth to Floyd Collins' body, could possibly indicate sound. An interesting explanation is due.

DANGEROUS "HOT STUFF"

THE caption that a deskman wrote under a one column picture of Professor M. F. Guyer, of th University of Wisconsin, read: "Why death Professor Guyer believes that death can be averte He bases his belief on the fact that he has been ab to keep cells and tissues of a human body alive f an indefinite period. He uses a chemical soluti containing lithicum chloride. Death, he says, resul from parasitic accumulations in human cells, and c be corrected by rejuvenating the tissues."

The picture and cut-lines appeared in many new papers, across the country.

An EDITOR & PUBLISHER correspondent at Madiso Wis., advises that this obviously misleading captio written to create sensation, has brought to the do of the scientist a pathetic grist of woe. From vario parts of the country letters have "poured in" fr helpless cripples, persons suffering from believed curable diseases, old men and women, all begging f pills, tablets, or "this chemical," as a means of escapi the Grim Reaper, or delaying his visitation. C correspondent sends excerpts from such letters wh would wring the heart of any man.

It appears that Professor Guyer, of the biolo department of the university, gave a public lecture "Recent Advances in Biology." This was repor by a local newspaper correspondent who wrote popularized story for lay consumption. He play up Profesor Guyer's summary of experiments keep tissues alive indefinitely in the laboratory throu repeated destruction by a chemical solution of parasitic accumulations that collect in the cells. T professor theorized on the possible application these experiments to human life.

This story seems to have been fair enough repo ing, but it was when another writer attempted "boil" it for a cut-line the mischief was done.

"I am like a drowning man anxious to grab t any straw hoping to find one that will bear me u wrote one paralytic to Professor Guyer. He w on pathetically about his family responsibilities implored the professor to tell him if he could juvinate the tissues of my body," and to "please cept the undying gratitude of a helpless fellow ma

An old man at Butte, Montana, victim of a ma nant disease, begged that the "cure" be sent C. O. because his "physical and mental ability" was be "ruined" by a "peculiar form of eczema, perha which with a tenacious, creeping, crawling and itch seems determined to reach every part of my bod

Such is the character of the agonizing appe each based upon false hope created by a reckless c line writer, mind fixed on conclusive "hot stu rather than ordinary honest reporting of a phase scientific experimentation and theorizing.

New York Publishers' Association is considering the principle of group purchasing of supplies as a measure of economy.

PERSONALS

ROBERT P. SCRIPPS and Mrs. Scripps sailed from New York Feb. 7, on the Cunarder Mauretania to spend about three months on the Riviera.

William Randolph Hearst, accompanied by a large party of friends, arrived in Los Angeles by special train recently, from a trip through Mexico.

Willis J. Abbot, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, and Mrs. Abbot are spending three weeks at Pinehurst, N. C.

William F. Metten, publisher of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening, was recently unanimously elected president of the Chamber of Commerce of Wilmington.

G. C. Willings, vice-president of the Intertype Corporation, left New York recently for his annual vacation in Florida.

Fred Naeter, publisher of the Cape Girardeau (Mo.) Southeast Missourian, left Cape Girardeau Feb. 17, with his family on a boat trip to the Mardi Gras in New Orleans.

Harvey D. Burrill, president and publisher of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal, is on a trip to Bahama Islands and Miami, Fla. During his absence Mr. Burrill's front page column of news "Flashes" is being conducted by Louis D. Burrill, recently elected secretary of the company.

Ralph Beaver Strassberger, publisher of the Norristown (Pa.) Times-Herald, accompanied by Mrs. Strassberger, have arrived at Palm Beach, where they are opening their villa, El Hura, on Ocean Boulevard.

John Skinner, editor of the Austin (Minn.) Herald, and Mrs. Skinner left recently for a six months' tour of Europe.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

HARRY COMPTON, formerly classified advertising manager of the Springfield (O.) Daily News, is now assistant display advertising manager of the News.

Victor Burschell has resigned as advertising manager of the Scranton (Pa.) Scrantonian.

Ralph Hirsch, advertising manager of the Columbus Ohio State Journal, has returned from a trip to Florida.

Eugene Fellows has joined the advertising staff of the Scranton (Pa.) Republican.

B. F. Grant, general manager of the Salt Lake City Deseret News, accompanied by his daughter Delora has gone to the Pacific Coast on a business and pleasure trip.

G. C. Krause, circulation manager of the Parsons (Kan.) Daily Sun, and Mrs. Krause are parents of a daughter, Carrol Kathryn.

W. B. Andrus is now circulation manager for the Sioux City (Ia.) Journal in the Black Hills section of South Dakota.

Frank C. Burchard has joined the staff of the New York office of Better Homes and Gardens to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John V. Fallon.

Tom Darlington, manager of national advertising for the San Antonio Express and Evening News, has been made a director of the San Antonio Advertising Club and chairman of the Educational Committee.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

EUGENE FOWLER, managing editor of the New York American, returned to New York this week from a visit to the William Randolph Hearst ranch at San Simeon, Cal., and an inspection of Hearst newspapers on the Pacific Coast.

Howard Kahn, managing editor of the St. Paul (Minn.) Daily News, has been named a director of the St. Paul Athletic Club.

Ian W. Gallagher, head of the telegraph desk of the Cleveland News and Sunday News-Leader, spent 10 days at Sand Cave, Ky., covering the Collins story for his papers.

Lawrence G. Holmes has resigned as Cleveland correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, Boston. Marshall R. Hall, financial editor of the Cleveland Times, succeeds him.

Pat Purcell, formerly with the Fargo (N. D.) Forum, has joined the sports staff of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Tribune, succeeding Bernard Swanson, who has joined the sports staff of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press.

John H. Sines, associate editor of the Trenton Times, is in Atlantic City, recuperating from a major operation.

W. L. Huggins, business reporter of the Topeka (Kan.) State Journal, has resigned to become assistant to the vice-president of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad.

Ralph Hull, formerly with the Associated Press, has joined the local staff of the Columbus Ohio State Journal.

E. A. Vandeventer, formerly managing editor of the Salt Lake City Telegram and one time editor and publisher of the Oakland (Cal.) Post-Enquirer, has been named managing editor of Sunset Magazine.

Charles E. Clayton, assistant librarian, School of Journalism, University of Missouri, has returned to his former place on the St Louis Globe-Democrat news staff.

Fred Burgner, former reporter of the Trenton Times, has returned to the Times as a desk man. Previous to his return, Mr. Burgner had been connected with the Associated Press in Newark and New York.

Alonzo Cinq-Mars, representative of Montreal Le Presse in the press gallery of Quebec Legislature, has been appointed translator of debates at Ottawa.

Preston Williams is now Jackson correspondent of New Orleans Times-Picayune, succeeding Keeton Arnet, who has become managing editor of the Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald.

Deane Van Luven, formerly a member of the street staff of the Windsor (Ont.) Border Cities Star, has taken over the sports desk succeeding F. J. Carveth, who has joined the sports staff of the Detroit Free Press.

Roger W. Foster, reporter, has been made dramatic editor of the Springfield (O.) Daily News.

Clayton W. Pryor has been promoted from the city hall run to the night city editorship of the Springfield (O.) Morning Sun.

E. M. Hager of Brookston, Ind., has been made news editor of the Rossville (Ill.) Press.

Allen Eddy, Sunday editor of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald, is taking a winter vacation at Rockledge, Fla.

Henry Wadsworth Kenny, formerly of the Honolulu Advertiser editorial staff, has resigned as editor of the Tokio Trans-Pacific to become managing editor of the Peking Leader, English daily. He will act as Peking correspondent of the Tokio Japan Advertiser.

T. M. Vesey has resigned from the news desk of the Cleveland Times.

Walthall Littlepage, for two years San Antonio Evening News police reporter, has resigned to become assistant manager of a bus transportation company.

William R. Stotler, formerly city hall reporter for the Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune, has been transferred to the commercial run, his place being taken by Nelson Hong.

Charles W. Penrose, journalist and poet of Salt Lake City, one time editor of the Salt Lake City Deseret News and other Utah papers, is seriously ill at his home. Mr. Penrose celebrated his 93rd birthday on Feb. 4.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

ROSS McMICHEL, from editor, Bellefontaine (O.) Index-Republican, to city hall run, Springfield (O.) Daily News.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

SINCE graduation from St. Benedict's College at Atchinson, Kan., Carl Brockhagen, managing director of the San Fanrcisco Daily Herald, has had a wide newspaper experience, which has put him well up in the worth knowing class.

CARL BROCKHAGEN

He has held various positions with the Des Moines Capital, Spokane Spokesman Review, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, San Francisco Call, Chicago Herald, and Oakland Enquirer.

For several years he was part-owner of the Oakland Enquirer selling his interest to William Randolph Hearst in January, 1922. He remained with Mr. Hearst as vice-president and business manager until September, 1924, when he became associated with the Vanderbilt tabloid in San Francisco.

In addition to his newspaper work, he has been active for the last 20 years in the direction of advertising clubs. He was president of the Seattle Advertising Club for two years, and served as president of the San Francisco Advertising Club.

Harold F. Hartley, from Dayton (O.) Herald to Springfield (O.) Morning Sun.

W. B. Grauel, from Little Rock Arkansas Gazette to state desk, Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

T. M. Davenport, from Jackson (Miss.) Daily News to Associated Press Bureau, New Orleans.

Arthur C. Prine, from Cincinnati Post staff to Cleveland Press.

Miss Anna Dienst, from assistant city editor, Shenandoah (Ia.) Sentinel-World, to news staff, Pocatello Idaho State Journal.

Ray H. Pfau, from real estate run, Milwaukee Journal, to staff, Indianapolis Star.

Otto Bordenkircher, from Milwaukee Sentinel, to Emporia (Kan.) Gazette.

Paul E. Conway, from city staff, Marshalltown (Ia.) Times-Republican, to city hall reporter, Davenport (Ia.) Democrat.

Harvey Clark, from Harrisonville (Mo.) Cass County Democrat, to staff, Independence (Mo.) Examiner.

Edward Doherty, from Stroudsburg (Pa.) Morning Press, to news staff, Scranton (Pa.) Times.

WITH THE SPECIALS

VEREE & CONKLIN has obtained the representation of the Oakland (Cal.) Post-Enquirer.

W. S. Grathwohl has resigned as Chicago manager for the S. C. Theis Company, Inc., newspaper representatives, and is now merchandise and advertising manager for the Grathwohl Stores, dealers in ladies' wearing apparel, Chicago.

Weaver, Stewart Company, Inc., Chicago, has been appointed to represent the Marinette (Wis.) Eagle-Star in the West beginning March 1.

MARRIED

SYDNEY INGALLS SNOW, night editor of the Reading (Pa.) Tribune, to Miss Olive Barton Bremner of the Reading high school for girls, in Philadelphia, recently.

Miss Melba Parker, women's editor, Wichita Eagle, to Harold W. Sullivan, of Wichita, recently.

Charles D. Tucker, of the Parsons (Kan.) Republican, to Miss Georgia Davis, of Parsons.

Martin H. Donahue, telegraph editor of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Argus-Leader, to Miss Wanda Raymond.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

GREENSBORO (N. C.) Daily News, an 80-page building and development edition, Sunday, Feb. 8.

Charlotte (N. C.) News, a 58-page automobile show edition, Sunday, Feb. 8.

Minneapolis (Minn.) Tribune, a special automobile edition Feb. 1, in connection with the Twin City Automobile Show.

St. Cloud (Minn.) Daily Times, a 60-page magazine supplement celebrating the 5th consecutive year Stearns county has been first in butter production in Minnesota.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

W. E. HASSLER, manager of the Gold Beach (Ore.) Curry County Reporter, has taken over the Port Orford Tribune and will merge it with the Reporter.

Verle V. Kramer, student in the University of Missouri, has purchased the Dallas City (Ill.) Enterprise, which he is now editing.

J. B. Miller has purchased the Elk City (Okla.) Democrat News from the Blackburn family.

Manford C. Evans has sold the Sherburn (Minn.) Advance-Standard to Claude Dickinson of Storm Lake, Ia.

Valley Junction (Ia.) Valley Express has been sold by Homer Thompson to Horace Barnes of Creston, formerly publisher, with his father, of the Albia Union.

WITH THE ADVERTISERS

SOL S. SCHOLDER, advertising manager of Bannon's department store, St. Paul, has taken charge of the advertising department of the W. H. Block store, Indianapolis.

Roscoe Gillaspie, graduate of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri, has joined the advertising department of the Martin Livestock Commission Company, Chicago.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

FRANK H. COLEMAN of the mechanical department of the Salt Lake City Tribune and Mrs. Coleman are parents of a daughter.

SCHOOLS

FRANK THAYER, assistant professor of journalism at the Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University, has resigned to take effect Sept. 1. Professor Thayer has become educational counsel for the American City Bureau of New York and Chicago, an organization specializing in institutional and community financing and organization.

A total of 473 columns of news matter, totalling 9,454 column inches without headlines, were written for, and published in Madison and other Wisconsin newspapers during the last four months, by student reporters in the sophomore class in newspaper reporting in the University of Wisconsin Course in Journalism.

ASSOCIATIONS

NEWSWRITERS' Union of Scranton, Pa., recently observed its 18th anniversary with a banquet to which were invited all former members of the union and the publishers of Scranton. E. J. Gerrity was toastmaster with the reporters permitting but one speaker, J. Fred Henne, formerly associate editor of the Scranton Times.

Boston Photo Engravers recently held an annual banquet at the Wedgewood restaurant in Boston. Entertainment included specialties by Joe Toye of the Boston Traveler, Frankling Collins of the Boston Herald and Ray Benoit, also of the Traveler.

Ontario Legislative Press Gallery has elected the following officers for the 1925 session: honorary president, Sir Adam Beck; president, C. Sabiston, Toronto Telegram; vice-president, W. E. Elliott, London Free Press; secretary, Paul Dowling, Toronto Globe; treasurer, C. Foster, Toronto Mail and Empire.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Green Broadcasts Talk on "Advertising and the Public"—Rankin Moves to New Offices—World-Wide Elects

CHARLES C. GREEN, president of the Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, Inc., New York, started Feb. 11, a series of weekly radio addresses over WEAF, New York, dealing with advertising problems and romance. The talks are listed in radio programs under the title of "Advertising and the Public." His first address was on "The Romance of Newspaper Making," and on Feb. 18, he spoke on "How Advertising Reduces the Cost of Distribution."

The New York division of the William H. Rankin Company has moved from West 37th street to larger offices in the Canadian Pacific Building, 342 Madison avenue, because of the necessity of greater space. The Rankin company also maintains offices in Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia, Akron, San Francisco and Toronto.

Stockholders of the World Wide Advertising Corporation, New York, have elected the following directors: Emil Maurice Scholz, S. H. Somerton, Donaldson Douglas, Miss E. M. Majer, E. M. Cameron and W. G. Fallon. The directors elected the following officers: Emil Maurice Scholz, president; S. H. Somerton, vice-president; Donaldson Douglas, treasurer; Miss E. M. Majer, assistant treasurer and secretary.

The National Advertising Corporation has been incorporated in Boston to deal in advertising with a capital of $300,000. The incorporators are John J. O'Neill of Brookline, James G. Longhurst, Jr., and P. Cyril Shaw of Boston.

Albert Frank & Co. have acquired additional space of approximately 1000 square feet in their Chicago office in the National Bank of the Republic Building, found necessary in the development and expansion of their business in financial and commercial advertising.

Fletcher Richards has been promoted to assistant general manager of the Campbell-Ewald Company, General Motors Building, Detroit. Mr. Richards was formerly contact man, and was engaged on a number of the larger accounts handled by the company. The agency has also just increased its floor space 1,000 feet, owing to additional activities of the company.

Clyde Tompkins has resigned as advertising manager of the Creamery Package Mfg. Company, Chicago, to join the Hertz-Hadley Direct Advertising Company, Chicago.

Francis D. Crosby, formerly with the Ronald Press Company, New York, is now a member of the staff of James F. Newcomb & Co., Inc., New York.

Hugh G. Van Pelt, formerly professor of dairying at Ames, Ia., Agricultural College, has joined the copy and counselor staff of the E. T. Sadler Company, advertising agency, Chicago.

Harry Hann, for the last nine years advertising manager of the Morehouse-Martin department store, Columbus, O., has resigned t enter the advertising business for himself.

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Adam Breede Goes Lion Hunting—Flo Ziegfeld Writes for Newspapers—Genius in the News

"I DON'T know whether I will be eaten alive or not; but, if I do, before I do, I want to get some pictures and write a newspaper story about it."

ADAM BREEDE

This rather cynical remark was made this week by Adam Breede, widely known editor of the Hastings (Neb.) Tribune, former war correspondent, and big game hunter, when he announced his intention of sailing from New York, March 20, on a trip around the world, including some lion and elephant hunting in British East Africa. The stories he writes will be distributed to newspapers by United Feature Syndicate, New York.

"Perhaps," he added, "I may shoot a few tigers in India, too."

Mr. Breede has hunted game in the western states, Alaska, British Columbia, Mexico, and South America. His present trip, as he puts it, will be his first "crack" at lions and elephants.

Sailing on the liner Providence for Naples, the hunter-editor will first hunt news in Europe, visiting Italy, Germany, Turkey, Egypt, and the Holy Land. He plans to return to the United States by way of China.

Clinton T. Brainerd, president of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, left New York Feb. 17, on the Cunarder Mauretania for a Mediterranean cruise.

Nancy Spence, fashion writer, has returned to the New York office of Styles Service Syndicate, Inc., after a year spent in various European Capitals where she made an extensive style survey.

Flo Ziegfeld, Jr., so-called American girl glorifier, has decided to write articles for women in the newspapers through McNaught Syndicate, Inc., New York, having prepared a series of nine stories, telling them how to dress correctly and be beautiful.

From the same syndicate it is announced that O. O. McIntyre, who writes letters about Broadway and is now on a visit to the Continent, has signed a new long-term contract. And also, Will Rogers, writer of "slanguage" for McNaught Syndicate, Inc., is now planning to pound out a daily feature, in addition to his present Sunday releases.

Now that readers have successfully cultivated the "strip reading habit," as various syndicate managers say they have, the present tendency is said to be away from the comic to the more serious side of life. Witness, the managers say, the "Highlights of History," called a remarkable success by its distributor, the McClure Newspaper Syndicate. And this week, United Feature Syndicate, New York, announces a natural history strip called "Dad and I." It is drawn by Charles Stafford, a Canadian newspaper artist. Dad, in the strip, takes his son out through the woods and each day introduces him to some strange fish, flesh or fowl.

On the other hand, United Feature Syndicate states the revival of the "Doings of the Duffs" is going over big.

National News Service, Philadelphia, held a banquet Feb. 9, in commemoration of its tenth anniversary. Sidney A. Silberman, president of the board of trustees, was given an Elks charm by employes.

Genius is in the news. George T. Hargreaves, former editor of Universal Service, has completed a series of 24 articles on the human side of great writers, called "Tragedies of Genius," for Premier Syndicate, Inc., and J. P. Glass is telling newspaper readers about the "Discoveries of Genius" through the Republic Syndicate, New York.

Francis J. Starzl, it was announced this week, has been appointed assistant manager of the Des Moines Register and Tribune Syndicate. He is a graduate of the University of Iowa and was formerly managing editor of the Iowa City (Ia.) Press-Citizen. Miss Agnes Kelleher, also a University of Iowa graduate, joined the same syndicate this month.

Ken Kling, cartoonist, creator of Joe and Asbestos, for the Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York, made his debut as a stage entertainer this week in a N York vaudeville house.

Billy DeBeck, comic artist, creator f "Barney Google and Spark Plug," is r in a New York private hospital, suf ing from a nerve trouble. Doctors clare Mr. DeBeck's condition is alarming, but complete rest has b prescribed.

"The Cross-Word Fairies," by Wa Gag, New York, a cross-word pu feature for children, is being handled Premier Syndicate, Inc., New York.

FLASHES

Detroit woman robbed men and g the money to her husband, but they hard to train that way.—Colum Record.

Ours is the most powerful nation France is the most promising.—Cl land Times.

Charley Chaplin will have to be awf comical from now on to make his mot in-law laugh.—Detroit News.

A pessimist is a man who phones the ambulance before he inserts the c screw.—Baltimore Sun.

What we need is a treaty against elevation that will apply to hold-up —New York Evening World.

Soon or late government stores hooch will be small enough for the r lar army to guard—Hartford Times.

Fanny Butcher says Americans do write easily. Fanny ought to sit i the copy desk of a newspaper for a days.—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journ

Malted Cereals Co.

is another of the nationally famous accounts which has recognized the fact that the Washington, D. C., territory cannot be adequately covered without

The Washington Times

The futility of the "one paper buy" argument is nowhere better illustrated than in the experiences of its national advertisers.

PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH
New York City—Boston
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
Chicago - Detroit - St. Louis - Los Angeles

Quality Plus

We make Certified Dry Mats with but one thought in mind, and that is that they give you the utmost satisfaction in your stereotyping.

And while Certifieds are made and sold on the basis printing results first, last and all the time, they are reasonably priced. We can tell you of many good things which publishers and stereotypers everywhere are saying of our dry mats, but in the last analysis it is what you can do with them that matters.

That is why we make it simple for you to have demonstrated to yourself the real worth of Certified Dry Mats. A trial in your own plant under your actual working conditions costs you nothing, as it is a pleasure for us to furnish you with samples free of any charge or obligation.

We prefer to let Certified Dry Mats speak for themselves; all we ask is that you compare the printed pages! Then you'll know Certified Quality.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Ave. New York, N. Y.

"Made in America to Insure Quality and Service"

MADE IN U.S.A. BY THE CERTIFIED DRY MATS ORIGINAL CLAUS IDEAL PROCESS

I. E. A. SETS JUNE 1-3 AS CONVENTION DATES

Fllowing Sessions at Richmond, Va., Delegates Will Make Two Weeks' Tour of Historic Points by Train and Automobile ollowing the announcement of the decion of the executive committee of the Less Congress of the World to postpne the meeting in Rome, Italy, until fl or next spring, Executive Secretary E C. Hotaling of the National Editorial Aociation, and James C. Latimer, secretby of the Virginia Press Association, greed upon Monday, Tuesday and Wdnesday, June 1, 2 and 3, as the dates fc holding the fortieth annual convention othe National Editorial Association in Rhmond, Va. Headquarters will be in th Jefferson Hotel.

ollowing the three days' convention th N. E. A. party will tour the State fc two weeks.

unday, May 31, will be the day upon wch the delegates will begin arriving nRichmond for the convention. The ccvention dates and the schedules for th educational tour of the State follow:

londay, June 1—Richmond (conveni).

uesday, June 2—Richmond (conveni).

/ednesday, June 3—Richmond (conre ion).

hursday, June 4—Train to Williamsbu; autos to Jamestown and Yorktown. Spnd night at Newport News.

riday, June 5—Newport News, Old Pot, Hampton, Buckroe Beach; steamer oNorfolk to spend the night.

aturday, June 6—Norfolk.

nday, June 7—Norfolk and Virginia Bch. Sleepers will be parked at 10 'ock, special train leaving at 12 p. m. onday, June 8—Danville for breaka; 30 minute stop at Altavista; arrive ynchburg 1:45 p. m.; spend night on leer.

uesday, June 9—Bedford, Elks Naoul Home; arrive Roanoke 2:15 p. m.

'ednesday, June 10—Breakfast at Rnoke; Natural Bridge; supper at Lexington.

'hursday, June 11—Charlottesville, rring at 6 a. m. Spend day at Uniersity of Virginia, Charlottesville and Mticello; arrive in Staunton for the ight.

AUTO TOUR

Jiday, June 12—Staunton, Augusta Mary Academy, Harrisonburg. Spend ight at Harrisonburg.

Sturday, June 13—Endless Caverns, Te Market battlefield; arrive Winneer to spend the night.

Snday, June 14—Day of rest at Winneer; side trips to points of interest.

Dnday, June 15—Charles Town, Haer's Ferry, via Leesburg; arrive Vshington, D. C., for the night.

Tesday, June 16—Special train to Fredericksburg and battlefields, return to Vshington for the night.

Vednesday, June 17—Mount Vernon, Alexandria, Fairfax Courthouse, Arlingn. (End of tour—delegates leaving for ei homes.)

EORGIA EDITORS TO VISIT N. Y.

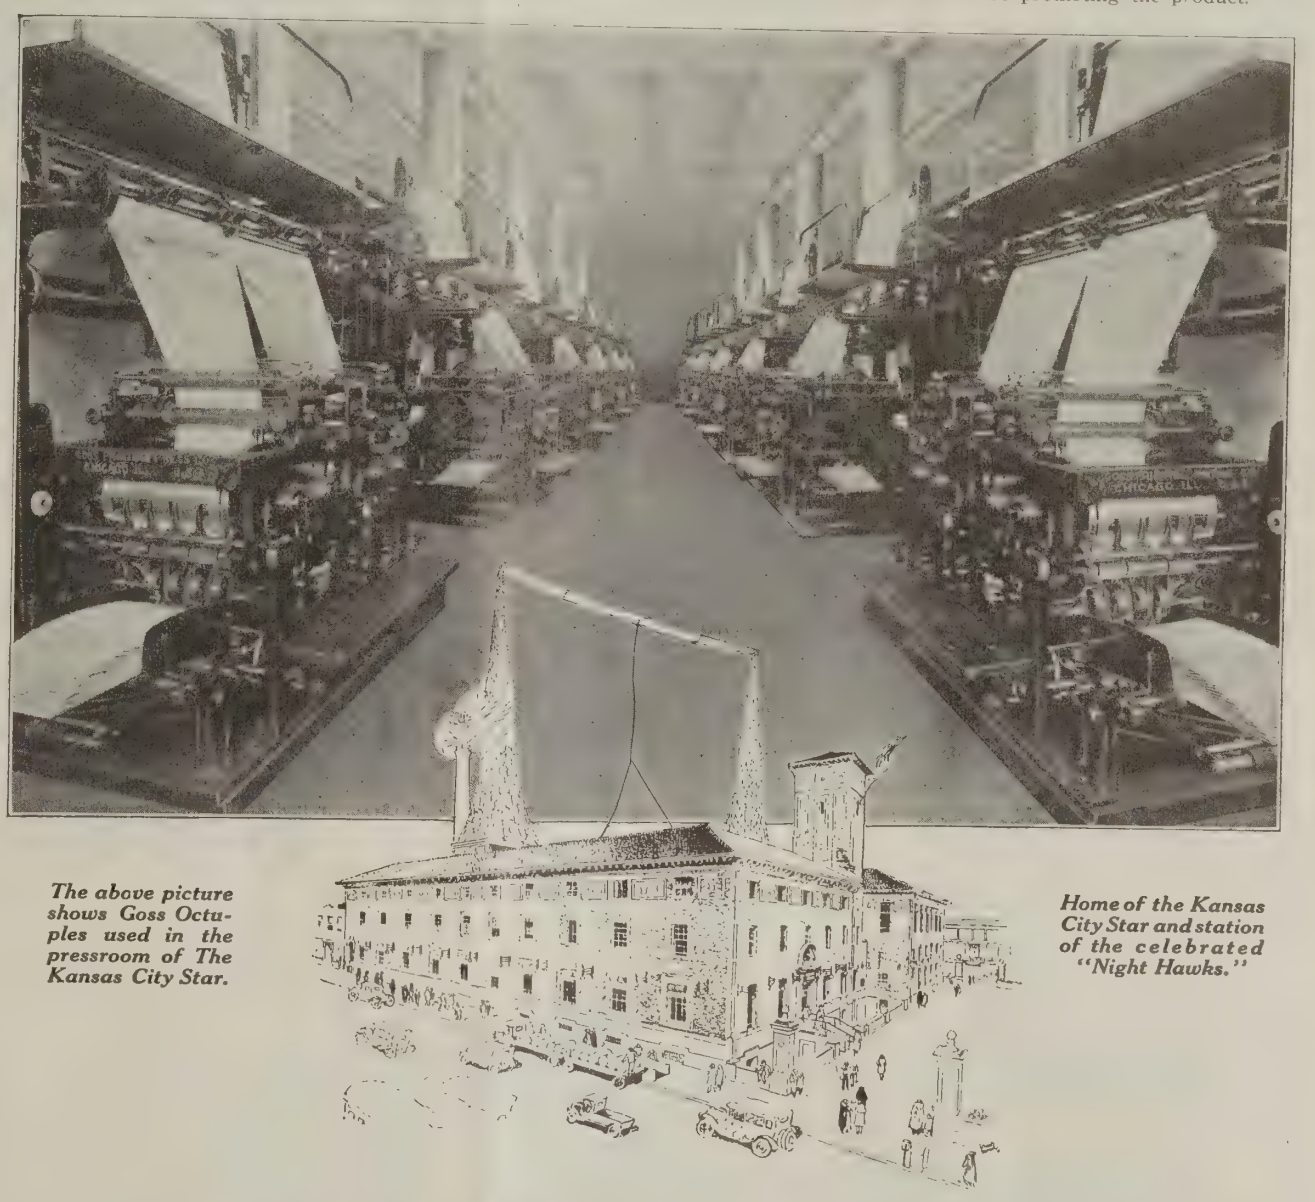
Wil Leave by Boat from Savannah April 25, for 3-Day Visit

Te Georgia Press Association memrsare preparing to meet in Savannah pr 25, spend a day in session and then t ail for New York on the steamship ty of Chattanooga. They will spend vel days in New York returning m on the same ship.

Ts will be the first outing Georgia its have had outside the state in many ar In the "good old days" when railac passes were plentiful they planned nil pilgrimages to various sections of e untry. But in the past ten years the ne dering" has been confined within at bounds and the editors are about "fed up." The Ocean Steamship Line has arranged for the transportation to New York at a very attractive rate and it is expected at least 100 editors with their wives will make the trip.

Meeting in Savannah April 25 the group will be entertained at breakfast at the Hotel Savannah by the Savannah Press and the Savannah Morning News. In the afternoon they will embark for New York, arriving Tuesday morning April 28 at 6 o'clock. The Waldorf-Astoria Hotel will be headquarters during the stay.

Charles D. Rountree, editor of the Wrightsville (Ga.) Headlight, has arranged a most attractive program during the New York stay. The Merganthaler Linotype Company will give a luncheon for the visitors and the Georgia Society will give them a dinner. The Hammerhill Paper Company is to give the visitors a luncheon on the second day and the American Press Association is to act as host for dinner during the second evening. There will also be a breakfast on the United States Steamship Leviathan.



The editors will embark for the return trip Thursday, April 30.

Notice—Addresses of W. W. Mayes and Karl W. Kessler are wanted.

Tuberculosis Cure Held Fraudulent

Advertisements of "Tip Sin," an alleged cure for tuberculosis, are fraudulent, according to the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in a current bulletin, urging the co-operation of business publishers and the public in reporting promptly to it all examples of doubtful proprietary advertising. The advertisements, the report said, claimed that Tip Sin, at $3 a bottle, "destroyed tuberculosis bacilli in six days."

John Hamberg of Couer d'Aleur, Ida., is said to be promoting the product.

The above picture shows Goss Octuples used in the pressroom of The Kansas City Star.

Home of the Kansas City Star and station of the celebrated "Night Hawks."

THE KANSAS CITY STAR

For years Goss Presses have faithfully served the ever-growing needs of The Kansas City Star with its bounding circulation.

Today, nine Goss Octuples print the half million morning and evening "Stars", the 275,000 Sunday "Stars" and the 350,000 weekly "Stars."

Recently a large eight cylinder Goss Color Press was added to the equipment "on which," to quote The Star's General Manager, Mr. August F. Seested, "is produced the best printed four color comic section in the country."

Goss Presses are in the service of good publishers everywhere who print small weeklies, great metropolitan dailies and national magazines. Catalogs on request.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS COMPANY, CHICAGO

The Goss Printing Press Co. of England, Ltd., London

GOSS STRAIGHT LINE HIGH SPEED

CANDY FIRM TESTS NEWSPAPER SPACE

(Continued from page 3)

the newspaper advertising expenditure will continue to increase directly in proportion to the increase in sales, in order that advertising pressure will be uniformly applied to the momentum of sales increases.

"In other words, as long as our sales increase can be computed on a daily or weekly basis, there is no reason why our newspaper advertising appropriation can not be more closely related to such increase, rather than having the appropriation split up, for convenience sake, into twelve equal monthly amounts."

"If the newspapers fail to bring the expected increased sales during these four months," I asked, "will you try some other medium?"

"No, not necessarily," Mr. Bates replied. "We will merely adjust the appropriation. It is our present intention to carry on with the newspapers for the entire year."

"How much is this four months' appropriation?"

"Since it is an arbitrary amount it would be misleading if disclosed," Mr. Bates answered. "We considered it ample for a fair test."

Considerable care has been taken in preparation of copy for this 1925 test drive, Mr. Bates said. It is more of the "reason why" variety than has ever before been used in Life Savers advertising history.

"We concluded that we must make people realize our candy was a purposeful confection," he explained.

"Our usual exclamatory copy underscores the points that Life Savers are always in good taste, that they are refreshing, that they aid the digestion, and that they are good for both young and old people. In our newspaper copy we have enlarged on these points, telling the reasons why.

"Copy is of fundamental importance in successful advertising, and we have stressed this fact in preparing our newspaper drive."

While we were on the subject, I asked Mr. Bates what he considered were the fundamental requisites of good advertising copy.

"I have found it easy to remember what I consider the elementary requirements of good advertising copy, by thinking of the title of the well known opera 'Aida,'" he replied.

"The four essentials of good copy, to my mind, are: attention, interest, desire and action."

Mr. Bates came to Life Savers, Inc., in 1916 as the corporation's first advertising manager. The company was established in 1913. In 1916 the first magazine advertisement was placed. Newspapers were brought into play later. Since 1919, with gradually increasing use of newspaper space, the greatest bulk of business has been done. There has been a rapidly ascending curve, Mr. Bates said, corresponding with the increasing advertising appropriations.

The firm has made advertising pay in a scientific way.

"Mother—can't I have five cents?"

"Bobby's mother gave us some money to go to the movies," the child lisped excitedly, "and could I have five cents to buy some candy to eat at the show?"

"Here's a better idea," the mother said. "Father brought home some Life Savers last night, and I'll give you some of them. They are the best candies for children."

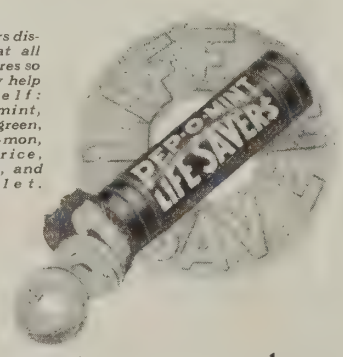
How true it is!

These china-hard circles of pure goodness are just the thing for sugar-hungry little tummies so easily upset by sweets that are too rich. And for tiny teeth that fare best with candy very carefully chosen.

The ideal candy for children

The active bodies of growing boys and girls crave sugar. Their blood requires it.

But children's candy should be pure; also you must control overeating. Life Savers answer both problems:



Be generous with them

Rich sweets, hurriedly eaten, upset little stomachs. Not so with Life Savers. Children eat them slowly because they are so hard and because they want to enjoy longer those delicious, delicate flavors.

You may conscientiously be generous with Life Savers; they are so pure and wholesome. It is far better to let children have the right candy regularly. They are less likely to overeat than when they get it only now and then.

Also, Life Savers leave no sticky, sugary debris to start tooth decay. They are safe for children's teeth. Have Life Savers always handy at home when the youngsters call for sweets. There is no candy better for them.—Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

Six flavors displayed at all good stores so you may help yourself: Pep-o-mint, Wint-o-green, Cinn-o-mon, Lic-o-rice, Cl-o-ve, and Vi-o-let.

Good for little tummies and tiny teeth

Example of "reason why" copy being used in Life Savers' 1925 campaign.

NEBRASKA WRITERS ORGANIZE

Guild Formed at Annual Journalism Week—Abbott is President

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 19.—Organization of the Nebraska Writers Guild was perfected at the first annual journalism week held at the University of Nebraska, Feb. 17-21. Keen Abbott, of Omaha, was elected president and W. B. Kerr, of Omaha, secretary-treasurer.

An executive membership council was composed of Mrs. Bess Streeter Aldrich Elmwood, Neb., George Shedd, Omaha, and A. E. Sheldon, Lincoln. Forty-five applications were accepted.

Mrs. Marie Weekes, of Norfolk, retiring president Nebraska Press Association, was made an honorary charter member.

Speakers on the program of journalism week of the Nebraska Press Association included: Ole Buck, field manager, Nebraska Press Association; Frank O. Edgecombe, editor of the Geneva Signal; J. G. Alden, York Republican; E. R. Purcell, Brockenbow Custer County Chief; J. P. O'Furey, Harrington Cedar County News, and M. A. Brown, Kearney Hub.

U. S. Issues New Ad Pamphlet

A pamphlet "Advertising in India" has been issued by the Department of Commerce at Washington.

TO PLACE INDIA TEA COPY

Sir Charles Higham Coming to U. S. March 10 to Direct Campaign

Sir Charles F. Higham, of Londo advises EDITOR & PUBLISHER that upo his arrival in America, on March 10, h will immediately go to Chicago to in augurate an India Tea advertising dri for the Chicago territory during 1925.

"The India Tea campaign, so far, h been very successful," he said. "All th New York, Philadelphia, Boston an Brooklyn papers which carried the a vertising last year are carrying the sam amount this year, and the America Weekly Section of the American new papers is also being included in the list

Sir Charles is engaged in writing book on Advertising to be published Henry Holt as a volume in the Hom University Library, representative scientific works by leading authorities.

"I consider this not only a person honor, but a deserved recognition of o great advertising industry," Sir Charl said.

Williams to Address Florida Group

Walter Williams, dean of the School Journalism of the University of Missou and president of the World Press Co gress, will address the Florida Pre Association during the First Journalis Week to be held at the University Florida at Gainesville, March 26.

Two Dailies Join A.N.P.A.

The Chicago Journal of Commerce a the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times are n active members of the American New paper Publishers Association.

Detroit Times

Evening 220,000

Sunday 250,000

A Security Market

with complete newspaper financial service.

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1923, *119,754 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 128,763

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

WORLD'S FAMOUS AUTHORS
Unexcelled selection, serials, novelettes, shorts.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

"S T O R I E S"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.,
2044 Margaret St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Fashions

WEEKLY STYLE PHOTO SERVICE.
20 latest fashions and captions weekly.
More than 100 papers use it. Write for low rate.
Styles Service Syndicate, 353 5th Ave., N. Y.

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that m radio fans regular newspaper readers. A plete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford,

FOR LARGE AND SMALL PAPERS
A non-technical, weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington,

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LE
The Standard Religious Feature of Ame Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of conti publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, T
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

PHILIP JACKSON—" 'The Journal shall be a FAIR newspaper and not a dull and selfish sheet' is our policy."

"THE Journal shall be a FAIR newspaper and not a dull and selfish sheet."

So wrote C. S. Jackson, founder of the Journal Publishing Company on July 23, 1902, when he took over what has become the Portland (Ore.) Journal.

In the intervening years this expression has become a creed with all Journal workers, and especially with his son, Philip L. Jackson, president and publisher, who has been charged with the responsibility of administering this newspaper property for the past five years.

At the close of 1919, failing health compelled C. S. Jackson to withdraw from active endeavor with the newspaper which he built and which he loved, and at that time the conduct of the paper was delegated to his son, Philip L. Jackson, who became associate publisher and publisher upon the death of his father, Dec. 27, last.

When the younger Mr. Jackson assumed this burden he had just attained his twenty-sixth birthday and had but recently returned to Portland, after four years at Princeton, two years in the Harvard graduate school, and two years overseas in the army. He brought with him an engaging personality, sound business sense, and what is perhaps of the greatest importance, a saving sense of humor.

He made it his business to see that the newspaper machine so carefully assembled by his father functioned with the same effectiveness. He cultivated the confidence of the men and women who have been with the institution throughout the years, and inspired them with appreciation that he too, had the same zeal as his father, to make the Journal an outstanding medium for public service in the Oregon country.

During the last five years the Journal has continued to gain in influence in the circulation and in advertising, and its present publisher and his associates subscribe to the theory that the Journal has not begun to go yet.

In discussing C. S. Jackson's creed that "The Journal shall be a FAIR newspaper and not a dull and selfish sheet," Philip Jackson stated:

"We on the Journal will always follow his maxim laid down by the founder and builder of the Journal. In editorial direction it is broad enough and specific enough to keep us on the right track; to compel us to keep faith with the public and to keep faith with ourselves. On the business side this principle makes it possible for us to give the advertiser more than value for his advertising appropriation, to the reader the greatest value for his subscription price, and in our relations with our personnel, or 'The Journal Family' as they are proud to call themselves, it makes for a high morale.

"This internal organization has profited the Journal mightily, and we consider organization and morale our greatest asset. So that the direction of the paper is aimed at all times to keep this organization most perfect without any sacrifice of individual efficiency or initiative.

"Fully delegated responsibility has been answered by the greatest personal effort, most gratifying results in all departments and those pleasant personal relations between departments and individuals. Without this 'Journal family' spirit the organization would be impossible, and without this organization the Journal, as its founder meant it to be, could not continue to serve the best interests of the whole people of the Oregon country."

Mr. Jackson's time and talents are also delegated to a certain amount of civic activities. He is a regent of the University of Oregon. His hobbies are golf and motor boating, although he admits that his golf is terrible and most of his motor boats sink.

His capacity for discharging the responsibilities of his job is stimulated by that happy philosophy that the most important thing in life is not to take life too seriously.

NEW LONG ISLAND WEEKLY

Great Neck News Will Appear March 13th—H. W. Lanigan Editor

The Great Neck News, a weekly, is to be launched Friday, March 13. It will be published by the Great Neck Publishing Corporation, 78 Middle Neck Road, Great Neck. The town is a Long Island suburb of New York.

H. W. LANIGAN

The new suburban publication will be a pictorial tabloid. Besides giving the general news of the Great Neck section of the populous North Shore, the paper will go in extensively for social activities, paying particular attention to country club and golf life throughout the exclusive district.

John E. Hazzard, well-known comedian, resident of Great Neck, will edit the dramatic page. Glen E. Towns will serve as golf editor.

Hal W. Lanigan, of Manhasset, formerly of the New York American and New York Daily News, and previously connected with leading papers in St. Louis and Boston, is to be the editor.

Albert McCool, formerly of the Hearst papers and Brooklyn Eagle, is advertising manager.

Mr. Lanigan said: "No expense will be spared in making the Great Neck News the best suburban newspaper in the country. We have made a survey of Great Neck and vicinity and are of the opinion there is room for a high class paper, such as we intend publishing, and the early response is encouraging."

CAHAN JOINS JOURNALISM STAFF

Syracuse Post Standard News Man Now University Instructor

Samuel Cahan, for more than four years a member of the news staff of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post Standard, has been made instructor in the Department of Journalism at Syracuse University until the end of the college year. Mr. Cahan will act as assistant to Professor John O. Simmons, recently appointed acting head of the department to fill the vacancy left by the death of Professor George C. Wilson.

Mr. Cahan is a graduate of the Department of Journalism, Syracuse University, 1924. He helped work his way through college by doing newspaper work for the Post Standard. During the World War Mr. Cahan served with the American Expeditionary Forces in France and with the Army of Occupation in Germany.

FOR advertising and job composition. The Ludlow system of matrix composition provides new, clear-cut printing faces on slugs for every job. Its speed, versatility, 6 to 60 point range in a wide variety of quality type faces, including bold and extended, ranks it first for display and job work. Because you set matrices, not type, you secure your slug lines immediately, never running short of sorts for any job.

Ludlow Black Series

Bold Type
48 Point Ludlow Black

Metal Slugs
42 Point Ludlow Black

Clear Display
36 Point Ludlow Black

Denote Strength
30 Point Ludlow Black

Beautiful New Faces
24 Point Ludlow Black

Multiple Form Possible by
18 Point Ludlow Black

The Ludlow System Supplies all
14 Point Ludlow Black

New Ideas Developed by Ludlow Make
12 Point Ludlow Black

Ludlow Typograph Co.
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

San Francisco, Hearst Building
Atlanta, Ga., 41 Marietta Street
New York, World Building
Boston, Mass., 261 Franklin Street

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

MERCHANTS DISCUSS SELLING

1,500 Attend "Move-More-Merchandise" Conference in St. Louis

More than 1,500 retail merchants operating in St. Louis trade territory attended the Move-More-Merchandise conference of the Advertising Club of St. Louis in conjunction with the meeting of the American Retailers' Association, in St. Louis last week. Problems of the retailers in the smaller towns were discussed.

The importance of well-prepared copy was emphasized by S. P. Preston, editor of the Gillespie (Ill.) News, who spoke on "Making Newspaper Advertising Pay." All advertising pays, no matter what kind, whether it be good or bad, large or small, intermittent or regular, but the returns are in accordance with the efforts put into it, according to Mr. Preston.

James Fisk, merchandising counsel for the Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal, spoke on "Making More Money in Retailing." He declared that the function of the retailer and his economic justification lie in the fact that he adds three values to merchandise; time, place and form. In discussing store arrangement, he pointed out the importance of utilizing intensively certain spots in every store that offer unusual opportunities because of location.

W. Leonard Thompson, assistant chief of the Domestic Commerce Division, United States Department of Commerce, declared that the retailer serves as the purchasing agent for his community and he must not degenerate into a distributing agent for manufacturers, if he is to fulfill his economic destiny.

Theodore H. Price said that he had come to the conclusion that "the hand-to-mouth policy has been carried to an absurd extreme in the United States of late, and that the time had come when the retailer must apply it a little less vigorously if he is to succeed in his business. The retailer who would succeed must carry a well-assorted stock so that he will be able to offer the shopper a comparatively wide choice."

Others who spoke were R. T. Whitnah, display manager for Crosby Bros., Topeka, Kan.; E. U. Berdahl, secretary of the South Dakota Retail Merchants Association; A. J. Willman, Willman & Son, Hannibal, Mo., and E. S. Charles, Charles Company, Napoleon, O.

O'BRIEN ON PARIS TRIP

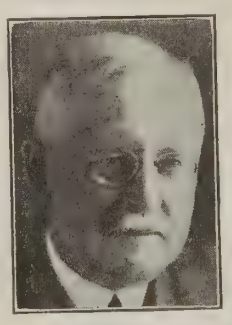
Vanderbilt Editor on Political Mission in French Capitol

Donald O'Brien, one of the editors of the Cornelius Vanderbilt group of tabloid newspapers, sailed for Paris late last week on the liner Olympic.

He indicated to New York ship news reporters there was a possibility of Mr. Vanderbilt starting a daily tabloid in Paris. In response to an inquiry from EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Mr. Vanderbilt telegraphed he was not "anticipating starting any newspapers in any city for the next several months."

O'Brien, he said, was going abroad on a political mission.

ST. LOUIS ADVERTISING CLUB AT STATE CAPITAL



First row, from left to right: C. R. Hatfield, the St. Louis conventions bureau, C. H. Hughes, J. Hart Vance, Felix Coste, P. M. Fahrendorf, C. E. Williams, Vice-President, and R. Fullerton Place, President of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, Governor Baker, Mayor Henry Kiel, of St. Louis, Clarence H. Howard, St. Louis capitalist, W. Palmer Clarkson, President of the Chamber of Commerce, Walter W. Weisenburger, Roscoe Baker, Tom Berkeley, and George Gayou, of the Advertising Club, Dr. Hugh Enloe of Jefferson City, and Dell Dutton of Advertising Club.

G. O. P. EDITORS ELECT DICKEY

Kansas City Journal-Post Owner Honored by Kansas Group

Walter S. Dickey, owner and publisher of the Kansas City Journal-Post, was elected president of the Republican Editorial Association of Missouri at the annual meeting in Kansas City, Kan., Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12. Mr. Dickey succeeds C. M. Harrison, of Booneville.

WALTER S. DICKEY

Charles W. Frear, Jefferson City, Mo., editor of the Missouri Blue Book, and the Missouri Trades Unionist, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Fifty eight editors from over the state were in attendance. J. S. Hubbard, executive secretary of the Missouri Press Association, Phil A. Bennett, lieutenant-governor and for 17 years editor of the Buffalo Reflex, were among the speakers.

District vice-presidents from each of the 16 congressional districts were chosen.

HEIGHTS PRESS CLUB DINES

New York Group Holds Annual Banquet—115 Attend

The Jackson Heights Press Club, established in that New York suburb four years gave its annual Lincoln Dinner, Feb. 12, at the Jackson Heights Country Club. More than 115 persons attended.

Among those included in the press circle of Jackson Heights are J. H. Furay, foreign editor, United Press Associations; Dr. Van Buren Thorne, editor of New York Times; Carl Dickey, New York Times; Edwin J. Clapp, financial editor, New York American; Charles P. Garde, managing editor, New York American, Miss Hazel Canning, feature writer, Sunday American; William R. White, financial bureau, New York Herald Tribune; John F. Lowther, financial writer, New York Herald Tribune; Stanley W. Prenosil, financial editor, Associated Press; Alan H. Temple, managing editor, Commerce and Finance; David Kennedy, marine editor, New York Herald Tribune; Livy S. Richard, editor of the Star Company; Milo W. Whittaker, newspaper advertising representative, and J. H. McMullen, financial writer, New York Times.

Mergenthaler Company Host

The Mergenthaler Linotype Company was host at luncheon given members of the Long Island Press Association, Feb. 16.

New Cleveland City Editor

Floyd Barker, at one time with the Cleveland Press, has been named city editor of the Cleveland Times.

DOMINANCE

A circulation exceeding the next two New York Evening Papers combined by more than 97,000 copies daily.

NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

"Prosperity Zone" is the name that has been given to the Dallas market-territory (of which The News is the accepted paper) because many authorities and most statistics agree in designating it as the most consistently prosperous single market in America today.

Write to The News for facts and data

THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS
Supreme in Texas

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely By THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

Over 50,000 workers are employed in Akron's 25 Rubber factories; not to mention the thousands employed in other industries.

These employes are well paid. They are able to buy luxuries as well as the necessities of life. Their wants are largely supplied through the columns of

THE AKRON EVENING TIMES

Charles H. Eddy Co.
Boston New York Chicago

ROME WASN'T BUILT IN A DAY AND IT TOOK US OVER FIVE YEARS TO BUILD THIS SERVICE OF VALUE

Our COMPLETE checking service handles the entire detail work of supplying "checking proofs" to every agency and advertiser promptly—and —efficiently.

WE DO IT ALL

from a few complete copies.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26 St., NEW YORK

first! in OHIO
1,586,936 Lines
IN JANUARY, 1925

The Dispatch published in January nearly 250,000 more lines of paid advertising than all other Columbus newspapers combined. In 1924 it exceeded the next largest Ohio newspaper by 2,500,909 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION
City 52,891
Suburban 23,639
Country 21,928
Grand Total 98,458

LARGEST IN CENTRAL OHIO

Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

The Nucleus of a Nation is an Ideal Nucleus for an Advertising Campaign

A few hundred brave, trusting souls staunchly holding on to their ideals and principles, in the face of great oppression and hardship, settled on the coast of what is now NEW ENGLAND believing that at last they had found what long they had been seeking. This small band was the beginning of what is now the greatest nation on earth.

As even so great a thing as a nation must have a small and humble beginning so likewise must even a merchandising and advertising campaign have a nucleus about which to grow. In NEW ENGLAND, national advertisers will, as those courageous settlers of old, find what they have long been seeking—an ideal try-out territory. By the right endeavors, your business can grow even in the same gigantic proportions as is evident in the growth of a nation from a mere handful of people in a few scattered settlements.

Now in NEW ENGLAND, there are 7,764,000 people
Now in NEW ENGLAND, there are 39 cities of over 30,000 population

Now the people of NEW ENGLAND are still seekers—they are still seeking all the things that make life more liveable and comfortable — in fact everything that you have to offer. Offer it to them through the pages of these daily newspapers, the finest to be found anywhere.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,628	.0275	.0175
*Boston Globe	(M&E)	274,892	.50	.50
*Boston Globe	(S)	322,030	.55	.55
Boston Transcript	(E)	34,990	.20	.20
*Boston Post	(M)	371,124	.60	.60
*Boston Post	(S)	351,527	.55	.55
*Fall River Herald	(E)	15,553	.05	.05
*Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	11,383	.055	.045
*Haverhill Gazette	(E)	15,400	.065	.05
†Lynn Item	(E)	16,345	.06	.04
†††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
*New Bedford Standard Mercury	(M&E)	33,383	.10	.10
*New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	26,944	.10	.10
*North Adams Transcript	(E)	9,491	.04	.035
*Salem News	(E)	20,784	.08	.07
*Taunton Gazette	(E)	8,479	.04	.03
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	66,049	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	49,849	.18	.15

MAINE—Population, 768,014

*Augusta Kennebec Journal	(M)	11,264	.05	.05
†Bangor Daily Commercial	(E)	14,750	.055	.05
*Portland Express	(E)	27,251	.10	07
*Portland Telegram (Sunday Edition Express)	(S)	29,992	.10	.07

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

*Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,104	.0375	.025
†Keene Sentinel	(E)	3,609	.03	.034
*Manchester Union Leader	(M&E)	27,864	.09	.07

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

†Newport Daily News	(E)	6,249	.0336	.0296
†Pawtucket Times	(E)	25,555	.07	.07
†Providence Bulletin	(E)	64,524	.17	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(M)	36,686	.10	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(S)	61,575	.15	.15
*Providence News	(E)	26,845	.07	.07
†Providence Tribune	(E)	23,603	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun	(E&S)	4,618	.025	.025
*Woonsocket Call	(E)	13,580	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

*Barre Times	(E)	6,944	.03	.025
†Bennington Banner	(E)	3,067	.0125	.0125
*Burlington Free Press	(M)	12,983	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald	(M)	10,765	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,024	.0214	.015

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

*Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	45,795	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post	(S)	20,017	.10	.10
*Hartford Courant	(M)	37,649	.08	.08
Hartford Courant	(S)	50,247	.11	.11
†Hartford Times	(E)	48,875	.12	.12
*Meriden Record	(M)	7,348	.045	.03
*Middletown Press	(E)	8,050	.0325	.025
†New Haven Register	(E&S)	42,171	.12	.11
*New London Day	(E)	12,079	.06	.045
†††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,494	.07	.06
*Norwalk Hour	(E)	5,842	.04	.04
†South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	4,280	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate	(E)	9,805	.05	.04
*Waterbury Republican American	(M&E)	22,836	.08	.08
*Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,043	.06	.06

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

STANDARDS OF ADVERTISING ADOPTED BY RETAIL DRY GOODS MEN

Truth in Copy Stressed as Only Means of Gaining Reader Confidence in Code Adopted at Annual Meet in New York

"CONSUMER confidence must be regained and kept, if the retail store is to continue to expand."

With this thought in mind new standards of advertising for department stores all over the country were adopted late last week at the fourteenth annual convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

It was one of the outstanding accomplishments of the big meeting, which brought together merchants from every state in the union—merchants who spend a total of $40,000,000 a year on advertising.

"Advertising should not only be truthful," the new code states, "but should at all times avoid even the semblance of untruth or the suspicion of insincerity.

"Understate, rather than overstate," the merchants were advised.

Authors of the "Standards of Retail Advertising," which were fifteen months in preparation, are: James Goold, advertising manager, R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., New York, chairman; Edward S. Morse, advertising manager, Saks & Co., Fifth avenue, New York; W. A. Holt, publicity director, Bullock's, Los Angeles, Cal.; Beatty Stevens, publicity and sales manager, Shepard Stores, Boston, Mass.; Paul R. Eager, advertising manager, Hahne & Co., Newark, N. J.; Robert H. Durbin, Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia, Pa.

The complete text follows:

As retail advertising men, it devolves upon us to conserve and advance the reputation of retail business, and of the institutions we represent. Recognizing that our duty to the public, as well as the best interests of retailing, call for honesy, sincerity and candor in advertising, we have formulated these Standards of Practice to govern the profession.

Advertising is socially useful, because it enables the consumer to buy more intelligently and with less effort. We have thought of advertising as commercially useful in performing a twofold function:

(a) To sell the merchandise advertised.

(b) To "sell" the institution advertising.

We should think of it as performing a third function also:

(c) "Selling" advertising itself.

As advertising men, we should be as jealous of the reputation of our profession as the wise merchant is jealous of the reputation of his establishment. We urge, therefore, the adoption by all retail advertisers of a set of principles which we present, together with specific examples intended to be illustrative and not exhaustive.

1—Advertising should not only be truthful, but should at all times avoid even the semblance of untruth, or the suspicion of insincerity. Understate rather than overstate. To this end:

(a) Avoid "superlatives" such as the "greatest sale," "the biggest stocks," "never before," etc. Not only is it unsafe to make such statements without qualification, but the public is inclined to discount their accuracy.

(b) Be as careful about the implications of your statements as about their direct meaning. Avoid ambiguous phrases and statements capable of misinterpretation.

(c) It is often wise to moderate even true statements when they are so startling as to appear incredible.

2—In advertising "sales" or "special prices" the language used should be so plain as to readily and unmistakably convey the actual facts in the case. We believe that carelessness and misunderstanding of terms is responsible for at least as many inaccuracies in advertising as dishonest intent. We recommend, therefore, the standardization of terms used in describing reduced or "special" prices, to minimize the possibilities of error and disagreement. We offer the following partial list of definitions:

(a) The term "formerly" or "reduced from" should be understood to mean that the article has just been reduced in price. It is equivalent to the phrase, "Yesterday's price was—"

(b) Where several successive reductions have taken place if the term "originally" is used, the last previous price should also be given.

(c) Such expressions as "worth—," "value—," "—grade," should not be used for comparative price purposes. If we are to assume that advertising is read by the public, then the lowest advertised price of an article fixes its current retail "value."

(d) The terms "regularly" or "usually" when used in connection with a new purchase, should be understood to mean the price at which the article was on sale in the same store immediately prior to the special offer.

3.—When specific quantities of merchandise offered in a sale are mentioned, they should be accurate. "Million Dollar Sale" should mean that merchandising totaling $1,000,000 at reduced retail prices is offered at special prices. The quantity mentioned should be in the store, in its own warehouse, or in its own possession and immediately procurable, when the sale opens.

4.—Descriptions of merchandise should be as complete as necessary to enable the reader to determine the true nature, materials, content, style, workmanship, sizes, colors and designs of the article advertised. For example:

(a) Textile fabrics should be plainly identified as wool, cotton, linen, silk or "rayon."

(b) If two or more yarns are mixed in a single weave this should be plainly stated, as silk-and-cotton; wool-and-silk; linen-and-cotton, etc.

(c) Commonly accepted trade names for furs, applied to pelts finished to resemble the genuine, should be used with descriptive definitions, e.g.—Hudson Seal (dyed muskrat), French Seal (dyed coney or dyed rabbit).

(d) Trade names such as satin de Chine, or velvetine, satine, etc., should be modified by such explanatory notes as "part cotton" or "cotton."

(e) If an article of furniture is described as mahogany or walnut, it should be either solid mahogany or walnut, or veneer, not merely stained to resemble the genuine. If other woods are used in the piece, such other woods should be named.

(f) Whenever gold is mentioned, specify the karat content.

5.—"Seconds," "irregulars," "imperfect," or "soiled" goods should be plainly stated as such, in conspicuous type.

6.—When a headline at the top of a page, or of a smaller composite section of advertising, leads the reader to believe that all items mentioned under it are included in a general sale, every item on the page or in such section should be specially priced.

7.—Avoid the use of illustrations which are misleading regarding size, quality or appearance of merchandise advertised, or which exaggerate the size and importance of a store's building or buying facilities in other cities. In mentioning buying offices in other cities, they should be designated as such, to avoid the impression that they are stores.

8.—We recommend that in each community the retail advertisers effect or support an organization whose function it shall be to scrutinize advertising carefully, check it against actual offerings and bring inaccuracies to the advertiser's attention.

Announcement was made of the election of the following officers for the coming year: President, Herbert J. Tily, Strawbridge & Clothier, Philadelphia; Vice President for New England, Arthur L. Aldred, Gladding Dry Goods Company, Providence; Vice President for Mid-Atlantic States, John S. Burke, B. Altman & Co., New York; Vice President for the South, W. E. Rownd, Stone & Thomas, Wheeling, W. Va.; Vice President for the Middle West, F. M. Ayres, L. S. Ayres & Co., Indianapolis; Vice President for the West, George A. Phillips, the Palace Store Company, Spokane, Wash.

N. Y. American Starts "Peach" Edition

The New York American on Feb. 1 started a "Peach edition," printed on peach-colored newsprint. In the form of a 4-page section, it blankets the outside of the American's first edition, issued at 8:30 P. M., and carries sports on the inside in later editions.

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.

THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

38,901
Net Paid Daily Average
January, 1925
TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES
KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

All Louisiana and MISSISSIPPI Listens In For RADIO NEWS in the NEW ORLEANS STATES
The state's representatives in the National Field—
THE JOHN M. BRANHAM CO.
New York — Chicago — St. Louis
Atlanta — Detroit — Kansas City
San Francisco—Los Angeles
New Orleans States

The Market--Kansas
The state that raised the biggest crops in 1924—154,253,000 bushels of wheat and 137,241,000 bushels of corn, plus other big grain yields.
The state where the cash gain on wheat and corn alone is $160,000,000 this year—one third of the increase on these two crops now reported for the entire United States.
The Medium --- Daily Capital
The only Kansas newspaper that covers the entire state.
It gives co-operation of the finest kind to advertisers and has heavy coverage of Topeka and the Topeka trade territory. Circulation 36,000. Member A. B. C.
Topeka Daily Capital
Topeka, Kansas
Arthur Capper, Publisher — Marco Morrow, Asst. Pub.

MOST NEWS
The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh
The Pittsburgh Post
MORNING AND SUNDAY
October circulation (net paid)
Daily Circulation.....137,824
Sunday Circulation.....197,347
Member A. B. C.

The Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

San Francisco Chronicle
M. H. de Young
Leading Newspaper of the Pacific Coast
"Blankets" Northern and Central California
A clientele that can and does buy everything
National Advertising Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Co.
225 Fifth Ave. NEW YORK — 360 N. Michigan Ave. CHICAGO

WHY SOME TEXAS CAMPAIGNS FAIL?
Because
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
were not on the list. Some Sales Managers think they can cover Texas with four papers. They can not.
Ask Beckwith—He Knows.

Research Is Great Function of Press

(Continued from page 6)

d it that the same is true of statesmen's peches and public documents. The only hig you are altogether sure of is that the peech was delivered, or the document sued. What the facts were is a problem f esearch.

'hat I am trying to say may perhaps e ummed up in this way. The news- aper man and the university historian r both engaged in research and each a his advantages and his defects. The espaper can has the advantage of first- and contact with the facts as with eye- itnesses. He has the handicap of being b ced to work rapidly, often so rapidly t o exclude the possibility of exactness a ompleteness.

'he university man has the advantage f me and of access to all the witnesses. I s against the principles of his pro- ession to hurry; therefore he has a better ance of being accurate and complete. u he lacks for the most part the ad- antage of first-hand contact with facts a witnesses, and must use his imagina- ion to supply what the newspaper often e with his own eyes.

'he editor is constantly interpreting irrent events in the light of his knowl- dge of the past, and warning his coun- ymen what will be the effect of a cer- ain course of action and what the ad- antage of another. By his interpre- tation of history he is in his measure a ailor of history.

I only our editors were always right! ' ly they always knew the lessons of e past! If only they could interpret e panorama that passes before their eyes daily as they sit in their high tower of observation! Were all this so, we could sure the future safety of our country; e build almost guarantee that the world ould be safe for humanity. For as the it's write, so America acts, and Amer- a's acts are among the most potent rces for determining the future history f e world. Give me the wisdom of we interpreter of the world's history; e dictate the utterances of the men f search who sit in editors' chairs, and I will direct the course of human sty, and so could you under the same nditions.

I ope I have said enough to convince u hat every newspaper man is actu- y engaged in research and that the os important function of the news- pa is comprehended under the inclu- ve erm "research."

I ope you see also that it follows from s hat the newspaper and the university e ound to be partners in the greatest e erprise that is going on in the world da—the enterprise of gathering the ts of history, including preeminently las history, and interpreting these ts in such a way as to point the wise sh of public policy for today and to- or w.

I wonder if I am not also right in ning that the newspaper of today co izes more clearly than ever before r sponsibility, not only to record, but to o interpret current events, and on t asis of such interpretation to give sh dvice as it gives to the public. If we are coming closer together than er before in our definition of our re- ctive tasks, and to a recognition of the igation to cooperate in it.

Research is our common task. Better ma history our common purpose.

ews Scores "Advertising Whims"

Advertising is efficient when it pays its n ay, E. St. Elmo Lewis of Camp- l-wald Company, New York, de- re in addressing a meeting of Chi- o dvertising men Feb. 11. Mr. Lewis te reduction of advertising waste by li and intelligent preparation of y, based upon exhaustive research. is in advertising, he declared, result th useless expenditure of millions ro riated for advertising.

A.A.C.W. PICKS HOUSTON PROGRAM COMMITTEE

Seventeen Prominent Advertising Men Have Charge of International Convention Features — C. K. Woodridge, Chairman

The complete personnel of the General Program Committee for the twenty-first annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World in Houston, May 9-14, has just been announced by Lou E. Holland, president of the Association.

The Committee consists of 17 prominent advertising men and publishers and business executives from various parts of America and abroad. C. K. Woodbridge, president of the Dictaphone Corporation, New York, is chairman, and Earle Pearson, director of the Educational Department of the A. A. C. W. New York, secretary.

Joseph Meadon, of the Franklin Press, Detroit, chairman of the General On-to-Houston Committee, and John H. Logeman, of the Chicago Poster Advertising Company, Chicago, chairman of the International Exhibit Committee, are ex-officio members.

Other members of the General Program Committee are: Bruce Barton, Barton, Durstine & Osborn Company, New York; David M. Botsford, Botsford-Constantine, Inc., Portland, Ore.; Theodore G. Morgan, Henry Morgan, Co., Ltd., Montreal; Jefferson Thomas, Thomas Advertising Agency, Jacksonville, Fla.; G. Logan Payne, Washington Times; Charles W. Hoyt, Charles W. Hoyt Company, New York; Gilbert T. Hodges, Frank Munsey Company, New York; Harry Tipper, Class Journal Company, New York; Marcellus Foster, Houston Chronicle; Bernard J. Mullaney, Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Company, Chicago; William F. Rogers, Boston Transcript; Charles R. Frederickson, American Art Works, Coshocton, O.; C. Harold Vernon, C. Vernon & Sons, Ltd., London, England; M. C. Robbins, Advertising Fortnightly, New York; H. P. Comstock, Comstock-Bolton Company, Kansas City; Kerwin H. Fulton, Poster Advertising Company, New York.

Ottawa Press Gallery Elects

At the annual meeting of the Press Gallery of the Canadian Parliament on Feb. 15, the following officers were elected: president, John Bassett, Montreal Gazette; vice-president, F. Charpentier, Montreal La Presse; secretary, F. C. Mears, Toronto Globe; executive, T. H. Blacklock, Toronto Mail and Empire; E. W. Grange, Renters' Limited; Edgar March, Montreal Star; J. A. Fortier, Montreal La Patrie and Omer Langlois, Quebec Le Soleil.

New Man on Eagle's Ad Staff

Mark Rutlege McGarry has been placed in charge of Wall Street advertising for the Brooklyn Eagle.

CIRCULATION PROGRESS

Allardice, Albany Circulator, Perfected Home-Controlled Delivery System

"THE paper may be the best in the world, but if it fails to reach the subscriber it is worthless."

JAMES J. ALLARDICE

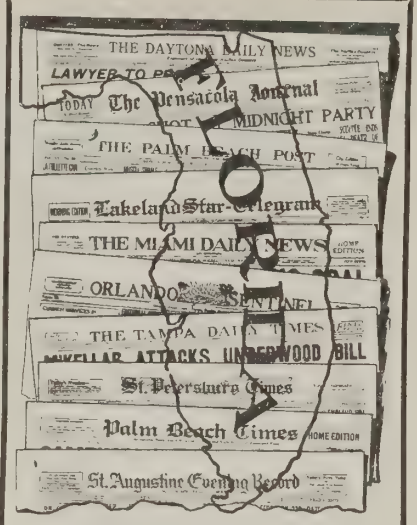
This is the slogan James J. Allardice, circulation manager of the Albany Evening News and the Albany Knickerbocker Press, gives to the men who work under him on these two newspapers.

Mr. Allardice, a keen student of circulation methods, not long ago toured the country, surveying the systems employed by the biggest newspapers. When he returned he gathered together the best features he had found and applied them in the distribution of the two Albany dailies.

To his credit also is given the recent perfection of a home-controlled delivery service for the News, which averages only two complaints in service daily out of a possible 20,000.

All this has been accomplished in little more than a year as circulation manager. Mr. Allardice, while he has been seven years with the Press Company, publisher of the News and Knickerbocker Press, spent five years in the editorial department and one on the advertising and business administration side before he became a circulator.

Circulation success, he believes, comes from team work. He refuses to accept full credit for himself, saying he has surrounded himself with a corps of competent circulation men, whom he lets shoulder the responsibility of their end of the business. Mr. Allardice and these men meet in consultation frequently to talk over the business and swap suggestions for the good of the department.



Norwegian Newsprint

Prompt shipments Inquiries solicited

NORWEGIAN PAPER MILLS AGENCY, INC.

33 West 42nd Street New York City

Telephone Penn. 7443

Imperial Is In Florida This Winter

AS a matter of fact Imperial is in Florida the year 'round. Florida likes the Imperial Plus Metal Plan and believes in its ability to give dependable, economical service. This much is attested to by the following list of Florida papers using the Plan:

The Daytona Journal
Daytona News
Lakeland Star Telegram
Miami Daily News
Miami Tribune
Orlando Sentinel
Palm Beach Post
Palm Beach Times
Pensacola Journal
St. Augustine Record
St. Petersburg Times
Tampa Daily Times

Florida is not alone in its long list of papers that depend upon Imperial. Other states have equally impressive lists.

Why the Lists Are Growing

There's but one reason. Imperial Plus Plan provides a dependable and economical plan for keeping type metal up to its highest efficiency, at the same time adding years of usefulness to the metal. Would you care to read this Plan? Write today for a copy.

Imperial METAL

Linotype—Monotype—Intertype Stereotype Elrod—Ludlow—Linograph—Thompson

Imperial Type Metal Co.

Philadelphia—Cleveland—New York—Chicago

RESCUE CHIEF PRAISES CAVE CITY WRITERS

But He Censures Reporter Whom He Charges With Originating Publicity Hoax Story Regarding Trapped Man's Plight

Newspaper reporters covering the tragic imprisonment of Floyd Collins in Cave City, Ky., came in for both praise and censure for the way they handled this amazing human interest story, which long held first column space in leading dailies of the nation.

"The newspaper men, in general, behaved themselves admirably during these days of tense competition for news," Brig. Gen. H. H. Denhardt, in charge of the unsuccessful rescue attempt, declared in a statement issued Feb. 14, at Cave City.

"With one or two exceptions they have endeavored to report the news as they understood it to be," he said.

Because of rumors circulated early in the rescue attempt by Tom Killian of the Chicago Tribune that the imprisonment was a publicity stunt, Gov. William J. Fields of Kentucky ordered the special court of inquiry at which Gen. Denhardt's statement was placed on the records without comment.

Gen. Denhardt in his statement said that Tom Killian, Chicago newspaper man, was the originator, or, if not the originator, one of those most actively engaged, in "spreading a wild rumor" that Collins was not a prisoner, but that the affair was a hoax or publicity stunt.

Gen. Denhardt did not know, the statement said, what newspapers employed Killian and that the General did not hold the paper responsible for the action of which he complained.

Gen. Denhardt, in his statement, related that Killian had discussed with him the possibility that the reported imprisonment was a hoax. Killian had admitted, however, that he believed Collins really was imprisoned, the statement said, but asserted he did not believe that "fake journalism" was dead and held he could send out a story that reports of such rumors had been heard without violating journalistic ethics.

Gen. Denhardt realized that the broadcasting of such reports would seriously hamper the work of rescue and went to Frankfort at once for a conference with the Governor, which resulted in the ordering of the inquiry.

He had hoped, the statement continued, that the reporter in question would be a witness before the court, but when he was called it was found he had left town and it was understood his paper had sent another correspondent to cover the imprisonment.

Killian claimed his life was threatened.

Following the charge by Lieut. Gov. Denhardt of Kentucky that Tom Killian was responsible for the circulation of the report that the pinning of the cave explorer was a publicity hoax, the Tribune printed a statement.

The newspaper declared that it had been Killian's duty to investigate and to report the hoax rumor as a part of the Sand Cave story; it added Killian's denial that he had remarked to Denhardt that "the day of the fake story has not passed."

Killian Wednesday gave out a letter which he said he had sent to Denhardt denying the lieutenant governor's charges. He names four Louisville newspaper correspondents who, he says, had been investigating the hoax rumor "days before I got there."

Reporters worked under difficulties on the sand cave assignment. A group is shown interviewing Albert Marshall, Kentucky miner (seated, center), who has just come from the rescue shaft. He later found the body of Floyd Collins.

Killian added a denial that he had been recalled by the Tribune for mentioning in a story the rumor that the trapping of Collins was a publicity stunt. He explains that he is a rewrite man on the Tribune, was sent to Cave City in an emergency, and that he left when Orville Dyer became available for the assignment. He adds that he would have been glad to testify before the military court of inquiry.

A photographer for the Chicago Tribune, John W. Steger, went down into the Sand Cave tomb of Floyd Collins Feb. 17, and photographed the body in its resting place. Steger was suspended by ropes while he made the photograph. The picture was a means of identifying the body. The photograph was printed by the Tribune and two other Chicago newspapers.

Lee Collins, father of the man buried alive, was grateful for the part played by the press in the rescue work.

"I want to thank the newspapers," he said, "because they have done a great deal."

BANKER-PUBLISHER DIES

George Hadden, Vice-President, Brooklyn Standard-Union Was 60

George Hadden, 60, vice-president of the Brooklyn Union Publishing Company, publisher of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, died Feb. 13, in the Long Island College Hospital, following an operation.

Mr. Hadden was long connected with the Hamilton Trust Company, and when that institution was merged with the Chase National Bank he was placed in charge of the branch with the title of Assistant Vice President of the Chase National Bank.

He was also a trustee of the Union Dime Savings Bank, a director of the Livingston Realty Company, the Brooklyn Union Publishing Company and Treasurer and a director of the Brooklyn Real Estate Exchange. He was also a trustee of the estate of the late William Berri, President of the Brooklyn Union Publishing Company.

Obituary

TRUMAN G. DANIELS, 70, who died in Alameda, Cal., Feb. 12, founded the Alameda Argus 45 years ago and published it until 1910. Of late years he was editorial writer on the Oakland Tribune.

J. A. MAXWELL, 77, a pioneer journalist of Fulda, Minn., died at his home at Pomona, Cal., Feb. 8. He established the Fulda Republican, now the Free Pr

MORTON B. WISE, former city editor the Winona (Minn.) Daily Republic Herald, died Jan. 31, at Phoenix, Ariz

JAMES A. HINES, 46, who had work on the Dayton (O.) Journal, Iron (O.) Irontonian, Portsmouth Times other papers, died at his home in Por mouth, O., recently. At one time he v on the Washington Post.

WALTER BYRON NORTON, editor of Providence (R. I.) County Times an former pressman on the Providence T une, died at Riverside, R. I., Feb. 15.

D. BENJAMIN BUSBY, 78, former ed of the Columbia (S. C.) Record, d last week at his home in Monetta, S.

GEORGE WOODRUFF WALTER died a a brief illness Sunday morning, at residence, 153 Alexander avenue, Up Montclair, N. J. He was a member the local advertising staff of the York Evening Journal for the past se years, and was previously connected v the Christian Science Monitor. He born at Criston Springs, N. Y., May 1881.

NEW YORK'S LEADER

In January, as in every month for many years, The New York Times led all New York newspapers in total volume of advertising, having published 2,268,162 agate lines, an excess of 862,808 lines over the next New York newspaper.

The significance of The Times leadership is remarkable when it is considered that the advertising published was of the highest grade appearing in any newspaper and that thousands of lines were excluded because they did not meet the requirements of The Times censorship.

ONE out of every THREE Homes in Milwaukee receive

THE MILWAUKEE LEADER

"Unawed by Influence and Unbribed by Gain."

Advertising Representatives

FRALICK & BATES

Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Los Angeles

Los Angeles Time

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

In New Orleans its

THE MORNING TRIBUNE

(Published week-day mornings)

THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM

(Published week-day afternoons)

THE ITEM TRIBUNE

(Published Sunday mornings)

Sold to National Advertisers at a combination rate 15c a line week-days and 18c a line Sundays.

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD

Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.

Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:

H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities

TRADING POPULATION

167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

Always Reliable

The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

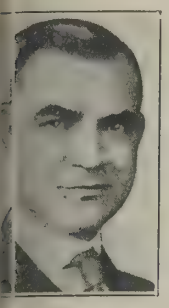
"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The Evening World.

MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World



Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

S.VENTH DISTRICT AD CLUBS ELECT NEWSPAPER MAN CHAIRMAN

rnk Galle of Advertising Department, Wichita Eagle, Chosen at Wichita Meet—Lou Holland Urges More Vigilance Against Fraud Ads

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

ICHITA, Kan., Feb. 18.—The Sev- enth District Associated Advertising s of the World, held its fourth annual convention here Feb. 16 to 18, elected officers for the coming year, chose Oklahoma City as the convention city for 1926 and heard a distinguished coterie of speakers who talked in plain terms about advertising, neither under-stressing its best points nor glossing over its frailties. The ntion was held at the Hotel Broad-

u E. HOLLAND

e to the fact that the international ntion in cton next will draw rly from this ct, which lles Kansas, homa, Mis- Arkansas Louisiana, to the fact t only six s before the ntion was ll the place changed n New Or- n to Wichita, elance was a nk Galle, of the advertising depart- n of the Wichita Eagle, was elected inan of the district for the next year, ceding R. W. Etter of Pine Bluff, k who has been chairman for three d ne-half years. The state vice-pres- n are as follows: Missouri, L. E. d of Kansas City; Oklahoma, E. A. is Tulsa; Arkansas, Lee Fleming, rt Smith; Kansas, R. D. Streeter, tsinson. Louisiana was not repre- te at the convention.

CARL HUNT

The headliners on the program were u E. Holland of Kansas City inter- ical president of the A. A. C. W.; r. Morrow of Topeka, assistant pub- e of the Capper Publications; Carl lms of Oklahoma City, editor of klahoma Farmer and Stockman; t Murdock, editor-in-chief of the cka Eagle; Henry J. Allen, former e or of Kansas and editor of the cka Beacon; and Carl Hunt of New rk manager of the A. A. C. W.

Holland, in his address, described damnable shame" the methods advertising frauds perpetrated upon blic, and particularly in Kansas, r he said, precautions have not been as they have in neighboring states. Morrow answered the three charg- t often made against advertising; causes people to let others do r inking for them; that it glorifies n"; that it results in expenditures d nothing to real values.

Advertising," said Mr. Morrow, "is o y method so far found which will pen all the channels of trade and e a glut which brings disaster. ful advertising costs nothing be- its effects economies which more pay expenses. Retail stores with time turn-over can profit greatly bling their advertising appropri- by that they can make one more er. The national advertiser who ecting his rural market can well o spend more money on it to in- the volume of his profits."

Williams attributed to advertising f the unrest on the farms.

"Advertising," he said, "has caused the farmer to want bath tubs, automobiles, tractors, better homes, and cosmetics for his women folks, but has not furnished the means for the purchase thereof."

Mr. Williams produced statistics showing that when the average acre financial yield on American farms has fallen below a 60 year average, the number of annual business failures have gone up, and when the financial yield has risen above the 60 year average, the number of failures has been reduced. This he offered in support of his statement that the prosperity of the country is directly reflected in the prosperity of the farmer.

Mr. Murdock delivered the keynote address of the convention on the opening day, on the subject: "The Search For Undeveloped Opportunities," and Mr. Allen spoke at the annual banquet on "Advertising Ethics."

Mr. Hunt outlined the best salesmanship methods, both in advertising and merchandising, and laid stress on the fact that the best way for the retailer, in preparing his advertising, to assure the popularity of his products is to make a close study of what his customers and patrons like.

BASEBALL WRITERS AT PLAY

Hold Second Annual Dinner in New York—Prizes Awarded

Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis was guest of honor at the second annual dinner of the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association, held at the Hotel Roosevelt, Feb. 15. More than 300 attended. The writers entertained diners with a skit entitled "Keep Your Shirt On."

Commissioner Landis, Will Rogers, Senator James J. Walker, Irving Cobb and Bugs Baer were all heard in talks on baseball topics. Mr. Cobb also presented the prizes of the Baseball Writers' Association of America in the absence of James M. Gould, national president.

These prizes were awarded for the best baseball stories written during the year by members of the association. Grantland Rice of the New York Herald Tribune won the prize for the major league cities, a fine watch, with Gordon Mackay of Philadelphia and W. B. Hanna of New York receiving honorable mention, and Frank F. O'Neill of the Syracuse Post-Standard, a former member of the New York chapter, won the watch for the best story printed in a minor league city.

HENRY W. RAYMOND DEAD

Son of Henry J. Raymond, First Editor of New York Times

Henry W. Raymond, 76, son of the late Henry J. Raymond, founder and editor of the New York Times, died Feb. 18 at his home in Germantown, Pa.

Besides being well known in American journalistic circles through his long service as editor of the Germantown Telegraph, which followed a thorough apprenticeship on the staffs of the New York Times, the Chicago Tribune and other papers in the West, Mr. Raymond was also appointed private secretary to the Secretary of the Navy during President McKinley's Administration. Throughout his service in this capacity he still retained editorial control of the Germantown paper.

Daily Reverts to Twice-a-Week

George B. Van Dyke, editor and owner of the Anthony (Kan.) Daily Bulletin has announced that the Bulletin will be issued hereafter twice a week and the daily suspended.

IOWA BANKS

In First Class Condition

Never before, in the history of Iowa banking have the banks been in a better and more healthy condition.

The last report of the state banking institution showed that there had been an increase of $1,500,000 in the deposits in the 1,237 Iowa state and savings banks and trust companies during a period of three months. Also, during the same period of time, $16,650,000 in loans has been repaid to the banks.

The people of Iowa are in better financial condition than they have been for some time. There is much money in the state, that is waiting either to remain within the state's border or to move out toward those wise advertisers who can make the Iowans realize the worth of their products. Be sure that you are one of these advertisers—the very wisest of whom will use this list of demand-creating newspapers which are so thoroughly read and relied upon in Iowa.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
*Burlington Gazette .....(E)	10,164	.04
*Cedar Rapids Gazette .....(E)	21,481	.07
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(E)	14,564	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(S)	17,895	.06
†Davenport Times .....(E)	24,676	.07
*Iowa City Press-Citizen.....(E)	6,387	.035
*Mason City Globe Gazette .....(E)	12,622	.04
*Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,762	.035
*Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	12,852	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier.....(E)	17,071	.06

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

UNDER an Ossining, N. Y., date line recently came a story released by the State Prison Commission. It thus told of the work of one of the inmates in the state prison at that place:

> He has adorned the gruesome place with flowers, trees and shrubs, and the yard which five years ago was desolate and littered with stones and rubbish is now a thing of beauty. The rose garden is an inspiration to dark and troubled souls.

Sunday editors are not usually caught napping, but this tip from Ossining went begging for elaboration at the hands of skilled literary craftsmen. But the editor of The Cosmopolitan Magazine evidently knows his job, for he commissioned Irvin S. Cobb to write the story. It is printed in the March issue under the somewhat startling caption "The Convict Who Made a Garden on the Road to Hell."

This convict, No. 69,690, is Charles E. Chapin, for many years city editor of the New York Evening World. How he killed his wife while she slept in September, 1918, need not be retold here. Details may be found in his own book, "Charles Chapin's Story"—a book which is still well thumbed at newspaper clubs. I do not need to tell how Chapin made the Ossining desert to blossom like a rose—without expense to the taxpayers of New York State. I expect the readers of this department to read the article itself.

But I do want to take up one or two assertions made in the article. For example, Cobb says that Chapin had the reputation of being the best city editor in town—certainly a most remarkable tribute. Desiring to test the truthfulness of this assertion I asked a city editor of a New York daily as we were at lunch together at the Newspaper Club whether he agreed with Cobb. He hesitated only a moment before he replied, "Yes, on the whole, I am inclined to give Chapin first place."

In another place in the article Cobb remarks:

> The Chapin I had known was a hard man and to the best of my knowledge and belief and to the best of my personal observation he had never manifested real tenderness except in his attitude toward the fragile, faded little woman who was to die by his hands.

Yet Chapin had a side which I think has never been sufficiently brought out. One anecdote—though I could furnish several—will do by way of illustration. A few weeks ago I was talking at the Club to a reporter to whom I would give a very high place for his resourcefulness in getting spot news immediately to his paper. It was he who turned the conversation to Chapin—a fact that shows that Chapin is not forgotten in newspaper circles.

This reporter went on to tell me how, when he worked with Chapin on the Evening World, one of his associates had contracted pneumonia when on an assignment and had died. He left a widow in destitute circumstances. The boys thought it would be a nice thing to pass around the hat. Later they went to Chapin for a donation. His reply was characteristic: "You boys waste all your salaries on booze and chippies, then when you kick up your toes you think the paper will take care of your widow. I don't want you to get any such idea. Get the hell out of here!"

What Chapin was called when the boys got together to take the little fund over to the widow had better be imagined than put into cold type. When they reached the home of the widow she was especially grateful for the help tendered. With tears in her eyes she remarked, "You boys on the World have been especially kind. Do you know I could not have buried my husband if it had not been for Mr. Chapin's personal check?"

As the boys went back to the city room they didn't have much to say, but they evidently thought a great deal. This anecdote is typical of Charles E. Chapin.

But don't forget the story that is slugged in this comment. It will be found in the Cosmopolitan for March.

* * *

THOSE who read between the lines will find "Twice Thirty" (Chas. Scribner's Sons) by Edward W. Bok is a greater book than "The Americanization of Edward Bok," even if the latter volume holds the time record as one of the ten books most in demand in bookstores and libraries. "Twice Thirty" gives Bok's philosophy of life with a frankness seldom found in books of this type.

Bok quotes Roosevelt as saying, "The table of contents is about the best guide I know of to a book. It beats the critics for me, as to whether I want to read it or not."

About thirty chapters make up this volume of 540 pages. Each chapter heading challenges the imagination and piques the curiosity. Most of them deliver the goods.

Was Bok worth $100,000 to the Curtis Publishing Company? Advertisements of cigarettes are excluded in the columns of the Ladies' Home Journal. One of Bok's sons must have seen somewhere the familiar slogan "Ask Dad—He knows." Dad's reply is given in detail in one of the chapters.

Does one wonder how the editor of The Ladies' Home Journal who told American parents for so many years how to bring up children, reared his own? Did he preach one thing in his magazine and practice another in his home? These questions, too, are answered in the volume.

What does Bok do when, away from home he is "solicited" by what seems to be a scarlet woman of the street? The chapter which answers this question is entitled "My Most Unusual Experience." Judged by those standards which give news value to a story this chapter is more interesting than anything Bok ever printed in this magazine. Positive proof is given in this chapter that truth is often stranger than fiction.

For the editorial writer "Twice Thirty" suggests more topics for editorial discussion than any book I have read in some time. It is full of interesting anecdotes about the leading figures of the past 50 years that might well be run as fillers on newspaper pages. The chapter on the "American Peace Award" is worth an editorial by itself. A note should go to the morgue about the biographical data which will be found in the appendix.

But let us hope, as newspaper men, that it is a long time before "Thirty" is written for Edward W. Bok. It was Emerson who said, "We do not count a man's years until he has nothing else to count."

* * *

NEWS out of Russia has been most jejune. What has appeared in type has not always come from reliable sources. E. W. Hullinger, as representative of the United Press Association, has had a wonderful opportunity as he covered his assignments in that country to study the social and economic phases under the Bolshevik regime. Along with his nose for news he has had an eye for the truth. Consequently, his volume "The Re-Forging of Russia" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) will be of help to the editorial writer who must comment from time to time about the attempts of that country to find a place among the civilized nations of the world. Mr. Hullinger is not so much interested in the sparks that fly from the anvil as he is in the productions that are hammered out.

Black Leaves Washington Corps

Robert I. Black has resigned as Washington correspondent of the Omaha (Neb.) World Herald and the Dubuque (Ia.) Telegraph-Herald to enter the Florida real estate field.

DAILY EXPANDS NEWS SERVIC

Richmond Times-Dispatch Opens B... eau at Staunton, Latimer in Charg

The Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispa... has established at Staunton, Va., ... Times-Dispatch Valley News Bur... which will be in charge of James ... Latimer, for many years a member ... the staff of that newspaper.

Correspondents located in the more ... portant towns in fourteen counties c... prising the Valley territory will re... by mail, telephone and telegraph to ... Valley News Bureau. A leased teleph... wire will connect the Bureau with ... main office.

Handling of news will be greatly ... pedited by the new arrangement.

Through the transfer of Mr. Lati... from Richmond to Staunton the offic... secretary-treasurer of the Virginia P... Association which he holds will also ... moved to Staunton.

Our Features:

Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep — Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Woodward Bldg., Washington, D.C.

Newspaper Features

Intelligently Selected—Properly Prepared

Comics, Fiction, Cross-Word Puzzles, Weekly Features, Daily Fillers and Blanket Services.

Write for Sample Sheets

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New Yo...

SERVICE
THE CHARLES PARTLOWE COMPANY
America's Largest Circulation Building Organization
-RESULTS COUNT-
6th Floor Occidental Bld.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

55 OUT OF 100

Thomas Masson's "Annals of 1924" contains the one hundred best paragraphs written during that year. Fifty-five of these were written by

ROBERT QUILLEN
"World's Greatest Paragrapher"
ASSOCIATED EDITORS, INC.
440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

1925 will be a Prosperous Year

AN immediate gain of thousands of NEW prepaid subscribers is the best possible way to start the New Year. Our campaigns offer the one SURE way to obtain this circulation increase, as is proven by over twenty years of unquestioned supremacy and the number of leading metropolitan dailies who use and endorse our services.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-719 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.
Peoria Star Co...
Peoria, Ill.

ENAMEL ENGRAVING PROCESS FOUND

"old Top" Enamel Method Which Is Fool Proof and Improves Printing Announced by Hearst Laboratories

A modification and simplification of the mel process of engraving, which makes photographic reproductions stand out clearer and in more detail than ever before on newsprint was disclosed this week for the first time by Charles E. Tebbs, general art director of the Hearst newspapers.

"Using our new process an engraver can't make a poor cut, unless the photograph is bad in the first place," Mr. Tebbs claimed.

"For 20 years newspapers have been printing pictures from zinc with an ink of." Mr. Tebbs explained. "But with this ink top the dots spread and thickened. Various attempts were made, especially in Boston, to use enamel to prevent such spread and give better detail to cuts. What was known as the hot top method we developed.

"A year ago the late George Palmer of the Hearst organization went abroad to study foreign engraving methods.

"Last July, following experiments, we evolved a formula for what is now known as the cold top enamel, which we have wanted and are now using in all the nine Hearst newspapers throughout the country.

"This new method insures an exact reproduction of a photograph and is foolproof for any engraver, and in addition I believe, the greatest time saver that has been discovered for years."

The cold top enameling process has been in use by the New York Mirror since it started last August. It was developed in the Hearst Chemical Research Laboratory in New York, of which Dr. Paul Helfrich is director.

Mr. Tebbs has been with the Hearst newspapers for 34 years. He was one of the first newspaper photographers in the business.

WEEK'S AD TIPS

N W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Now handling account of R. E. Thompson Mfg. Co., radio, Jersey City, N. J.

Barton, Durstine & Osborn, 383 Madison avenue, New York. Making 5,000-line contracts with newspapers in various sections.

Thomas E. Basham Company, Intersouthern Building, Louisville. Placing orders with newspapers in Central West for the Axton-Fisher Tobacco Company, "Clown Cigarettes," Louisville.

Brinan-Eley Company, 922 Republic Building, Chicago. Reported to be handling account for Lomax Ginger Ale Company, Chicago.

Collins-Kirk, Inc., 750 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Reported to have secured account of the Morton Salt Company, Chicago.

Samuel C. Croot Company, 28 West 44th street, New York. Placing a try-out campaign with some Pennsylvania newspapers for the National Sales Chain Company, "Yankee Perfume," New York.

Robert H. Dippy, 903 Fox Building, Philadelphia. Has secured the account of the Holden Radio Company, Philadelphia.

Doyance, Sullivan & Company, 130 West 42nd street, New York. Now handling account for the Magnavox Company, "Radio" sets, etc., Oakland, Cal.

H. Goldsmith Company, 9 East 41st street, New York, has secured the account of Winsboit & Company, "Merode" underwear, Lakefield, Mass.

C. V. Hellwig Company, 9 East 40th street, New York. Placing orders with some New York State and New England newspapers for Erkman & Son, soaps and scouring powder, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Lord & Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making 5,000-line contracts with newspapers in various sections for the Quaker Oats Company, Chicago.

Street & Finney, Inc., 40 West 40th street, New York. Reported to be placing account for T. Stanley Company, soaps, New York.

Tolmann Agency, 185 Madison avenue, New York. Making 5,000-line contracts with newspapers in selected sections for the Bonnie B. Hairpin, hair nets, New York.

Van Bird Wilson, Inc., 9 Hanover street, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in cities the same as last year for the New York Life Insurance Company, annual statement, New York.

Arthur Rosenberg Company, Inc., 110 West 42nd street, New York. Appointed advertising counsel for Duplex Condenser & Radio Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., for a campaign in trade and "fan" machines.

Ross-Gould Advertising Agency, 10th and Olive streets, St. Louis. Handling advertising of Milbradt Manufacturing Company, St. Louis, manufacturers of Milbradt power lawn mower.

W. W. Sharpe & Co., 240 Broadway, New York. Handling advertising of Standard Radio Corporation, "Standardyne" Radio, Worcester, Mass.

Simpson Advertising Company, Syndicate Trust Bldg., St. Louis. Will use one-quarter and full pages in leading metropolitan newspapers for Trampe Spark Plug Company, St. Louis.

Snodgrass & Gayness, Inc., 250 Park avenue, New York. Preparing plans for a rotogravure campaign for Houbigant, Inc., Face Powder, etc., New York.

F. R. Steel Company, 201 East Ontario street, Chicago. Orders are being sent out to a general list of newspapers on the Western Specialty Company.

Sterling Advertising Service, 58 W. 40th street, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, Cleveland and San Francisco for Indra Pearl Company, 396 Fifth avenue, New York.

Stewart-Davis Advertising Agency, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Schedules on the Wrigley Company, (chewing gum), Chicago, are being sent out to newspapers generally.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 410 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. A list is being prepared on the Celotex Company, Chicago.

Young & Rubicam, Atlantic Bldg., Philadelphia. Will place orders with newspapers in various sections for Process Chemical Company, "Larvex" Moth Proofing Machine, 250 W. 57th street, New York.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

For Sale.
Model E Duplex press, bought new in March, 1924. Extra rollers, sixteen eight-col. chases and one double-truck chase, with motor complete. Ready for immediate delivery. Best offer will take it. Part cash, balance bankable paper. Address Sun, Spartanburg, S. C.

32 pp. Hoe Web Press.
Printing usual combinations up to 32 pp. Speed, 25,000 up to 16 pp., or 12,500 up to 32 pp. Equipped with motor and complete stereotyping outfit, everything necessary to produce plates. Has been used only once a week, producing a tabloid paper which is to be changed to a magazine. A fine outfit at very reasonable price for quick action. Can supply samples of its work. Ask for details of No. 644. Baker Sales Company, 200 Fifth avenue, New York. We have many other good presses to offer if above does not fit your requirements. Let us know what you can use.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS
DUPLEX PRESSES
"OUR CUSTOMERS WRITE OUR ADS"
DUPLEX TUBULAR
"The flexibility of the Duplex Tubular appeals to us. Its economy of operation is another feature and its speed on all runs is the same."
Janesville Daily Gazette
JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN
Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

We can increase your business—you want it increased.
You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.
BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

Used Newspaper Presses

R. Hoe & Co. Right Angle Quadruple Press with two folders. Prints 48,000 4-6 or 8 pages, 24,000 10-12-14 or 16 pages, 12,000 20-24-28 or 32 pages. Length of page, 22¾ inches.

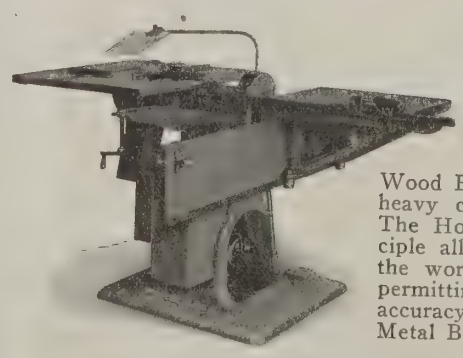
Scott 4-Deck, 2-Page, wide Quadruple Press with single folder. Capacity 24,000 4-6-8-10-12-14 or 16 pages, 12,000 20-24-28 or 32 page papers collected. Length of page 22¾ inches, 7 or 8 columns to page.

Two Scott Quadruple 4-Deck, 2-page, wide Presses with single folders. Capacity 4-6-8-10-12-14-16 pages 24,000, 20-24-28-32 page papers 12,000 per hour, 7 or 8 columns to page, length of page 23 9/16 inches.

R. Hoe & Company Double Sextuple Press with central folders and extra color cylinders. This prints 7 or 8 columns to the page, length of page 23 inches.

PRESSES AVAILABLE FOR EARLY DELIVERY

Walter Scott & Co.
Plainfield, New Jersey
441 Monadnock Block, CHICAGO — 1457 Broadway, NEW YORK



N.Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by POWERS
NEW PROCESS

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
709-719 Palace Bldg.,
Minneapolis Minn.

MODERNIZE
your COMPOSING ROOM
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMENT
Made in both wood and steel.
Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.
For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.
USED BY THE Harrisburg Patriot
Harrisburg, Pa.
We refer you to them for their opinion
QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME — CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE
MAIN OFFICE Fisher Bldg. 343 S. Dearborn St. CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE Marbridge Bldg. Broadway at 34th St. NEW YORK

Hoe Combined Saw Table and Mono-Rail Trimmer

This Machine combines the advantages of the Hoe Pedestal Saw Table and the Hoe Mono-rail Trimmer. The Trimmer is supplied with either Style "A" Cutter Head for trimming Wood Blocks or Style "B" for extra heavy cutting on Zinc or Copper. The Hoe Patented Mono-Rail principle allows the Operator to follow the work beyond the Cutter Head permitting more speed and greater accuracy in trimming Wood or Metal Blocks of varied sizes.

IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST
R. HOE & CO., INC., 504 Grand Street, New York City
7 So. Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL. — 7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."
18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.
6c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.
36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Man.
Experienced salesman, copy writer, manager, young, energetic, capable, pleasing personality desires permanent position with progressive daily where good constructive work will be appreciated and rewarded. A real opportunity more essential than initial salary. Record and references okeh. Address C-765, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man.
Successful, experienced advertising man, in the thirties, is looking for a position. He has long ago proven his ability as a producer of big business. Has exceptional organizing and executive powers, and a record of accomplishing results and getting things done. After ten years with present employer in Metropolitan city, he has reached the limit of his job and is seeking new connections where he can develop further. Willing to start at $5,000 and bonus on a "make good" basis, although now earning considerably more, providing job is sufficiently important; with enough scope for progressive development. Jurisdiction over national advertising department would interest him. Leading banks, publishers, advertising agents and important firms will supply the fullest information and references. Address C-736, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager and Solicitor.
Newspaper and agency experience, a go getter, individuality, appearance, ability proven, would consider change. References plenty, C-755, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
18 years' experience leading Metropolitan newspapers. Capable executive; convincing salesman. Thoroughly experienced building and promoting general retail advertising; well acquainted national field. Now employed; age 36, married. Address C-763, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Of Southern daily in city of 75,000 seeks change. Eleven years' experience preparing and selling forceful copy-layouts and newspaper merchandising. Age 30, married. Willing to be a subordinate but welcome responsibility. Address Box C-748, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Man 29 years of age, married, has had considerable experience in promotional work, has record as a producer, wants connection with a live daily in a progressive city, as promotional or display advertising manager. Can furnish best of references. Available March 10th. Address C-758, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Now employed seeking new connection. Twelve years' experience in selling advertising. Age 35. Thoroughly familiar with local display, automobile accounts and publicity, national accounts and service work, also classified advertising. Employed at present as Advertising Manager of middle western daily with circulation about 85,000. Not satisfied with future here. Can furnish best of references. Address Box C-750, Editor & Publisher.

Artist
Desires change; experienced in all art including cartoons. Address C-702, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor.
Available April 1st; age 23; 5 years' experience; newspaper or magazines. Connected with one organization for 3 years. Fully acquainted in larger cities of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. Salary secondary. Best of references. Box C-739, Editor & Publisher.

Business Manager or General Manager.
Exceptional ability and record for Business Building—and now business executive of paper near New York—contemplates making a change for purely personal reasons. Both provincial and Metropolitan experience—unquestionable character—no objection to second or third paper—Bonus or stock proposition preferred. Address C-762, care Editor & Publisher.

Capable Sports and Editorial Writer.
With six years' weekly and small daily experience in editing, reporting, head writing, proofreading and sports, wants advancement from large semi-weekly to well established daily in medium size city where main time could be given to sports and editorials with rest where needed, or assistant to sports editor on larger paper. Under thirty, educated and aggressive worker. C-737, Editor & Publisher.

Cartoonist.
Experienced, desires position. Three years' experience in chalk-plate reproduction, the economical and quick process for daily cartoons and line drawings. Formerly with Portsmouth Daily Times. George Schmidt, 414 Sinton, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Situations Wanted

Cashier or Auditor.
Young married man thoroughly familiar with newspaper accounting and business office routine desires position with live organization where opportunity for advancement is offered. Will furinsh reference from present and past employers. Address Box C-707, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Desires immediate connection. Ten years' experience on large and small papers. Backed splendid record. Excellent references. Address Box C-747, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager
Now employed, wishes to make a change. Young man (33) with 19 years' experience in circulation department of present employers, would like to connect with a New England daily. Address Box C-725, care Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Capable executive, proven ability, good organizer. Familiar with all departments. Knows how to create and build circulation. Publisher who wants to increase circulation of his paper and desires to put circulation department in efficient competent hands. Write C-759, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
20 years' experience in circulation work on daily newspapers; age 40, married; resigned last position December first after eight years' service; have had a good rest and now ready to take charge of some publisher's circulation problems; thoroughly familiar with all systems of handling city circulation through carriers and newsboys; also country agents and rural mail subscriptions and all forms of circulation promotion work. Can reorganize a circulation department and produce results. Successful circulation record and best of references. Write or wire for further particulars. W. C. Hunter, 3656 North Monticello avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Classified Manager.
An experienced classified manager with a very successful past record has outgrown his present connections and desires a permanent position in a larger field. Address Box C-742, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager.
Now open for position; 5 years' experience on two papers; single, strong personality. A writer of result getting copy. Only permanent position considered. Will start at your figure if increased classified will bring an increase in salary. Wire or write, Vance Moon, 933 Murphy, Joplin, Mo.

Copy Editor.
Young, fast, accurate, open for position. Experience includes largest papers in country. Minimum salary, $50, or will purchase interest in small daily. C-740, Editor & Publisher.

Desk Man.
Or reporter—qualified by 8 years' experience for any news department. Likes responsibility—prefer tidewater districts. Available April 1st. Address Box C-746, Editor & Publisher.

Editor or Managing Editor.
College man with ten years' experience in getting out papers in Eastern cities would like to get back into daily newspaper work in East or Middle West. Now connected with national magazine. Fine record all the way through. Circulation builder, chock full of ideas. Writes editorials, can run column. Address Box C-726, Editor & Publisher.

Golf and Tennis Editor-Reporter.
Experienced, well qualified, available April 1st. Now employed second season at Big Florida Resort; 8 years' knowledge of all news departments, including desk assignment, street work. Address Box C-744, Editor & Publisher.

Inside or Out.
Tired of being cog five years on New York City dailies, versatile street and desk man wants opportunity to develop with smaller eastern paper. Ingenious, facile writer; mixer, executive ability. Know news and always get it. Will take $35-$40 until job and myself prove up. Immediate action. Box C761, care Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

I Build New Display.
An idea and plan for every prospect. Aggressive, dependable. Strong on contact copy with a punch. Stand any test. Build good will, thoroughly experienced. A real asset, good character, reliable references. Healthy, energetic, resourceful. No strong-arm methods. Have speed, successful experience and necessary ability in all departments display. I will produce. Any paper could use my services to advantage. Permanent connection desired, East or Central West city of 75,000 or more. Let me develop business for you. Salary or commission. Wire or write. C-705, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor
Or General Manager; Am an Experienced Executive; Am a Crackerjack Circulation Promotor; Am a Thoroughly Trained Newspaper Man. Can put the metropolitan snap into a small daily and do it with curtailed force and limited equipment. Can do many things on the paper myself. Know the needs of small cities. Strong on local-subject editorials. C-767, care Editor & Publisher.

A-1 Mechanical Superintendent.
Young, thoroughly practical man in all mechanical departments, with vision and planning in advance for any emergency in order to play safe always. Want connection where everyone else failed thus far to produce results. Will organize to get maximum production and also get organized labor to cooperate. Confidential treatment. Prefer corporation with several plants. Will consider interest. Address C-708, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Superintendent.
Executive of exceptional ability and personality would consider change from present position; 45 years old; experience gained with largest newspapers in the East; $150 weekly to start. For personal interview, address C-648, care Editor & Publisher.

News Executive.
Managing or city editor seeks permanent location small city evening daily, preferably in East or South. Ten years' experience all around editorial work, reporter to managing editor. Age 31, college education, good personality, hard worker, clean, honest, energetic, reliable. Thoroly acquainted with all problems of small daily. Proved ability, no bluff. Able organizer, executive, result-getter. Builder of good-will and real newspaper quality. C-729, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Advertising Manager or Salesman.
One who possesses the ability and knack of developing accounts. Can service accounts with copy; have had experience on small town and city dailies. Will go anywhere but prefer Central States. Address Box C-764, care Editor & Publisher.

Newspaperman
with complete reportorial training and thorough knowledge of makeup, editing and news values seeks connection with publisher of daily in medium sized city. A good writer, versatile, steady and hardworking. Qualified for city desk and can train young reporters. Twenty-six and single. Now employed on leading Eastern newspaper. Address C-760, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Man.
Whose experience has touched every branch of the newspaper game—last eight years as managing-editor—now holding very responsible position, voluntarily seeks desirable and permanent desk connection on live afternoon daily. Unbroken record of success will stand closest investigation. College man, aged 37, reliable, competent and safe. Good organizer and can get maximum from staff. No bad habits. Detailed information and references gladly submitted. Address Box C-751, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter.
Experienced, single, 22, wants position on live daily in Ohio. Can handle desk. Capable, can turn out features. If you want a live wire write: Hugh Harold, care H. Gleespen, Congress St., Marion, Ohio.

Reporter.
Young woman, university graduate, trained in journalism. Ambitious and willing worker. Best references in regard to ability and character. Am available at once. Address Box C-738, Editor & Publisher.

Special Advertising—
Properly planned and developed. Pages, series, campaigns, co-operative space. Thoroughly experienced. Substantial business, satisfaction and good will of advertisers. Will work alone or develop department. There are thousands in scientific development. Many papers realize this fact and could use a properly trained man. Permanent connection after I prove ability. Have good character, substantial, reliable references. City 100,000 or more, East or Central West preferred. Open on short notice. Write me today. C-704, Editor & Publisher.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of
PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL
of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

ADVERTISING SERVICE DEPARTMENT MANAGER. Five years' service work and space selling, large newspapers; seven years assistant advertising manager, big publisher; successful record as advertising manager, two Middle Western dailies. Now advertising service manager, daily of over 100,000 circulation. His copy, designs and layouts used by well known syndicate. Age 35. Married. College. No. 2775-B.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Situations Wanted

Telegraph or City Editor.
Open for position April 1st—eight years' perience in all news angles, desk, report features, interviews, sports. C-745, Edito Publisher.

Wanted.
Position as rewriter, manuscript editor, p reading, book reviewer, technical writer on jects of interest to women, general desk wor article writing; woman with ten years prac New York experience; frequent contributor class woman's magazines; capable ed woman's page or managing department; s factory references. Part or full time. York situation preferred. Address Box C Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITI

Best Business Opportunity.
In South offered in semi-weekly and job ness in finest section of Atlantic coast $8,000 cash, long terms on balance. Ad Box C-749, Editor & Publisher.

Evening and Sunday Paper.
Not often you have opportunity to pur controlling interest in a newspaper property this—evening and Sunday paper in ra growing, very live Ohio city of 50,000; he one man for over 30 years and now wi sold because of peculiar conditions; large tory of over 125,000 to draw from; large including 32-page press, many linotypes; estate of high value on one of two pri streets; will require about $100,000 cash, ba may be financed easily. To avoid cur seekers kindly give credit references. Ad "Ohio," C-734, care Editor & Publisher.

Stop, Look, Listen—Then Go Ahead.
Not to sell your own publication or bu other fellow's. But to engage a qualifie sponsible broker to buy or sell for you. H save or make you many times the amou his commission. There are brokers brokers. Be careful to choose the I have some desirable publications to and some desirable customers for public with merit, and shall be pleased to hav call, phone, or write me, but if for an son you do not care to have me represent engage some other qualified responsible b J. B. Shale, Times Building, New York C

CORRESPONDENTS

Correspondents.
Columbus, O.—Bert. D. Strang. News trade journal correspondence, publicity ar vertising. Trade reports. 600 Hartman

FEATURES

A New Feature Service.
That is, in interest and cost to member best break since the world flight of the Air Service. Will prove to be a circ getter. Will fit every paper, from the Seat Weekly, to the Metropolitan Daily. last from three to five years and the i on the last day will surpass the first. U release dates; full protection for member cost to you until you have had service days. You can terminate contract after days, at your option. Service will st Spring. Investigate now. Full part upon receipt of your query, on your own head. Address Raiser, P. O. Box N Sta. "W" New York City.

KECUTIVES TO TRADE IDEAS

ange Idea Committee Formed by A.N.A.E.—Fisk, Chairman

e Association of Newspaper Adver-ig Executives has formed an "Idea xange Committee," acting on the sug-son of J. W. Fisk, merchandising sel of the Milwaukee Journal.

. Fisk is chairman of the new com-ee while the other members are H. Roberts, Cleveland Plain-Dealer; L. alenak, New Orleans Item; W. J. nann, Portland Oregonian; Douglas Hauser, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; s A. Austin, Omaha Bee; C. T. erworth, New York Times; M. W. mpson, St. Paul Daily News, and E. obertson, Kansas City Star.

De Mars Goes to Tulsa

thur F. DeMars, for several years ected with the Munsey Organization perintendent of branches and also e in the development of classified rtising of several eastern papers is classified advertising manager of the a (Okla.) Tribune.

McRae's Daughter Weds in San Diego

Mrs. William Alden Smith, Jr., of Grand Rapids, Mich., daughter of Milton A. McRae, was married Feb. 14, at her father's California home in San Diego, to Richmond Temple of London, England. Mr. Temple is in business in London. Mr. and Mrs. Temple plan to spend two months each year in the United States. After an automobile tour of California they will sail for England. Mrs. Temple is a stockholder in several newspapers.

Mason Back After Illness

Julian S. Mason, managing editor of the New York Herald Tribune, returned to his desk Feb. 16, after an absence of about a month. He recuperated at Atlantic City from an attack of bronchial pneumonia.

Gridley Now Special Correspondent

Charles O. Gridley has resigned from the Washington Press Service to become the Washington correspondent of the Peoria (Ill.) Star, the East St. Louis Journal, Rockford Register-Gazette and other Illinois dailies.

ADDITIONAL CLASSIFIED

HELP WANTED

dvtising Manager.
ed, by Central State newspaper, a sales-n of advertising in newspapers, who is able ow a progressive record of achievement. be able to write copy, but am chiefly in-ced in selling. Must be able to handle force of solicitors. Position permanent mmunity of 50,000, on old established il. Must be resourceful, aggressive, willing rk long hours if necessary, and not afraid sk business for second newspaper. Seek ed man who is looking for opportunity to ue home and expanding future. Write llabout yourself, family, schooling, age and perience to Central State, C-735, care Editor Publisher.

ess Manager.
r suburban daily, understanding mechanical d every other department. Replies will be ldstrictly confidential. Wonderful opportu-y for the proper man. C-741, Editor & Pub-he ire Salesman.

vesyndicate has opening for man who can ce. Address in confidence, Syndicate, x C-743, Editor & Publisher.

b ity Woman.
li ous organization desires sensible, experi-ee newspaper or publicity woman to assist s publicity director; give full, detailed par-ls in confidence, including salary. Address x C-701, care Editor & Publisher.

Help Wanted

Reporter
Must be experienced. State salary expected and qualifications. Afternoon daily in New Jersey. Address Box S-753, Editor & Publisher.

Syndicate Salesman.
attractive proposition for man so engaged, representing us. Side line immediately; full time later. C-756, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Experienced woman social page editor on afternoon daily near New York City. Address Box C-752, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted—A Man Who Can Write——a man who can sense the romance in machinery—who can put real literary quality into advertising of engineering products. The man for this job needs common sense rather than an engineering education. He needs the poise and personality to meet and work with important advertisers. And most of all, he must know how to write convincingly. One of the large publishers of engineering journals is looking for this man. If you know of him, write details stating salary expected. Address Box C-754, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Advertising Manager, Circulation Manager, and Classified Manager. Northwestern Ohio Daily requires the services of Advertising Manager, one who can organize, build and develop new business and thoroly acquainted with all problems of advertising department. Also Circulation Man, with Metropolitan experience, must be a builder, familiar with promotion work, records and all detail, also man to take charge of classified department, must be able to produce, splendid positions to the right parties. Address C-766, care Editor & Publisher.

Quantity plus Quality

THE QUEENS COUNTY NEWS
Jamaica, N. Y.

Editor and Publisher:

We are glad to get testimonials telling of the good results received by our classified advertisers, so in fairness to you, as a fellow publisher, it seems only right to tell you of the remarkably large number of replies which we received from a classified ad through the EDITOR & PUBLISHER a few weeks ago. Not only was the number most gratifying but the quality was equally high.

With the heartiest of best wishes, I remain,

Cordially yours,

EUGENE E. EARLY
Publisher

Indiana

Is the "Heart" of the Nation's Population

The state is practically the center of population of the United States. That means that your advertising campaign will have far reaching influence in all directions—in adjoining territory, rich in results.

The position of Indiana, the location of its cities and its interchange of business with neighboring states have been responsible for the expansion of a highly developed network of railroads. This means that the advertisers' goods will reach every corner of a vast territory, anxious to know about the best of everything for sale by big department stores or corner grocers.

Such location—such railroad facilities and such desires have created a newspaper reading public, a public which is satisfied only by the best.

And the best in newspapers is the aim and accomplishment of Indiana publishers.

Fine examples of modern messengers of world news and industrial development are listed below.

Always anxious to be of service to their advertisers, these newspapers maintain service departments and go to great expense to co-operate with national advertisers who use their columns.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,106	.025
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(M) 27,839 (E) 11,230	39,069	.09
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(S)	32,840	.08
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	31,502	.07
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	34,520	.07
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	41,938	.09
*Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	14,196	.055
Hammond Times	(E)	15,436	.05
*Huntington Press	(M&S)	3,797	.025
*Indianapolis News	(E)	128,400	.25
*Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,605 (E) 12,900	20,505	.06
†††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,000	.025
*Newcastle Courier	(E)	4,517	.025
*South Bend News-Times	(M) 10,138 (E) 12,902	23,040	.06
*South Bend News-Times	(S)	21,298	.06
†South Bend Tribune	(S) 19,388 (E)	20,627	.06
*Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	22,830	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

DOLLAR $$ $$ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKELR

CONSIDER the local combinations of business men, organized for economy and real co-operative trading with the public. Be they milkmen, apartment-house owners, automobile dealers, country fair trustees, public service men, restaurant proprietors, merchants along certain streets, or what not, they offer to newspapers the very best opportunity for advertising service. Do not look upon such bodies as obstructive of advertising. Sell your newspaper to them on merit.

Making it easy for finders to return property to losers, the Washington Post has established a splendid service by opening its classified columns free of charge to those who wish to advertise articles found, and is thereby making its classified section of real service.—C. M. LITTLEJOHN, Washington, D. C.

Now is the time to start a run on "used cars." "The prices are low the demand light. An enterprising reporter could write up an article convincing the reader that now is the time to get that car for spring use. Many dealers are offering part payment plans, the car to be delivered in the spring if payments are started now, etc. Get dealers to advertise their plans and let the paper play up the "start buying now" idea as an inducement to obtain advertising of such a drive as outlined.—C. E. PELLISSIER, Boston, Mass.

It would be a different and interesting stunt if the paper would get up a page or half page of ads of local barber shops and run this page on a Friday or Saturday morning and if on this page all the shops would urge men to come in and get shaved up and have their hair trimmed for the week end. This would appeal to many men and so would help the barber shops in getting more trade and because few cities have ever staged combination ads of barber shops on any pretext whatever the stunt would be new and so would be pretty easy to put over. —FRANK H. WILLIAMS, 815 So. Van Ness St., Santa Ana, Cal.

The Logansport (Ind.) Pharos Tribune has installed a pay by check system among its carriers. Each carrier boy has a checking account at a local bank into which he deposits his collections. Payment for his papers is made from this account, and for "spending money" he writes to himself a check for an even number of dollars. The system saves the time of employes counting the small change in which the carriers formerly paid their weekly bill, the banks welcome the new patrons, and the boys and parents find that the plan is a money saving one for the carriers.—LEWIS HYMAN.

Almost no one wants to look old. Try out a page of advertisements under a heading of some such line as "Don't Look Old" in which all of the advertisers would present methods of keeping young. Drug stores with youth-giving preparations, dry goods stores and clothiers selling apparel designed to keep people looking young, drugless healers and sellers of special shoes would all be glad to come in on such a page. Get up this sort of a page for your paper.—F. H. WILLIAMS, Santa Ana, Cal.

"Business Men of (name of city), You Ought to Know," could be worked into a fine full page idea. Work it up in a series form, one advertiser being taken up each week and a short resume of his activities in editorial form together with his photograph in the center of the page. Surrounding this are the advertisements of others who will in turn appear on the center of the page.—GEORGE C. MARCLEY, Ogdensburg (N. Y.) Republican-Journal.

Every day newspaper readers see stories of the police court, the post office, city hall, county court, hospital, etc. These names often become only matter-of-fact places. But don't you think you might interest your readers in a series of descriptive stories telling how the different departments function? The cub reporter is surprised often at his first contacts. A half-column daily feature explaining how a magistrate's hearing is conducted; how the postmen prepare for their deliveries; the daily duties of the mayor; the dignity of the county, superior, supreme courts; the efficiency of nurses, and many other local "routine" affairs could be written up to make an interesting series.—H. M. HOFFORD, Providence, R. I.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

"CORNERS and Characters of Rhode Island" is a feature of the Providence Evening Bulletin that has attracted much attention. A well-executed drawing of an ancient street corner or village resident accompanies each storie and the feature has resulted in a large increase in surburban sales. Where drawings are not possible photographs may be used with equally good results.—L. DOOLEY, Providence, R. I.

The Memphis News Scimitar recently closed a contest in which it offered a dollar each for "'the best things I have seen today." Some of the things reported were truly ludicrous and brought much reader attention.—R. E. HARDAWAY, Lebannon, Tenn.

Seattle Times publishes a weekly summary of state supreme court decisions for the business man on its financial page. Similar digests of important decisions should be possible in other cities, business men generally being interested in opinions affecting their interests written in language devoid of legal phraseology.—A. N.

Conscience gifts add $600,000 to the United States Treasury. An interview with your local treasury authorities may reveal local conscience money sent in from time to time that will furnish good copy.—C. M. LITTELJOHN, Washington, D. C.

Why not let one of your leading bankers explain the Federal Reserve system, in his own words; or the dispatcher on the railroad give the "inside dope" on train dispatching; or your chief exporter tell some of the troubles of exporting? Just a few hints for some by-lined articles that will count.—B. A. T.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Asks Pulitzer Prize for Miller

CAVE CITY, KY., Feb. 1

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I most spectfully nominate William Bu Miller of the Louisville Courier-Jour for consideration when the time comes select the winner of the 1925 Pulit Prize. The military board's inquiry i the entombment of Floyd Collins in S Cave here, has brought out that Mil only 21 and who looks to be but 16, the most outstanding hero the newspa game has produced in many years. I recall nothing in comparison to it in 31 years I have been connected w newspapers.

This fine chap risked his life repeate by making the "subterranean squir time and time again through "T Squeeze" and "The Double Squeeze" a distance of 160 feet far below earth's surface, being one of the few, v ultimately reached Collins, fed and oth wise ministered to his comfort; also m ing heroic efforts to free him from clutch of the boulder that made him c tive of the cave. The record of w Miller did, sworn to under oath by m witnesses, is now in possession of the m itary board appointed by Gov. Willi J. Fields, of Kentucky. This board headed by Gen. H. H. Denhardt, a lieutenant governor of the state, and m be readily consulted by the Pulitzer pr committee when the time comes to m awards.

DAN W. GALLAGHER,
Cleveland New

New Boston Financial News Edito

Walter Brown, formerly editor of New York Commercial, has assumed editorship of the Boston Financial Ne

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

4 page ready-print color comics.
Magazine Feature Pages.

Write for samples and rates

NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD STREET,
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Childhood inspires this new puzzle attraction—

CROSS-WORD FAIRIES

By WANDA GÁG

The most fascinating weekly feature ever devised for children.

Secure details of this cross-word puzzle story from

Premier Syndicate, Inc.
241 West 58th Street
New York City

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

BY UNITED PRESS

AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, - Tenn

Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page

Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

"Main Street---Russia"
by
FANNIE HURST

Five half-page illustrated articles
Released March 15

Vivid—First-Hand Impressions of Life Under Leninism

Chicago Herald Examiner
Indianapolis Star
Milwaukee Journal
have already ordered

ASK FOR SAMPLES

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

THE INDUSTRIES OF

Pennsylvania

ARE AMONG THE GIANT INDUSTRIES OF THE WORLD

Pennsylvania holds high place among the world leaders in manufactures. The value of its manufactured products is measured in billions.

Pennsylvania leads every other State in primary horsepower engaged in manufacture, and in the amount of capital invested.

Pennsylvania's annual manufacture is worth approximately $7,000,000,000. The annual payroll is in excess of $1,750,000,000.

PENNSYLVANIA PRODUCES

One-eighth of all manufacture in America

One-fifth of all electrical machinery

One-fourth of all minerals in America

One-sixth of the pig-iron, coal, electrical machinery and sugar refining of the world

One-half of America's production of cork products, oil cloth and linoleum, cotton lace and felt goods

One-third of America's glass, silk, carpets, rugs, knit goods, railroad cars and confectionery.

Pennsylvania has great magnitude in industrial production and great diversity as well. She not only forges the heaviest castings but manufactures also the most delicate scientific instruments.

Pennsylvania's newspapers have long ranked among the foremost. They are foremost in producing traceable results, not only in Pennsylvania but in the wide world field they cover.

THESE PENNSYLVANIA DAILIES RETURN A DIVIDEND ON ANY INVESTMENT MADE IN ADVERTISING

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Allentown Call	(M)	29,446	.10	.10
*Allentown Call	(S)	19,425	.10	.10
†Beaver Falls Tribune	(E)	5,725	.03	.03
†Bloomsburg Press	(M)	7,189	.029	.029
†Carbondale Leader	(E)	5,664	.025	.025
*Chester Times	(E)	15,507	.055	.055
†Coatesville Record	(E)	6,529	.035	.03
*Connellsville Courier	(E)	6,212	.02	.02
*Easton Express	(E)	21,439	.07	.07
Easton Free Press	(E)	12,711	.05	.05
*Erie Times	(E)	26,258	.08	.08
*Harrisburg Telegraph	(E)	40,487	.095	.095
*Oil City Derrick	(M)	6,375	.035	.035
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper	(E&M)	16,284	.08	.07
*Scranton Times	(E)	41,414	.12	.11
*Sharon Herald	(E)	6,568	.0285	.0285
*Sunbury Daily Item	(E)	4,564	.025	.021
*Warren Times-Mirror	(E&M)	7,579	.036	.036
†Washington Observer and Reporter	(M&E)	17,358	.06	.06
†West Chester Local News	(E)	10,883	.04	.04
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader	(E)	23,775	.08	.06
*Williamsport Sun	(E)	19,766	.07	.07
†York Dispatch	(E)	18,527	.05	.05
†York Gazette and Daily	(M)	17,604	.05	.05

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

Concentration

No single newspaper in all these United States can cover the entire country for a national advertiser.

Certain newspapers in certain territories must be designated.

The Telegram-Mail sells more than 200,000 copies every day within the limits of Greater New York. 98% of its high class popular circulation is metropolitan.

That affords the national advertiser concentration in the New York area.

The New York Telegram and EVENING MAIL

Publication Office: 73 Dey Street

Eastern Representative:
DAN A. CARROLL
110 E. 42nd St.
New York City

Western Representative:
J. E. LUTZ
Tower Building
Chicago, Ill.

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

THIS ISSUE:—COMPLETE DENIAL OF ADVERTISING TRADE CHARGES.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Newspaper Advocate 1925

SUITE 1115 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued Every Saturday.

Vol. 57. No. 43 | NEW YORK, MARCH 21, 1925 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

"BEST SELLERS" and "BEST BUYERS"

Keep your products on the "best sellers" list by keeping it before the best buyers. These "best buyers" are the substantial people in a community who have money to spend, and who spend it wisely. They buy where they have confidence.

In Chicago and the great Chicago Market, they use as their buying guide the advertising columns of

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

The buying response to the advertising messages broadcast by this newspaper through its 400,000 circulation to its approximately 1,200,000 readers daily, has been tested out so profitably by both local and national advertisers that, year after year, The Daily News leads all the other Chicago daily newspapers in total volume of advertising lineage.

For the year 1924 this total volume of display advertising lineage came to 15,099,527 agate lines in The Daily News

11,774,440 agate lines in the second paper

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago

The Philadelphia Bulletin

NOW USES EXCLUSIVELY

Wood Metropolitan Dry Mats

On February 9, 1925, this great evening newspaper began the use of the Metropolitan dry mat on all its eleven editions, since when it has not used a wet mat nor a drying table.

A continuous test of six weeks' duration in the magnificent plant of The Evening Bulletin and without a hitch proves that a completely satisfactory dry mat, of American conception and manufacture, is now available for the largest newspapers in the world.

In that it directly benefits every department of the newspaper plant and reduces the cost of manufacturing large dailies by hundreds of thousands of dollars annually the WOOD METROPOLITAN DRY MAT is unquestionably the most important invention of the century for the big newspaper.

Wood Flong Corporation is indebted to the efficient organization and personnel of The Evening Bulletin for the support and encouragement freely accorded it over a period of ten years of effort to perfect this high-cast dry mat for its use.

The adoption of this dry mat for exclusive use by the most extensive newspaper plant in the world constitutes the Acid Test.

BENJAMIN WOOD, President.

WOOD FLONG CORPORATION

501 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK CITY

Follow the lineage

¶ Mounting lineage means mounting RESULTS.

¶ Not only is SUN lineage going up and up—but the lineage of individual advertisers has increased in a remarkable number of cases.

¶ Which seems to indicate that it pays the advertiser and that he soon discovers it after he's in. That's the significant thing.

¶ The Sunpapers do their own talking after the advertising starts.

¶ Follow the lineage and you'll follow the course of wise advertisers—local and national. They know that the way to reach and to hold Baltimore is through the Sunpapers—Morning, Evening and Sunday.

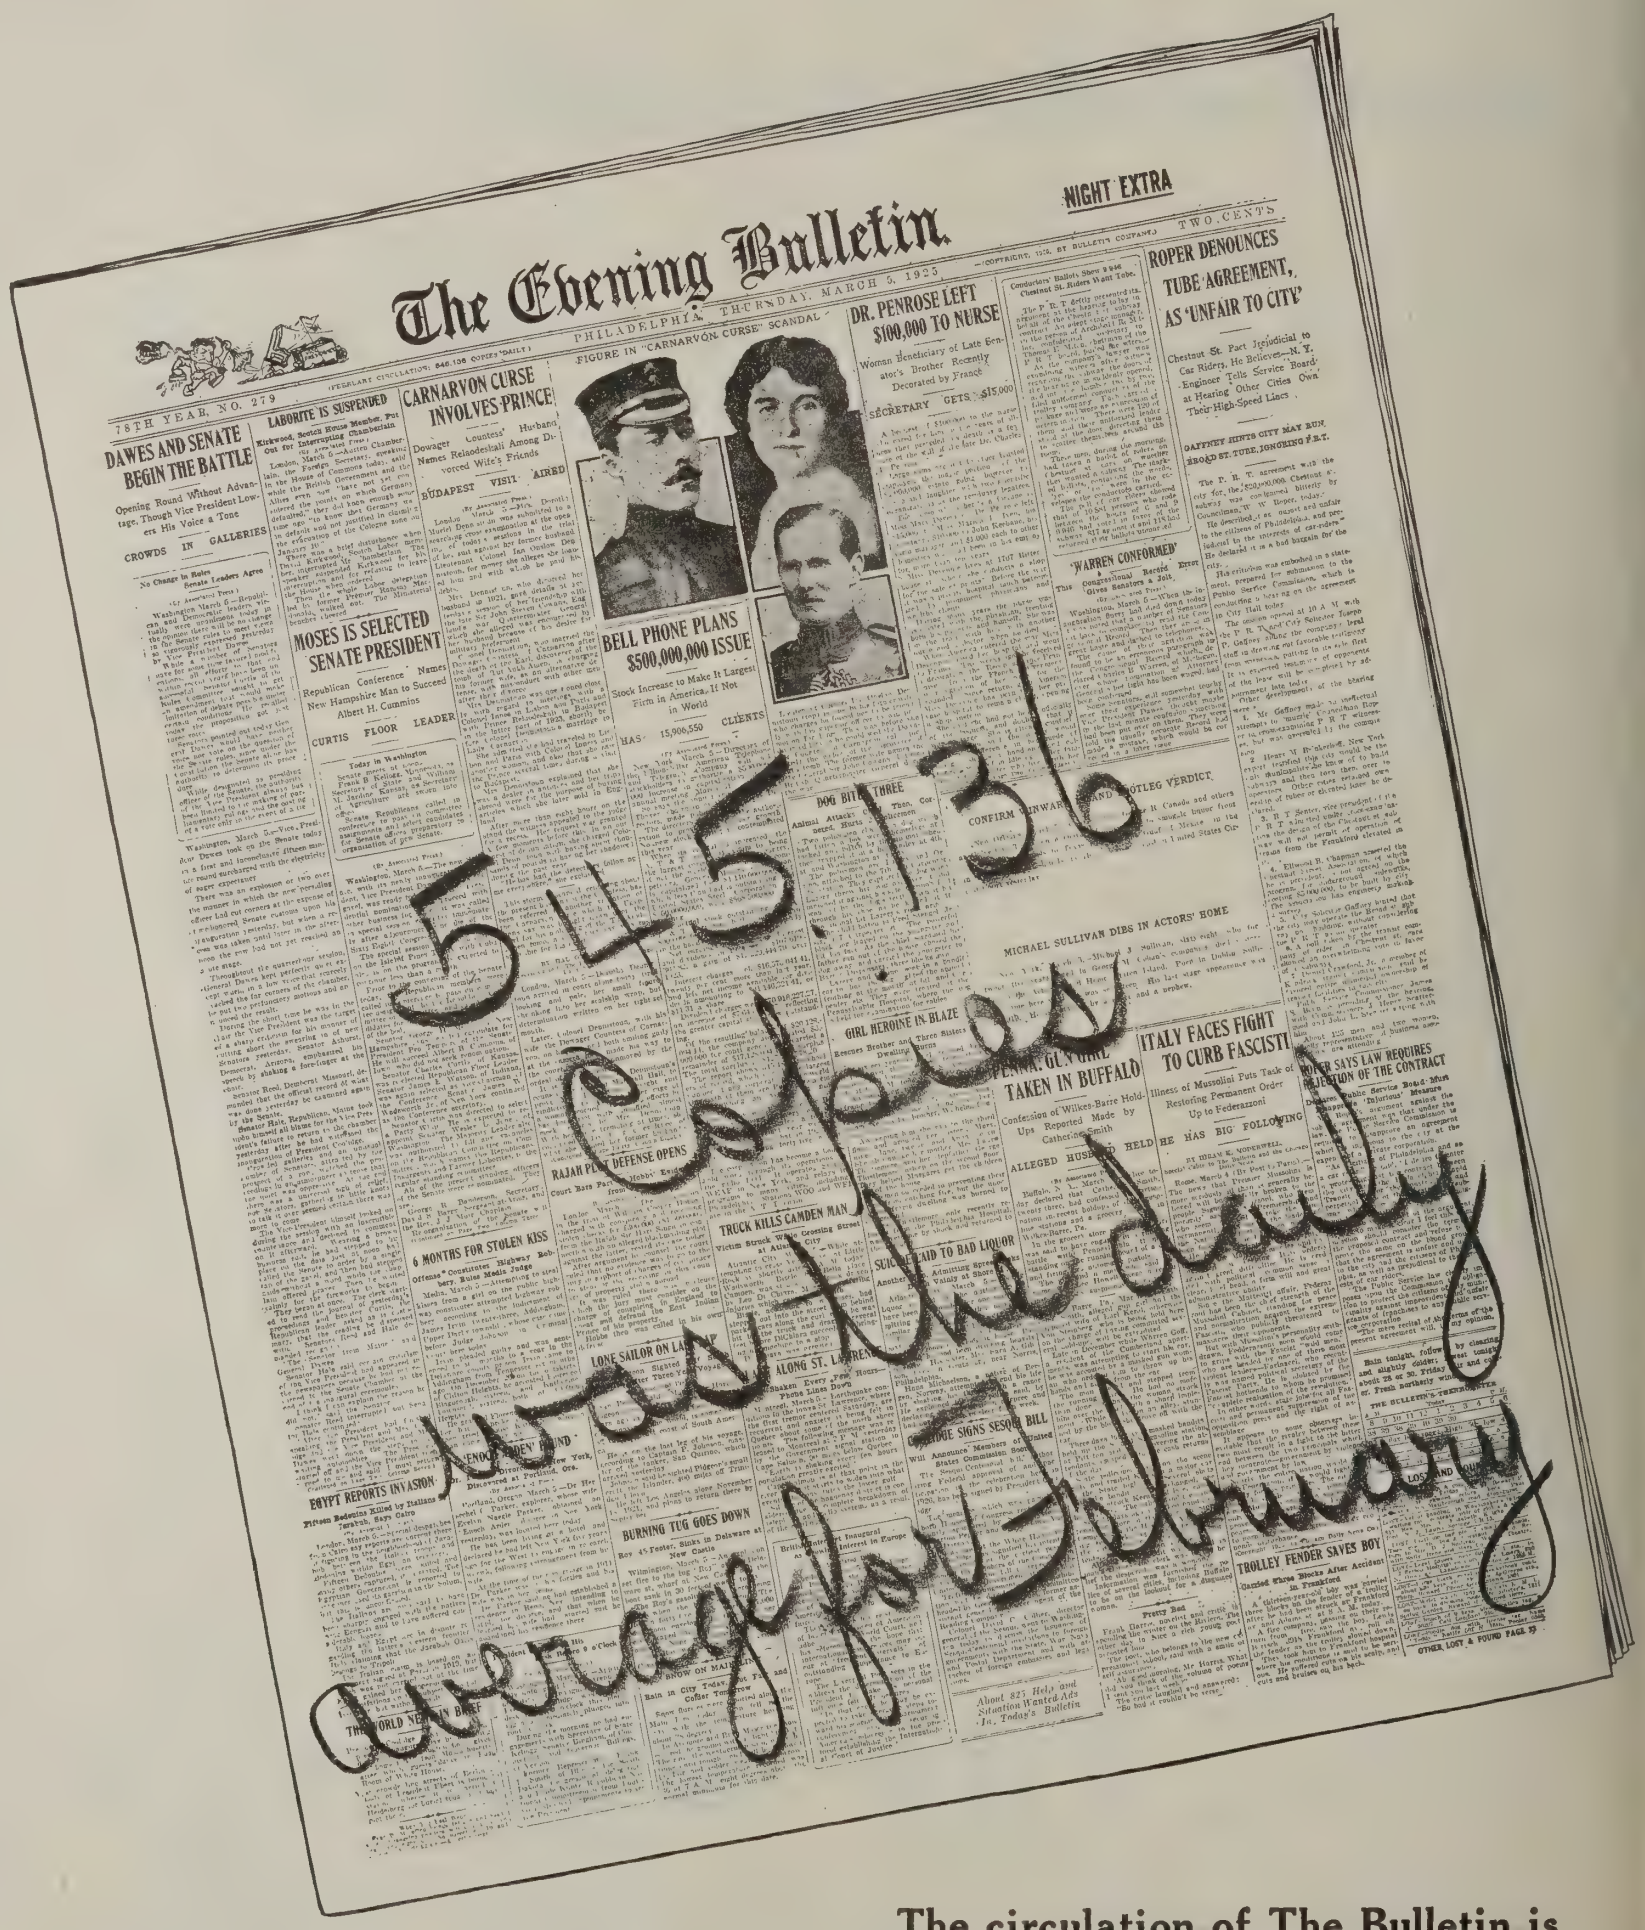
¶ The figures—both of lineage and of circulation—tell their own story.

Average Net Paid Circulation for February, 1925

Daily (M. & E.) . . 250,696
Sunday 183,667

A Gain of 3,553 Daily and 5,380 Sunday over February, 1924

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around



THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper"; They Say "SUNpaper"

The Evening Bulletin

NIGHT EXTRA

PHILADELPHIA, THURSDAY, MARCH 5, 1925 — COPYRIGHT, 1925, BY BULLETIN COMPANY — TWO CENTS

78TH YEAR, NO. 279 — AVERAGE CIRCULATION: 646,136 COPIES DAILY

DAWES AND SENATE BEGIN THE BATTLE

Opening Round Without Advantage, Though Vice President Lowers His Voice a Tone

CROWDS IN GALLERIES

No Change in Rules Senate Leaders Agree

LABORITE IS SUSPENDED

Kirkwood, Scotch House Member, Put Out for Interrupting Chamberlain

CARNARVON CURSE INVOLVES PRINCE

Dowager Countess' Husband, Nemec Reiaodeslzali Among Divorced Wife's Friends

BUDAPEST VISIT AIRED

FIGURE IN "CARNARVON CURSE" SCANDAL

DR. PENROSE LEFT $100,000 TO NURSE

Woman Beneficiary of Late Senator's Brother Recently Decorated by France

SECRETARY GETS $15,000

MOSES IS SELECTED SENATE PRESIDENT

Republican Conference Names New Hampshire Man to Succeed Albert H. Cummins

CURTIS FLOOR LEADER

BELL PHONE PLANS $500,000,000 ISSUE

Stock Increase to Make It Largest Firm in America, If Not in World

15,906,550 CLIENTS

ROPER DENOUNCES TUBE AGREEMENT, AS 'UNFAIR TO CITY'

Chestnut St. Part Jesuidicial to Car Riders, He Believes—N. Y. Engineer Tells Service Board at Hearing Other Cities Own Their High-Speed Lines

DAFFNEY HINTS CITY MAY RUN BROAD ST. TUBE, IGNORING P.R.T.

'WARREN CONFORMED'

Congressional Record Error Gives Senators a Jolt.

DOG BITES THREE

MICHAEL SULLIVAN DIES IN ACTORS' HOME

GIRL HEROINE IN BLAZE

Rescues Brother and Dwelling Three Sisters

ITALY FACES FIGHT TO CURB FASCISTI

Illness of Mussolini Puts Task of Restoring Permanent Order Up to Federazzoni

HE HAS BIG FOLLOWING

6 MONTHS FOR STOLEN KISS

TRUCK KILLS CAMDEN MAN

Victim Struck While Crossing Street at Auburn City

RAJAH PLEA DEFENSE OPENS

LONE SAILOR ON LA

ALONG ST. LAWRENCE

Shaken Every Few Hours, Phone Lines Down

EGYPT REPORTS INVASION

Fifteen Bedouins Killed by Italians Invading, Says Cairo

BURNING TUG GOES DOWN

Boy 15 Foster, Sinks in Delaware at New Castle

TROLLEY FENDER SAVES BOY

Landed Three Blocks After Accident in Frankford

ITALY SAYS LAW REQUIRES REJECTION OF THE CONTRACT

Public Service Board Must Disregard Injurious' Measure

Rain tonight, follow... and slightly colder; ... about 28 or 30. Friday ... Fresh northerly winds

THE BULLETIN'S TEMPERATURE

OTHER LOST & FOUND PAGE 29

54513b

Cross
Must be duly
Averaged for February

The circulation of The Bulletin is the largest in Philadelphia and one of the largest in the United States

(Copyright 1925—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 | NEW YORK, MARCH 21, 1925 | No. 43

British Advertising "Billy Sunday" Here to Spend $200,000 in India Tea Drive

Sir Charles Higham, Former Brooklyn Drug Clerk and Scrub Newspaper Artist, Now Successful British Advertising Agent, Tells of His Career and Business Philosophy.

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

N England he is sometimes called the "P. T. Barnum of the advertising usiness."

He prefers to speak of himself as "Advertising's Billy Sunday."

But, after all, his own name is sufficient description—Sir Charles Frederick ligham, ex-member of the British Parament, and London advertising agent.

Sir Charles, in his cyclonic way, is isiting this country in the interest of the ndia Tea Association, London, and the ritish Empire Exhibition.

He has $200,000 he plans to spend in merican newspapers to popularize tea rinking, and he informed the writer he ntended to cable the exhibition authoriies advising them to set aside an appro-riation for advertisements in the United tates press, urging Americans to attend ie exhibition when it opens for the sec-nd year this summer.

With only two week's time at his disosal in this country, his date book has rown to encyclopedic proportions. His alendar already calls for 10 speeches in ie 14 days.

Sir Charles is successful. He is rosperous. He is popular.

And there are those in Brooklyn, N. Y., ho can remember him as a young drug ore clerk on Court street there. They atched him later enlist in the Spanish-merican war, take a fling as newspaper rtist, saw him turn to advertising, beome advertising manager of a Brooklyn epartment store, return to London, his rthplace, start his own advertising gency, and become knighted for his Vorld War advertising.

This week they might have called up-n him in his luxurious rooms in the itz Carlton Hotel, to talk over old mes.

I called on him there, and with amazg frankness Sir Charles talked over ose old times with me, interspersing his utobiography with his advertising philosophy and his dreams for the future of s business. But first he must talk of the resent.

Sir Charles, to use his own phrase, is walking, talking example of the now omedic slogan—"Advertising Pays."

When Sir Charles speaks of advertisg, he stresses newspaper advertising.

"Ninety-eight per cent of the money of y 40 clients, I spend in newspaper adrtising," he declared.

"And I take my own medicine, too. I lvertise my agency continually in the ondon dailies.

"I employ no solicitors, believing that hen an advertiser sends for me, 80 per nt of the sale is made.

"It was through my advertisements at I obtained this present commission om the India Tea Association. My , in fact, cost me $250, and I obtained order to spend $200,000 a year for five ars in America to popularize tea drinkg here, proving once more, if you will rdon me, that advertising pays.

"And the tea campaign paid also. We arted last year, concentrating in New ork, Brooklyn, Philadelphia newspapers, d also using a string of 40 newspapers roughout the country. Tea sales increased 3,000,000 pounds weight in the year.

SIR CHARLES HIGHAM

"This year we will concentrate in Chicago.

"Newspapers are the cheapest and best media for advertising, I believe. Through them an advertiser is able to reach the greatest number of prospects effectively, cheaply, and in the shortest time."

The titled British agent had arrived in New York shortly after noon on the day I talked to him in the Ritz. The ocean trip had been arduous, he said, and he was supposed to be enjoying a few hours respite before riding his whirlwind program.

Dressed in blue lounge coat and gray pepper-and-salt trousers, he lolled lazily on a plush divan, stretching his feet before him, encased in buttoned patent leather boots with black cloth tops. For added comfort, he had undone his stiff collar and light grey tie.

He has a smooth-shaven jolly, round face, and smiles often. His hair is silky grey and curls up over each ear.

Sir Charles talks easily in the English public school staccato. He admits his gift of easy speech is one of his most important business assets. Every bit of copy he writes, he said, is dictated. While he paces the floor of his office, talking, two stenographers take notes and thus his advertising copy and slogans are created. Three books on advertising have been "written" by Sir Charles in this way, he declared.

"Yes," he replied to a question, "in England I am called the P. T. Barnum of the advertising business.

"And I don't mind it at all. Barnum, you know, beat the big drum, and claimed with loud ballyhoo he had the greatest show on earth for the meager sum of fifty cents. He got crowds into his tents this way, and when they left they told friends it was well worth a dollar.

"That is, to my mind, one of the essential tricks of advertising,—the making of friends and second sales.

"American advertising agencies are underpaid for the work they do, I think. Now, if you will pardon my mention of it, I am, perhaps, the highest paid writer in the world—and I am a writer of advertising or publicity.

"All I claim to be able to do is to set down simple salesmanship on paper, so childishly put that the ignorant can understand, and so strong that even the most intellectual will act upon it.

"Stenographers often can write better English than advertising men. But for the ideas we dictate, big money is paid in this age of publicity.

"Advertisers may well remember it is not the space bought but what is put in that space that counts. Too much can't be paid for words.

"Two years ago I was paid $2,500 for a five-word advertisement. Today the purchaser considers that advertisement is worth $2,000,000."

"Slogans are an important part of advertising," he continued, "but they should be selling slogans, rather than clever ones."

Now, becoming reminiscent, Sir Charles went back over his early Brooklyn days, leading his autobiography up to the present, at which, he declared, he had no complaint.

"I've had no education", he began, with a significant sweeping gesture, which compelled attention to the comforts of the Ritz suite.

"My father died when I was 11 years old, and I was forced to leave school. My mother married again. With her and my stepfather, I emigrated to this country, when I was 14 years old.

"My stepfather was a builder. He obtained work with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, where he is still employed.

"About the first position I obtained was in a chemist shop on Court street, Brooklyn. Here I minded my own business and was courteous. I remember an old gentleman used to come daily to the chemist shop with a brown bottle to be filled. He always asked for soda, but my boss told me to fill the bottle with brandy.

"It seems the client was a temperance agitator and was ashamed to enter a saloon and ask for brandy, although he was quite a tippler.

"My boss was proud of me for not asking questions and minding my own business, and when he failed he got work for me as bookkeeper in a law firm at $15 a week.

"On the side at this time, I used to hire a dress suit in the evenings and give dramatic recitals. It was then I noticed I had somewhat of a flair for advertising. You see, instead of advertising the fact that I gave dramatic recitations, I had sense enough to choose the grander word 'recitals', and in consequence got more orders."

For a while, too, he said, he was staff artist for the Brooklyn edition of the New York World. But he never kept up his art study, although he claims his ability to pick and choose good art work is today considerable assistance in his work.

"At any rate I decided to go into advertising, and noticing an advertisement in the paper for a solicitor at $12 a week, I applied and was accepted.

"When the law firm heard about it, they immediately offered to raise my wages to $25 a week.

"The advertising position was only on a six weeks' trial. But remembering the old adage 'Take no risks and take no prizes', I left the law firm for the new work.

"At the end of the six weeks, I lost this job, but right away obtained another with the Liberty Silk Company in the advertising department at $12 a week. In four days, I showed them I could write advertising, and they made me advertising manager at $50 a week.

"Some time later, I was offered the chance to become advertising manager of Loeser's department store, Brooklyn. They told me I would be paid $100 a week. When I came back home and told my mother about it, she was astounded.

"Is there anyone in Brooklyn mad enough to pay you $100 a week,' she said.

"When I became 30, I had saved a considerable sum of money, and decided to return to my old London home. Arriving there I met Gordon Selfridge.

"'Mr. Higham,' he said to me, 'your advertising methods may be all right in America, but you are five years ahead of your time in England!'

"'Good,' said I. 'Then England is a real gold mine for me, if I stick it. And I stuck it.

"I have won success by making successes. I never considered compensation. Advertising is my hobby not my work. I am proud to be an advertising man. I stood for Parliament as an advertising man and was elected, although I only made three speeches and they were on advertising subjects.

"During the war I was knighted for services I performed in writing appeals for men and money. Spending $300,000 in newspaper advertising, we were able to raise $4.500,000,000, when editorial appeals had failed."

Before concluding the interview, Sir Charles told why he was so proud of his profession, and gave his idea of what advertising of the future would be like.

"I suppose I am a natural reformer. Probably I should have been a preacher and I may be yet, who knows? That is why I like to speak of myself as advertising's Billy Sunday.

"In advertising I always preach the joy of living, instead of the fear of dying. I fear death, not because of the unknown ahead of me, but because of the known I leave behind.

"Advertising of the future, I believe, will give publicity to ideas and ideals instead of products.

"If I were Henry Ford today, and as keen for peace as he is said to be, and as altruistic as he seems to be, instead of spending $5,000,000 advertising my automobile, I would use the money to express my point of view on peace in paid space. And I believe I would sell more Ford cars that way, too.

"At any rate, my ambition of the moment is to find an inspired millionaire, who longs for World Peace, and wants to make good use of his money, while he lives."

A luncheon in honor of Sir Charles Higham was given by James W. Brown at the Hardware Club at noon on Tuesday, attended by New York newspaper business executives. Don C. Seitz, New York World, introduced as the dean of New York newspaper managers, welcomed Sir Charles who, he recalled, he had employed as a cub on the New York World when Sir Charles was a youth. Louis Wiley, New York Times, spoke of newspaper conditions in New York.

In an informal address Sir Charles told of his early struggles in New York and of his advertising success in England, explained his mission to America in behalf of the India Tea campaign and the Wembley Exposition, a huge success last year and to be continued this year, and paid tribute to the cooperation of the newspaper press of this country.

TOO MUCH BUSINESS ON SATURDAY, MERCHANTS BROKE WEEK-END AD JAM

St. Paul Stores Distribute Newspaper Advertising Throughout Week, Keeping Their Sales Forces Busy and Easing Publisher's Problem

By M. W. THOMPSON

Manager of Advertising, St. Paul Daily News

THE recent discussion in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of the week-end advertising traffic jam is more than ordinarily interesting. While it is true from a strictly mechanical production point of view that it would be advantageous for newspapers to have their advertising volume equally balanced over the different days of the week, it must be remembered that the life of a newspaper is dependent upon its ability to serve. A newspaper which grows and prospers must see the viewpoint of its readers and its advertisers as well as its own angle. In a large way the entire question will be solved the same as all other economic conditions are solved by the fundamental laws of supply, demand and distribution.

M. W. THOMPSON

Here in St. Paul the situation is typical of the smaller city. The average merchant does two to three times the volume of business on Saturday that he does on other days of the week. The result of this is an easier market in which to sell merchandise on Saturday than on other days of the week, so the one time a week advertiser naturally gravitates to the Friday paper, which gives him better production for his advertising costs than papers published earlier in the week. To put any penalty on such advertisers would be essentially to discourage advertising and to retard business.

There is another phase to this on which none of the newspaper executives have touched so far. That is, such a policy as has been pursued by the merchants will ultimately come to a place where of its own accord, business conditions will cause a leveling off of this advertising. This to an extent has taken place in St. Paul. Friday advertising continued to increase over a period of years in St. Paul and then reached the point where many of the local stores secured a volume of business difficult to handle in one day with the regular staff of sales people, while this same staff is only one-half or one-third occupied during earlier days of the week.

There was a natural reaction against this without particular effort on the part of the newspaper. A number of our stores have reasonably curtailed their advertising on Fridays, and increased their advertising earlier in the week, in order to get what to them is a sounder division of their business.

Our largest store, the Golden Rule, seldom runs larger copy on Friday than on other days of the week.

Our second store, the Emporium, generally uses its heaviest advertising on Monday.

Our third store, Schuneman & Evans, runs occasional heavy copy, but it is ordered just as often for mid week or early week run as it is for Friday. Several of our other large stores are adopting about the same policy. Our two largest women's specialty stores, Husch Bros. and Macey's, practically never run their large copy on Friday, but incline rather to heavy advertising during the mid week.

The present pyramiding of our Friday papers comes rather from the clothiers and furniture houses, who use but one ad a week and naturally go into their most profitable market.

The idea of inducing the general national publicity accounts to prepare their schedules to run on the lighter days of the week should be entirely sound. These advertisers are not dependent largely, as are the local stores, on next day results, but are building general prestige for their products and should be able to do this fully as well in the early week days. In addition, they would often have the advantage of being able to secure better pages in the paper and better locations than on the crowded days.

There is no indication, in this field at least, of the large Friday papers growing to an extent that would decrease advertising value. Instead, the opposite is true in so far as the local advertiser is concerned. The concensus of opinion in St. Paul would probably show a belief in the ability to secure from two to two and one-half times the results from Friday advertising that is secured earlier in the week. The exception to this condition might possibly be found in two or three of our leading stores that have sufficient prestige to pull heavy results during the earlier part of the week.

Mechanical handling of this larger volume of Friday advertising can be solved by the gradual education of the advertiser to the advantage of early copy. In St. Paul two years ago practically every store in the city was advertising on a 24-hour basis.

That is, copy was submitted the day preceding publication, and largely late in the day for the afternoon paper the following day.

This year five of our largest advertisers are on a 48-hour schedule and adhere to it 95 per cent of the time. A number of our moderate sized advertisers who use Friday papers only, are submitting copy two and three days in advance of publication. This has not been an easy problem to solve in St. Paul and meant hard work. In addition to selling the early copy idea, a good deal was accomplished by taking over the writing of copy for some of the accounts where it was impossible to secure co-operation with other measures.

This problem is, of course, quite different in a city with the volume of advertising shown in St. Paul as compared with the newspapers carrying from twenty to thirty million lines per year. The St. Paul situation is typical, however, of a very large number of moderate sized newspapers, published in the medium and smaller cities throughout the country.

MATTOON BULLETIN ALIVE

Attempt to Force Suspension Failed, Publisher Elliott States

The Mattoon (Ill.) Morning Bulletin, which was stated recently to have suspended publication, denies the report and declares through its publisher, Roy L. Elliott, that it has not missed an issue.

"There is no denial that an attempt has been made to put the paper out of business," Mr. Elliott said, "but so far the attempt has failed, and it looks now as if it will fail miserably. The company is not insolvent. We can close tomorrow and the machinery and equipment on hand will sell for more than enough to liquidate. Two forces working, one to put the paper out of business entirely, and the other to gain control and dictate the policies of the paper, brought about the crisis. These are the facts and we are entitled to a correction."

A. N. A. Chooses Chicago

The semi-annual meeting of the Association of National Advertisers will be held at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago, on May 6, 7 and 8.

FOUR NEW VANDERBILT DIRECTORS NAMED

Mellon, Siemon, Poe and Fiedler Named on Board—Mellon Made General Manager of All Dailies—Three Positions Abolished

(By Telegraph To EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LOS ANGELES, CAL., March 17.—At a meeting of the board of directors held at the offices of Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., W. S. Siemon of 49 Wall street, New York; Edw. Poe of Baltimore, Md.; Robert Fiedler of New York City, and Ben Mellon of New York City, were elected members of the board of directors to fill the vacancies caused by the resignations of Charles E. Fisher, Charles H. Brockhagen, Mrs. Isabelle Baker, and Miss Ruth L. Stahl.

All except Mr. Fiedler are on the Pacific coast and taking an active part in the affairs of the company. The other members of the board are Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., Alfred I. Du Pont, Ray T. Baker, H. B. Granlee, Douglas W. Churchill, Morton M. Littleton and J. W. Brodix.

Announcement was also made that Ben Mellon, who has had 20 years experience that has included every branch of the newspaper business, had been appointed general manager of all Vanderbilt newspaper properties.

It was announced that Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Mellon, and J. W. Brodix would leave within the next few days on a business trip that would include San Francisco, Miami and New York.

Mr. Mellon announced at the same time that the positions of supervising editor, director of circulation, and director of advertising had been abolished, stating that B. B. Marcum, director of circulation of all Vanderbilt newspapers had resigned.

E. A. Barrymore, formerly of the Brooklyn Eagle, has succeeded Graham Hughes, resigned, as head of the real estate department of the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily News, and Larry Compton of the Hammill Sutphen Agency, has succeeded D. M. Bangs, resigned, as head of the automobile department of the same paper.

While all leased wires of the C. V. Service on the Pacific coast were discontinued early this week under an order issued by Mr. Mellon, it was stated that the present intention was to extend the news, feature and picture activities of the Vanderbilt organizations and that offices would be opened shortly in both New York and Chicago to act for both the editorial and advertising branches of the organization.

Portland Ad Club Merger Completed

Merger of the two Portland, Ore., advertising organizations, the Advertising Club of Portland and the Portland Advertising Men's Association, has been completed. After this arrangement was recommended by the officers of the Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs the Association acted immediately, but the Club took 30 days for consideration. It has now approved the merger by a vote of 101 to 20.

Provision has been made that actual advertising men will have a larger part in the control of the club hereafter. By a vote of 113 to 8 it was decided to elect to its offices only men having some direct advertising connection. Women will now be eligible to membership, a step that the club, before its consolidation, had always declined to take.

Tennessee Has New Evening Daily

J. F. Toney is publisher of the Erwin (Tenn.) Magnet, a new evening daily. The newspaper has been admitted to Associated Press membership.

I. N. S. Opens New Bureau

International News Service has opened a new bureau in Hartford, Conn., with W. H. Sheehan as manager.

DENY CONSPIRACY AGAINST DIRECT ADVERTISERS

Southern Newspapers, Four As, and American Press Association Aver, Answering Trade Commission, Publishers Pay Agency Commission for Services Which Direct Advertisers Cannot Render —All Deny Advertising Is Interstate Commerce.

Complete denial of conspiracy to force national advertisers to place their business through certain advertising agencies is contained in the answers filed this week by the American Association of Advertising Agencies, the American Press Association, and the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association to a complaint recently brought by the Federal Trade Commission. In substance, publishers, representatives, and agencies declare that the payment of commissions by publishers to agencies is in compensation for services rendered to the publishers, and that advertisers who place business direct are not entitled to such commission because they do not render such services. These services are defined tersely in the answer of the A. A. A. A. as follows:

"The promotion and development of advertising in general, in creating a permanent and ever-increasing market for publishers' advertising space, in developing and producing for the publisher a large number of accounts covering a wide field of industry, in active soliciting of new advertising accounts and in preparing these accounts so that they will be continuous and successful, and in developing and expanding existing advertising by making advertising profitable."

The replies of the several respondents are grouped as they answer each of the paragraphed charges of the complaint, (printed in full in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of Jan. 3, 1925) as follows:

Paragraph I.—This is a general catalog of the Associations cited and the officers and directors of each, together with a general statement of the functions of each association.

Answer of S. N. P. A.—Several publishers cited as officers and directors are shown to be no longer serving as such. It is denied that the association or its officers and directors have any authority to bind individual members of the association to anything or that they have ever bound or attempted to bind any of them to do anything. It is also shown that the members are not bound by the rules, or otherwise, to do anything except pay their dues so long as they remain members, and that every member exercises his own free will about everything. It is stated that the membership, numbering more than 100 and changing from time to time, constitutes only a small percentage of the number of newspapers in the association's territory. The publishers state that they do not know what arrangements the agencies have with manufacturers and other dealers, and that the newspapers pay the agencies for the service rendered the publishers.

Answer of A. A. A. A.—The agencies deny that they or any of them have by the means set forth in the complaint or by any other means used any unfair method of competition in interstate commerce. They further allege that the statement of the engagement, duties, service and relations of agencies in Paragraph I of the complaint is incomplete and inaccurate.

Answer of A. P. A.—The corporation denies that some of the means and methods charged against it in the complaint were applied in its business, and expressly denies that it by any means used any unfair method in interstate commerce.

Paragraph II.—This is the commission's definition of the trade and technical terms used in the complaint.

Answer of the S. N. P. A.—The publishers deny every allegation, including the accuracy of the definitions.

Answer of the A. A. A. A.—The agencies deny that the definitions are complete or accurate.

Answer of A. P. A.—All allegations in this paragraph are admitted.

Paragraph III.—The commission outlines its conception of the function of the agencies in procuring for advertisers space in newspapers, stating that the agencies, as a part of such services, pay publishers for the publication of such advertising in their newspapers, and are by the advertisers reimbursed the sums so expended and paid an additional sum for their services. It is stated that the A. A. A. A. members handle and place about 90 per cent of all national advertising in newspapers, handling the advertising of about 5,000 national advertisers, at a cost to said advertisers of about $200,000,000 annually. It is also set forth that "for many years a large number of national advertisers have themselves conducted their national advertising without employing the services of the respondent agencies or other agencies in that behalf and have done for themselves all the things and services which are done by respondent agencies . . ."

Answer of S. N. P. A.—The publishers admit the payment of a percentage, sometimes 15 per cent, to agencies for developing the advertising published, paying for it and other services, and that this percentage is allowed all agencies fairly entitled thereto, regardless of their membership in any association. It is shown that this arrangement or trade custom grew up many years ago, as a result of the need of such agencies, and that it came into existence before any of the respondent associations or corporations existed and before practically all of the other respondents were engaged in business." Under this custom, it is stated, newspaper publishers now depend upon the agencies to develop advertising and it is necessary to have some one perform such services for the newspapers as the agencies now perform. The publishers also show that so-called type-parts—pictures, cuts, engravings, electors, etc.—may or may not be sent to a publisher by an agency, as the commission charges, and if they are sent by an agency, this act is done for the advertiser, and the type-parts are and remain the property of the advertiser. It is further stated that under the trade custom, the publisher and not the advertiser pays the agent the percent, whatever it may be. The publishers admit that there are some advertisers who prepare and place their advertising, but deny that such advertisers are able to or do solicit and develop advertising and otherwise render the publisher such services as the agencies render him. The publishers state that advertising in newspapers has developed and increased under the aforementioned trade custom to a greater extent than ever before in the history of the world.

Answer of the A. A. A. A.—The agencies deny the allegations on the ground that they are in part inaccurate and incomplete statements of their relations and business methods and in part are untrue, and set forth as follows "the true facts in connection with the subjects covered:"

The business of the agency is entirely one of service:

(a) To the broad field of advertising in general, in promoting the wise and effective use of advertising, in enlarging its scope and value and as a reliable medium of information to the public; and in making it profitable and of permanent value to all concerned; and respondents aver that to a large extent the agencies in this relation have been responsible for the general improvement in and the great development and growth of advertising, which has taken place since agencies became a factor in the business.

In developing this general and fundamental service, the agencies necessarily perform a distinct service to the other essential arms of the advertising industry, being

(b) To the advertiser. — The advertising agency enables the advertiser and the potential advertiser to make an advantageous use of advertising. By so doing, it renders a double service to the advertiser, first, in making his advertising profitable to him; second, in increasing and sustaining the volume of advertising, which enables the publisher to charge a rate to all advertisers lower than would be profitable if the volume of advertising were small. The agency's service to the advertiser generally includes a careful examination into the advertiser's business, the article to be advertised, its cost of production, its probable market and the buying ability and habit of that market, the probable volume of sales, extent of profit to be derived, ability of the advertiser to finance the production and distribution of the article, history of the trade, and other conditions that are conducive or essential to successful advertising. As a result of its inquiries and its knowledge of the business of advertising, the agency may and frequently does recommend to the advertiser any desirable changes in production and recommends a plan of advertising and marketing including the amount of money probably needed for its successful use, and including copy and text subsequently to be used in publications, and the agency thereupon suggests the nature of the media to be used and, at the direction of the advertiser, arranges with the publishers for the insertion of said advertising in various newspapers and other publications in all parts of the United States.

The agency places orders for the advertiser for matrices, proofs and other materials necessary for reproduction and assists the advertiser in getting such of these as are necessary promptly supplied to the publisher, wholly as a part of the service rendered by the agency to the advertiser. At no time does the agency have any ownership in such contrivances or mechanical parts and they are always the property of the advertiser and sent by or for him to the publisher and returned by the publisher at the advertiser's direction or held by the publisher for the advertiser, and are not commodities of commerce.

Some agencies charge a special fee to the advertiser for this and other said services to the advertiser, some charge the advertiser the cost, some make no service charge whatever. There is not, and never has been any uniformity as to this custom; there is not and has been no agreement among the agencies or between any of the respondents hereto concerning this feature, and it forms no part of the service of the agencies which is paid for by the publisher.

Respondents admit that such advertising is then printed and circulated by said publishers, and they also admit that the purpose of the advertiser and effect of such publication and circulation is largely to promote advertising and commerce.

(c) The service of the agency to the publisher is as hereinbefore set forth, viz., the promotion and development of advertising in general, in creating a permanent and ever-increasing market for publisher's advertising space, in developing and producing for the publisher a large number of accounts covering a wide field of industry, in active soliciting of new advertising accounts and in preparing these accounts so that they will be continuous and successful, and in developing and expanding existing advertising by making advertising profitable.

The general plan of remuneration to the agencies by publishers for service to them is as follows: The agencies pay the publishers the latters' charge for inserting and printing and distributing such advertisements in accordance with the "card rates" of each publisher. These card rates vary in various locations and in various newspapers, and the agency respondents aver there is no understanding or agreement concerning them. It is the custom of some publishers to grant 2 per cent for cash on payment of invoice and it is the custom of agencies in such cases to pay cash and receive such cash discount. The agencies collect from the advertiser, and costomarily give the advertiser the cash discount received from the publisher. The publisher pays the agency for the agency service a commission generally of 15 per cent.

WITH THE BALL TEAMS IN FLORIDA

Robert Boyd, New York Evening World baseball reporter, and George Herman Ruth have been admiring one of the racing canines which have added a new touch to Florida sport of 1925.

Respondents admit that some advertisers designated as "national" have conducted their advertising without employing said agencies, but respondents expressly deny that such advertisers have rendered to the publishers the service rendered by agencies as above described and for which the publishers pay the aforesaid commission to said respondent agencies; or that such so-called national advertisers have been able to effect many economies enjoyed by national advertisers whose advertising is handled by an agency; or that such so-called national advertisers have rendered to advertising in general any such service as agencies have been and are rendering.

And respondent agencies specially aver that the course of business above described with respect to the rendition of service by agencies to publishers and the payment of the agency commission on that account was in existence long before the formation of the American Association of Advertising Agencies and is now carried on by publishers generally with all agencies whether or not the latter are members of said respondent association of agencies.

Answer of A. P. A.—Respondent, having insufficient knowledge of the allegations, denies them.

Paragraph IV.—The commission sets forth its conception of the operations of the American Press Association, in soliciting from national advertisers and agencies advertising for the 8,000 newspapers it represents in practically every state in the union. It is stated that this association procures from the agencies type-parts used in the printing of such advertising and ships these type-parts to newspapers throughout the United States. The commission also states that the respondent corporation publishes a monthly trade periodical circulating among publishers, advertising agencies, and special representatives throughout the country.

Answers of S. N. P. A. and A. A. A. A.—Both of these respondents declare that they have no knowledge as to the facts alleged, and the A. A. A. A. deny especially that the American Press Association produces type-parts from the agencies in any manner other than that stated above.

Answer of A. P. A.—Respondent admits that it is engaged in soliciting from national advertisers and from agencies advertisements to be inserted in country newspapers published throughout the United States; that in soliciting such advertising, respondent acts as agent for and receives its remuneration from the publishers; that said publishers are about 7300 in number; that said newspapers circulate in the towns and villages in which they are published, to some extent in the county in which such town or village is located, and to a very limited extent, outside such county; that respondent is also engaged in the publication of a monthly trade periodical called the American Press, devoted to the publishing and advertising business, which said trade journal circulates among publishers, advertising agencies and special representatives, with a circulation of about 5,500. Respondent denies each and every allegation contained in paragraph IV of the said complaint, except as specifically admitted, and further denies that it procures any national or other advertising through or from respondent, American Association of Advertising Agencies, but admits that it receives practically all of its advertising through advertising agencies. Respondent further denies that it procures from any agencies any type-parts to be used in the printing of advertisements and further denies that it ships any such type-parts to any publishers of newspapers.

Respondent alleges that its business consists in increasing by every legitimate means the use by national advertisers of country newspapers as an advertising medium and that its relation to country newspapers is that of advertising representative, remunerated for its services as such representative by a commission of 15 per cent of the so-called gross rate, out of which commission respondent pays the 2 per cent cash discount, thereby reducing respondent's commission to 13.3 per cent. That respondent's remuneration for its services is a part of the so-called net rate, just as the other relevant expenses of the publisher are factors in such rate. Respondent solicits advertisements for the country newspapers it serves, furnishes the publisher of such newspapers contracts, copy for the advertisements and instructions for insertions thereof, collects the charge for such advertisements, and pays the publisher. Respondent in addition, relieves the advertiser or the advertising agency (as the case may be) from the necessity of dealing with numerous publishers of country newspapers and checking up insertions in such newspapers, and attends to all such details. Respondent therefore renders valuable services (a) to country newspapers in general, by promoting their use as an advertising medium by national advertisers; (b) to national advertisers, by demonstrating to them the value and utility of country newspapers as an advertising medium, and (c) to advertising agencies, by relieving them of the enormous mass of details incident to contracting with a list of country newspapers and furnishing copy and insertion instructions to them and checking up on insertions, which mass of details would otherwise militate against the use of country newspapers as an advertising medium.

Paragraph V.—The commission charges that newspaper publishers generally have held themselves out as having two rates at which they compute and charge for the publication of national advertising—gross rates and net rates. As the commission's charge have been once published fully and their general import can be realized from the following answers the details of the complaint will not again be set forth.

Answer of S. N. P. A.—The publishers admit that for convenience rates are sometimes referred to as gross and net rates, but show that the contract rate to agencies and to advertisers is the same, except that agencies are allowed a percent by the publishers for the services to the publisher in developing advertising, paying therefor, etc. They deny that publisher's throughout the United States have generally held themselves out as having two rates for so-called national advertising. It is shown that each publisher fixes his own rate and that the rate differs in newspapers of the same community and from the rate in other communities. They deny that any combination or conspiracy exists between publishers and any of the other respondents regarding rates. They admit that direct advertisers probably existed before there was a need for agencies, but show that the trade custom allowing the agencies a percent gradually grew up because of the need of the agency to develop and increase advertising. They show that the amount the newspaper pays the agency is reasonable and that it cannot obtain such service elsewhere at any such reasonable cost.

Answer of the A. A. A. A.—The agencies deny the allegations and set forth "the true facts pertaining to the subject" as follows:

Out of the custom described (the agency commission), some publishers and some agencies have at times used the words "gross" and "net" rates—the gross rate meaning the card rate of each publisher and the net rate meaning the card rate less the agency commission paid for service to the publisher. Respondents deny that publishers generally hold themselves out as having two rates for the use of their space by national advertisers and aver that exactly the contrary is the rule.

Respondents specifically deny that said rates are in any sense dominated by them or any of them individually or collectively and on the contrary aver that they are fixed independently by each publisher and vary between and within different communities from time to time and in accordance with the individual and uncontrolled decision of each separate publisher, and under conditions of active and free competition.

Respondents deny that the so-called "gross" rate is fixed as the rate to the agency business solely and on the contrary aver that the so-called "gross" rate is the publishers' card rate to be applied to all national advertising alike. Respondents further allege that many publishers bill the agencies at the full card rate, subject to deduction of commission by the agency, and others bill the agency at the full card rate less the commission, subject to cash discount as earned by the agency.

Respondents further deny that they have engaged in any conspiracy or combination with respect to these rates or the compensation above described, and further deny that practically all the newspapers in the United States had made a practice of charging direct advertisers at the so-called net rates upon the same terms and conditions accorded by said publishers to said agencies, and further aver that the facts are just contrary to the allegations in said complaint.

Answer of A. P. A.—Respondent is without sufficient knowledge as to any of the allegations except as they refer to advertising in country newspapers, and as to such advertising, the facts are as follows: The "gross" rate means the card rate of a publisher of a country newspaper, and the "net" rate means the card rate less the commission to an agency. Respondent denies that the publishers of country newspapers hold themselves out as having two rates for the use of their space by national advertisers and avers that the contrary is the general rule. Said rates are fixed independently by each publisher and vary in different communities. Respondent denies that it has engaged in any combination or conspiracy with respect to any such rates or the payment thereof.

Paragraph VI.—The commission sets forth the character of national advertising as an essential instrumentality of interstate commerce.

Answer of S. N. P. A.—The publishers admit that newspaper advertising is one means of informing the public, but aver that so-called national advertising is carried on in different ways. They do not know whether or not advertising accomplishes all that the commission claims, for it, but show that no act of any one or more of them has any effect on either advertising or interstate commerce or any part thereof. They further expressly deny that advertising, or what each, any or all of the respondents do, or any part thereof which the commission complains of, is interstate commerce.

Answer of A. A. A. A.—The agencies characterize the commission's description of national advertising as inadequate and incorrect, and therefore deny it, and they deny that the advertising they conduct, or any of its purposes, methods, parts or elements is an instrumentality or any part of interstate commerce, and that any of their activities or inactivities in using or promoting such advertising has any restrictive effect on such commerce. They aver that their service to advertising has been wholly to stimulate general advertising and to enlarge general trade and commerce and to promote and encourage competition, and to reduce the cost of advertising to the advertiser, to reduce the cost of publication to the publisher, and to reduce the cost of the commodity to the consumer. They state that national advertising, while highly important and beneficial to all classes of industry, is essential and indispensable to the distribution of goods in interstate commerce.

Answer of A. P. A.—Respondent denies the allegations and specifically denies that it is engaged in interstate commerce and further specifically denies that it has restricted such commerce or any part of it.

Paragraph VII.—The commission alleges that about one-third of the advertising revenue of newspapers, estimated at $600,000,000 annually, comes from national advertising and that the publishers' profits depends in many instances upon the amount of national advertising they obtain.

Answer of S. N. P. A.—The publishers show that by far the greater amount of newspaper advertising is not so-called national advertising and they deny that the earning of a profit by the newspapers depends on the amount of so-called national advertising they secure. The publishers state that they do not know what advertisers spend on newspaper advertising or what amount might be considered "national advertising." They further show that part of the advertising in the newspapers is not developed by any of the respondents to the complaint and they expressly deny that publishers uniformly demand a higher rate for so-called national advertising than all other advertising. They show that there are many forms of advertising that the newspaper charges more for than so-called national advertising.

Answer of A. A. A. A.—The agencies, having no information regarding the allegations, deny them.

Answer of A. P. A.—Respondent denies the allegations, except that respondent alleges that the newspapers receive vastly more revenue from local advertising than from so-called national advertising, and that in the case of country newspapers, the operation of a job printing plant, which is almost universally a branch of the business of the publisher of country newspapers, is commonly a more important source of revenue than so-called national advertising.

Paragraph VIII.—The commission charges a conspiracy during the past five years between the respondents to compel national advertisers to employ the respondent agencies or other agencies in the placing of national advertising in newspapers, to prevent such advertisers from advertising directly in newspapers at net rates and to compel these advertisers to pay for direct advertising at gross rates, citing the several steps by which this conspiracy is said to have been made effective. As the nature of the charges is made evident by the denials, the specifications need not again be stated.

Answer of S. N. P. A.—The publishers deny all knowledge of the conspiracy charged and they also show again that the direct advertisers perform no service for newspapers or publishers and that they are not entitled to any per cent whatever from the publisher respondents. Their denials of the specifications follows:

(a) They deny that they have ever conspired with any of the respondents, that they agreed among themselves to

(Continued on page 36)

IDEAL HUSBAND IS KANSAS EDITOR

"Don't forget to empty the pan under the refrigerator," says Mrs. Ralph Tennal of Sabetha, Kan., to her husband, above, as she leaves for her bridge club. Mrs. Tennal, in a satire on American women, declared at the recent annual meeting of Kansas editors at Topeka that wives should have a husband to make money, a husband for social eclat and a tabby-cat husband to do the housework. Mrs. Tennal admits that personally she has a three-in-one husband. He is the publisher of the Sabetha (Kan.) Herald. Mr. and Mrs. Tennal have a summer home where the view was taken.

CONVENTIONS CROWD THE SPRING CALENDAR

April Meetings of Associated Press and A. N. P. A., Themselves of Unusual Interest, Will Open Season of Meetings That Will Attract Newspaper and Advertising Folk From Many Countries

WE have with us again the Vernal Equinox, with its associations of northward-bound song-birds, sprouting crocuses and tulips, baseball teams following the birds course, rubbers and umbrellas leading a busy life, and several thousand newspaper and advertising executives arranging their desks for the succession of conventions scheduled for the next three months.

First on the calendar and in the minds of some five hundred or so of the leaders of organized journalism come the April conventions of the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers Association, scheduled as usual for the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel during the week of April 19.

Business opens on Monday, a day earlier than has been the custom. The Associated Press membership will gather in a special meeting on April 20 called by the directors to discuss association matters, chief of which, it is hinted, is the matter of radio broadcasting by members. The following day, April 21, will be marked by the annual meeting, which will ratify any actions taken the previous day, elect new directors, discuss new and old business, and attend the annual luncheon, at which Vice-President Dawes will be the speaker. The meeting will be the twenty-fifth presided over by Frank B. Noyes, publisher of the Washington Star, who has been president since the present body was organized in 1901. A record attendance is forecast.

The last sentence applies also to the meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, starting April 22, which promises several discussions of wide interest to publishers. Among the moot topics are the relations of the Audit Bureau of Circulations to newspaper publishers; the postal rate situation, as developed during the 68th Congress and as publishers want it to develop in the 69th Congress; prospects of the print paper market; the unchecked advance in wages to mechanical department employes, and a host of other subjects of lesser importance. The annual banquet of the Bureau of Advertising will be held April 22. The Ad Bureau Committee will meet April 20.

One event will be missing from this week—the annual gathering of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, which was held in Washington last January.

An unscheduled, but important, gathering of the week will be that of representatives of regional press associations—the Inland, Southern, New England, Pacific Coast associations and other groups—to formulate plans for a meeting in June at West Baden Springs, Ind. This assemblage has been sponsored by President Lindsay of the Inland association and has received a cordial response from other associations. A council of the regional associations has long been the subject of desultory conversation, but has never been nearer fruition than at present.

And, immediately after the publishers and their round of business meetings, calls on representatives, advertisers and agencies, two or three plays, and the annual jollification staged by M. Koenigsberg of the King Features Syndicate, the scene shifts to Columbia, Mo.

The 16th annual journalism week of the University of Missouri will be held on the campus May 4-9. The Missouri Writers' Guild will meet Monday. Tuesday is a day of special unannounced features. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the Missouri Press Association will give attention to work-a-day problems and on Friday night what is described by Dean Walter Williams of the School of Journalism as a "unique Journalism Week banquet" is on the card. Some of the speakers scheduled to address the Missourians are:

O. O. McIntyre, E. B. Garnett, Sunday editor, Kansas City Star; Burt P. Garnett, Editorial Research Service, Washington; Frank L. Blanchard, New York; G. V. Kenton, St. Louis; Herbert Bayard Swope, New York World; David E Smiley, Philadelphia Public Ledger; Col. F. P. Holland, Holland's Magazine; M. E. Foster, Houston Chronicle; George M. Burbach, Advertising Manager, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Roy W. Howard, Scripps-Howard newspapers; James O'Shaughnessy, Executive Secretary American Association of Advertising Agencies; Paul Patterson, Baltimore Sun; Elmo Scott Watson, editor, Publishers Auxiliary; Walter M. Harrison, Oklahoma City Oklahomian; James W. Brown, EDITOR & PUBLISHER; F. Douglas Williams, American Representative Reuters; Herbert S. Hadley, Chancellor Washington University; Rep. Harry B. Dawes, John Clyde Oswald, American Printer; Herbert S. Houston, George W. Marble, President National Editorial Association; Eugene B. Roach, President Missouri Press Association; and Dr. J. M. Puig Casaurance, Minister of Education in the Cabinet of President Calles of Mexico.

They will still be talking about the Missouri banquet when the curtain rises in Houston, Tex., where the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World hold their annual meeting May 9-16. More than 3,000 reservations have been made at Houston hotels, it was announced this week by President Lou E. Holland, who stated that the complete list of convention speakers and the business program would be announced shortly.

"This convention will be particularly interesting because of its Pan-American aspect," Mr. Holland said.

"Governments of all the nations on the two American continents have been officially invited to send representatives. Altogether, we expect delegates from 22 nations will be in attendance."

Mr. Holland said 12 advertising clubs in three countries have to date agreed to send 100 or more delegates each to the convention. They are: London, New York, Philadelphia, Mexico City, St. Louis, Kansas City, Columbus, O., St. Petersburg, Fla., Corsicana, Tex., Dallas, Galveston, and Fort Worth.

Newspapers are supporting this year's convention as never before, according to Mr. Holland. He said about 80 daily newspapers have volunteered to publish free advertisements urging advertising men to go to Houston next May. The list includes the Boston Transcript, Indianapolis News, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, San Francisco Call-Post, and Buffalo Express.

Philadelphia and St. Petersburg, Fla., are actively campaigning for the 1926 convention and there have been reports that the Adcraft Club of Detroit may send a strong delegation to land the convention for the City of the Straits.

The executive committee of the Second District A. A. C. W., this week announced that the district convention would be held at Bethlehem, Pa., June 1-3. H. C. Squires, president of the International Correspondence Schools, Scranton, Pa., was appointed chairman of the program committee. Rowe Stewart, general manager of the Philadelphia Record, is district chairman.

Immediately after this meeting comes the semi-annual convention of the Association of National Advertisers, to be held in Chicago June 6-8. The program has not yet been completed, but it never fails to attract and reward between 200 and 300 advertising executives of internationally-known products.

The dates—June 1-3—have also been appointed by the National Editorial Association for the annual meeting of editors and publishers of the country press in Richmond, Va., to be followed by ten days of visits to scenic and historic places in the Old Dominion. Secretary H. C. Hotaling has not yet completed his program arrangements. Among his problems is the disposition of some 76 valuable prizes for participation in the membership campaign which the association has conducted during the past year. Only 49 members have so far entered the contest by enrolling one or more of the 387 new members added to the list.

While the country newspaper men are getting acquainted with "Old Virginny," that branch of the newspaper fraternity included in the International Circulation Managers Association will be talking shop and frolicking near the roof of the continent at Colorado Springs, June 9-11. Will O. Butler, circulation manager of the Colorado Springs Gazette & Telegraph, has tracked his colleagues through several states and even into Canada for many years and finally induced them to take the long jump to his favorite playground in the Rockies. The meeting will be presided over by Roy Hatton, Detroit Free Press, vice-president, as President Robert S. Weir, Syracuse Journal, is now recovering from a severe illness and does not expect to attend the meeting.

The program of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association's annual convention at Asheville, N. C., July 6-8 is now being arranged by the officers cooperating with a committee of which Wiley L. Morgan, Knoxville Sentinel, is chairman. It is expected that the two outstanding subjects for discussion will be second-class postal rates, and the complaint against the S. N. P. A. by the Federal Trade Commission.

These are the conventions and gatherings which will be attended by men and women of national eminence in their chosen work and there are innumerable other meetings, of state and regional associations which will attract noteworthy, if smaller, attendances. In almost every state bosses of the newspaper shop will have a chance to take two or three days off this summer for a trip to the shore of the sea or a cool lake where a little routine business will be transacted while he and his contemporaries indulge in the pleasures of the country. The Sun crossing the equator today ought to note quite a bit of newspaper history made in the U. S. A. before he again passes the line next September.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

THE DREAMERS

By Henry Edward Warner

I'd like to know Gutenberg now;
I'd like to just watch him, and guess
What's going on back of his brow
As he gapes at a rotary press.
I'd like to be with him, to stroll
Through the room where the cylinders grind—
I'd like to just see
What reactions might be
In the working of Gutenberg's mind!

I'd like to know Morse, could he come
And gaze on the marvels of Now!
I'd like to ask Morse if he knew
Where his dream-thought was destined, somehow!
"What hath God wrought?" . . . Flashed lazily then
A message too halting and slow!
And I'd like to see Morse
Trace the unwired course
Of the thing that is called Radio!

Speed presses! Flash news! 'Round the world
Hath intercourse welded a thought!
Of the breath of an instant are whirled
The dreams of the planets men caught
And O! I would like to see Morse
And Gutenberg, they whose brains gleamed,
Flashed, died in the clay
At the end of their day,
Leaving more than they ever had dreamed.

UNIQUE RAZOR AD DRIVE

Auto Strop Safety Razor Company Testing a "Dealer-Teaser" Campaign

"Dealer-Teaser" is probably the best name for a newspaper advertising campaign now being staged in New York City by the Auto Strop Safety Razor Company, through its agency, Lord & Thomas.

Whatever name is given it, the results so far are entirely satisfactory, S. E. Stampleman, sales manager informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week. It is planned to carry the campaign to other cities later, using the daily newspapers, he said.

The response has been most gratifying, Mr. Stampleman said on March 19, two days after the first advertisement appeared.

"We have 12 trunk lines linked up on one board, and the 12 operators have had to work almost continually answering inquiries", he declared, stating that because of the large number it would be impossible to give the actual number of queries.

"We tested out the campaign in smaller cities before we brought it into New York", he continued, "and had astonishingly good results.

"In Rochester, for instance, we used only one newspaper which has a circulation of about 42,000 and sold 40,000 razors."

AKRON TIMES MERGED WITH THE PRESS AFTER PURCHASE BY SCRIPPS-HOWARD

Will Be Issued Evening and Sunday Morning With Judd as Editor, Herman as Business Manager—Reported Price Is $750,000

THE Akron (Ohio) Times, an evening and Sunday newspaper, this week was sold to the Scripps-Howard Newspapers and was merged with the Akron Press as the Akron Times-Press and Akron Sunday Times. The first issue under the new ownership appeared Sunday, March 15. While the consideration involved was not made public, it is believed to be about $750,000, for which the purchasers obtained the building and property at 75 South High street, equipment, contracts, press and syndicate services, subscription lists and goodwill.

L. E. Judd

L. E. Judd, editor of the Press, will remain in charge as editor of the Times-Press, and Leon E. Herman, until now with the Memphis Press, will be business manager. W. Kee Maxwell, who was editor of the Times and, with Ross F. Walker, business manager, controlled the paper, will remain with the Times-Press as an editorial writer. The paper is being published from the plant of the Press, which houses the business and mechanical departments. Pending alterations of the Press building, editorial offices will be at the Times plant.

Consummation of the merger followed several months of conferences between Messrs. Walker and Maxwell and Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers; W. G. Chandler, president of the Scripps-Howard League of Ohio, and E. E. Cook, editor-in-chief of the Scripps-Howard League of Ohio. In a statement of policy published March 14, the new ownership declared that the Times-Press will be independent and non-partisan, but not neutral, in national, state, and local politics.

Leon E. Herman

The Times traces its history as a daily to 1892, when the Daily Democrat was established by Russell T. and William B. Dobson, who two years later added to it the Akron Times, a weekly Democratic paper. Both properties in 1897 passed to Edward S. Harter and William F. Gayer and the latter sold his interest in 1901 to Judge C. R. Grant. The paper's name was changed to the Times-Democrat and later to the Akron Times.

In October, 1916, the paper was sold to Messrs. Walker, Maxwell, and other stockholders, who reorganized it as the Times Publishing Company. Maxwell was president, Walker secretary and treasurer, and on the board of directors, in addition to them, were Mary M. Walker, W. H. Kroeger, and W. E. Young.

Before going to Akron, Messrs. Maxwell and Walker had been associated on the Peoria Journal and Transcript, Maxwell as managing editor of both papers and Walker as business manager of the Journal. Both have been active in Akron civic affairs and both hold appointments from Gov. Donahey—Mexwell as trustee of the Kent State Normal School and Walker as a member of the Ohio Penitentiary Commission. Their plans for the future have not been announced, but it is stated that after details of the consolidation have been worked out, they will continue to be associated in business.

The Akron purchase is the third important newspaper transaction this winter in which the Scripps-Howard Newspapers have been concerned. The Des Moines News was sold in December to the Register and Tribune and combined with the latter paper. The Sacramento Star a few weeks ago was sold to the Sacramento Bee and consolidated. With the Times purchase, the Scripps-Howard Newspapers now own two Sunday newspapers—the first being the Pittsburgh Press, which was purchased in August, 1923.

Other Ohio newspapers owned by Scripps-Howard are the Cleveland Press, Columbus Citizen, Cincinnati Post, Toledo News-Bee and Youngstown Telegram.

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING OF N. Y. EVENING POST'S NEW $3,500,000 PLANT

DESTINED to form a striking addition to the city's skyline, is the seventeen story plant, which Cyrus H. K. Curtis is building for his New York Evening Post, involving an outlay of approximately $3,500,000 exclusive of equipment. It is being erected by the Thompson Starrett Company from plans by Horace Trumbauer, Philadelphia architect, and will be ready for occupancy about May 1, 1926.

It will cover the entire southerly Carlisle street block front, from Washington to West streets, a plot 18.2x123.4x133x irregular.

It will extend for seven stories before the first set back appears and then will ascend to the thirteenth story before there is the second break, an additional feature being the two towers that will rise above the seven floors, on the West and Washington street sides.

Provision has been made for a large court on the Carlisle street frontage.

Granite will be used in the exterior construction for the first story, with brick and terra cotta specified for the balance of the facade.

According to present tentative plans the newspaper will occupy the basement, ground, and first three or four floors of the building the remainder of which will be turned over for offices. The press room will be on the first floor, a little above the level of the street, with the circulation department on the mezzanine over the press room. The business and the advertising offices will be at the front of the building on the first floor. The editorial department, an upper floor.

COOLIDGE PROTESTS AS WRITERS DASH OUT

Threatens to Conclude Press Conference When Press Service Men Rush to Wires on Warren Flash

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 18.—The White House Correspondents' Association this week considered invoking a new rule governing the conduct of the Washington correspondents attending President Coolidge's twice-a-week "press conferences." This was provoked by an unprecedented episode at the President's "press conference" Tuesday.

As the President sifted the customary typewritten questions invariably prepared by various correspondents before being admitted to the President's private sanctum, he replied to an inquiry respecting the status of the Warren nomination by announcing there would be no recess appointment following the rejection of the Michigan man for the second time by the Senate.

Three correspondents for as many rival press associations made a dash for the nearest door to send a "flash" of the latest news in the Warren case.

The President looked up from the sheaf of papers he held. He was manifestly displeased by the interruption, although it is not unusual for the press association men to "beat it to the nearest telephone" with an important item of news before a Presidential "conference" is concluded.

"If those participating in the conference do not care to remain until it is concluded we may as well conclude it now," was the burden of the President's rebuke.

The correspondents grouped closely around the President's desk were taken by surprise.

Charles S. Groves, veteran correspondent of the Boston Globe, whose relations with Mr. Coolidge are intimate, rose to the occasion.

He explained to the President the press association men meant no discourtesy but were merely performing a duty they were trained to perform.

Members of the White House Association later held an informal meeting in their press room to discuss the advisability of a rule that no correspondent should leave a Presidential "conference" until the President had signified it was at an end.

It was later decided that such a rule is unnecessary. George Durno, International News Service, president of the association, announced that the men will continue to leave the conference with flashes or bulletins, but more quietly and unobtrusively.

The White House correspondents are soon to take a trip on the Mayflower, down the Potomac. The President will be guest of honor on Saturday night at the annual banquet of the White House Correspondents' Association at the Mayflower Hotel, which promises to be the biggest gathering of the association ever held.

NEWSPAPERS AID PUBLIC HEALTH

Chicago Medical Congress Lauds Their Health Features

The newspaper was declared to be as important a factor as the pill bottle in maintaining public health, by speakers at the congress on medical education, public health and hospitals, holding a short session at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, recently under the direction of the American Medical Association.

City Health Commissioner Bundeson told of the service to the city's general health publicity brought, and how he obtained columns of space for his department and for health campaigns in the daily newspapers.

"The growth of the health column in newspapers is significant," he declared, mentioning the columns of Dr. Brady of the Chicago Daily News and Dr. Evans of the Chicago Tribune.

EMPLOYMENT ADS EVEN WITH 1924 RECORD

Quiet Business Reflected in Large City Newspapers' Help and Situations Wanted Columns

Employment conditions in the large cities are about the same as they were a year ago, according to comparative want ad statistics gathered from more than a score of newspapers. The table below reproduces the replies of these papers to telegrams, asking them for the lineage and number of situations wanted and help wanted advertisements published Sunday, March 15, 1925, and March 9 or 10, 1925, and the corresponding issues last year.

EXPANDS FINANCIAL SECTION

Changes Follow as Schneider Leaves New York Post for Sun

Important changes in the financial news departments of two New York newspapers will become effective after March 21, when Franz Schneider, Jr., leaves the New York Evening Post to become financial editor of the New York Sun.

Paul Willard Garrett, writer of "The Investor" column of the Evening Post, will become acting financial editor of that newspaper, Merritt Bond, managing editor, announced.

Mr. Garrett takes the place vacated by Mr. Schneider, which, according to a previous announcement was to be filled by Glenn Griswold, editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce. Mr. Griswold decided this week to retain his Chicago post.

"The Sun's financial section will be immediately enlarged," Mr. Schneider said. "Addition of a special Saturday financial section, completely reviewing business of the week, is under contemplation."

Mr. Schneider will take with him from the Post to the Sun Carlton A. Shively, assistant financial editor; Vincent Guy Sanborn, railroad editor, and Miss Kathlene McLaughlin, a member of the financial staff.

Mr. Bond said he would not be able to announce how these vacancies would be filled before next week.

In addition to financial editorship of the Sun, Mr. Schneider will continue to write his daily column "Business Today" and his weekly financial review. The financial charts, long a feature of the Post, will be added to the Sun's financial pages. On the Post Mr. Schneider developed a system of checking and rechecking stock and bond tables which resulted in an amazingly small number of errors and which he will put into operation in his new position. He was the Post's financial editor for five years.

Mr. Garrett who takes charge of the Post's financial department joined the newspaper in 1920. He is a graduate of Whitman College, and has an M. A. degree from Columbia University. During the war he was connected with the price section of the War Industries Board, Washington, D. C. Later he was associated with the American International Corporation, from which position he joined the Evening Post staff, developing the investment column, which runs under the heading "The Investor."

FUTURE EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS EXCHANGE IDEAS

Some of the five hundred High School girls and boys from various cities in the East, who took part in the great Interstate Publication Contest held at Columbia University. Each contestant entered some bit of writing or editorial matter, and the judges presented prizes to those considered most worthy.

Daily Cited for Contempt

Allen T. Spivey, publisher, a Leslie Boling, city editor, W. Ray Loomis, business manager and Howard Melson, a reporter for the East St. Louis (Ill.) Journal have been cited for contempt of court by County Judge W. R. Weber of Belleville. The hearing is set for March 21. Judge Weber contends that a statement in a story of the hearing of an election contest is a reflection on him.

Changes on Pittsburgh Press

T. R. Williams, formerly business manager of the Pittsburgh Press, has taken a special assignment for the Scripps-Howard newspapers for an indefinite period. Owen M. Phillips, formerly business manager of the Youngstown (O.) Telegram, is functioning as business manager of the Press during the period of Mr. Williams' absence.

Printers Mfg. Company Moves

The general sales offices of the Printers Manufacturing Company have been moved from Minneapolis to 417 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

March 24—Interstate Circulation Managers Assn., annual convention, Altoona, Pa.

March 25—Agricultural Publishers' Assn., convention, Chicago.

March 26—Florida Press Assn., first journalism week, University of Florida, Gainesville, Fla.

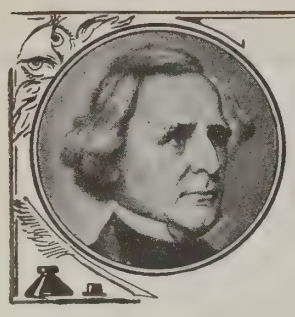
April 10-11—Southern Illinois Editorial Assn., Belleville.

April 11—Eastern Oklahoma Publishers Assn., annual meeting.

April 17—Pacific Slope Newspaper Conference, Portland, Ore.

April 25—Georgia Press Assn., Savannah, Ga.

NEWSPAPER FIGURES THAT REFLECT STATE OF EMPLOYMENT MARKET



HELP WANTED

Paper	Sunday, March 15–16 —1925— Lineage	No. Ads.	—1924— Lineage	No. Ads.	March 9–10 —1925— Lineage	No. Ads.	—1924— Lineage	No. Ads.
New York World	16,639	3,138	16,823	3,170	11,512	2,813	11,617	2,828
New York Times	10,033	1,209	10,092	1,145	1,944	243	1,988	252
Chicago Daily News*	2,224	423	2,530	521	2,298	426	2,813	518
Chicago Tribune	10,400	1,348	10,475	1,365	3,850	481	4,177	543
Philadelphia Inquirer	7,195	1,272	5,910	1,180	3,180	851	2,745	687
Detroit Free Press	5,810	569	5,530	564	2,282	224	2,142	247
Los Angeles Examiner	4,392	713	5,298	816	2,069	322	2,928	448
Los Angeles Times	....	....	....	....	2,436	333	2,394	341
San Francisco Examiner	3,711	681	3,778	686	1,108	243	1,267	280
Oakland Tribune	....	....	....	....	450	85	408	70
Portland Oregonian	2,128	338	2,576	392	756	112	924	150
Cleveland Plain Dealer	5,040	604	5,166	719	1,960	288	1,876	337
Boston Globe	4,608	640	5,142	722	1,374	190	1,364	218
Baltimore Sun	3,300	409	2,925	451	1,490	279	1,540	262
Rochester Dem. & Chronicle	2,322	393	2,494	412	913	172	763	163
Birmingham News	1,738	243	1,862	243	246	37	354	41
Newark News*	2,357	383	2,407	398	2,278	373	2,093	320
New Orleans Times-Picayune	2,697	434	2,598	437	732	133	768	153
Minneapolis Tribune	2,348	417	2,427	402	831	189	985	213

SITUATIONS WANTED

Paper	Sunday, March 15–16 —1925— Lineage	No. Ads.	—1924— Lineage	No. Ads.	March 9–10 —1925— Lineage	No. Ads.	—1924— Lineage	No. Ads.
New York World	5,001	1,515	5,301	1,554	3,339	1,016	3,270	910
New York Times	4,977	1,152	5,620	1,151	1,351	333	1,353	319
Chicago Daily News*	327	121	301	118	250	91	211	74
Chicago Tribune	1,582	379	1,735	429	803	243	670	170
Philadelphia Inquirer	1,425	491	1,235	394	615	216	540	187
Detroit Free Press	266	66	224	54	126	35	84	24
Los Angeles Examiner	635	240	722	267	433	180	380	142
Los Angeles Times	....	....	....	....	1,008	322	1,050	297
San Francisco Examiner	1,073	364	945	312	297	112	352	125
Oakland Tribune	....	....	....	....	255	78	270	80
Portland Oregonian	1,260	315	1,330	341	504	137	546	152
Cleveland Plain Dealer	644	195	658	188	336	107	378	117
Boston Globe	1,380	286	1,350	212	245	37	260	44
Baltimore Sun	670	216	630	197	485	166	420	138
Rochester Dem. & Chronicle	927	195	843	172	248	54	187	36
Birmingham News	119	24	127	24	49	10	44	8
Newark News*	282	65	285	63	314	65	292	64
New Orleans Times-Picayune	699	199	712	214	334	88	360	102
Minneapolis Tribune	561	153	852	251	191	73	289	97

*No Sunday edition. Figures in Sunday columns are those for the preceding Saturdays. Oakland Tribune and Los Angeles Times did not supply figures for Sunday, March 16, 1924.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

Mr. Chambers a few days later reported an Orangemen's picnic at Elm Park. There was a riot; a man was killed, and many injured. This was his first big "scoop." Hurrying to the office he wrote a four column story and was congratulated on all sides. For more than 30 years he held the record as the only reporter who had interviewed John D. Rockefeller.

Mr. Bennett always had his eyes open watching for talent, and in 1873 made a very liberal offer to young Chambers, which he accepted. Chambers had just returned from having had himself committed to Bloomingdale Asylum as a patient, and wrote a thrilling account for the Tribune of the horrors he had witnessed therein. The Herald sent him to locate the source of the Mississippi River, which he discovered to be Elk Lake. His letters describing the expedition and his great achievement appeared in the Herald, illustrated with maps of the region. He was the Herald's correspondent in Cuba during the "Virginius" troubles, served as European correspondent, and was sent to Spain during the Carlist War. In 1876, Mr. Chambers was made city editor of the Herald, with Mr. Meighan, night city editor, during which period the latter distinguished himself by leaving the desk to hurry to Brooklyn by ferry, to report the terrible Brooklyn Theatre fire; returning after midnight and writing a two column story for that morning's paper, illustrating what active reporters did in those days, when there were no telephones, and few telegraph lines.

Mr. Chambers was subsequently appointed foreign editor, and Mr. Meighan began his long occupancy of the city editor's chair.

In 1880, Chambers was sent to Philadelphia as resident correspondent, and in the course of the performance of his duties unfortunately libelled Senator McPherson and was fined $1,000, which the Herald paid. He was Washington correspondent for a time, and was recalled to the New York office late in 1885, Mr. Bennett having him in mind for a higher post. In this connection it may be recalled that, among the many apocryphal stories told about Mr. Bennett, was one related by Mr. Leo Redding in his article on him in Everybody's Magazine, in which Bennett was held up to ridicule in a supposed conversation with Henry Watterson on board an ocean liner as she arrived at Quarantine, by having said that the first Herald reporter over the side would be made managing editor. The first one to reach the deck happened to be Julius Chambers, and he thus was supposed to have accidentally got the job.

Now the facts are, that when Maurice M. Minton wearied of the thankless task of holding down the editorial chair, Mr. Bennett at once spoke of Chambers as his successor, and the true story of his selection is as follows:

Summoning Chambers to his private office, Mr. Bennett said:

"It is now three o'clock. As an evidence of my appreciation of your excellent work at Washington and elsewhere, I request you to take the managing editor's desk at 4 o'clock."

Chambers, with one of his hearty laughs, said:

"Thanks, Sir; I'll run out and get a bite and be on the new job at 4 precisely;" and that was all.

Mr. Minton, who was well qualified for the position, was made a member of the dramatic staff, and in October, 1887, became the Herald's dramatic editor.

Chambers was a veritable "human dynamo;" in spite of long hours; constant mental strain; and interruptions of every sort, he kept up with his work and was the most cheerful man in the building, greeting his associates with a pleasant, "Good Morning," as he arrived, and affording a striking example to all of devotion to duty. The Herald prospered under his editorial management; the circulation lost during the newsdealers' war was more than doubled, and on certain Sundays, exceeded 190,000.

Mr. Bennett, busy with his plans for a daily paper in Paris, was in Europe most of the time, depending on his editor more than usual for wise guidance of the Herald, and his confidence in Chambers' good judgment was fully justified.

Founding of the Paris Herald

Mr. Bennett had long contemplated the starting of a daily newspaper in Paris, but it was not until October 4, 1887, that the first issue of the "European Edition of the Herald" appeared, under the skilled supervision of Mr. Chambers, who, with others had been called from New York to take temporary charge of the infant sheet, and organize its editorial and mechanical departments.

The Herald had had no easy task in protecting its special cable despatches from news pirates. It did so at great expense in the courts, and one of the reasons for the starting of the Paris Herald was to have a means of publication for special cablegrams which had been freely appropriated abroad from the Herald without credit. Six members of the New York Herald staff were called to Paris to put the infant paper "on its legs" as Chambers said, and included Mr. John Henderson, the skilled foreman of the composing room, and who was afterward promoted to be the night editor of the New York Herald, and who held that responsible post for years.

While Chambers was absent in Paris, W. J. C. Meighan was appointed acting managing editor, continuing in charge until the return of Mr. Chambers on Dec. 16, 1887.

An amusing incident in connection with the first issue of the Paris Herald, was the despatch from the joint staff, dated from "Bureau de Paris, 49 Avenue de L'Opera," and sent to the London office:

"Dear Mr. ——,

The wire is now working, but not very well. Felicitations. Now let her go!

(Signed)

Barnard, Meltzer, Henderson, Ives, Wyles, Bishop and Chambers."

A second despatch as received in London was an unintelligible jargon of letters and phrases, such as "N, U, Gu, Ru, &c."

The editor in the New York Office, commenting on the disappointing mishap, said:

"It is charitably supposed that in the 'enthuse' of the moment, the six wise men from Gotham, and the one from the 'Hub' tried to get on the wire simultaneously with their respective congratulations. Apparently they all succeeded. It has been ascertained that the name of the telegraph operator is not Ignatius Donnelly, for 'English as she is wired' in the above fashion has no cipher significance."

The "European Edition's" first issue did not appear as "Volume 1; Number 1"; on the contrary, it made its initial bow, captioned:

"New York Herald: European Edition. — Whole Number, 18670." (The New York edition's total issues to date.)

At the head of the editorial column it was announced that:

"The New York Herald is published in New York and Paris every day in the year. The European Edition is sold at 10 centimes in Paris, and at 15 centimes elsewhere."

The paper consisted of four pages, typographically attractive with its large type and handsome head lines. It carried long cables from the New York office and specials from London, Rome and Friedrichsruh. Germany; while the financial news from Chapel Court, London, and Wall street was very complete.

On page two, columns of "Personal Intelligence" were featured, while sporting news largely filled page three. Page four was entirely filled with advertisements.

The first intimation that it was a newly started paper came on Oct. 7, when under the head of "What Paris Says," it was stated that "A correspondent calls our attention to two or three typographical errors that have crept into our columns during the past few days. We had casually noticed them ourselves, sadly, yet with calm resignation.

"We have parted with the gentlemanly compositor who would insist on taking his p's out of the y box—parted with entire good feeling on both sides, while the humorist who discovered the man was 'frequently an Irishman,' has mysteriously disappeared. However, as our readers must know, a newly organized office is like a new machine of any kind. It does not run smoothly at first but soon will."

(To be continued next week)

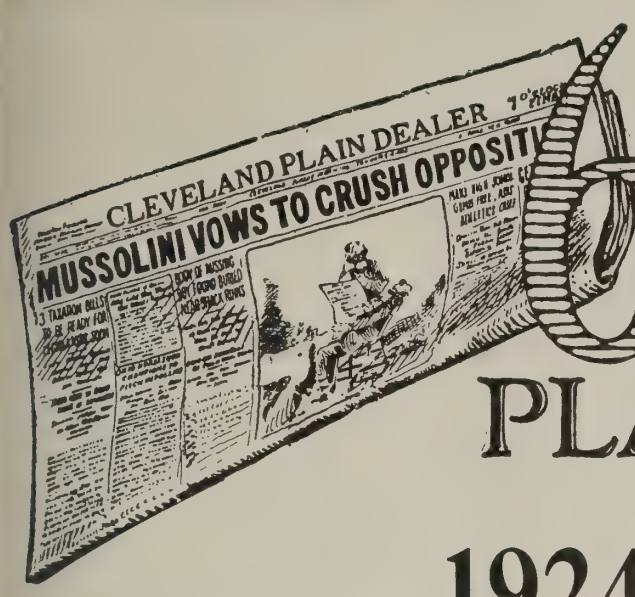
CORRESPONDENTS HOLD REUNION



Pennsylvania Legislative Writers Celebrate 30th Anniversary

Pennsylvania Legislative Correspondents Association observed its 30th anniversary with a reunion dinner at Harrisburg, Pa., March 11.

One of its organizers, Colonel Henry Hall, a veteran Washington correspondent, who "covered" the Legislature 30 years ago, and for two sessions sat as a member of the House, attended the dinner. Other men who were active here as writers 15 and 20 years ago who came back to reminisce with the younger men were Alexander P. Moore, Ambassador to Spain and one-time reporter for and later publisher of the Pittsburgh Leader; David E. Smiley, editor-in-chief of the Philadelphia Public Ledger; John F. Short, Clearfield Republican; John P. Reitinger, for years Associated Press correspondent in the Senate; Howard H. Derr, Philadelphia Record; Walter J. Christy, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times; Charles E. Dorworth, of Bellefonte, and George F. Holmes, now County Commissioner of Philadelphia; Colonel George Nox McCain, Philadelphia Public Ledger, and George J. Brennen, Philadelphia Inquirer.

Governor Pinchot and other state officials were among the guests.

A. Boyd Hamilton, of the Harrisburg Telegraph, president of the association, presided.

60% used The Cleveland PLAIN DEALER Alone!

1924 was a "hard pull" year—an excellent period in which to test the strength (or weakness) of advertising mediums.

National advertisers who carefully deliberated on markets and media staked more than 8,000,000 lines on Cleveland newspapers in Northern Ohio.

Over 4,000,000 lines of this went to the Cleveland Plain Dealer ALONE.

These advertisers made no mistake!

Reader-acceptance of a great newspaper—one of the greatest in the country and by far the greatest in the prosperous Northern Ohio market—was directly reflected by advertiser-acceptance.

The Plain Dealer has the BUYERS

1586 national advertisers believe that the Plain Dealer has the BUYERS; they were responsible for 51% of the total national lineage in Cleveland newspapers in 1924 appearing in the Plain Dealer ALONE.

965 of these advertisers used no other Cleveland newspaper!

The Cleveland Plain Dealer

in Cleveland and Northern Ohio—ONE Medium ALONE—One Cost Will sell it

J. B. WOODWARD
110 E. 42nd St.,
New York

WOODWARD & KELLY
350 N. Mich. Ave., Chicago
Fine Arts Bldg., Detroit

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
Times Building
Los Angeles, Cal.

R. J. BIDWELL CO.
742 Market Street
San Francisco, Cal.

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

HARRIS M. CRIST—Willing to try new paths.

FRESHNESS and novelty—newspaper managing editors seek to see the action behind these words reflected in their columns continually, else what price their positions?

"But they far too frequently look in the wrong places," said Harris M. Crist, manging editor of the Brooklyn Eagle to the writer this week.

"News agencies and syndicates can fill up any newspaper if the management is content with their brand of novelty and freshness," he explained.

"In many instances, indeed, these agencies have made a lot of managers feel that great individual enterprise is no longer essential. The newspapers managed on this basis, however, reflect a stodgy policy and become highly standardized.

"The managing editor who realizes there is just as much opportunity now for individual effort, enterprise, and for the trial of new ideas as ever before, will present a paper which has real freshness and is crammed with novelties, as well as the news."

"But," I countered, just for argument's sake, "I am told there is a sorry tale of budgets, which makes for low salaries in local editorial rooms—a story that stifles interest and kills novel stories, although the idea was first lusty."

Mr. Crist was quick in answer.

"A person clever enough to produce a new idea," he said, "will be clever enough to find a man to make it effective. No bright practical idea has ever languished and died for lack of someone to exploit it."

I asked if perhaps it wasn't rather difficult to be continually fresh and novel and still keep the newspaper free from a "yellow" tint. His answer was expected and brief. Merely:

"It is not necessary to be 'yellow' to be entertaining."

And as proof one need not talk further with Mr. Crist but rather talk to his newspaper.

The Eagle cannot be called yellow by the farthest stretch of imagination, and is entertaining, it is always putting on new novelties, and its pages quite frequently crackle with freshness.

It wasn't long ago that the Gutzom Borglum controversy was being poured into newspaper offices by wire services. Mr. Crist sent a staff reporter down to Atlanta, and as a result the Eagle featured a new and entertaining angle on the tiff.

The Eagle recently conducted a searching crusade showing up the laxity of the parole law which was crowded with local interest.

The Mayor of New York lives in Brooklyn and Brooklyn wants more subways. For several months now the Eagle has been running interviews with the Mayor's neighbors telling how much they need better transit facilities.

In these ways the newspaper talks for Mr. Crist. But the managing editor doesn't put his feet up on his desk in self satisfied content. He goes over his paper with a fine toothed comb each day seeking tiny refinements.

"There is scarcely a story that can't be improved," he said. "One notable method of improvement is the addition of a line of personal description of the chief character involved.

"Reporters have become so habituated to 'phoning in boiled-down stories that they forget readers can be greatly amused by knowing if the applicant for divorce has bobbed hair or a wig, or if the prosecuting attorney is fat, thin, or wears big black mustachios.

"Side lights like these make newspaper stories human; give color and interest to them.

"Just as a merchant to be successful in bonds or in biscuits, must constantly apply himself, so a newspaper man must be constantly on the alert, trying to determine what the public is interested in. He must have a willingness to make changes, a willingness to walk along new paths."

The story Mr. Crist tells of how he entered newspaper work shows his early willingness to walk along new paths. In 1893 he was earning $9 a week as office boy for a Washington patent attorney. He saw an ad in the "Want" columns of the Washinton Star, calling for a boy to work in the Brooklyn Eagle Bureau. He applied for the job, was offered $8 a week and accepted.

"I didn't like the idea of going backward in my progress through the world," Mr. Crist explained. "But knew there was a charm about newspaper work. And anyway I wanted a change."

Mr. Crist has remained with the Eagle the 32 years since, and his progress has always been upwards.

He is now one of the few managing editors in the country, who, in addition to his editorial position is an officer in the publishing company. He is treasurer of the Eagle.

MOST of the far-sighted publishers who were quick to recognize the economies of the Associated Press in its infancy have again shown their alertness by obtaining the exclusive rights in their respective cities to the Consolidated Press—the first service designed to avoid duplication and to furnish instead a distinct supplement to "spot" news reports.

The Consolidated Press Assn.

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

Tornado Pictures by Wire

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company sent remarkable tornado pictures by wire from Chicago to New York, March 19. The New York World using the Bellin method received telegraph pictures from St. Louis the same day.

PRESS SPEEDS SUCCOR TO TORNADO AREA

Chicago Herald Examiner Loads Special Train With Hospital Personnel—Funds of $200,000 Raised by Newspapers

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CHICAGO, March 19.—While telegraph messages were still coming to Chicago with pathetic stories of distress in the tornado stricken regions of Southern Illinois, Indiana and Missouri. A relief train, sponsored by the Chicago Herald and Examiner, was dispatched with hundreds of doctors and nurses aboard and carrying large quantities of medical and surgical supplies, food and clothing.

When the extent of the disaster was realized, the Herald and Examiner immediately got in touch with President Charles H. Markham of the Illinois Central Railroad, the only road to the stricken country, and explained the situation.

While this arrangement was being made broadcasters of two of the largest stations in Chicago KYW and WQJ and WTAS, Elgin abandoned their musical programs and began to call for volunteer workers among doctors and nurses, to leave within two hours on the special train. Until sufficient volunteers had responded to fill the train, the Herald and Examiner continued the broadcasting.

Relief funds were immediately organized by the Chicago newspapers. The Tribune, Herald and Examiner, Daily News, Daily Journal, Evening American and Evening Post received pledges of $200,000 the morning after the disaster.

Don't Make Two Bites of a Cherry

To split a newspaper advertising schedule into two, three or four parts when one newspaper can carry the message at a fraction of the cost to the entire audience you desire to reach, is worse than making two bites of a cherry.

There's the Cincinnati market for example,—141,000 families living within the city circulation area of the local newspapers. Both Cincinnati morning newspapers and the second evening paper reach some of these families. But the Times-Star with a local circulation of 134,173 copies goes into every native, white household in this community six days every week. Its remaining 21,000 circulation is extra.

There was a time when most of the local advertisers in Cincinnati split their schedule more or less evenly among the Cincinnati newspapers. There was a time when national advertisers in this market made two, three or four bites of their advertising cherries. But this condition is changing fast.

In 1924, with a total of 12,026,469 lines af display advertising the Times-Star showed a net gain of 316,077 lines over the preceding year. The three other Cincinnati newspapers showed a net loss of 1,242,430 lines from the 1923 record.

Of all the Cincinnati newspapers the Times-Star alone made a consistent, uniform increase in local and in national display advertising, day by day. This increase in very considerable degree was the result of the efforts of many advertisers to concentrate in one thoroughly efficient medium. Nearly two hundred national advertisers are using the Times-Star exclusively in this market.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

The Star Covers The National Capital—Completely

The Star with its circulation of 101,868 Evening and 107,268 Sunday gives advertisers almost one hundred per cent. coverage actually; and actually one hundred per cent. of efficiency in a community where there are the resources to indulge personal taste and inclination in both commodities and luxuries.

You need only ONE medium—for THE STAR will place your message squarely before the Washington public.

The Evening Star.
WITH SUNDAY MORNING EDITION
WASHINGTON, D. C.

NEW YORK OFFICE
Dan A. Carroll
110 E. 42nd Street

CHICAGO OFFICE
J. E. Lutz
Tower Building

EDITORS, CIRCULATORS, ADVERTISING MEN ATTEND OREGON CONFERENCE

Two Hundred Delegates at 7th Annual Meeting, Eugene, Ore. —G. K. Aiken Heads State Editors—Circulators Elect W. D. Lyness President

(Special to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

WITH more than 200 delegates present the Seventh Annual Oregon Newspaper Conference held at Eugene, Friday and Saturday of last week under auspices of the University of Oregon School of Journalism was the most successful meeting in the history of the gatherings.

W. D. LYNESS

The Conference was featured this year by the annual convention of the Pacific Northwest Circulation Managers Association and addressed by Walter Burn of San Francisco, Pacific Coast manager, advertising bureau, American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and John Henry Nash, San Francisco, one of the foremost of American Printers.

Editors and Publishers of daily and weekly newspapers of trade and class journals, heads of news services, advertising men, printers and free lance writers attended. In addition to the Circulation Managers Association the following groups met on the University campus: the Oregon State Editorial Association; Trade and Class Journal Association of Oregon; Ben Franklin Club of the Williamette Valley; Oregon members of the Associated Press and clients of the United Press.

These groups held several joint sessions with the editors. An important action of the Conference was the appointment of a committee to co-operate with a similar group from the State Editorial Association to agree upon a plan for the employment of an executive field secretary, to outline his duties, and to finance such an officer.

The delegates agreed upon July 16 and 17 as the dates for the annual meeting of the State Editorial Association at Grant's Pass. The report on the field secretary will be made at that time.

George K. Aiken, publisher of the Ontario Argus succeeded Edgar McDaniel, publisher of the North Bend Coos Bay Harbor, as Conference president; George S. Turnbull, University of Oregon professor of journalism was named secretary. The new and retiring presidents come from geographical extremes of the state. Aiken drove 550 miles from Ontario near the Idaho line to come to the Conference.

The new president is a native of Aberdeen, Scotland, coming to America 37 years ago. He is a graduate of Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn., and engaged in newspaper work on the Pine County Courier, the Forest Lake Enterprise and the St. Paul Pioneer Press in Minnesota before coming west. Before becoming publisher of the Argus he served on three Washington state newspapers, the Tacoma Ledger, the Pasco Progress and the Cascade Miner.

Felicitations on the success of the Oregon conference were received by wire from O. H. Woody, Okanogan, Wash., president of the Washington State Press Association who complimented the Oregon and Washington schools of journalism for their services to the press of the two states.

W. D. Lyness, circulation manager of the Tacoma News-Tribune was elected president for the ensuing year and Longview, Wash., was selected as the next meeting place by the Pacific Northwest Circulation Managers' Association. Mr. Lyness succeeds C. H. Breed, circulation manager of the Spokane Spokesman Review. Other officers elected were: J. F. Howard, Albany (Ore.) Democrat, vice-president; Ellis B. Hall, Centralia (Wash.) Chronicle, secretary-treasurer, and Frank L. Garrison, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, and E. A. McKee, Longview (Wash.) News, directors.

The Longview meeting will be held in April of next year. By action of the Association an annual meeting was substituted for semi-annual gatherings. One of the features of the program was a joint meeting at which circulation managers and editors discussed the question "Editorial and Circulation Problems, What the Circulation Men Have Discovered About Newspaper Readers".

Mr. Lyness and David H. Smith, the Oregon Portland Journal spoke on behalf of the circulation managers and A. E. Voorhies, Grant's Pass Courier, George K. Aiken, Ontario Argus and Paul R. Kelty, Eugene Guard for the editors.

Mr. Aiken declared a stable and prosperous community makes circulation and collections easier than a community with a population that changes constantly because of industrial or other conditions. A newspaper, he said, should have a direct interest in stabilized conditions.

More than twenty subjects were discussed in the sessions of the circulation managers including the following: "Independent Carriers versus Salaried Carriers;" "the Value of Features;" "the Serial Story as a Circulation Builder;" "How to Overcome the Annual Summer Slump in Sunday Sales;" "How to Increase Mail Circulation in Rural Districts;" "The Best Methods of House to House Canvass;" "Collections;" "Circular Letters."

Mr. Nash, San Francisco printer, was one of the outstanding figures at this year's Conference. He spoke for an hour and a half Saturday morning on "Printing As a Fine Art and the Making of Fine Books" and the delegates clamored for more. Editors and Publishers who do not run job shops were as keenly interested as the printer editors. Mr. Nash who is one of the most successful commercial printers in America as well as a leader in beautiful work, displayed rare books and examples of printing valued at more than $25,000 including "Eusebius" the first book printed in roman types, the work of Jensen in Venice in 1470; "Hypertomachia Poliphili" printed by Al Dus Manutius in 1499; the Nuremberg Chronicle, printed in 1493 and "Two Odes by Mr. Gray" the work of Horace Walpole's Strawberry Hill Press 1757.

Advertising problems were discussed by Mr. Burn and Ralph E. Morrison, manager of the Western Farmer, Portland, and formerly with the Kansas City Star.

"In nearly every city which I have visited I find a local manufacturer shipping much of his merchandise hundreds and thousands of miles away," said Mr. Burn "and goods shipped into the town from a competitor equally distant being sold in the very shadow of the local man's factory. This is not only one of the biggest factors in economic waste but it is also a striking example of neglected opportunity. If these manufacturers can be shown with the help of the newspapers that there is a profitable business waiting for them in their own community, newspaper advertising will grow, our Pacific Coast manufacturers will reduce selling costs, and economies will result by which the ultimate consumer will benefit."

Mr. Morrison discussed the group plan of obtaining foreign advertising. He argued that a representative of a group of Oregon newspapers, each with leadership in a particular territory, would command much more attention from the California and Eastern advertising agency and space buyer than the single newspaper could win.

Gordon J. Taylor of the Molalla Pioneer, who represented Oregon newspapers at the legislature, declared that legislative and voter's pamphlets issued by the state preceding an election are costing the commonwealth $25,000 yearly. A bill sponsored by the State Editorial Association to abolish those pamphlets failed at the recent session of the legislature.

Officers of the Trade and Class Journal Association elected were: Mr. Morrison, president; Jerrold Owen, Pacific Legion, vice-president; W. C. Kaley, Oregon Voter, secretary-treasurer, and Stephen Hart, Commercial Review, and Curtis L. Beach, Pacific Northwest Hotel News, trustees.

Conference speakers included: E. A. Koen, Oregon City Banner-Courier; A. E. Voorhies, Grants Pass Courier; Earl C. Brownlee, Forest Grove News-Times; George E. Aiken, Ontario Argus; Paul R. Kelly, Eugene Guard; B. W. Bates, Roseburg News Review; Arne Rae, Tillamook Herald; Henry R. Payek, Portland; N. J. Levinson, Portland Telegram; Horace E. Thomas, Portland Oregonian; Fred T. Mellinger, Tillamook Herald; W. Arthur Steele, Clatskanie Chief, and Frank Jenkins, Eugene Register.

Staff Gives Radio Show

Editors and reporters of the Springfield (Mass.) Union staff, broadcast a minstrel show Wednesday night, March 18, through Station WBZ, Springfield The show was prepared and rehearsed entirely for the radio audience and was the first of its kind to be broadcast by the Springfield studio. The entire book of the show was written in the "office," the principal contributors being William Hatch, assignment editor; Roger Holden, special writer, and John Skinner, veteran reporter.

Daily Discontinues Rotogravure

The Brooklyn Standard-Union has discontinued its Sunday rotogravure section.

Norwegian Newsprint

Prompt shipments Inquiries solicited

NORWEGIAN PAPER MILLS AGENCY, INC.

33 West 42nd Street New York City

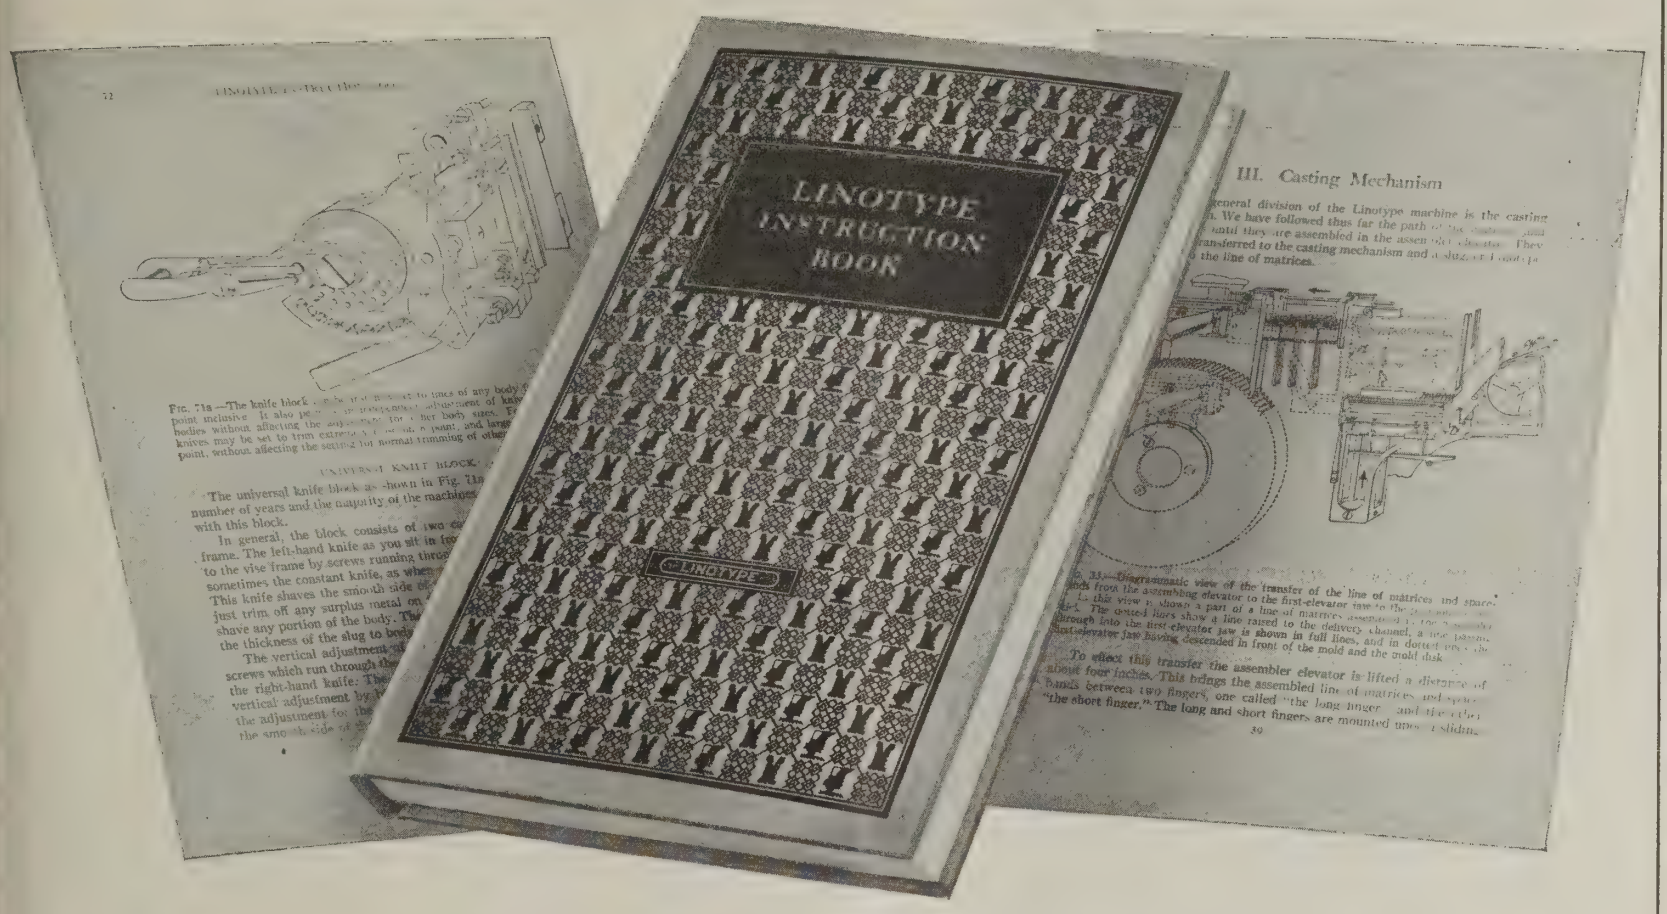
Telephone Penn. 7443



The Times Stands First

Extracts from address by Professor G. B. Hotchkiss of New York University

WE USE THE NEW YORK TIMES more than any other newspaper because results have justified it. The superior quality of The Times for our purposes has been proved by all the available evidence. * * * It is strong for our use because it is solid; it is instructive; it is constructive. It does not run to fads.

* * * *

It is not surprising that The Times stands first with our students. * * * Their interest in education and in reading matter is for the solid things; so it is natural that The Times would be the best medium for reaching them. Then, too, in advertising such as ours it is natural that readers should look to the newspaper that gives them the greatest amount of such information. In other words, the strength of the educational section in The Times and the amount of educational advertising provide a receptive background.

Watch for Your Copy

OF THE

Linotype Instruction Book

[NOW ON THE PRESS]

231 PAGES · 16 CHAPTERS
MORE THAN 150 ILLUSTRATIONS
COMPLETE INDEX

Prepared by the Engineering Staff of the Linotype Company for the profit of all who own or operate Linotypes. Copies will be distributed to all Linotype-equipped plants

Mergenthaler Linotype Company

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

520.25.3-F

Composed on the LINOTYPE in the Caslon Old Face Series except for the hand-set title line

"DRESS WELL" MOTIF BEING STRESSED IN SPRING APPEALS TO MEN

Mallory Hats, Hart, Schaffner & Marx and Shoe Companies Spending Large Sums in Newspapers—Local Merchants Aiding "Dress Well" Drive

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

J. P. MORGAN once said, "I never look a man up; I look him over."

A huge volume of newspaper space this spring, especially during the several weeks ahead of Easter on April 12, will be published by manufacturers and retailers to encourage the public to dress well.

The women have been much more easy to win over to buy the latest styles of all kinds of apparel than the men, but the mere males gradually are succumbing, and this spring season should respond with more money than previously, due to a number of well directed activities.

One of the first spring "dress well" advertisers to go after the business with a liberal newspaper appropriation is the maker of Mallory Hats, termed "The hats of unexampled smartness—at the head for over one hundred years". The advertising meets low-price chain-store competition (which also uses plenty of newspaper lineage) by coming out in the open as follows:

"The important thing about your hat isn't the sum it costs. It's the something you get—a Mallory.

"A cheap hat fools nobody but the wearer, It doesn't look anything like a fine hat to begin with, and even if it did, it couldn't keep it up. Put seven dollars into a Mallory Hat this spring. Know the glow and thrill of wearing a hat that styles your whole appearance, for your hat is the only article of dress that is on the observer's direct level of vision. Wear a fashionably formed, finely felted luxuriously lined Mallory Hat, and enjoy the secret approbation of yourself; the open admiration of others. And—a Mallory Hat is cheaper than a cheap hat. It is not the castaway purchase of a few weeks, but the cherished possession of a season."

Considerable tie-up space is being bought by retailers who carry Mallory Hats.

After giving the high spots of styles and colors for spring, Hart, Schaffner & Marx add, "The few dollars more you pay for such quality gives you $10 to $20 more service. The way to save is to find the Hart, Schaffner & Marx label." It is estimated that upwards of $500,000 a year is being spent for space about these clothes in the newspapers, presumably mostly by the retailers since the company offers a comprehensive mat service. Other manufacturers are making better advertisers of the dealers by furnishing advertising material prepared by the country's leading advertising brains.

A sensational sale is reported to have followed the newspaper advertising of Knit-tex Coats.

Stacy-Adams Company of Brockton, Mass., makers of men's fine shoes retailing from $12.50 to $16, after 49 years of silence last year adopted a policy of national newspaper advertising in rotogravure sections. This spring the company is continuing this policy, which has met with an excellent response from its trade.

Individual stores in many instances are producing a high grade of spring copy to raise the level of men's dress. Much can be done through special pages, syndicated features and co-operative advertising to foster this purpose and to create further business for the newspaper.

One of the country's most successful co-operative campaigns has been that of the Pennsylvania Shoe Retailers' Association, of which Lee Reineberg of York, Pa. is president. This campaign has been in effect two years. C. F. Harwood said about it:

"The educational campaign of this association at a cost of $500 for copy and art has a four-fold purpose. It was designed and written to educate the public to wear better footwear, more footwear, and to purchase from a reliable shoe merchant.

"Let me take the first reason: To educate the public to wear better footwear. Throughout the copy is mentioned the fact that it is cheaper in the long run to buy better footwear, that good footwear outlasts and outlooks cheaper footwear. The second and third reasons dovetail rather closely,—to wear more footwear and to wear correct footwear, for by wearing correct footwear they naturally will wear more footwear, in addition to the fact that two pairs of shoes worn alternately will outwear three pairs worn consecutively."

Each advertisement measures 14 inches. Thus, if there are 14 members of the association in the town, the cost at a rate of $1 per inch is only one dollar apiece. The stores carry the association emblem in their windows. Mats or electros are furnished by the association. At the association's recent convention it was decided to extend this service to other merchants on the Atlantic coast in New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia, but the idea is one which is applicable by newspapers everywhere in collaboration with local merchants.

The most ambitious movement to raise standards of attire is the "Dress Well and Succeed" campaign which is nurtured by the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers, 223 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill., with Charles E. Wry as executive director.

The association has arranged with a prominent writer on men's fashions to furnish a weekly article, which may be printed as a feature or split into six daily "takes", for publication by one newspaper in a city on the usual syndicate basis, the cost based upon population. The material is in mat form.

The organization furnishes without charge copy for five illustrated full page advertisements in detail outlining the "dress well" idea as applied to hats, collars and ties, gloves, shoes, hosiery, shirts and other dress accessories and 24 quarter-page institutional advertisements on the value of dressing correctly. The full page copy covers spring opening, straw hat opening, fall opening, overcoats, formal apparel and Christmas copy. The institutional copy four columns by ten inches is recommended for release the first week in the month. The slogan, "Dress well and succeed", is used continually.

Contract forms are furnished for signing up the local dealers.

The first step is declared to be to call a meeting of the members of the state and National Retail Clothiers and Furnishers Associations. At this meeting the members are expected to decide whether the campaign will be limited to members or other retailers invited to join in. The latter course is advised. It is suggested a committee of local dealers work with the newspaper in lining up supporters of the campaign. Local clubs, such as Rotary, are interested.

It is the hope of the association that "Dress well and succeed" will become as powerful a slogan as "Say it with flowers". Already merchants in a number of cities have taken up the idea and several manufacturers also have made it the keynote of campaigns.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER in previous issues has told the story of what a group of Texas retailers did to raise standards of dress and of how a California association of master tailors stirred up interest in custom tailoring with well worked out newspaper campaigns. It is to be noted that Hart, Schaffner & Marx with $500,000 and B. Kuppenheimer with $150,000 are the only two men's apparel national advertisers who appear on the American Newspaper Publishers Association list of 1923 great users of newspaper space.

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD

Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.

Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:

H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco. Calif.

AD CAMPAIGN FOR MOVIES

Warner Bros. Will Spend $500,000, Principally in Newspapers

Preliminary plans for a nation-wide $500,000 newspaper campaign by Warner Brothers Inc., moving picture concern, were announced this week exclusively to EDITOR & PUBLISHER by W. L. Barker, advertising manager.

Newspapers will be used principally although other media will not be neglected, Mr. Barker said. The campaign will get under way this coming summer.

"Every effort is being made to get a representative newspaper showing in every community in the United States," Mr. Barker declared. "We will use space ranging from full pages down to 14 inches on a single column.

"In other words we will strive to reach every moving picture fan in the country, working on the theory that the average fan reads one newspaper every day, a fan magazine, and one or two of the larger general magazines."

This year's half-million dollar appropriation constitutes a new high record for this concern. The last extensive national campaign carried on about a year and a half ago called for an expenditure of close to $400,000, according to Mr. Barker.

Blaine-Thompson, Cincinnati advertising agency, handles the Warner Brothers' account.

DAILIES TO MERGE

Rochester (Minn.) Bulletin and Post Record Will Consolidate March 30

The Rochester (Minn.) Daily Bulletin and the Rochester Daily Post and Record, will be consolidated with the issue of March 30, the two newspapers have announced. The name of the consolidated publication will be the Post-Bulletin.

Both newspapers were founded in 189[illegible] and have been published continuously since that time. The Post and Record has been owned in the Blakely family since it was established.

The principal stockholders of the new corporation will be C. W. Blakely of the Post and Record and G. S. Witherstine of the Bulletin.

Daily Mail Not in So. Carolina Merger

The Anderson (S. C.) Tribune, morning newspaper, was merged last week with the Anderson Independent Tribune and not with the Anderson Daily Mail evening paper, as reported in EDITOR & PUBLISHER. The Mail was not involved in the merger.

69 Years on Newspaper

Augustus C. Kessinger, president of the Rome (N. Y.) Sentinel on March 17, observed the 69th anniversary of his connection with that newspaper. He was 14 years old when he joined the paper.

Widow Directing Husband's Daily

Mrs. Harriett R. Pierce, wife of J. W. Pierce, late publisher of the Clinton (Ind.) Clintonian, assumed active charge of that daily this week. Mr. Pierce died March 2.

New Kansas Daily

F. A. Webster was to start publication of a new morning daily at Atwood, Kan. on March 16, to be called the Northwest Kansan. Associated Press service will be used.

Trying is Buying!

We do not ask you to buy Certified Dry Mats "sight unseen."

And while we take pride in the many good things publishers and stereotypers are saying about Certifieds and want you to know how others feel about our mats, we prefer that you try them for yourself.

That is why we make it simple for you to have demonstrated to yourself Certified QUALITY which enables publishers to get "wet mat" printing results with all the facility and economy of the cold process of stereotyping.

Try them; COMPARE them; and you'll buy them!

Samples cost you nothing—they are yours free of any charge or obligation. Write NOW!

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Ave. New York, N. Y.

MADE IN U.S.A. BY THE CERTIFIED DRY MATS ORIGINAL CLAUS IDEAL PROCESS

"Made in America to Insure Quality and Service"

(Reprinted from the New York Herald Tribune, March 19th, 1925)

A New and Great Community

A YEAR ago this morning The New York Herald and The New York Tribune were merged and one newspaper public of over 150,000 families met another newspaper public of over 130,000 families for the first time. A newspaper, for its faithful readers, is as intimate and important a habit as a street or a home. A newspaper public is in the truest sense of the word a community—a community of ideas, of principles, of loyalties. Uniting these newspapers was like attempting to merge a city the size of Washington with a city the size of Boston.

Such a shift had never been accomplished before. In every previous newspaper merger, only a fraction of circulation had been added after the first curiosity subsided. As our readers already know, The New York Herald Tribune has achieved the unparalleled success of retaining both publics entire. Indeed, they have already begun to invite their friends to join them—as the steadily growing circulation of the newspaper reveals.

We ask our readers to celebrate with us today the secure establishment of this great and growing community. We are confident that it has never been surpassed in intelligence, in resources, in energy. On this anniversary we pledge our constant effort to keep and deserve the unprecedented support that this community has given us.

The New York Herald Tribune

Net paid weekday circulation in excess of 270,000
Net paid Sunday circulation in excess of 300,000

SCIENTIFIC ROAD TO BETTER PRINTING FOUND IN RESEARCH LABORATORY

Application of Science to Testing Materials in Newspaper Making Proves Successful in Hearst Organization, Director Helfrich Claims—Money Saved by Standardization

John Helfrich in his laboratory

NEWSPAPER publishers are learning that scientific tests of their raw manufacturing materials and methods can help make the product better at a lower cost.

John Helfrich, recently named director of the Hearst Chemical Research Laboratories, New York, made this claim this week, when, in an interview with EDITOR & PUBLISHER, he maintained that application of science to the testing of materials in newspaper making had proved so successful after three years operation, that steps were now underway to enlarge the work of the laboratory for the development of large scale printing improvements, which will affect the entire industry.

"For three years laboratory work has been confined to the standardization of the various materials used in the making of Hearst newspapers, accomplishing considerable money and time saving," he said.

"The laboratory will continue to test and maintain the standards of these materials, the cost of which runs into millions of dollars annually.

"But now we are able to strike out into the creative field. Several new processes, notably time saving changes in photo-engraving, are being developed, the results of which we hope to announce shortly."

Housed on the top floor of the building used by the New York Mirror on the corner of Frankfort and Gold streets, the Chemical Research Laboratory is plainly a practical work room.

To this laboratory are brought all new purchases for composing rooms, photo-engraving departments, stereotyping departments, press rooms and circulation departments of Hearst newspapers to be tested to see if they meet standards demanded by practical experts. Newsprint, furnished by 12 different mills, is also tested and kept up to a standard.

Mr. Helfrich said he believed the establishment of similar laboratories would be of value to many American newspaper publishers and wondered why this scientific idea had not been widely followed.

"In many ways money can be saved by standardizing newspaper materials and developing new processes which will either improve the quality of printing, reduce the cost of manufacture, or reduce the time of operation," he maintained.

"Heads of the various departments obtain different materials which suit their purposes. The problem is to maintain the quality. This can best be accomplished by continual testing."

For the benefit of EDITOR & PUBLISHER readers, Mr. Helfrich disclosed for the first time the functions of such testing laboratory, and displayed and explained the various appliances needed for its successful operation.

"When the Chemical Research Laboratory was established its functions were to examine all materials and supplies used by the various mechanical departments of the New York American and Journal in the manufacture of a newspaper," he began.

"These supplies include linotype metal and lubricating oils from the composing room; acids, alcohol, benzol, silver nitrate, and photographic chemicals from the photo-engraving department; metal, matrix papers and other materials from the stereotype department; newsprint, inks, lubricants and rollers from the press room; and twines and wrappers from the circulation department.

"A set of standards were established for each material and constant examinations are made to keep them up to necessary specificiations.

"We co-operate with heads of various departments to determine these standards and develope new processes.

"The principal materials which we test are newsprint, ink and metals. In metals the percentages of tin, antimony, and lead must be determined. Tests of ink are made to determine its specific gravity, its ash content, pigment, mineral oil and rosin, viscosity, overtone, and penetration stain. For newsprint we test for color, finish, formation, ream weight, absorption, ash content, and moisture."

Mr. Helfrich showed the various appliances in the laboratory, which also maintains a small experimental photo-engraving plant.

Chief among them were a machine called the "glarameter," a comparatively new invention, for measuring the amount of gloss or finish on paper by the reflection of light rays; an extremely sensitive laboratory balance capable of weighing one five-millionth part of a pound; a "viscosimeter," to determine the viscosity or rate of flow of lubricating oils and a flash point indicator to determine the temperature at which gases of oils will ignite.

The laboratory was established by the late George Palmer at the request of Mr. Hearst. Mr. Palmer was in the Hearst employ for 38 years. When he died Jan. 21, Mr. Helfrich succeeded him as laboratory director.

Mr. Helfrich has been connected with the laboratory ever since its establishment. He is a graduate of Pratt Institute, class of 1910, where he concentrated in industrial chemical engineering. He was a consulting chemist before becoming associated with the Hearst laboratory.

REAL "TEETH" IN THIS FRAUD AD MEASURE

Jail Sentence and Fine Provided for Misrepresenting Goods or Services in Michigan Legislative Bill

LANSING, Mich., March 18—Provision of a jail sentence as possible penalty for persons responsible for knowingly publishing false or misleading advertising, using any medium, is a feature of a bill introduced this week in the lower house of the Michigan Legislature by Rep. William B. Campbell of Wayne.

The measure, which exempts publishers from its penalties unless they can be proved to have had knowledge that the advertising they accepted was not true, covers every case that could arise, according to interested persons who have examined the bill closely. It not only includes advertising in the ordinary mediums, newspapers and magazines, but extends to books, notices, handbills, posters, bills, circulars, pamphlets, letters and contains a final sweepup proviso to include those who advertise in any other way.

The provisions in regard to the commodity advertised are equally inclusive, the bill stating that not only merchandise but securities, services, or anything offered to the public must be described with utter truth.

Representative Campbell's measure would supersede another similar act passed in 1917, but according to Legislators little used since. The old act provides for a fine of not less than $10 and not more than $300 but carries no jail alternative.

The new act would eliminate mention of the minimum fine and would provide an alternative of imprisonment up to 90 days in the County jail in case of convictions.

Truth in advertising has been an objective sought, not only by Michigan newspapers, but by a large number of merchants' organizations throughout the State.

That this has not been entirely achieved is admitted, but many interested persons profess to see a distinct improvement within the past few years. Agitation to take action against a few unscrupulous advertisers in various sections of the State who have, it is claimed, deceived the public in relation to the quality of goods offered in sales, and also against patent medicine advertisers has arisen from time to time but difficulties of obtaining evidence of a convincing sort has proved a barrier to institution of court proceedings under the old act.

Representative Campbell has made no statement as yet as to the backing for his bill.

Ad Men Plan for Houston

Chicago and middle western advertising men met at a luncheon at the Hamilton Club, Chicago, on Feb. 22, under the direction of the Advertising Council of the Chicago Association of Commerce with members of the "On to Houston" committee of the A. A. C. W. and made plans for attendance at the latter's convention in Houston in May. A special train carrying more than 150 advertising people will leave Chicago on Friday, May 8, it was decided.

Redmond Joins Brooklyn Times

The Brooklyn Daily Times has recently installed a financial department, of which Edward Redmond, formerly manager of the financial department of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, will act as manager.

Herald Tribune Circulator Praised

Claude H. Sandkam, circulation manager, New York Herald Tribune, was given a dinner March 19 by his subordinates in honor of his successful efforts, since the daily's consolidation a year ago. More than 400 attended.

The Toledo Blade

The Editor & Publisher in their issue of February 28th, gave the lineage record of the important Daily and Sunday newspapers for the year 1924.

The TOLEDO BLADE ranked high in all of these lists, and made an enviable record, particularly in National Advertising.

It carried a total of 2,255,939 lines of National Advertising during the year 1924.

It was first among 6 day evening newspapers in its particular group—that is, in cities between 200,000 and 250,000 population.

It was 11th among 6 day evening newspapers in the entire country, but all ten newspapers that carried a larger volume were published in larger cities.

The TOLEDO BLADE carried more National Advertising than such papers as the New York Journal, Minneapolis Journal, Baltimore Sun, Boston Globe, Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Washington Star, Los Angeles Herald, Pittsburg Press, Cleveland Press, Chicago American, San Francisco Call and Post.

We are merely mentioning the other papers, in order to show how high the BLADE ranks among leading evening newspapers.

The BLADE carries over 90% of all the exclusive National accounts in Toledo.

Paul Block Inc.
Representative

NEW YORK CHICAGO DETROIT BOSTON

ASSOCIATED ADVERTISING CLUBS OF THE WORLD — TRUTH

Here in 1912 Back in 1925

FOR the first time in fifteen years the Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs will be held twice in the same State. . . . The first time in fifteen years it has played a return engagement. . . . It was held in Texas, at Dallas, in 1912 . . . and will be held again in HOUSTON this year, 1925.

The Dallas Convention was epochal; it marked the beginning of the "TRUTH" movement. . . . The Houston Convention will mark another epoch. . . . The Pledge of Advertising for World Peace! It is a well recognized fact that well-directed publicity was very largely responsible for assistance in winning the last war . . . and it can be made fully as instrumental in preventing the next.

Yes . . . the Advertising folks are coming back to Texas to rededicate themselves to the old task . . . "Truth in Advertising" . . . and to take up the new task of making Advertising the universal language of Peace and Good Will among the Nations of the World!

WORLD ADVERTISING CONVENTION MAY 9th TO 15th

In the opinion of nearly everyone, in position to know, this convention will be the biggest and most helpful ever held on American soil. But aside from the convention itself —there are other good and sufficient reasons why big business men of the country should attend.

Manufacturers are always seeking new markets. . . . They are interested in raw materials, cheaper transportation, quicker distribution.

Wholesalers and manufacturers are interested in locations for branch houses so that they can more economically and efficiently serve their trade.

Investors are interested in any locality that is developing sanely and surely and where there is still a rapid increase in values.

Your impression of Texas may have been gained through a perfunctory study of it in your geography years ago . . . . or through some romantic magazine story or lurid movie.

To know the REAL Texas you must visit it . . . . and there is no better time than when thousands of business men from all over the world come here to the 21st Birthday Party of the A. A. C. of W.

Consult with your local "On-to-Houston" Chairman about plans, rates, reservations, etc. Or, write to:

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL,
WORLD ADVERTISING CONVENTION, HOUSTON, TEXAS

Houston has a population of 226,256 according to the last scholastic census.

Houston is the junction point of seventeen railroads which act as feeders to the forty-two steamship lines which radiate from here to all parts of the world.

Houston is frequently referred to as "The Manchester of America" with its great man-made waterway and inland harbor.

Houston is the greatest inland cotton port in the world . . . exporting through its harbor, so far this present season, in excess of one and a half million bales.

Houston is the Queen city of the Southwestern States of the U. S. A.—the gateway to Mexico and all Latin America.

88 STORY HOTEL

No, not all under one roof .....but its equivalent in the eleven Class A Hotels reserved for the convention: .....Plenty of room for all.

The Publisher

THE MODERN PUBLISHER is a manufacturer. The production of his newspaper is a manufacturing enterprise. If his organization is as good and his machinery as efficient as his competitor's—other things being equal—he need not fear him; if they are better he may disregard him.

In one respect he differs from other manufacturers; time is an element essential to his success. He sells news—the most perishable of all commodities. The most abhorrent waste in his operations is the waste of time, the material out of which he coins money. He can coin time into money at all only because of the swiftness of his machinery.

As an inventor of newspaper machinery I have concentrated my attention upon time—the prime essential of news publication—and upon operating cost and space. I invariably work under a formula composed of three factors. It runs as follows: My objective must equal the greatest output obtainable per minute of time, per dollar of operating cost, per cubic foot of working space.

Manufacturer

The swiftness and certainty of the publisher's mechanical equipment must be made to keep pace with the constantly increasing pressure put upon him by the extraordinary growth of the public's interests. And its cost of operation and working space must be continuously lessened per unit of product—whether product be printing plates or printed papers.

I present the matter thus to impress the publisher with three things: He is a manufacturer; his are problems of quantity production, aggravated by the necessity of working within extremely narrow time limits, which are arbitrarily set for him; the most serviceable money he spends is that which makes and keeps his plant abreast of the times.

HENRY A. WISE WOOD

New York City,
March 5, 1925.

EDITORIAL

STILL MILES APART

ONE of those magnificently printed four-color process magazine advertisements, showing a happy family seated about a newfangled radiator, glowing with warmth and comfort, hit this writer's eye in February. The heating arrangements at home were not satisfactory and a wintry blast was blowing from the sea. The combined circumstances induced a letter to the signer of the advertisement. We stated the location of our humble cot and asked for detailed information concerning that heating machine which made advertisement children's cheeks shine like pippins, and father and mother to lounge in the faultless library in supreme contempt of a raging storm without. We followed all of the directions of the advertisement and even went further—we drew a simple sketch of the floor plan of the old homestead, indicating the need and asking prices, or the name of a local dealer.

A week later a neat form acknowledged our letter, but it gave no valuable information nor clew to the address of a local dealer. Three weeks passed and then came one of the finest pieces of printed matter it has been our pleasure to see. Color printing until our eyes ached, quality of paper that would have graced a wedding invitation, marvelous description of the heating plant and fixtures, a great selling talk anent coal economy. But not a word concerning where this precious contrivance might be found in this neck o' the woods or possible adaptability to the old homestead.

This editorial is prompted by the receipt today of another batch of resplendent circular matter from the advertiser. It must have cost a fortune to produce. The heating machine is embossed on a dainty cover. It is shown again, in colors, in a pasted-in sheet, and ten additional times is it pictured in a single book. There is a moving story of the life of the inventor of this graceful, elegant, harmonious, chaste, compact, symmetrical, classic, economical, indispensable heating device, the wonder of the age, but still no word concerning dealer or price.

Conservatively, the advertiser must have spent a good five-dollar bill on this prospect and we are still miles apart on the essentials of a trade. Being in the market for a heating machine, at least for next winter, we shall now keep our eyes open for a nice little black and white announcement on newsprint which will indicate where we may go and have a sensible business talk with someone who has some kind of heater for sale at a price.

More than 3,000 advertising men have already registered for the Houston, Tex., convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, May 9-15, assuring one of the greatest gatherings in the history of the industry.

A WORLD GAG

THE Italian dictatorship now reaches for a means of control of world opinion. With the national press muzzled, editors intimidated, the people bamboozled whenever it is expedient to fool them, it is now reported that foreign correspondents are to be compelled to put their heads through the medieval collar.

If there is one principle that has been established beyond question in this country it is that government or business or even individual conduct which cannot bear the test of news-fact investigation and publication is at base rotten and deserves to fall.

The Italian dictator will not succeed in muzzling the world's press. He may embarrass action, may tighten censorship, find means of intimidation and actual punishment for "violations," but he will not silence the voice of our press. Our men will find means to transmit to the channels of public information which flow to the people in this country, the essentials of facts which our people are entitled to know as the basis of opinion. It will not be partisan news. It will not be vindictive because of the proposed foreign correspondent's muzzle. It will be straight from the shoulder truth, reflecting credit or discredit upon the government of Italy according to merit. There is no gag to fit the world's press, as Mr. Mussolini is to discover.

As the partridge sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool.—Jeremiah; XVII, 11.

CLEAN FINANCIAL REPORTING

EDITORS might go back to the files of November, December and January, to survey what was written then by financial writers. There was a run-away bull market. There was talk of getting rich quick. The securities and commodity markets were excited for weeks to the point of hysteria. The public bought great gobs of paper. The value of that paper has since shrunk enormously.

Did any financial writer, at that time, publish direct or covert advice to readers to buy? Was speculation made to appear as sound investment? Was it stated that this or that stock was cheap at quoted rates? Was the newspaper made party to a stock boom, an unloading process? Is there justification on the part of a reader who complains that he has suffered a loss through ill-advice?

EDITOR & PUBLISHER has long deprecated financial reporting which exceeds the established boundary of news reporting. It does not seem to us that financial tipping is legitimate, but on the contrary a wicked and dangerous practice. We are bound to condemn financial news reporting which in any essential way differs from any other class of reporting and it is evident that the financial pages of the majority of newspapers are as clean of conscious propaganda, or tipping, as any other page. There are financial writers who do tip, or do permit themselves to suggest buying or selling. Their motives are not discussed because they are not known. Why this should be permitted we have never been able to understand. Newspapers do not permit writers to attempt to influence readers on other subjects, far less perilous than stock speculation.

We confidently believe that the financial reporting situation of the American press is infinitely better, truer to news standards, than five or ten years ago. Events in the securities and commodity markets since early November offer, it seems to us, an excellent opportunity for editors to check up on the question of the reliability of their reports in the large sense of legitimate news reporting. The ethical standard of the American press is not gauged by liability, but rather by conscientious responsibility.

March 21, 1925 Volume 57, No. 43

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Building.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London: The Advertising World represents EDITOR & PUBLISHER for the British Isles, 14 King Street, Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34 rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokio: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50.

RETAIL COPY PRICES

WE know of no instance where a newspaper of established quality has raised its retail copy price and suffered a severe circulation reversal. We know of several recent instances where the retail copy price has been advanced without loss of circulation and with very satisfactory results in helping to equalize production costs.

New York World, for instance, increased its rate from two to three cents a few weeks ago and we are informed that there was no appreciable circulation change, which is certainly a testimonial of public esteem.

The American people know what they want, get what they want, when the price is fair. Pennies do not appear, in this day, to count for much, even among those who have few of them. The poor think in terms of dollars. The great middle class think in terms of hundreds of dollars. Any business is in terms of thousands and the million is a standard unit of measurement among the rich.

Aside from the sound principle of selling any commodity for its worth to the purchaser, there is in newspaper practice the infinitely greater consideration of editorial independence through copy prices which return to the publisher revenues at least approaching material costs. There are profound questions in journalism, not clearly apparent today but ever in the background, which revolve about the economy of copy prices based on worth to readers.

Mr. Hearst has for several years been an advocate of increased retail price and has contended, we think truly, that the American people know what they want and will buy it at fair prices. He has found it possible to proceed with circulation promotion at increased rates, and has maintained that with increased circulation revenue responsibility for higher quality of his newspapers was merely intensified.

The penny, by reason of established custom, has long been the price unit of daily newspapers in the country, except for a few western cities where the copper has ever been popularly scorned. Five cents has been similarly the unit of Sunday price. There has been, and will continue to be, a publisher's disposition to get copies into the hands of the public at the lowest possible cost.

The question is widely discussed whether the public does not expect to pay more than five cents for a Sunday newspaper, of the quality and quantity the American newspaper publishers are now producing and up to five cents per copy for daily newspapers. Each publisher knows his local situation. The interesting fact remains that there is no recent instance within our knowledge, where price advances above five cents on Sunday and above one and two cents on week days has not been absorbed by the public almost without comment.

Circulators should know best what are the price advancement possibilities in the wholesale field. Within a few years there have been some remarkable achievements in advancing wholesale rates. It is a generality, not without point, that every dollar of increased revenue from circulation is a dollar on the safe and sound side of newspaper making.

Advertisement of a new book tells "how to get your name and picture into the newspapers easily," but no book tells how to keep them out.

TYPE FOR HUMAN EYES

PASSIONATELY denouncing fat type faces which continue to menace good typography in some publications of this country as in Europe, Edward E. Bartlett, director of typography of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, makes this significant statement:

"Every American advertiser or printer who swallows the facile patter about 'attention-compelling' values should study the foreign advertising pages where the fat-face brood demonstrates by dreadful example what kind of attention their user may expect. These welters of typographic gargoyle catch the eye not by attraction, but by shock. They do not command attention. Attention means reading, and reading is the last thing that the troubled eye and mind try to do, or can do, in their presence."

We believe that to be the fact and sound psychology

PERSONALS

BARRETT ANDREWS, publisher of the Boston American, returned last week from a two months' business trip to Mexico City.

John C. Brimblecom, editor and publisher of the Newton (Mass.) Graphic and past president of the Massachusetts Press Association, has gone to Florida for a two months' stay.

Mrs. C. S. Jackson, wife of the late publisher of the Portland Oregon Journal, will leave in June for a tour of Europe. Mrs. J. L. Robinson of Pendleton and Miss Helen LaMarr of Portland will accompany her.

John L. Sturtevant, president of the Wausau (Wis.) Record-Herald, has left for a vacation in California, where his son, John C. Sturtevant, is living.

Alfred Soderstrom, pioneer publisher of Swedish newspapers in Minneapolis and the United States, has been awarded the decoration of the Royal Order of Vasa of the first class, by the King of Sweden.

Miss Belle McCord Roberts, formerly editor of the Long Beach (Cal.) Telegram and now vice-president of the Press-Telegram Company, is visiting her brother in Colorado.

Seth G. Wells, owner and editor of the Erie (Kan.) Record has been appointed state oil inspector of Kansas.

Edgar C. Nelson, editor of the Booneville (Mo.) Advertiser was elected president of the Chamber of Commerce of that City.

William Yost Morgan, editor and publisher of the Hutchinson (Kan.) Daily News and Herald, and former lieutenant governor of Kansas, recently underwent a serious eye operation in a Kansas City hospital. He is recovering.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

CHARLES W. BOGGS has resigned as business manager and secretary-treasurer of the Oklahoma City Oklahoman and Times. He will devote his time to his oil interests.

A. H. Longbotham has resigned as general manager of the Buffalo Evening Post.

Sidney D. Long, general manager, Wichita (Kan.) Eagle, with Mrs. Long, returned to Wichita recently from a trip to Miami, Fla.

George S. Brumback, until recently on the Minneapolis (Minn.) Journal, has joined the advertising staff of the Long Beach (Cal.) Press-Telegram.

Jack Connolly has resigned from the advertising staff of the Buffalo Evening News to become assistant secretary of the Buffalo Better Business commission.

W. J. Hofmann, advertising manager of the Portland Oregonian, is one of three incorporators of the Portland Rose Festival association, which has charge of Portland's big annual floral fete.

Cecil L. Shepard, of the Denver Rocky Mountain News and Times advertising staff, has been chosen vice-chairman of the Denver Ad Club.

J. Hugh Biles, advertising manager, Ada (Okla.) Evening News and Weekly News, and Mrs. Biles are parents of twin sons born March 5.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOM

J. M. LIMPUS has been promoted from the copy desk of the New York Daily News to the Sunday department of that newspaper.

V. A. Field has been made editor of the Stillwater (Okla.) Advance.

W. M. Walker, for the past 18 months Sunday editor of the Jacksonville (Fla.) Times-Union, has resigned to become associated in an editorial capacity with the Peninsular Publishing Company, Tampa, Fla., publishers of Suniland and Picking House News.

Anard W. Littman, formerly with the Atlantic City (N. J.) Gazette-Review, is now sporting editor of the Atlantic City Ventnor News, a weekly.

Ben Baines, San Antonio Evening News army reporter, will leave this week with two army air officers from Kelly Field to mark 50 emergency airplane landing fields between San Antonio and San Diego.

Miss Gladys Calvert Stoudte, formerly social editor of the Atlantic City (N. J.) Gazette-Review, is now in the same capacity on the Atlantic City Ventor News, weekly resort publication.

John Bailey, reporter on the Coffeyville (Kan.) Daily Journal, has resigned because of ill health, and has gone to Albuquerque, N. M.

Karl W. Miller has been assigned to the Washington staff of the Detroit News succeeding Russell Barnes, recently assigned to Paris.

John H. Sorrels, news editor of the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, has resigned to assume direction of the Star City (Ark.) Lincoln County Ledger. Edward T. Austin, assistant telegraph editor, Chicago Herald-Examiner will succeed him. Austin was on the Oklahoman staff before going to Chicago.

C. F. Fairman, formerly on the Springfield (Mass.) Union copy desk, has been made industrial and real estate editor for the Sunday edition.

Arthur Kowalski of the editorial staff of the Buffalo Courier has been reelected president of the Buffalo Arts club. Mary F. Nash, also of the Courier, has been reelected secretary.

Fred Henshaw and Herbert Garrison have been assigned to the state house staff at Lansing by the Detroit News.

Edward Long, for 20 years state editor of the Providence (R. I.) Bulletin, has retired. H. M. Hofford, assistant state editor, has been appointed state editor.

William M. O'Neil, formerly city editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Union, has been promoted to night news editor.

James H. Fifield, formerly industrial and real estate editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Union is now night city editor.

Walter W. Schramm has resigned from the staff of the Cleveland Times.

Ben Williamson has joined the reportorial staff of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Miss Frances Boardman, music and dramatic editor of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, has returned from a trip to New York.

Dorian E. Stout has been named city editor of the Mobile (Ala.) Register, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Lynn Hogan.

William D. Mahoney, formerly of the sport department of the Buffalo Courier, has been admitted to the bar and has begun the general practice of law in Buffalo.

Lee Smits, former Seattle newspaper man, is now photoplay editor of the Detroit Times. The "wild life" page of the Detroit Free Press which he once edited is now in the hands of M. F. Dunkenbrod.

Robert Yoder, Gibson City, Ill., has joined staff of the Decatur (Ill.) Herald.

Bryan P. Martin, city hall and police reporter of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) News-Sentinel is now assistant city editor.

Arthur J. Quinn, of the Boston American city staff, has been tarnsferred to the Lawrence office to take charge of the Merrimack Valley edition of the paper.

S. J. Doss, assistant sport editor, Fort Wayne (Ind.) News-Sentinel has taken over the sports desk, following the resignation of Robert L. Beard to enter the real estate business at Sandusky, O.

H. T. Hasselquist, news editor of the St. Paul Dispatch, is ill. L. L. Perrin, city editor, has assumed his duties.

John M. Clearly, former reporter of the Trenton Times, has returned to the news staff of the paper.

H. B. Crozier, who covers politics for the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, is recovering from a severe illness.

Lawrence Sheppard, San Antonio Evening News police reporter, has entered a hospital for an operation.

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

A. B. HARRIS, the new president of the Texas Circulation Managers' Association, has been circulation manager of the Dallas Times Herald for the past five years, but, like many others now active in the newspaper industry, he served an early apprenticeship.

A. B. Harris

Born and educated in the county, he started his newspaper work as a carrier boy, when he was 12 years old. At 19 he took a civil service examination for appointment as a clerk in the postal department, and, passing with a high standing, he was given an appointment. After eight years he was promoted to the office of assistant superintendent of mails, having direct charge of all outgoing matter. He served in this capacity for 12 years, resigning a little more than five years ago to become circulation manager of the Times Herald.

Under his direction rural carrier routes were established and systematized. Some of these, operating over pike roads, extend 30 miles from the office of publication, and in one instance a route extends 75 miles. These, together with shorter ones operating over lateral, or connecting rural roads, have enabled farmers within a wide radius to receive the Times Herald, afternoon newspaper, on the day of publication.

Franklin Johnson and Walthall Littlepage, former San Antonio Evening News reporters, are now with the San Antonio Light. Kenneth McCalla, formerly with the Light is now with the Evening News.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

ORVILLE WELCH, from copy desk, New York American, to copy desk New York World.

Jack Dalton, from copy desk, New York Daily News, to copy desk, New York Times.

Earl Overholt, from assistant city editor, Bronx Home News, New York, to copy desk, New York Daily News.

Franklin Brooks, from New Bedford (Mass.) Standard, to copy desk, New York Daily News.

M. C. Kearney from assistant city editor, Worcester (Mass.) Telegram to staff, Providence (R. I.) News.

Russell W. Whitney, from San Francisco (Cal.) Herald to Mobile (Ala.) Register, editorial department.

Lloyd Northard, from sports staff, Detroit Free Press, to sports staff, Detroit News.

Blackburn W. Johnson from Raleigh, N. C., Associated Press bureau, to city editor, Raleigh (N. C.) Times.

Vance Dolan from the Canton (O.) News to the Mansfield (O.) Journal.

Edward Sullivan, from night staff, Boston Advertiser to city staff, Boston American.

Ted Brewer, from Little Rock (Ark.) News to staff, San Antonio Evening News.

Pat Walsh, from staff, Muskogee (Okla.) News, to San Antonio Evening News.

Willard Edwards, from Chicago City News Bureau, to staff, Chicago Tribune.

Jack Hazle, from Detroit News, to staff, San Antonio Express.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

JOSEPH F. PALMER has sold his controlling interest in the Bath (N. Y.) Steuben Advocate, a daily, to Merritt F. Landen, and has returned to Buffalo where he formerly was a member of the staff of the Evening News.

George C. Jordan, of Washington, D. C., formerly a resident of Staunton, Va., has purchased the Waynesboro (Va.) Valley Virginian, a weekly, and will turn it over to his son, Louis F. Jordan, attorney and writer, on July 1.

Stillwater (Okla.) Advance-Democrat has been purchased by Arthur S. McEwen and E. E. Hadley, publicity director of the Oklahoma Agricultural & Mechanical College at Stillwater. The newspaper will become the Stillwater Democrat.

Richmond (Minn.) Reporter has been sold to W. L. Rethwill. He was at one time publisher of the Sanborn (Minn.) Sentinel and also associated with the Springfield (Minn.) Advance.

Judge C. W. Ryan, owner of the Wathena (Kan.) Times, has sold the paper to John D. Grier, of Kansas City, Mo.

A. L. Grimm of Prentice, Wis., has purchased the Mellen (Wis.) Weekly from the Northern Publishing company. L. E. Kenyon has been succeeded as editor of the paper by Arthur Lidmark of Prentice.

Tyler (Minn.) Journal has been sold by M. Glemmested to Axel H. Anderson of Omaha, Neb.

WITH THE SPECIALS

ALLIED Newspapers, Inc., publishers representatives, have added Manning Wakefield, J. Albert O'Brien, and Leslie Rood to its sales staff. Wakefield was for a number of years Eastern manager of the Farm Press Publishing Company; O'Brien was formerly national advertising manager of the Baltimore Post, while Rood, formerly with the Cleveland Press, has been doing special work on the Pacific coast for the past year.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

COLORADO SPRINGS (Col.) Gazette and Telegraph, 170-page Annual edition in 12 sections, Sunday, March 8.

Opelika (Ala.) Daily News, 80-page special edition welcoming the Pepperell Manufacturing Company to Opelika, March 13.

Blackwell (Okla.) Tribune, 72-page Progress edition, March 1.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

OKLAHOMA CITY OKLAHOMA NEWS has ordered a new Goss high speed press and is installing new type-setting and stereotyping machinery. A new paper warehouse has been leased.

Pierre (S. D.) Capital Journal has added a linotype to its equipment.

Mount Vernon (Ill.) Register News has broken ground for a new building in the downtown district, and will install a new duplex rotary 16-page press.

Ithaca (N. Y.) Journal-News, recently installed a new Ludlow Typograph.

Wakefield (Mass.) Daily Item recently added another linotype to its equipment.

Cleveland Commercial recently purchased its second Ludlow.

MARRIED

HAROLD M. OLSON, city editor of the Winona (Minn.) Daily Republican Herald, to Miss Fern Andrews, instructor in music at the Winona State Teachers' college, March 13.

Felicia Gizycka, niece of J. M. Patterson of the Chicago Tribune, to Drew Pearson of Swarthmore, Pa., March 12.

SCHOOLS

MEMBERS of the industrial journalism classes of Oregon Agricultural College will spend their Spring vacation in Portland and will visit newspaper plants and commercial printing houses. The trip is sponsored by Sigma Delta Chi. O. C. Leiter, managing editor of the Portland Telegram, has invited them to a dinner in the Telegram building.

Harper Leech, financial writer for the Chicago Tribune, told students of the Medill School of Journalism "How to Make Business News Interesting" in a recent public lecture. Leech was formerly managing editor of the Denver Express.

Jerome D. Barnum, publisher of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Post Standard, addressed students in the Department of Journalism at Syracuse University Tuesday on "What the Publisher Expects of the Newspaper Worker."

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

WILLIAM J. ROGERS, for several years Sunday foreman of the Trenton Times-Advertiser, has been made day foreman of the Times.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

VICTOR G. C. EUBANK left New York late last week for San Francisco to sail from there to Tokio, April 4, to become Tokio correspondent of the Associated Press, relieving Charles E. Kloeber, returning to this country on account of illness. Eubank was formerly attached to the cable staff of A. P.'s New York office. He has been with the press association since 1921, joining the service as assistant city editor of the Los Angeles Examiner. He started newspaper work in 1903 on the Kansas City Star. He has also served on the Chicago Record-Herald, Chicago Tribune, and Chicago Examiner.

W. G. Head, formerly of the San Antonio (Tex.) News, now is assistant manager of the International News Service bureau in Kansas City, succeeding S. J. Hughes, transferred to St. Louis.

H. C. Renegar, formerly night filing editor in the Raleigh, N. C., has been appointed correspondent in charge of the Charlotte bureau by the Associated Press.

Jack Bernstein, who left the St. Paul office of the United Press to serve that organization in Havana, has returned to St. Paul.

ASSOCIATIONS

KANSAS WOMEN'S PRESS ASSOCIATION recently elected Mrs. R. H. Trueblood, associate editor of the Yates Center (Kan.) Times, president.

Arkansas Press Association will hold its annual summer convention at El Dorado, Ark., May 14-16. Charles A. Berry, publisher of the El Dorado News will be host.

Hub Journalists Club of Boston, Mass., celebrated its 38th anniversary by a dinner and dramatic entertainment recently.

Boylston Street Advertising Association, Boston, recently elected the following officers: president, Ernest M. Steele; vice-president, Frederick E. Jackson; treasurer, Terry B. Gordon.

New England Newspaper Alliance discussed free publicity, advertising copy and advertising rates at its March meeting in Boston recently. Harry B. Shapleigh of the Julius Mathews Advertising Agency, Boston and Cornelius Decker, advertising manager, Manchester (N. H.) Union-Leader were among the speakers.

Advertising Club of Brooklyn this week voted to raise $15,000 to organize a Brooklyn Division of the New York Better Business Bureau. J. T. Bellau, advertising manager of Loeser & Co., Brooklyn, is in charge of arrangements.

Six-Point League, New York special representatives society, have arranged a luncheon in honor of John G. Ham to be held at the Advertising Club of New York, March 24.

Advertising Club of New York now plans to run two special trains to the 21st annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to be held in Houston, Tex., May 9 to 15. Trains will leave New York May 7 with a stop-over in St. Louis.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

E. HARTFORD POWELL, of Barton, Durstine & Osborne, Inc., New York, who won one of the Bok advertising awards for copy prepared for Macy's New York department store, was principal speaker at the meeting of the Cleveland Advertising Club last week, where he asserted that more life is needed in store advertising.

"Highbrow writing", he contended, "has a tendency to make copy far too serious. An advertiser should put life and joy and sparkle into paid notices, in order to stimulate interest in them and hold reader's attention."

Rufus A. Choate, who was editor of Toronto Sunday World when it was taken over by the Toronto Star, has become an executive member of the staff of J. J. Gibbons Advertising Agency, Toronto. Mr. Choate started his newspaper career on the Peterboro (Ont.) Examiner and has seen service on dailies in Toronto, Montreal, Calgary and several U. S. cities, being at one time a member of the Congressional Press Gallery, Washington.

Winthrop C. Hoyt, son of Charles W. Hoyt, of the Charles W. Hoyt Company, Inc. is visiting this country for a few weeks as special representative of W. S. Crawford, Ltd. of London. Mr. Hoyt has been with the Crawford Company for the past year, and previously was connected with Harper's Bazar and American Agriculturist.

The Blackburn Advertising Agency of Dayton, O., has been incorporated with $50,000 capital.

Wallace M. Findlay, for the past five years associated with the J. J. Gibbons Advertising Agency, Toronto, and prior to that with the Willys-Overland Company, Toledo, has joined the Clarke E. Locke Advertising Agency, Toronto.

The Midland Advertising Agency, Cincinnati, has removed its offices to new and larger quarters in the newly erected Atlas National Bank Building. Expansions in both personnel and service are being rapidly made by the Midland Agency, the latest addition to its staff being that of Eugene S. Mittendorf who on April 1, leaves his present post as publicity director, United States Playing Card Company, Cincinnati.

Robert E. Ramsay, vice-president, James F. Newcomb & Co. Inc., New York, N. Y., addressed the current meeting of the advertising class conducted by the Educational Department of the Jersey City Y. M. C. A. under the auspices of D. B. Jetmore, Educational Director.

The General Advertising Agency has been established at Buffalo by Gerhardt and Alfred Hanser, with offices at Hertel avenue and Colvin parkway. Gerhardt Hanser formerly was editor of the Furniture Index, a trade paper published at Jamestown.

Raymond E. Walz of the Walz-Weinstock Advertising Agency, Buffalo, has been appointed chairman of a new publicity committee appointed by the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce.

FLASHES

The burning issue in many households is an old flame.—New York Telegram-Mail.

"I miss my husband," wails an Arkansas woman. Aim lower, madam.—Des Moines Capital.

Necessity isn't the mother of invention. If you think it is, read a list of patents issued.—El Paso Herald.

If a good citizen waits until he has been married fifty years, he may get his name in the papers.—Sandusky Register.

Yet some women are important enough to get in the rotogravure section without the help of a bathing suit.—New York Telegram-Mail.

If there must be windshield stickers why not produce one to read: "Don't hug the driver?"—Baltimore Sun.

One swallow does not make summer, but one swallow of moonshine may make a long good night.—Cincinnati Times Star.

As a general thing a self-made man is a lucky stiff who has happened to marry the right woman.—Vancouver Sun.

Praise is deserved anyway. It takes a clever father to think up those bright sayings of his child's.—New York Telegram-Mail.

A philosopher is just an ordinary man who has whittled down his ambition to fit his capacity.—Baltimore Sun.

Wonder which muscles those electric hobby horses exercise that a flivver doesn't?—Des Moines Tribune.

A critic remarks that "half the women in the world retail gossip." Are we to assume that the other half are in the manufacturing business? — Waterloo Tribune.

Faith is the greatest thing in the world; millions have fought, bled and died for doctrines they never read and did not understand.—Don Marquis, New York Herald Tribune.

WE DO
OUR WORK
WITH THE SAME INTEREST
AND ENTHUSIASM
AS IF WE OWNED
EVERY NEWSPAPER
WE SERVE

Our COMPLETE checking service handles the entire detail work of supplying "checking proofs" to every agency and advertiser promptly—and —efficiently.

WE DO IT ALL

from a few complete copies.

The Advertising
CHECKING BUREAU Inc.
538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO
15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

The Danbury News

DANBURY, CONN.

Population, Danbury, 22325
Circulation, Danbury News, 7100

The Danbury News had the largest lineage in 1924 of any paper of 7000 circulation in the country. It published a daily average of 81.85 columns.

The lineage was:

Local	5,579,315	agate	lines
National	1,360,170	"	"
Classified	585,777	"	"
Total	7,525,262	"	"

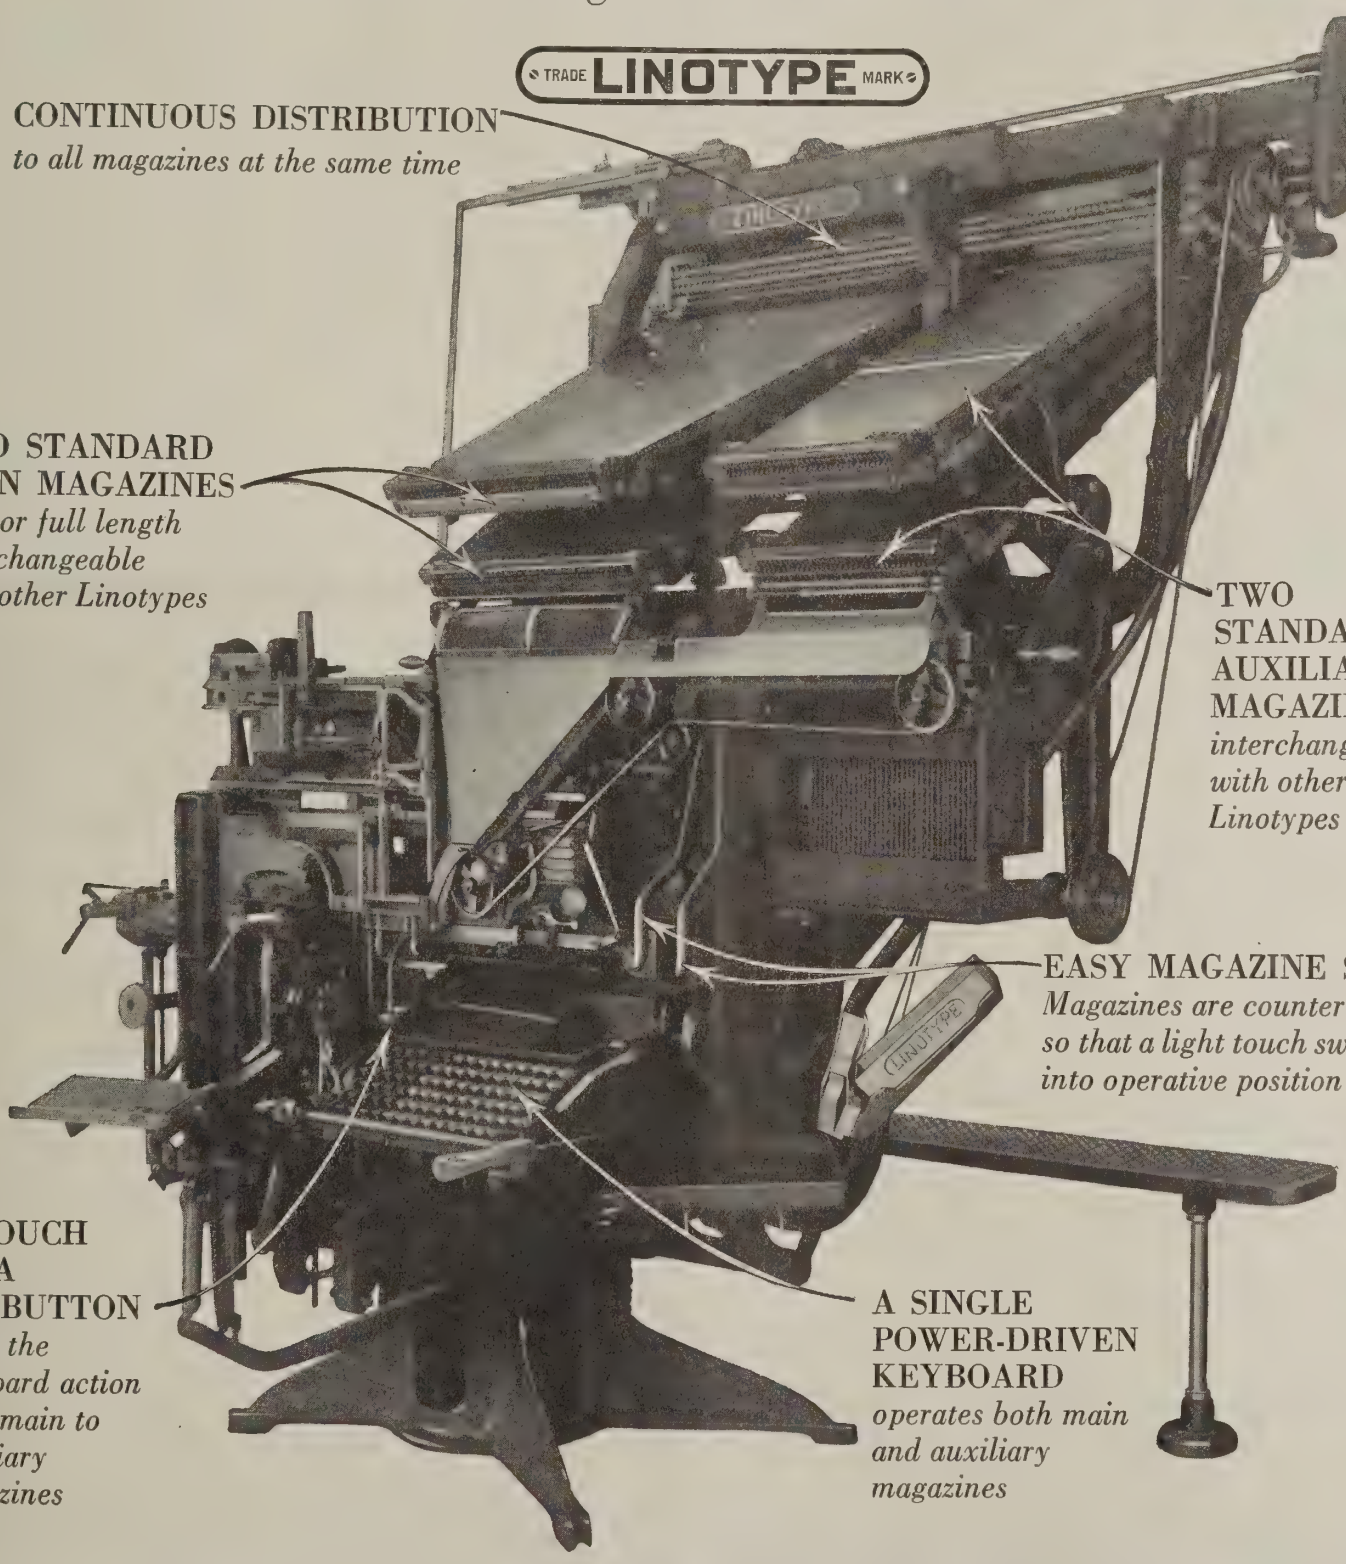
Flat Advertising Rate:

30 cents an inch, mats or electros.
36 cents an inch, composition advertising.

FASTER COMPOSITION

of Newspaper Headings, Classified and Display Advertising



Faces from All Magazines Mixed in the Same Line

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

CONTINUOUS DISTRIBUTION to all magazines at the same time

TWO STANDARD MAIN MAGAZINES
split or full length interchangeable with other Linotypes

TWO STANDARD AUXILIARY MAGAZINES interchangeable with other Linotypes

EASY MAGAZINE SHIFT
Magazines are counterbalanced so that a light touch swings either into operative position

A TOUCH ON A KEYBUTTON shifts the keyboard action from main to auxiliary magazines

A SINGLE POWER-DRIVEN KEYBOARD operates both main and auxiliary magazines

Ask the nearest agency to send you the folder "Suggested Headletter Layouts for the Model 26 Linotype" and full information about this machine

LINOTYPE MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY LINOTYPE

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS Brooklyn, New York CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED TORONTO

AGENCIES IN THE PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

[COMPOSED ENTIRELY ON THE LINOTYPE IN BODONI AND BODONI BOOK]

533.25.3 F

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Cross Word Puzzles Set by Machine—Burbank Signs Contract With Coast Syndicate—Cooper Writes for Newspapers

SERVICE of artists in the preparation of cross word puzzles for half tone reproduction is no longer required by the Brooklyn Eagle. John F. Freeman, composing room foreman, has discovered the black and white numbered squares can be constructed on type setting machines with greater accuracy, less cost, and considerable time saving. Mr. Freeman explained the method to EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week.

"We were often troubled," he said, by mistakes made by artists who drew our cross word puzzles, which necessitated the making of new plates. One day I sat down at a linotype machine to see if I couldn't put it to work in the place of inaccurate human beings. The experiment proved successful."

All that was necessary, he said, was the addition by the linotype company of type high quads to form the black squares. Superior figures are used tc designate the different blanks, the "down rules" now run in ordinary magazine channels. The horizontal lines are cast separately and inserted on the stones.

Answers to puzzles are also set on the linotypes, this being made possible by the installation of a font of typewriter characters.

Now puzzles roughly constructed on graph paper by Eagle readers can be sent direct to the composing room and linotype operators, without the help of artists.

The Eagle obtains all its puzzles from readers by offering $5 each for those accepted and published. In this way the editors have more than 1,000 each week to pick from. They are distributed to newspapers by Thompson Feature Service, New York.

Luther Burbank, plant wizard, has now authorized his first series of newspaper articles to be handled by the C. C. Powell Newspaper Features, San Francisco. The articles, to run in a six-day release, are written in collaboration with Elizabeth Urquhart. They will appear under the caption "In the Garden with Burbank".

Merian C. Cooper, explorer and magazine writer, who, with two other Americans, witnessed the migration of wild Persian tribes from the lowlands beside the Persian Gulf to the interior plateaus in search of grass, has written his experiences in a series of two articles for newspapers through the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York.

J. N. ("Ding") Darling, cartoonist, Herald Tribune Syndicate, New York, is seriously ill at his home in Des Moines.

S. L. ("Roxy") Rothafel, director of the Capitol Theater, New York, and friend of radio fans, has contracted to write for the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate.

The Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia, announced this week a new weekly children's feature called "Through the Gates of Fairyland", written by C. S. Hammock, and illustrated with silhouette drawings by Mrs. Hammock. It is supplied in a seven-column or eight-column mat.

Noted figures in all branches of sport have written articles for the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia, to appear under the title "My Greatest Vivtory and How I Won It."

"Senator" Ford, vaudeville monologist, is now producing a stickful humor-our feature entitled "One Minute Monologues" for the National Newspaper Service, Chicago.

Henry P. Martin, Jr., manager of the Des Moines Register and Tribune Syndicate visited New York this week. He is making a business trip through the East. His syndicate has prepared two new features, "Reel Tips," a one column illustrated feature for the fisherman and outdoor enthusiast, and "Cross Sections of History," stories on interesting events in American history. . "Reel Tips" is being written by "Jobby" Jensen, "Cross Section of History" by Robert M. Williamson. "Our Checker Column" by P. H. Ketchum written for checker fans is another Register and Tribune release.

T. C. Davidson, pioneer syndicate man, has severed his connections with the Herald Tribune Syndicate, New York. He informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER he was not ready to announce his future plans. Mr. Davidson was manager of the New York Herald Syndicate under James Gordon Bennett and was also a member of the Herald Board of Control and Executive Committee.

Miss Wilella Waldorf, in charge of the Post Syndicate, and the New York office of the Ledger Syndicate, Philadelphia, has been appointed assistant to John Anderson, dramatic editor of the New York Evening Post, replacing E. S. Colling who resigned effective March 21. Elsa Umla has been placed in charge of the syndicate. Miss Waldorf will write the Post's moving picture reviews.

Jack Lait, editor of International Feature Service, is creator of a new comic strip for King Features Syndicate, Inc., New York, entitled "Gus and Gussie."

"Prunes and Prisms" by Percival Prim is a new daily feature in verse being handled by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York.

Mrs. Edith Gould Wainwright, daughter of George J. Gould, has written "The Life Story of a Rich Girl" for newspapers through King Features Syndicate, Inc., New York. It runs to 20 daily installments, illustrated.

"Half Told Tales" by Dr. Henry Van Dyke has been added to the feature list of McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York.

NOME PICTURES ARRIVE

P & A Photos Brought by Dog Team, Boat and Seaplane

First pictures of the race made by Gunnar Kasson across frozen Alaskan snows with his dog team bearing serum to diphtheria stricken Nome were brought to Chicago by Pacific and Atlantic Photos, after a journey of 2,600 miles, involving almost every form of transportation, from dog team to airplane.

The pictures taken in Nome by Pacific and Atlantic photographers who had been awaiting the arrival of the serum, were turned over to Capt. Hegness, who rushed 870 miles from Nome to Nenana in a record trip, traveling eighteen hours a day, according to P. A. Allison, Chicago manager of Pacific and Atlantic.

At Nenana Hegness boarded a train leaving for Seward, 400 miles distant. At Seward, the steamship Alaska was waiting, steam up. The bundle of plates was turned over to the captain of the Alaska.

In Seattle, 1300 miles south, B. W. Hellings, coast representative of the Pacific and Atlantic Photos, started north with a seaplane. At Cape Lazon, 300 miles north of Seattle, Hellings put out in a speed boat, and received the plates, heavily wrapped in oilcloth, as they were lowered over the side of the ship.

Fifteen minutes later, Hellings was speeding back to Seattle in the seaplane, arriving there 15 hours before the steamship Alaska. From Seattle, the pictures were distributed.

EVENING POST TO ADD DAILY ROTO SECTION

Will Start Issuing 4 Pages Rotogravure on April 1, C. C. Lane, Business Manager Announces—Increase Rates 10 Cents a Line

The New York Evening Post will start publication of a daily four-page rotogravure section April 1, C. C. Lane, business manager, announced this week.

This history making innovation is the result of long study and discussion following a suggestion made by John C. Martin, vice-president and general manager, Mr. Lane said:

The four-page rotogravure pictures will be a permanent part of the regular daily issues of the Evening Post. The 8-page Saturday Graphic, at present published by the Post, will not be affected by the change.

Official announcement of the section's addition will not be made until March 28, but Mr. Lane confirmed reports heard by EDITOR & PUBLISHER and issued the following exclusive statement:

"For the first time in history, a rotogravure picture feature section will be issued as part of a regular daily newspaper.

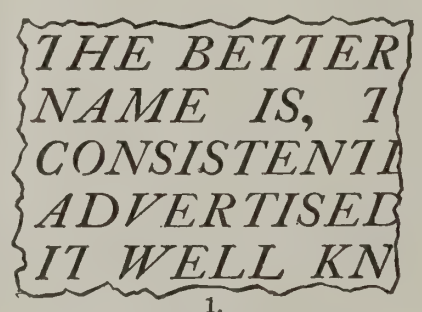
"In taking this pioneer step we have been moved by two outstanding considerations.

"In the first place, readers are demanding more and more pictures with the news of the day. And they want particularly the quality of pictures made possible by the refinements of rotogravure. Our idea with the new four-page section will be to parallel as nearly as possible the news of the day with effective pictures.

"Secondly, advertisers have long expressed satisfaction with weekly rotogravure, but often they have been dissatisfied in that their advertisements appeared at the time stores were closed. Now their copy will appear on the same day, for example, as the special sales covered are taking place.

"It is entirely appropriate, we think, that the Evening Post should be the first paper to take a step of this sort, because it was the first to print a graphic section on a week day.

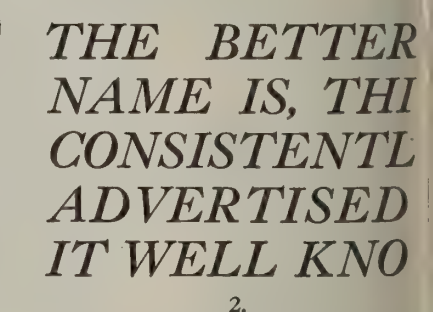
"Mr. Martin is responsible for the idea. He has long hoped for the possibility of a press which would be capable of turning out rotogravure pictures along with the news. We are now doing the next best thing by having two sections.



"As a sort of trial balloon, we ran a special Inaugural Day rotogravure section to test any possible difficulties in handling such an enlarged newspaper on the streets and in the mailing rooms. We found it worked smoothly and the demand was unexpectedly large, and therefore we decided we were ready to make daily rotogravure a permanent feature of the Evening Post."

Editorial direction will be handled from New York. Thomas McVeigh, rotogravure editor, will remain in charge with probable additions to the staff.

Advertising in the new section has been set at a 10 cent a line increase over regular contract rates.



Unbreakable Ludlow Italics

Examine the two specimens of italic below and choose the one you like best.

1.

This was clipped from a prominent paper. It is a specimen of full-kerning single-type italic, and is reproduced here exactly as printed in that paper. There are nine broken or battered letters in this specimen.

2.

The same wording used in Figure 1 is shown in this specimen, but it has been reset in one of the many beautiful faces of Ludlow non-breakable italic. The letters have the full-kerning effect, but with no kerns to break off.

With the Ludlow you print from sharp, clear-cut new slugs that are cast fresh for every issue by your own compositors right in your own composing room. Ludlow slugs will not break or give way under extreme pressure of the steam table.

The newspaper equipped with a Ludlow has no cause for using worn, battered or broken faces because it sets matrices, not type, and with the Ludlow there is always an abundance of matrix faces in any size up to 60 point including bold and extended.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue
CHICAGO

San Francisco, Hearst Building
Atlanta, 41 Marietta Street
New York, World Building
Boston, 261 Franklin Street

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Killian's Defense

To Editor & Publiser: Sometimes think it is almost a precept in journalism to believe anything charged to the riscreance, the inanity, or the stupidity a reporter. The press urges its claim integrity by selecting for its servants ose from whom it hopes for contribuon to that integrity. But in spite of critical public and a press which, while gnizant of its limitations, is scrupulsly careful in choosing its agents, it ems to be the press that is readiest to nvict, readiest to slam the cell door or lease the trap—with one-half the evince presented.

This prelude, through which I trust u may stagger without undue bewilderent, I, too, regard with some surprise. his is because my own experience of r craft not infrequently arouses in me feeling which, if I may presume to rry you with me in the mild and chuckg spirit which I trust seeks utterance re, is but inadequately expressed in at dreary coinage, "What the hell's the e?"

Yet while conscious that dirge is the npo and that I would as intelligently tle upon a flagpole in the hope of itating an asylum for the deaf and mb, I go on the remote hope that to eak some credit where discredit seems complete possession may beguile some r, however reluctant. Permit me to nsider your editorial "Hoax Hoaxing" the issue of February 21.

The charge is that Tom Killian, a reorter for the Chicago Tribune, while vering the story of Floyd Collins' agic death in Sand Cave, Kentucky, ok the view that it was a hoax.

I shall attempt some categorical analys of your editorial:

No. 1—"It remained for a single reorter . . . to play a stupid part of septic."

Pardon me if I seem instantly prolific adjectives.

The statement I have quoted is untrue, surd, ill-considered and conclusive. here were some twenty-five or thirty porters in Cave City, all of whom were rfectly cognizant of the buzz of rumors out the "hoax," and working on it fore Killian arrived. No one contends was a hoax; no one but deprecates such suggestion. But the truth is "hoax" s bandied about. Killian was there report truth. He did not report that was a hoax. He reported that there s talk of a hoax. And here is what wrote:

"Cave City, Ky., Feb. 8.—(Sepcial) -A Grand Jury inquiry into mysteris circumstances surrounding the imisonment of Floyd Collins will be arted tomorrow morning.

"County Attorney J. Lewis Williams night announced at his home in Glasow that the investigation would be shed vigorously.

"Detectives will be sent here tomorw to begin accumulating evidence well as to take testimony from newsper correspondents and state officials ho have amassed a large amount of aterial indicating that the case merits vestigation.

"County Attorney Williams says he ill investigate rumors that the Sand ve tragedy grows out of a plan to in publicity for the newly discovered vern and also that if Floyd Collins found dead a charge of homicide y be lodged." . . .

ollowed by some more particularizin of the rumors. And that was the ly item written on the subject by Klian.

o you see anything in the four paragphs except a straight report of action ctemplated by a regularly-constituted ficial of the law?

s there anything in the item that any rporter is prohibited by his conscience frm giving to his newspaper?

o. 2—"An official investigation was required to set aside this false notion."

What false notion? If it was so palpably false, why investigate?

Brother, it was the investigation that was reported; not the report investigated. And I think Killian had a right to report it.

No. 3.—"But it seems incredible that a discriminating man . . . could have gone so far wrong as to play a hoax angle on this story."

I refer you to No. 1. It was not the hoax, but the investigation of the hoax that was played. Incredible? It was incredible that Loeb and Leopold could be arrested, but we played that.

No. 4.—"The official report indicates that it was a deliberate and conscious fake."

Ah—official report: there, in that sonorous and sepulchral phrase lies the strand of hair, the old bone button, the shred of fabric that furnishes the clew to the whole skulduggery. Whose official report? Now I take refuge in base innuendo, hints so cunning and smug that the layman must inevitably convict me out of my own mouth. But it is an inuendo that to the journalist of experience is as articulate as William Jennings Bryan. When a little politician finds a public event into which he may thrust his Archimedes' lever the better to move the world I much mistake his Thespian attributes if he fail to avail himself of it. I congratulate the Ciceronian Lieutenant-Governor Denhart upon the sagacity and courage with which he created an issue with a reporter; a lieutentant-governor scattering the alphabet "officially" over a crowd of newspapers to the discomfiture of a reporter who was limited by the rules of his calling which bid him declare what is "officially reported" but forbids his defense.

No. 5.—"The reporter is alleged to have defended news faking as an institution."

A lie.

No. 6.—"He failed to appear before the Governor (Denhart) for an open hearing."

He did not. He had no chance to appear for he was ordered home when it became apparent that he was being set up as a target in the proceeding which he had forecast and because he did forecast it was turned to the advantage of Denhart.

No. 7.—"The official condemnation of the hoax story needs no embroidery here."

But it gets it.

No. 8.—"The newspapers of the country did well to give full publicity to the official finding that this silly fake was the crude work of a single individual."

Denhart's "official condemnation" did get full publicity. And now I know why I wrote the prelude to this letter.

Yours very truly,
R. M. Lee,
City Editor, Chicago Tribune.

FOREIGN CORPS ELECTS

A. Arib-Costa, La Tribuna, Rome, Named President at Annual Dinner

A. Arib-Costa, U. S. representative of La Tribuna, Rome, was elected president of the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents, at the organization's 7th annual dinner held Thursday evening at the Port Arthur restaurant, in Chinatown, New York. He succeeds P. W. Wilson, special correspondent for Great Britain.

F. Douglas Williams, New York manager of Reuter's Ltd., and A. Algara, of El Universal, Mexico, were named vice-presidents. Sydney J. Clarke, London Daily Telegraph, was re-elected secretary-treasurer and Harold Butcher, Liverpool Echo, assistant secretary.

More than 100 representatives of foreign newspapers and guests attended the dinner. Principal speakers were Don Seitz of the New York World and Ziangling Chang, Chinese Consul General for the United States.

Oakland Post-Enquirer Leaps ahead in GAINS

(Reprint from Feb. 11 issue Oakland Post-Enquirer)

The Post-Enquirer has passed the 40,000 circulation mark!

In three short years this newspaper has had the most remarkable growth of any newspaper on the Pacific coast.

Its growth is just like the growth of Oakland.

The progress of the Great East Bay district has astonished investors not only in California but in far eastern points.

The industrial growth has established a record.

Over 40,000 Net Paid Circulation

65 Per Cent Home Delivered — Circulation Concentrated in Great East Bay District.

ADVERTISING GAINS

Oakland is right up at the top of the list of all cities in the United States showing large newspaper advertising gains—a sure index of business health.

Building permits for the month of January just closed exceed by almost a million dollars the total for January a year ago.

Mile by mile the new homes are spreading out over all our beautiful hills.

In all this prosperity The Post-Enquirer has shared and its circulation—now well over the 40,000 mark—is leaping ahead with the expansion and prosperity of the whole district.

REMARKABLE GROWTH

The past year's growth in the face of a dry, hard season when other big centers of the coast showed losses instead of gains is all the more remarkable.

With the fine rainfall in northern California this winter and more promised, the year opens with prospects of even greater development and better business than ever before in the forward-marching history of the East Bay.

PLEDGED TO SERVICE

The Post-Enquirer is committed to the upbuilding and development of this community—the brightest spot on the western map—and its achievement of 40,000 circulation in three years is proof that its faith in this community was more than justified.

THE POST-ENQUIRER

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA

Advertising Offices
Veree & Conklin, Inc.

New York: 300 Madison Ave.
Chicago: 28 East Jackson Blvd.
Detroit: 217 Lafayette Blvd.
Kansas City, 1100 Davidson Bldg.
San Francisco: 454 Monadnock Bldg.
Los Angeles: Karl J. Shull, 315 South Broadway

WASHINGTON MEN BAFFLED IN ATTEMPT TO REPORT COUZENS TAX PROBE

Secrecy Veils Hearings of His Committee and Only Meager Reports Issued 24 Hours Later—Question of Printing Returns Still Unsettled

By J. BART CAMPBELL

(Washington Correspondent, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 19.—Newspaper correspondents at the national capital are speculating as to how extensively the public is to be taken into the confidence of the Treasury Department regarding the 1924 income tax returns just made, or of the special Senate committee investigating the Internal Revenue Bureau behind doors closely guarded against publicity.

The publication of income tax returns, which raised such a nation-wide tempest last year, is still a moot question the U. S. Supreme Court is yet to determine in the two cases pending, which involve the right of newspapers to spread the identity of income tax payers and the amount of taxes paid by them before their readers, in accordance with the law.

The failure of the late Congress to meet the issue, although in some quarters the hope was entertained that an effort would be made to repeal the publicity provision at its final session, has put the situation squarely up to the nation's highest appelate tribunal.

"As soon as practicable" is the official pronouncement of Treasury officials in response to inquiries as to when a public inspection of the 1924 income tax returns may be permitted.

These officials are making no effort to disguise their profound hope that the U. S. Supreme Court will hand down a decision that will close to the public all income tax returns, and thereby render impossible newspaper access to the 1924 taxes.

But far more than the tangled question of whether income tax returns should be submitted to the public gaze is the access denied the public to the records of the special taxation investigating committee of which U. S. Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, is chairman.

Newspaper correspondents were amazed when John Carson, Senator Couzens' secretary and a former newspaper man, made the announcement this week that whatever testimony is given before the committee between now and June 1, when the authority given the committee by the Senate to continue its investigation during the present Congressional recess will Expire, will not be permitted to find its way into the newspapers, at least until Congress reconvenes.

As Congress does not meet again in regular session until December next, although there is still talk of a special session in the Fall, the pronouncement of Mr. Carson, speaking for the committee chairman, if permitted to stand, simply means the public will not know what is transpiring behind the bolted doors of

The committee proposes to devote considerable further time this spring to its probe of taxation, but according to Mr. Carson not even the transcript of the testimony heard by it is to be seen by newspaper men. Evidently the greatest secrecy is to veil the hearings conducted by the Senatorial representatives of newspaper readers respecting matters of public record in the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Although U. S. Senator William H. King, one of the committee members, has fought for open sessions and unrestricted publicity since the committee investigation was started last spring, newspaper men have been hampered by unusual secrecy in their efforts to learn all that a committee duly appointed and authorized as the representative of a public legislative body has done to justify the charges of its chairman that high tax officials have been guilty of gross incompetence, if not of criminal negligence.

The committee has met behind closed doors from the outset of its investigation. Meagre parts of the testimony given before it have been permitted to reach reporters, but in such restricted form as to put them to considerable unnecessary trouble in their efforts to furnish their newspapers with legitimate news.

For a while it was the practice in Senator Couzens' office to furnish a single typewritten transcript of the hearing of the previous day. First come, first served was the policy pursued, and writers were forced to wait in turn for an opportunity to scrutinize many pages of testimony given 24 hours before.

Since then only those parts of the testimony it was decided should be made public have been distributed in printed form, but it has been stipulated that no newspaper man should be entitled to more than one copy. Some correspondents have openly resented the inference implied that if they were supplied with more than one copy the additional ones might find their way into channels not associated with legitimate news gathering.

But even the single copies have been restricted to what are known as hearings six, seven, eight, nine and ten. Those designated numerically as one, two and three have been refused newspaper men, while four and five have been available to them only through the Secretary of the Senate with whom only those transcripts it was deemed desirable for the public to have access to have been filed.

When it is considered the committee met almost daily during December, January and February, the scantiness of the news allowed correspondents visiting Senator Couzens' office at the Capitol, and the difficulties imposed upon them by the unusual secrecy prevailing there, may be realized by those familiar with the task of the trained reporter.

Newspaper correspondents have had a similar experience with the prohibition phase of the committee investigation. Although the committee conducted its private inquiry into prohibition enforcement weeks ago, copies of the testimony are yet to be printed, although the usual single typewritten transcript, 24 hours old, was available the day following each secret hearing.

The palpable efforts made to throw newspaper correspondents off the track of the committee investigation have merely served to emphasize further the increasing troubles besetting them as a result of frequent sessions of Senate and House committees from which they are frequently barred with the rest of the public, sessions described as "executive" to cloak the secrecy adopted to prevent publicity being given to testimony on matters of public concern, and to permit the distribution of "doctored" reports among the press whose representatives are so often criticized by Senators and Congressmen for not printing the truth when it is so often denied them by those very Senators and Congressmen, or their secretaries.

Reporter's Story Praised in Senate

Robert Barry, of the Washington staff of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and the New York Evening Post, this week drew praise from Senators for the story he wrote March 17 on the defeat of Charles B. Warren's nomination for U. S. Attorney General. The story was read in the Senate Chamber at the request of Senator Pat Harrison. Senators commenting on it said it proved that members of the press gallery knew more about inside politics than many of the nation's veteran lawmakers.

Kelly Joins Cooperative Magazine

John Tyrone Kelly, formerly managing editor of the Fourth Estate, and previous to that for many years with the New York Evening World has joined the staff of The Farmers' Co-operative National Magazine, published in Washington.

SENATE PRESS GALLERY PACKE

Warren Fight Draws Washington Cor in Full Force

Not even during the tense World W and League of Nations days has the Se ate Press Gallery presented a more ar mated and crowded scene than it d when the Senate rejected Monday t nomination of Charles Beecher Warr as Attorney General for the second tim

The dramatic news value of the o casion drew most of the Washingt correspondents to the gallery until ev standing room was at a premium, a late comers found it impossible to squee themselves into the packed benches a chairs reserved for active newspaperme

Veterans of the Washington corps correspondents mingled with the ne comers. The woman reporter was mu in evidence. The big press room b hind the doors opening upon the galle resounded with the clicking of ma telegraph keys and typewriters. Co boys scurried to and fro. James Preston, the gallery custodian, mai tained, however, his traditional calm d ring all the excitement and hubub. H was nearly mobbed when he remarked one group of correspondents after it w all over, "Well, I remember that back the Civil War days—"

In New Orleans It's

THE MORNING TRIBUNE

(Published week-day mornings)

THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM

(Published week-day afternoons)

THE ITEM TRIBUNE

(Published Sunday mornings)

Sold to National Advertisers at a combination rate 15c a line week-days and 18c a line Sundays.

It covers an ideal test market used by

National Advertisers

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.

National Representatives

Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

NEW YORK STATE

Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities

Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely by

THE DAILY ARGUS of Mount Vernon

THE STANDARD STAR of New Rochelle

(Both Members of ABC)

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.

Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.

Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

Faith—

THE BASIS ON WHICH WE ENJOY A BUSINESS RELATIONSHIP WITH EVERY NEWSPAPER WE SERVE

Our COMPLETE checking service handles the entire detail work of supplying "checking proofs" to every agency and advertiser promptly—and —efficiently.

WE DO IT ALL

from a few complete copies.

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

IN National Advertising during 1924 the New York Evening Journal led all other New York evening newspapers in the essential divisions of advertising directed to consumers buying through retail stores.

FIRST

in National Advertising of:

Food — Furniture
Men's Wear — Toilet Articles
Women's Wear — Beverages
Shoes — Jewelry
Tobacco

NEW YORK JOURNAL

America's Greatest Evening Newspaper

INDUSTRIAL TITAN

PENNSYLVANIA leads every State in the amount of capital invested and in primary horse power engaged in manufacture. It also leads all other States in manufacturing production when the mines and quarries operating in Pennsylvania are considered.

PENNSYLVANIA annually manufactures merchandise valued at approximately $7,000,000,000. Employees thus engaged number approximately 1,500,000 and their annual payroll is $1,750,000,000.

PENNSYLVANIA stands first in total production of mineral wealth, and first in coal, coke, cement, stone, sand, gravel, natural gas, pig iron, clay products and lime. Nearly a third of all Portland cement made in the United States comes from Pennsylvania. The production exceeds 30,000,000 barrels.

PENNSYLVANIA has continued to maintain her place as the Keystone of the country in industry, manufacture, mining and agriculture, and it is only natural that she should receive first thought when a national advertising campaign is under consideration. Use these top-notch newspapers of the State.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Allentown Call .....(M)	29,446	.10	.10
*Allentown Call .....(S)	19,425	.10	.10
†Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	5,725	.03	.03
†Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,189	.029	.029
*Chester Times .....(E)	15,507	.055	.055
†Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,529	.035	.03
*Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,212	.02	.02
*Easton Express .....(E)	21,439	.07	.07
Easton Free Press .....(E)	12,711	.05	.05
*Erie Times .....(E)	26,258	.08	.08
*Harrisburg Telegraph .....(E)	40,487	.095	.095
Hazleton Plain Speaker....(E) / Hazleton Standard-Sentinel.(M)	19,510	.06	.06
*Mount Carmel Item .....(E)	4,409	.025	.021
*Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,375	.035	.035
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(E&M)	16,284	.08	.07
*Scranton Times .....(E)	41,414	.12	.11
*Sharon Herald .....(E)	6,568	.0285	.0285
†Stroudsburg Record (E) Press..(M)	8,078	.045	.045
*Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	4,564	.025	.021
*Warren Times-Mirror .....(E&M)	7,579	.036	.036
†Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,358	.06	.06
†West Chester Local News.....(E)	10,883	.04	.04
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader ....(E)	23,775	.08	.06
*Williamsport Sun .....(E)	19,766	.07	.07
†York Dispatch .....(E)	18,527	.05	.05
†York Gazette and Daily.....(M)	17,604	.05	.05

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

CAUSES OF COMPOSING ROOM WASTE DISCUSSED BY PRINTER

Superfluous Instruction Blanks On Ad Copy Waste Time and Money, He Says—Suggests Better Proofs and Accurate Copy Reading

By A PRACTICAL PRINTER

IT is often claimed by publishers that the cost of production in the composing rooms of some of the metropolitan Eastern newspapers is far in excess of that of the smaller Western or Southern daily, and this discrepancy, as a rule, is blamed upon the individual printer. It is to correct this and other erroneous impressions, and to acquaint the employer with some of the real causes of excessive costs of typesetting, etc., on the larger papers, admitting that these conditions do in fact obtain to a degree, that these suggestions are tendered.

If the Western or Southern printer is more productive than his Eastern brother it is only because he does not work under so many restrictions and handicaps. He is more often carefully tried out and then placed in the position in which he most aptly fits, being left unhampered to do the work assigned to him. That is the man who produces results.

Of course, the higher cost of living confronts the printer in New York City, in particular, thus necessitating a higher working scale. One would naturally suppose, however, that with the latest of improved printing machinery and equipment the advanced methods of production and the highest class of skilled labor at its command, the metropolitan newspaper could at least be produced at the minimum cost, comparatively, of that of its smaller contemporary that has not these advantages. If it is not, then the reasons are multiple.

It is in the composing room that the principal costs of production are encountered, hence the greater its efficiency the greater the success of the paper itself. And yet how many of the shortcomings of other departments are blamed upon the printer!

Take, for instance, the preparation of advertising copy. In at least one large composing room I have in mind, more obstacles are placed in the way of the printer to prevent him from doing his work expeditiously and correctly than I have ever elsewhere noted—and I speak from a country-wide experience. Innumerable blanks emanating from the advertising department—alteration, "early run," "don't duplicate," correction and other blanks—and, in addition, correspondence between the advertising department and the advertiser, much of it of a cumbersome, confusing and annoying character so far as the work in hand is concerned, are attached to each and every piece of ad copy that is handled by the compositor. Frequently this mass of superfluous paper is attached to a 10 or 14 line ad, and this must pass through several hands—the layout man, linotypist, ad compositor, the man at the proof press, and then to the proof room; back again to the ad desk, the linotypist and the compositor for correction, and then again to the proofroom for revision, etc. Figure out the amount of time lost in the handling of this blank-burdened copy if you can! Each and every man to whom it comes must spread it out and search through the mass of papers for any special instructions relating to its preparation or insertion that may not appear on the face of the copy itself, where it should be. In its constant handling many unnecessary and expensive errors occur that are not due to the printer or proofreader. The copy becomes worn, torn, disarranged, and often the proofreader has difficulty in deciphering any part of it correctly. Result, the setting of the ad has in itself cost two or three times what it should cost.

And yet all this is done perhaps to save the accounting department a few moments' time, or the employment of a competent, practical man who is able to estimate the added cost of the author's alterations, etc., easily and readily. The delays caused in the handling of badly prepared ad copy, the employment of a surplusage of blanks, etc., in this one office will run into tens of thousands of dollars yearly—enough to bankrupt the average but better systematized newspaper. Further, the correct time spent on the composition or alteration of ads so prepared is seldom, if ever, set down by the compositor; thus the main object of one of the excess blanks is at once defeated.

The remedy: A simplified system of small stickers denoting "early run," alterations, corrections, etc., that will not add to the cumbersomeness of the copy to be handled, and the employment of a thoroughly practical man in the accounting or advertising department who can readily compute time and expense of typesetting, alterations, etc., where customer is to be charged for same. The cost in the saving of paper and printing alone would justify the employment of this one man, to say nothing of the many thousands of dollars saved yearly through waste of time by the printer, as explained.

In this same office are the finest proof presses I have ever seen. Every facility is provided for the taking of good proofs, and yet the proofs are the worst I have ever seen. Many thousands of proofs are sent out to advertiser patrons that are practically unreadable, and are returned thus as insert copy, almost undecipherable to the corrector or proofreader. Having had to complain to the heads of the department having the presses in charge, because of the constant tax on the eyes in reading these proofs, I was told merely to do the best I could—that the boys on the proof presses had more than they could do.

These same boys are allowed to gather up copy indiscriminately, roll it up carelessly and send it to the proofroom, there to be sorted out and placed in order by the proofreader before the proof can be read—a rather expensive process in loss of time, wear on the nerves and eyesight of high-priced men that is altogether uncalled for. And these same proof boys, as the future printers of this office, are thus permitted to begin their apprenticeship under a system that encourages a thorough annihilation of ideals.

The head of any department is responsible for the efficiency of the employes of that department; no other rule can apply. Boys, or men, allowed to do their work without regard to efficiency are a heavy liability and never an asset to an office. Again, the leakage here is immense and yearly mounts into thousands of dollars through the enforced loss of time by the journeyman printer and proofreader. It should and could be easily remedied.

Almost every newspaper worthy the name has its own style (rules of capitalization, hyphenating, etc.), most of it very simple, yet how little followed! Here, perhaps, is the source of the greatest expense to a New York newspaper. Through the medium of the "style book"—a system that has been favored in printing offices from time immemorial—the compositor's work is standardized for any particular office. Comes then the half-fledged copy reader and proceeds to put into practice the knowledge he has acquired in some impractical school of journalism. As this is all at variance with the rules of the office, and as his mind is far above such limitations anyway, the proofreader must employ the act of conformance, with the result that thousands of lines are reset and handled in correction every week through the incompetence of a self-sufficient copy reader.

It may be asked: "Since there is a style, why should bad copyreading make such trouble?" Well, the proneness of the present-day type of printer is enough of an answer to that. When it is suggested, as it has been frequently enough, that the editorial and proof rooms work in cooperation, to the end that much overlapping and duplication be eliminated, the suggester is usually treated with a superciliousness that bars any further attempts at improvement. Where copy is prepared in a workmanlike fashion, without superfluous marks and unnecessary punctuation (usually wrong anyway), the compositor can operate speedily, the proofs are comparatively clean, and the first edition doesn't look as if the pages had been pied.

In this day of speed the linotype operator has little time, even if he has the intelligence, to edit his copy as he goes, though some of the older school of printers do. It is this man's work that should be the standard of every newspaper office. His work stands out in clean proofs and economy of production. He comprehends the philosophy of "style" and does not permit the copy reader to victimize him by way of bad proofs. A copy editor whose work has to be recast at the expense of the printer's or proofreader's time is an exceedingly costly luxury. Count the cost, if you can.

Every head of a department should be peculiarly fitted for the place he fills. An apprentice who is allowed to do his work slovenly or carelessly cannot develop into a competent journeyman. Neither can the careless printer develop into a competent executive head. The highly skilled printer who takes pride in doing his work correctly seldom tarries long in an office where ability is not recognized or where the executive jobs are manned with lightweights.

And so, Mr. Employer, the solution, after all, reverts to you, if you are getting what you feel you are entitled to in return for what you are paying for skilled mechanical help. A composing room that has really skilled men at the head will, in time, automatically have a thoroughly organized, able working force. No organization or individual may presume to dictate to an employer as to the selection of his lieutenants or heads of departments.

Heart Attack Fatal to Roberts

William L. Roberts, 53, managing director of the New York Employing Printers Association dropped dead in the New York Advertising Club, Monday, March 16, from a heart attack.

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON

Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

120 West 42d Street New York

Plan Help for Ministers

Advertising clubs over the country are being urged from headquarters in New York to form groups of pastors and other churchmen to study the subject of church advertising.

Advertising men can render a great service to the churches and to their entire community by complying with this suggestion.

Many communities have found display advertising space of great benefit to churches, but the copy must be planned upon a broad basis to help the ideals of Christianity throughout the community.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A. A. C. W.
Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
383 Madison Ave. New York City

(ANADIAN PRESS FIGHTS :ROPOSED RADIO CURB

Iotest Copyright Bill Which They Claim Would Force Payment of Royalties for Songs Broadcast

Canadian newspapers operating broad-sting stations are much concerned over treatened legislation at Ottawa which ay interfere with their freedom of eration. The threat is contained in the w copyright bill now before Parliament. his bill seeks to extend the definition "performance" to include "any com-inication or broadcasting of such work wireless telephony, telegraphy, radio other kindred process." It is held at the effect of this construction of te word "performance" would be to pre-nt the broadcasting of any copyrighted ng or other work without the consent the holder of the copyright.

H. C. Hocken, M. P., publisher of the ronto Orange Sentinel, interprets the use as meaning that a copyright song uld not be broadcast on the radio in nada without payment of royalty to te owner of copyright, the effect being tat, whereas, WEAF, New York, or ay other American station would be e to broadcast it to Canada, the Can-ian broadcasting stations could not do s

Montreal La Presse, which owns and erates station CKAC, is urging radio steners in Quebec to give vigorous op-sition to the proposed law. It believes tat if it is put in force, it will kill oadcasting in Canada, to the detriment national sentiment and public spirit.

The copyright bill is now in the com-ittee stage and on March 13, opportunity as given the radio interests to voice their eticisms. At the outset, E. R. E. Chev-rr, M. P., sponsor of the measure, ndertook to modify the broadcasting ovision somewhat by introducing the rds, "when made for no gain or in-test, direct or indirect," by way of ex-eption. He admitted, however, that this uld not give relief to newspaper sta-ons, which obviously gained by the olicity received from their broadcast-ir operations.

The principal spokesman in opposition the clause was R. H. Combs, Toronto, o appeared for the Canadian Radio Tades Association and represented an irestment of over $30,000,000 in plant al equipment.

He pointed out that all broadcasting stions had music libraries containing rchased selections and selections given tis by music publishers for advertis-in purposes. It was unfair that the olishers should be given free adver-ting when they wanted it and at same tie have right to prosecute for royalty. Polishers apparently wanted to run with th hare and hunt with the hounds. They nted both free advertising and royal-ti. And as a matter of fact the author ha no control over musical works what-ev; as a rule he sold his copyright to th publisher.

roadcasting stations, Mr. Combs maintained, could not be operated at a ga. If musical compositions could on be broadcast on royalty basis, then th demands of the public would have to be met from the United States. The crstal set users would hear nothing and th owners of the big sets would get nothing but United States programs. He claimed that there should be no such discrimination as this between the United States and Canada.

WEEK'S AD TIPS

N. W. Ayer & Son, 309 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Has secured the account of the Rollin Motors Company, Cleveland.

Barrows & Richardson, 19 West 44th street, New York. Making contracts with some western newspapers for the Gorham Company, silversmiths, Providence.

Thomas E. Basham Company, Inter-Southern Building, Louisville. Placing orders with some Pacific Coast newspapers for the Kentucky Tobacco Company, "Black Leaf 40," Louisville.

George Batten Company, 383 Madison avenue, New York. Renewing contracts with newspapers for a Spring campaign for the Armstrong Cork Company, Armstrong Linoleum, Lancaster.

Biow Company, 9 East 40th street, New York. Making contracts with newspapers in New York and vicinity for the Van Camp Packing Company, pork and beans.

Blackett-Sample-McFarland, 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Reported to be placing account of the Green Circle Products Company, chewing gum, Chicago.

Blaine-Thompson Company, Fourth National Bank Building, Cincinnati. Reported to be placing account for Warner Bros. Motion Pictures, New York.

Bloomington-Weiler Advertising Agency, 1420 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Reported to be placing account of the Edward Schmidt Company, beverage, Philadelphia.

Caples Company, 225 East Erie street, Chicago. Making contracts with western newspapers for the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Company, Chicago.

Collins-Kirk, Inc., 750 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making contracts with some western newspapers for James S. Kirk Company, Chicago.

Dauchy Company, 9 Murray street, New York. Has secured the following accounts: R. U. Depapenha & Company, New York, manufacturers and importers of food products; De Graus Aymer & Company, New York, manufacturers of marine supplies and The Simplex Specialty Company, New York, manufacturer and distributor of hardware novelties.

Dorland Advertising Agency is to open a Chicago office in charge of Frank Feldman, formerly of Lord & Thomas, to handle the newly secured account of the Cellucotton Products Company (Kotex), Chicago.

Dorrance, Sullivan & Company, 130 West 42nd street, New York. Will place orders in New York, New Jersey and New England States for the Adair Realty & Mortgage Company, New York.

Erwin, Wasey & Company, 844 Rush street, Chicago. Six hundred line copy being sent out on the Quaker Oats Company (Full-o-pep chicken feed), Chicago.

Erwin, Wasey & Company, 844 Rush street, Chicago. Placing account of Associated Shipper of Florida Grapefruit.

Gardner Advertising Company, 350 North Michigan Boulevard, Chicago. Reported to be placing account of the Chicago Roller Skate Company, "Cusher" shock absorbers, Chicago.

Glaser & Marks, Inc., 234 Boylston street, Bsoton. Placing orders with some New York newspapers for the Goudey Gum Company, "Oh Boy Gum," Boston.

Laurence Gumbiner Company, 9 East 41st street, New York. Has secured the following accounts: Freed Eiseman Radio Corporation, Brooklyn; Guy T. Gibson, Inc., perfume, New York; Stickel Company, "Kurlash," Rochester, N. Y.; F. A. Patrick (North Country Loom Division) Duluth; Loft, Inc., Loft cocoa, New York.

Gundlach Advertising Agency, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Has secured the account of the San Telmo Cigar Manufacturing Company, Chicago, and a general list of papers will be used.

Kling-Gibson Company, 310 South Michigan avenue, Chicago. Has secured the account of Lyon & Healy, musical instruments, Chicago.

H. K. McCann Company, East Ohio Gas Building, Cleveland. Reported to be placing account of the Laundryette Manufacturing Company, electric washing machine, Cleveland.

Eugene McGuckin Company, 1211 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Reported to be placing account of Norris, Inc., candy, Atlanta.

Arthur Rosenberg Company, 110 West 34th street, New York. Has secured the account of the Karlin Laboratories, makers of Amegin, New York.

Roberts & MacAvinche, 30 North Dearborn street, Chicago. A list has been prepared on Cluett Peabody Company, Troy, New York.

Stack Advertising Agency, 29 East Madison street, Chicago. Copy being distributed generally to newspapers on Northern Pacific Railroad, St. Paul, Minn.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 410 North Michigan boulevard, Chicago. Schedules to be issued soon on the Celotex Company, Chicago, to metropolitan centers where they have large distributing connections or dealers in eastern and southeastern states.

Minnesota A. P. Members to Meet

Minnesota members of the Associated Press will hold their semi-annual meeting in Minneapolis, April 4, as guests of the Minneapolis Journal. Frank A. Day, publisher of the Fairmont Sentinel, is president of the state association.

Oregon Dailies Merged

The two daily newspapers of Albany, Ore., the Democrat and the Herald, which were consolidated recently, have come out in their new form under the heading, Albany Democrat and Herald. It is announced that the merged paper will be kept free of political affiliations.

Oregon Paper Loses Suit

The Marshfield (Ore.) Times and M. C. Maloney must pay $1,500 damages to A. K. Peck, a jury has decided. The suit centered in a Ku Klux Klan fight.

Cincinnatus Would Have Approved the Plus Plan

WHEN Col. Israel Ludlow named the city of Cincinnati he was honoring an organization of Revolutionary officers, but also inadvertently, the Roman general Lucius Quintius Cincinnatus. The latter, so history tells us, dropped his plow to win great military honors and then returned to his farm. As a general, Cincinnatus was a great believer in the use of Plans.

Today the publishers of the Cincinnati Post and the Cincinnati Enquirer, two nationally known newspapers, show the same appreciation of Plans, by selecting the Imperial Plus Metal Plan to keep their type metal up to its highest efficiency and to add years to its period of usefulness.

The Plus Plan Is Successful

Here's a plan that works—it's successful! That is plainly evidenced by its growing popularity. Hundreds of publishers of American newspapers will attest to the reliability and economy of the Plus Plan as a means of getting the most out of their type metal. Let us send you this interesting plan.

Imperial METAL

Linotype—Monotype—Intertype
Stereotype
Elrod—Ludlow—Linograph—Thompson

Imperial Type Metal Co.

Philadelphia—Cleveland—New York—Chicago

BEST BY ACID TEST
TRADE MARK REG.

98.2%

Circulation coverage of all the homes in NORRISTOWN, PA.

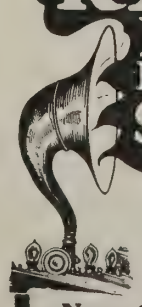
when you advertise in the

Norristown Times Herald

National Representative
PAUL BLOCK, Inc.
New York Detroit
Chicago Boston

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"



The World
MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

All Louisiana and MISSISSIPPI Listens In For RADIO NEWS in the NEW ORLEANS STATES

The state's representatives in the National Field—
THE JOHN M. BRANHAM CO.
New York — Chicago — St. Louis
Atlanta — Detroit — Kansas City
San Francisco—Los Angeles

New Orleans States

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities

TRADING POPULATION
167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

N. Y. REPORTER GOES GUNNING FOR FAKE PRINCES AND BAGS TWO

Max Lief of the Daily News Unmasks Two Suave Pretenders to Royalty Who Duped Society and Government Officials—One Deported Last Week

By MAX LIEF

H. R. H. PRINCE ZERDECHENO Mohammed Saide became an ocean-liner passenger last Friday—by request of the United States immigration authorities.

The deportation of this mogul of royal masqueraders, self-styled the Emir of Kurdistan, who so completely hoaxed editors, reporters, lawyers, statesmen, movie stars, society folk and others, ends a remarkable career of unmitigated gall that still leaves me gasping for air.

And I say that after being the prince's newspaper Nemesis for three years, through no choice or fault of my own. For I still marvel at the audacity of this man who was flung into jails of Paris, London, Constantinople, and Washington; kicked out of France, England, Turkey, and now the United States—who not only persists in proclaiming himself a prince of the blood, but still gets people to believe him!

The curtain rises on the office of the managing editor of the New York Daily News. The time—winter of 1922. I had already had some minor success in the undoing of another royal vagabond—Harold Schwarm, the dish rag prince of New Britain, Conn., who had fooled New York by parading himself as Prince Louis Henri de Bussigny de Bourbon, heir to the throne of France. The time was deemed ripe by Managing Editor Payne for another prince-killing, and again I was appointed to do the princing.

Zerdecheno had come into the News office with a colorful autobiography, according to which he was the Crown Prince of Kurdistan, a province of Turkey, where he lived in his father's thousand-room palace with a harem of twenty-five beautiful girls presented to him by his indulgent parent on his 14th birthday.

There were 25,000 camels and 25,000 horses on his father's estate, the autobiography continued, as well as some thirty Renault and Rolls-Royce machines to climb the tortuous Kurdish mountains, which even a mule found difficult to ascend.

Tall, slender, bronze-skinned, a perfect composite of all the published books on etiquette, Zerdecheno boasted of his intimacy with the Morgans' Rockefellers, and Vanderbilts, and claimed the following royal relationships:

Nephew of the King of Egypt, first cousin of the King of Spain, second cousin of King Feisal of Mesopotamia, third or fourth cousin of Mustapha Kemal Pasha of Turkey, etc., etc.

"Confessions of a Crown Prince, a Descendant of Pharoah," was the title of these extraordinary memoirs, for publication rights to which he asked only $25,000, to pay his American hotel bills and a few other trifling expenses.

Later, I discovered the prince had almost induced a New York publisher into buying these memoirs at that price, by getting into the good graces of the publisher's beautiful wife.

Up to this time the prince had incurred some newspaper publicity by marrying, in the Mohammedan custom, Kitty Spigli, a so-called Kentucky heiress and belle, who has been his constant consort in all his triumphs and trials, prison or otherwise. Other than this, and the fact he had been crashing the gates of New York society for two years, we knew nothing about the man.

How to investigate and establish the faker's identity? We knew he was a faker. He changed his stories with each interview. He spoke broken Turkish and very little French. His crested coat-of-arms on his visiting cards, which he so graciously autographed for me with the royal signature, was a ridiculous mixture of occidental and oriental insignia.

MAX LIEF

My investigation took me on a wearied roundof lawyers, financiers, society debutantes and dowagers, and others who all swore by him. I made the rounds of the British, French, Turkish, and other consular offices of New York to see what they knew about him. Only my good friend, Shah Mir Effendi, the Turkish vice-consul, seemed to agree with my suspicions, and even then Shah Mir wanted to go slowly.

At times I felt almost ashamed of what I was doing—feeling like a detective or spy, hounding a released convict.

I kept on Zerdechno's trial for two or three weeks. It took some time before I discovered one of his names was Jay Bonsou; that he had been a salesman for a Chicago commercial firm, and that his royalty consisted solely in being a knight of the road, a prince of Pullman smokers, and a king of hotel lobbies.

On Tuesday, No. 14, 1922, I wrote the first of a series exposing the Quince Prince. And when the first story broke, the tips came into the office thick and fast via telephone and letter. They were from all sorts of people who had known or had dunned the prince—from tailors and hotel managers he had gypped, from gullible Social Register personages upon whose fancies and pocketbooks he had played.

Well, the News ran the series for a week. We received numerous phone calls from the prince's lawyers threatening libel suits. Finally, Zerdecheno fled from the Pennsylvania Hotel, one of the numerous hotels he had gypped. His imperial baggage was seized in default of an unpaid bill for $274, and booking passage for Europe, he fled under the very eyes of the United States immigration inspectors, armed with a warrant from Washington for his arrest for entering the country through Canada without a passport.

Nothing more was heard of the wily poseur until we received cables from abroad about the prince's six months' and three months' incarceration respectively in London and Paris prisons for hotel gypping.

The London press played the story of his international career, and discovered he had been a Whitechapel pants-presser only a few years before.

But the story did not end there.

One day last summer, I was sitting in a lunchroom, perusing the photographic page of the New York Herald Tribune.

There, in all the accustomed trappings of his pseudo-aristocratic career—frock coat, striped zebra trousers, high hat, cane, and waxed mustache was a picture of the "EMIR OF KURDISTAN, one of the distinguished passengers who arrived from Europe on the Homeric yesterday."

The cat had come back.

I hurried to the city room after cutting the picture out and showed it to Col. Frank Hause, the city editor. Frank sent to the morgue for all of Zerdecheno's pictures and together we compared them with the photo clipping.

There was no mistake about it. It was the prince! He had passed down the gangplank of the Homeric under the shrewd scrutiny of ship news reporters and custom officials alike.

As slick and as suave as ever, investigation proved he had come over on a diplomatic passport from England, giving his address in care of the State Department at Washington, and coming through with colors flying and baggage unexamined, claiming diplomatic immunity!

The man who had put over a visit to President Harding at the White House, who had been ignominously exposed in print, now claimed friendship with Secretary of State Hughes and was headed for a comeback!

The News again exposed him, with the result that he was thrown into jail in Washington by the Labor Department authorities. Released on bail, the prince filed papers in a million-dollar libel suit against the News, suing me for an additional cool million—probably the most flattering tribute I have received in my newspaper career. And speaking of suits, he ordered six from a Washington tailor, for which he never paid!

Zerdecheno has just been deported from Ellis Island, as an undesirable alien. Since the two exposures I have met him several times—once in the Turkish consul's office, when we almost came to blows. Another time it was in a fashionable Fifth Avenue photographer's office, where he had come in full uniform regalia to pose for pictures; another, in the lobby of the Equitable building, where he had evidently gone to visit his lawyers—he has visited almost every one in town.

But anyway, I hope he's my last prince. I'm tired of princing. Since coming to the News four years ago I have been reporter, rewrite man, feature writer, column conductor, radio critic (Pax vobiscum!) and now, under the Burns Mantle, in the dramatic department.

But I'm through with princing forever.

WORLD PIONEERS I COLOR GRAVURE

Will Launch 4-Page Section in Sep and Flesh Tones March 22—Printing with European Color Press

The New York World on March 2 will start printing four pages of its eigh page Sunday gravure section in color

The color feature a combination sepia and flesh tone is the product of printing press of Continental manufa ture, purchased a year ago by the Worl

"It will mark the first development experiments with this press, which are willing to present to the public, b it is not yet perfect," J. F. Bresnahan, t World's business manager said.

"The press is capable of printing six colors and is designed to make perfe registration. Whether or not we w ever be able to develop the full six-col idea for newspaper work, we don't kno

"Our experimentations so far ha proved very expensive."

The press prints the gravure-col combination at a speed of about 5,0 copies an hour, he said. It was built the Societe Alsacienne de Constructio Mecaniques, Mulhouse, Alsace Lorrai France. The folder it uses was made the Koenig & Bauer factory at Wurt burg, Bayern, Germany. L. C. Owe the World's production manager, made special trip abroad last year to negoti its purchase.

Adds Saturday Comic Section

The Great Falls (Mont.) Leader, e ning daily, recently added a four-pa colored comic section to its Saturd evening issue.

"Some Things We Do—And Some Things We Don't" is a booklet that would interest you. Write for it.

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

Directory of Leading Feature

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

CIRCULATION BRINGERS
Famous fiction of all lengths.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

"S T O R I E S"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.,
2044 Margaret St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Fashions

WEEKLY STYLE PHOTO SERVICE.
20 latest fashions and captions weekly.
More than 100 papers use it. Write for low rate.
Styles Service Syndicate, 353 5th Ave., N. Y.

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that m radio fans regular newspaper readers. A plete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, C

FOR LARGE AND SMALL PAPERS
A non-technical, weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LES
The Standard Religious Feature of Amer Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of contin publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Tim
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

THOMAS A. EDISON tells about himself in "My Deafness Helped Me to Hear the Phonograph"—one of a series of articles in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan for April. Among other things Edison mentions his job as newsboy on the Grand Trunk Railway during Civil War days. How he got Mr. Fitz, then of the Detroit Free Press, to trust him for a thousand newspapers at the time of the Battle of Shiloh reads as interesting as any bit of fiction in the series.

Mr. Edison is a great newspaper reader. He says:

> I read three newspapers each day. If they are delayed or do not reach me I don't know what to do. The vast development of the newspaper and magazine has done more even than the motion picture to make hearing unnecessary.

In the same issue will be found some references to the newspaper experiences of O. O. McIntyre. They will be found in the article headed "My Dad".

* * *

FOR members of the art staff I want to make this entry: "Memories of a Cartoonist" by Walt McDougall in The American Mercury for March.

* * *

OTHER columns than mine have mentioned the fact that Carr Vatell Van Anda, managing editor of the New York Times, is away on a vacation. The New Yorker—a new weekly in Gotham—in its issue of March 7, prints a personality sketch of V. A., whom it calls the best newspaperman in New York.

One paragraph by way of quotation amply illustrates the mode of treatment:

> The fierce anonymity of Mr. Van Anda—it has had at times almost the note of a bridling virginity—has been preserved by a very network of disinclinations. Through the use of that instrument which he himself largely helped to forge, it has so long been given to him to say on whom a fleeting fame should be bestowed and from whom it should be withheld—a kind of professional noblesse oblige—he has made it a rule of his life that none of that fame should be apportioned to himself. Then, too, the sight of his "morgue" stuffed to choking with bulged envelopes of clippings about men who strutted briefly a year ago and are themselves today as anonymous as the Neanderthal man—that also must keep a certain amused disdain of publicity animate in the back of his thoughts. After finally his anteroom, with its daily spectacle of men offering up their immortal souls and women offering up their beautiful white bodies on their white-hot yearning for the front page, must make any managing editor a little sick of the whole inglorious scuffle and drive him further within the shell of his own fastidious privacy.

I think I need only one guess for the author.

* * *

FOR several reasons "The Yiddish Press" (Teachers College Press) by Mordecai Soltes ought to be in the library of the more important newspapers of the country. In the first place, it traces the growth and origin of the Yiddish press and gives material that cannot be found in any other volume.

The chapter which deals with the readers of this kind of journalism is illuminating. Possibly more startling information can be found in the chapter dealing with the author's study of some 1,500 editorials. Whatever may be true of the editorial page of English dailies the editorial columns of Yiddish papers, according to Mr. Soltes, are carefully read—especially by the laboring class.

But the section that unquestionably deserves the most thoughtful consideration is that dealing with conclusions reached. By way of example let me quote the following:

> The fact that the majority of the Yiddish publications have gradually introduced an English page or column, or have attempted to teach their readers English, indicates clearly that the leaders of the Yiddish press realize what changes the future may require, especially if the United States should adhere to its restrictive immigration policy.

Editorial writers, when they want to comment on such problems as immigration, will find this book by Mr. Soltes an excellent work of reference. In this connection the translation of editorials will be found helpful in order that one may have the other fellow's point of view. These editorials will be found in the appendix.

The author was formerly Director of Extension Education of the Bureau of Jewish Education and is now connected with the Jewish Welfare Board. He has produced a book that is both scholarly, in its mode of treatment and new in its subject matter.

* * *

THE official organ of the American Public Health Association is The American Journal of Public Health. Frankly, it is about the last place one would look for an article to mention in this department. Yet the January and February issues contain articles dealing with newspaper publicity.

The January issue opens with "The Newspaper Man's Point of View" by Lee A. White of the Detroit News. In the February issue appears "The Health Workers' Point of View" by Philip P. Jacobs, publicity director of the National Tuberculosis Association. These two papers, presenting both sides of this matter of newspaper publicity, offer many suggestions on the way health stories should be handled by the press.

When the American Public Health Association met in Detroit the News of that city prepared a special "Health Extra" which Mr. White reproduces in connection with his article. This "Extra" was made up of clippings from the newspapers of many cities. It was regular newspaper size and was used in a so-called clinic on newspaper publicity. Both of the articles which I have mentioned revolve around this "Health Extra."

A surprise awaits most newspaper workers who read these two articles. I found mine in the first on page 3.

THE Principles and Standards of Education for Journalism as adopted by American Association of Teachers of Journalism have been published in pamphlet form and may be obtained from Willard G. Bleyer, Director, Course in Journalism, University of Wisconsin, Madison. The pamphlet stresses the point that the requirements for instructors in journalism should include practical journalistic experience, and that the instruction should be vitalized by contacts with current journalistic conditions on the part of instructors.

* * *

SEVERAL items of interest to advertisers are printed in Gage Readings for February. Radio advertisers, for example, are urged to come down out of their "super-selective" clouds and talk to the man in the street in his own language.

Another item tells how the Italian Government has put into operation a system of advertising with postage stamps as the medium. These stamps are twice the size of the ordinary stamp: one half is used as a stamp and the other half contains the advertisement. One American sewing machine manufacturer has taken space: the rate approximates $220 for space on one million stamps.

The publisher of Gage Readings says that "your name on a postcard pays for a year's subscription." The address is North McCamly street, Battle Creek, Michigan.

* * *

Two interesting features in The Trib for February—the house organ of the Chicago Tribune—deserve special mention. One describes the work of the Public Service Bureau conducted by the Chicago Tribune which last year handled nearly 600,000 separate units of service. The other feature is Chapter IV of John Kelley's reminiscences of his cub reporter days.

A. HAMILTON GIBBS—a brother of Sir Philip Gibbs, the war correspondent—is the author of "Soundings" (Little, Brown & Co.)—the love story of a young English girl brought up by an artist father. When Mr. Gibbs was at Oxford University he started the undergraduate weekly, The Tuesday Review.

* * *

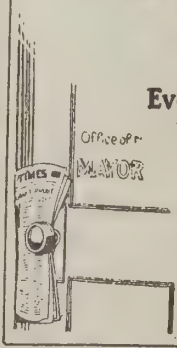
WILL IRWIN'S novel, "Youth Rides West," tells how the newspaper came to the pioneer town of Cottonwoods. I especially liked the description of the tramp printer.

* * *

BECAUSE of the attention crime news is attracting "Psmith, Journalist" (A. & C. Black, Ltd., London) by P. G. Wodehouse has special interest. Undoubtedly the Rosenthal case suggested the theme dramatized in the newspaper novel.

ONE out of every THREE Homes in Milwaukee receive

THE MILWAUKEE LEADER



"Unawed by Influence and Unbribed by Gain."

Advertising Representatives

FRALICK & BATES

Chicago, New York, Atlanta, Los Angeles

Detroit Times

Evening 220,000

Sunday 250,000

Banquet Tea

is another of the nationally famous accounts which has recognized the fact that the Washington, D. C., territory cannot be adequately covered without

The Washington Times

The futility of the "one paper buy" argument is nowhere better illustrated than in the experiences of its national advertisers.

PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH

New York City—Boston

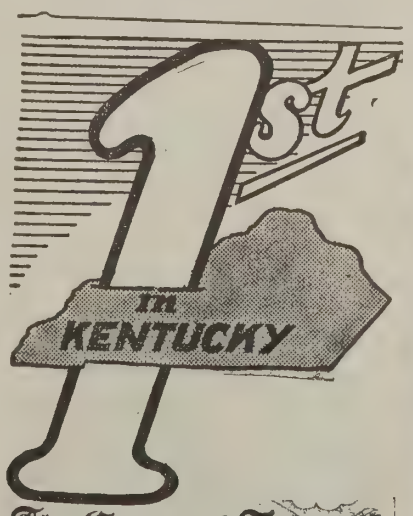
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.

Chicago - Detroit - St. Louis - Los Angeles

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post



MORNING AND SUNDAY

October circulation (net paid)

Daily Circulation 137,824

Sunday Circulation 197,347

Member A. B. C.

The Courier-Journal

THE LOUISVILLE TIMES

Represented Nationally By

The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD

Always Reliable

The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER

Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.

Peoria, Ill.

REPORTER AT BOTTOM OF BOSTON HOAX

Mysterious "Lafayette Mulligan" Who Liberally Extended Keys of City to Notables Was Boston Herald Writer

The mystery of the identity of Lafayette Mulligan, the person who gave away keys to the city of Boston to many notables including the Prince of Wales has been revealed as Fred R. Brine, a Boston Herald reporter. Intended as a harmless prank, the scheme of sending an elegantly worded letter of invitation to the Prince of Wales to visit Boston and the delivery of a key of the city on behalf of Mayor Curley, assumed international proportions. The management of the Boston Herald announced it knew nothing of the plan at its inception or during its execution and did not countenance it.

Brine revealed that in addition to the fictitious "Lafayette Mulligan" whose signature stood upon the Prince of Wales invitation to Boston, he also invented the personage of "Seumas Ignatius Mulligan" who rose to the defense of Lafayette when doubt was cast upon the latter's existence. The photograph of Seumas which appeared in many of the newspapers here was a discarded rogue's gallery photograph of ancient vintage.

The miniature key to the city sent to Bayard Tuckerman at the time an authentic key was sent to the Tuckerman's guest, the Prince, was picked up in a street gutter after the Elks' parade here last summer. Steel dies were ordered, stationery printed and every precaution taken to make the invitation to the prince appear authentic. Acknowledgment of the receipt of the key printed in the Boston papers came as a surprise. Lafayette Mulligan, named as social secretary to Mayor Curley, could not be identified. Mayor Curley promptly denied that he had issued an invitation to the prince or had sent the keys. The mayor's ire was aroused and he promptly planted the responsibility for the hoax on the shoulders of Frank W. Buxton, managing editor of the Boston Herald, who knew nothing of the affair and who declares that he would have squelched it immediately if he had known the plans.

Fuel was added to the excitement by the invention of the character of Seumas Ignatius Mulligan, a distinguished scion of the Mulligan clan. Seamus took a room in a West End hotel at $1.50 a day, but was never visited by reporters who dodged his mythical footsteps.

Art Writer Wins $100 Prize

The $100 prize offered by the Allied Artists of America, for the best published, constructive criticism of their twelfth annual exhibition recently held in the galleries of the American Fine Arts Society, New York, was awarded to Mrs. Helen Appleton Read, art critic of the Brooklyn Eagle.

Oklahoman City Editor Resigns

R. G. Miller, city editor of the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman, for the last five years, has resigned to become manager of the Chamber of Commerce at Bristow, Okla. Miller served five years on the New Orleans Item and States before going to Oklahoma in 1920.

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

Obituary

MRS. MARIE ANTOINETTE MURDOCK, 84, widow of the late Thomas Benton Murdock, of El Dorado, Kan., a widely known pioneer Kansas editor and publisher and a brother of the late Col. Marcellus M. Murdock, founder of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle, died at her home in Long Beach, Cal., last week. Mrs. Murdock assisted her husband in his newspaper and also his political work.

CHARLES L. KIRKPATRICK, 43, newspaper man of Pittsburgh, died at his home there March 15. Mr. Kirkpatrick worked for many years in New York, Cleveland and Pittsburgh. He was the first city editor of the Pittsburgh Sun.

W. D. GRIST, 59, for many years editor of the York (S. C.) Yorkville Enquirer, died last week of apoplexy.

CLARENCE E. WALLER, 49, vice-president of the Michigan Federation of Typographical unions, and past president of the Jackson, Mich., union, died at Jackson, last week following an operation.

ELMER G. HULL, former editor of the Orwell (O.) News-Leader, is dead.

CLARENCE W. EDMUNDSON, 54, for the past five years advertising manager for the Coffeyville (Kan.) Daily Journal, died recently at his home following a stroke of apoplexy.

MRS. LEN G. SHAW, wife of Len G. Shaw, dramatic editor of the Detroit Free Press, died at her home in Detroit last week. Burial was at Adrian, Mich., Mrs. Shaw's old home.

LAFAYETTE H. BEACH, 70, publisher of the Albion (N. Y.) Orleans County Republican, died March 13, in his home in that village. Mr. Beach had been publisher of the newspaper for 35 years. His brothers also are newspaper men, Fred Beach being with the Rochester Democrat-Chronicle and Robert Beach being with the Jamestown Morning Post.

J. H. MAXWELL, 77, pioneer Minnesota editor, died recently at Pomona, Cal.

Daniel S. Dougherty, 73, died at Centreville, R. I., March 12. He was editor and publisher of the Wappinger Falls (N. Y.) Chronicle, until 1886 when he moved to Southbridge, Mass., to become associate editor of the Southbridge Herald, a position he held for 18 years, when he retired from the newspaper field and removed to Centreville.

EUGENE H. PERDUE, 82, who was for 37 years business manager of the Cleveland Leader, died this week at his home in Cleveland. He was a director of the Associated Press for many years.

WALTER G. KNOPF, 53, for more than 25 years head of the stereotyping department of the Columbus, Ohio, State Journal, died this week after a long illness. His son, R. W. Knopf, is manager of the Knopf Advertising Company at Columbus.

WALTER L. JAMESON, 65, for 18 years in the Boston (Mass.) Transcript composing room, died in South Boston recently.

ELIZABETH MASON OVIATT REYNOLDS, mother of Howard Reynolds, southern representative of R. Hoe & Co., Inc., died recently. She was 101 years old at Washington, Conn., Oct. 25, 1823.

MRS. JOSEPH PULITZER DIES

Auto Crash Injury, Thought Slight at First, Proves Fatal

Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, wife of the second son of the late Joseph Pulitzer, died in a New York hospital Friday, March 13, of injuries caused by an automobile accident on Thursday night.

Mrs. Pulitzer's husband is editor and publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and secretary of the Press Publishing Company, publishers of the New York World and the Evening World.

Mr. Pulitzer, who was on a fishing trip along the Florida coast, was located at Long Key, Fla., through an Associated Press dispatch to the Miami Herald, which enlisted the aid of the Florida East Coast Railway dispatcher.

The funeral of Mrs. Pulitzer was held at 2.30 p. m., Monday afternoon, at the Pulitzer home on Barnes Road, St. Louis County. A private service was held later at Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Before her marriage in 1910, Mrs. Pulitzer was Miss Elinor Wickham, member of one of the oldest St. Louis families. The wedding ceremony was performed in her home there. Besides her husband, Mrs. Pulitzer leaves three children—Joseph Jr., nine years old; David, seven, and Elinor, two.

VETERAN CARTOONIST DIES

A. Wilbur Steele, Denver Post, Made Daily Drawing for 28 Years

A. Wilbur Steele, said to be the first American cartoonist to draw a daily cartoon for a newspaper, whose cartoons appearing for 28 years in the Denver Post have had a large influence upon the growth of the West and have been credited directly with many important reforms in Western affairs, died Thursday, March 12 at the age of 63, after a week's illness with pneumonia.

Steele was brought to Denver by his parents when four years old. The lad's first efforts at drawing were pen and ink "selling arguments" for grocers posted in the store windows of his father's grocery store.

After leaving college he joined the Rocky Mountain News, working for seven years on that paper. He joined the staff of the Denver Post in 1897.

Former Reporter Accidentally Killed

Richard H. Fox, 27, formerly a reporter on the staffs of the New York World and the New York Times, who resigned from the latter paper to become associated in the Marshall Stillman movement, accidentally shot and killed himself March 16, in the study of his parents' home in White Plains, N. Y. while cleaning a revolver. Fox a graduate of Columbia University, was in the army during the war.

San Francisco Chronicle
Leading Newspaper of the Pacific Coast
"Blankets" Northern and Central California
A clientele that can and does buy everything
National Advertising Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Co.
225 Fifth Ave. NEW YORK
360 N. Michigan Ave. CHICAGO

A Security Market
with complete newspaper financial service.
Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.
The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.
A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1924, *124,468 total net paid.
Cover the Buffalo Market with the
BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
*Present average circulation 129,834
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

THE First thought of those who advertise to Texans is usually
The Dallas Morning News
—the paper of Prosperity Zone

first! in OHIO
3,108,287 LINES
JANUARY 1st to FEBRUARY 28th, 1925
The Dispatch published during the first two months approximately 53% of all Columbus newspaper advertising and 447,195 lines more than all other Columbus newspapers combined.
In 1924 it exceeded the next largest Ohio newspaper by 2,500,909 lines.
NET PAID CIRCULATION
City 52,891
Suburban 23,639
Country 21,928
GRAND TOTAL.... 98,458
LARGEST IN CENTRAL OHIO
Columbus Dispatch
OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

NO STATE PAPERS IN TEXAS
Texas is too large to be covered by one, two, three or four newspapers.
Texas has some of the best newspapers published.
Among them
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
For information about Texas, ask Beckwith—He Knows

Los Angeles Times
The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.
World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

ANTI-GAMBLING BILL IS PASSED IN MICHIGAN

ct Prohibiting Publication of Betting Odds and Forecasts Expected to Become Law — Former Law Unconstitutional

LANSING, Mich., March 16.—Unanimous passage late last week by the state nate of the Bahorski anti-gambling ll, which would again outlaw the publation in Michigan or the disseminating i the state through newspapers of other stes of racing forms or information in ration to betting odds, forecasts early eactment of this measure. No serious oosition to the bill, which was the basis f a warm newspaper fight when it appired at the 1923 session under a differe name and with slightly different ovisions, has appeared in the house or en in the editorial columns of its fmer newspaper foes. The former bi, the Voorhies-Bahorski act, was eily passed and remained in force up til last December when it was thrown o on a technicality by the state supme court.

That the latest bill, like its predecessor, isone of the most stringent in its provions ever proposed in the United Stes is admitted. The opening clause, wich is virtually the same in the new bi as in the old, it is claimed would pohibit the writing of insurance in this ste if it were literally interpreted. It dclares, in part "It shall be unlawful fo any person . . . to take . . . frn any person any money or valuable thg with the agreement . . . that ar money or valuable thing will be paid ordelivered to any person where such pement or delivery is alleged to be or w be contingent upon the result of any ra, contest, or game or upon the happening of any event not known by the parties to be certain."

Perhaps the strictest section of the whle act is that portion of it relating to he publication of betting information. Tls portion of the bill absolutely prohilts such publication or distribution of nrmation of that character even after h contest has occurred. These provions, contained in Section Four; follow:

It shall be unlawful for any person, natural or artificial, or for the officers, agits, servants or employes of any corporation, directly or indirectly, individuall or by agent, servant, or employe, by means of any newspaper, periodical, poler, notice or other mode of publicatio or reproduction, to write, print, publis advertise, deliver, or distribute, or offe to deliver or distribute to the public or to any part thereof or to any person, an statement or information concerning the making or laying of wagers or bets or the selling of pools or evidences of betting odds on any race, contest or game or on the happening of any event or known by the parties to be certain, or any purported event of like character. Such acts herein prohibited may be deemed violations hereof when committed after any game, contest, race, or event; and the possession of evidence for the publication of any statement or information concerning the making or laying of wagers or bets or the selling of pools or betting odds, shall in the same manner be deemed a violation of this act, whether before or after the act evidenced thereby.

The few modifications in which the new bill differs from the old do not affect any of the sections relating to publication of betting information but they do, it is claimed, make the measure less liable to attack in the courts. Under the earlier act any person found on the premises of an establisment where gambling was found in progress was subject to the full penalty of the law. The new bill limits the extreme penalties to proprietors and assistants and affixes lighter penalties for frequenters."

Another precaution taken against possible action to have the act declared unconstitutional is a final section in which the legislature hereby declares that it would have passed the act and each section, subsection, sentence, clause, and phrase thereof, irrespective of the fact that any one or more other sections, subsections, sentences, clauses, and phrases be declared unconstitutional." It is declared, therefore, that decision to the effect that any part of the act is unconstitutional shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of the act.

Whether passage of the new act will be the signal for another intensive enforcement drive such as followed placing of the first law on the statute books is problematical. Newspapers containing racing information were seized on Detroit newsstands on the previous occasion and all out of state papers were forced to take measures to eliminate their racing forms from Michigan editions. Some papers merely blue-penciled those sections but it is doubtful that this would be considered compliance with the law were such a case to be taken to court.

That the original act did do much toward cleaning up gaming conditions and the operation of pools and booking agencies around Detroit is admitted and for that reason the new bill is believed to have added support. The Detroit News, ever since the old law was thrown out, has pointed out the trend toward reinstatement of the evil condition which formerly prevailed, citing instance after instance where gambling joints and bookmakers' stands have resumed operations.

Peru Daily Continuing

Continuation of the publication of the Peru (Ind) Daily Chronicle for which a trusee was appointed last week was made possible, after employes of the Peru Chronicle Publishing Company had filed liens to the amount of several hundred dollars alleged to be due in wages, by a deed of assignment made by the company to the Citizens' National Bank of Peru.

New Passaic Daily Planned

Harry H. Weinberger, lawyer and banker of Passaic, N. J., is planning establishment of a new daily newspaper there to be called the Passaic Morning Call. He informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER he was not yet ready to announce detailed plans.

N. Y. World's Oldest Employe Honored

William Jenkins on March 12, celebrated his 50th anniversary at the "case" for the New York World. In honor of his golden jubilee, a special session of the World Chapel of the composing room was called and Mr. Jenkins was presented with a set of resolutions and a smoking set.

Davis Golf Club Official

Robert H. Davis, of Frank Munsey publications, was recently elected president of the Golf Club of the Hardware Club, famous noon-day mecca of New York newspaper executives.

Long Beach Daily Broadcasting

The Long Beach (Cal.) Press-Telegram has started to broadcast from their own radio station on the roof of the new Press-Telegram building. Frank Goss, Sunday editor is in charge.

INDIANA, being right in the heart of things, commercially and geographically, means that advertising campaigns have a far reaching influence in all directions.

NATIONAL advertisers would do well to start in close to the center of things—and work from the center.

DISTRIBUTION, in Indiana, is greatly facilitated because of the highly developed means of transportation within the state.

INDUSTRIALLY, Indiana has great value since through position, she is superbly situated to capture wide markets and to secure cheap raw materials.

ADVERTISERS owe it to themselves and their products to carefully survey the Indiana field and its great possibilities and use the cheapest and most efficient mediums.

NEWSPAPERS, listed below, reach the greater part of the worth-while people of the state, and can be of great aid in helping National Advertisers to secure a firm foothold here.

A GIVEN territory, intensely cultivated, gives great satisfaction and soon popularizes merchandise Nationally Advertised. Try Indiana.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†Decatur Democrat ..... (E)		3,106	.025
*Evansville Courier and Journal...	(M) 27,839 (E) 11,230	39,069	.09
*Evansville Courier and Journal ..... (S)		32,840	.08
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette ..... (M)		31,502	.08
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette ..... (S)		34,520	.08
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel ..... (E)		41,938	.09
*Gary Evening Post-Tribune ..... (E)		14,196	.055
Hammond Times ..... (E)		16,553	.06
*Huntington Press ..... (M&S)		3,797	.025
*Indianapolis News ..... (E)		128,400	.25
*Lafayette Journal & Courier.....	(M) 7,605 (E) 12,900	20,505	.06
†††La Porte Herald-Argus ..... (E)		6,000	.025
*Newcastle Courier ..... (E)		4,517	.025
*South Bend News-Times	(M) 10,138 (E) 12,902	23,040	.06
*South Bend News-Times ..... (S)		21,298	.06
†South Bend Tribune .....(S) 19,388.....(E)		20,627	.06
*Terre Haute Tribune ..... (E&S)		22,830	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

DENY CONSPIRACY AGAINST DIRECT ADVERTISERS

(Continued from page 6)

assist the agencies association in carrying out the alleged combination and its alleged purposes.

(b) They deny that they ever adopted at their annual convention resolutions commending the alleged combination and declaring adherence thereto, or that they ever supplied the A. A. A. A. with copies of such resolutions.

(c) They show that the S. N. P. A. has at times secured information regarding advertising, financial responsibility of agencies, ability to render service as defined above, amount of business placed, and the personnel and character of agencies, and communicated such information to members desiring it. Such information is also collected, it is shown, with regard to a publisher member of the association. They deny that there is any agreement between the association and its members, or anyone else, with reference to this information or that any means exists for changing it, no matter what the information shows. They show that the association can only compel a members to pay his dues or cease his membership, and that a member is bound to do nothing else. They believe that members allow a percent to any agency financially and fairly entitled to it, for services rendered. They deny that they ever conspired with anyone about anything.

(d) They deny that information is exchanged among members to be used in carrying out the alleged combination, and that they or any of them supply any information to the A. A. A. A. for alleged similar uses by it or its members.

(e) They deny that they agreed among themselves to accept direct advertising at the so-called gross rate only and through the S. N. P. A. They show that no advertising comes to them or any any of them through the S. N. P. A. They also deny that they bring pressure and coercive measures to bear on any member of the association, no matter what rate he grants, to compel him to accept advertising at gross rates only and they also deny that they endeavor to compel any member of the association to accept advertising at the gross rate or at any rate.

(f) They deny that they or any of them, use any other co-operative means to effectuate the alleged combination.

Answer of A. A. A. A.—The agencies deny that they have at any time taken part in any such combination or conspiracy, and they deny that they have done or now do any of the acts set forth to effectuate any such combination or conspiracy, and referring to the correspondingly lettered sub-paragraphs specifically deny:

(a) That they have inaugurated or agreed to carry out any such combination by any co-operation among themselves or with any other persons, corporations or organizations.

(b) That any newspaper committee was appointed to take charge of any such combination.

(c) That any such announcement of any such undertaking was made by it or anyone for it.

(d) That any of the acts set forth in sub-paragraph (d) were done with the purpose or effect of prosecuting any such undertaking or promoting any such combination.

(e) That any pressure or coercion was ever used or exercised or that any threats of withdrawal of advertising were ever uttered by it or any of its members against anyone for any purpose directly or indirectly to prevent publication of advertisements from any advertiser or to fix or change his advertising rates.

(f) That any coercion was ever brought to bear upon any publisher by any means, and specifically deny that the booklet called "Clients of Members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies," or its distribution had any such purpose or effect.

(g) That any co-operation was sought or secured from respondent corporation in any such conspiracy or combination.

(h) That any co-operation was sought or secured from respondent publishers in any such conspiracy or combination.

(i) That any data or information was ever collected anywhere with any purpose or effect to promote or make effective any such conspiracy or combination.

(j) That any data or information was ever sent anywhere with any purpose or effect to carry out any such conspiracy or combination.

(k) That any such lists were compiled or sent out anywhere with any purpose or effect to promote or make effective any such conspiracy or combination.

(l) That any such use was ever made of any list to compel any publisher to cease, or fix or change his rates for certain advertising, and deny that threats of any kind were ever used by them against publishers for any purpose.

(m) That any agreements were ever secured from any publisher or group of publishers as there alleged or as a means of furthering any such combination or conspiracy.

(n) That any of the acts alleged in sub-paragraph (n) were performed, or any such information collected or used for purposes of any such conspiracy or combination.

(o) That respondents used any other co-operative means to carry out any such conspiracy or combination.

Answer of A. P. A.—Respondent denies all allegations in paragraph VIII, except that it is without sufficient knowledge to answer any of the allegations against respondent agency association and the respondent publishers association and its members. Respondent further denies that it has ever engaged in any combination or conspiracy with the other respondents or any of them or with any other persons, firms or corporations whatever, and specifically denies the allegations contained in the subdivisions. Respondent alleges that the facts in relation to its business operations are set forth in paragraph FOURTH of this answer.

Paragraph IX.—The commission complains that the effect of the alleged conspiracy or combination is to hamper, hinder, and obstruct national advertising throughout the United States; to restrict distribution of such advertising and the type-parts essential thereto to channels and upon terms dictated by the respondents; to restrict publication of national advertising to newspapers approved by the respondents; to prevent newspaper publishers from according net rates to direct advertisers; to compel national advertisers to employ respondent agencies, etc., etc.

Answer of S. N. P. A.—The publishers deny all the allegations and further plead that the contract for advertising is not a part of interstate commerce, that the use of advertising space in a newspaper is not a part of interstate commerce. They show that the acts of any and all of the respondents do not either restrain newspaper advertising or interstate commerce, but promote both.

Answer of A. A. A. A.—The agencies deny all allegations.

Answer of A. P. A.—Respondent denies all allegations.

Paragraph X.—The commission states that the acts above charged are to the prejudice of the public and constitute unfair competition within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Answer of S. N. P. A.—The publishers deny this allegation, and all others not already admitted or denied, and pray that the complaint be dismissed.

Answer of A. A. A. A.—The agencies deny this allegation and as a further and separate defense they allege:

I.—The American Association of Advertising Agencies was organized at St. Louis, on June 4, 1917, and then adopted a formal constitution and by-laws and declaration of purpose. Amendments thereto relate to amount of dues, election of officers and the like, and have not changed in any respect the form of the organization or its purposes.

II.—Throughout its activities, the American Association of Advertising Agencies and its members have been devoted to the establishment of principles and ethics that were and are calculated to enlarge and perpetuate successful and clean advertising at a cost that will insure a profitable investment to the advertiser and an appropriate return to publisher and agency. These principles and ethics have included unwavering and continuous opposition to any form of secret rebates and unfair discriminations and evil practices. And respondents further allege that these efforts by the agencies have been in protection and promotion of competition and fair practice in the entire field of advertising.

WHEREFORE, respondents pray that said complaint be dismissed.

Answer of A. P. A.—Respondent denies all allegations and states that it is not now and never has been engaged in interstate commerce and has not at any time ever done any unlawful or illega act, and that its business has always bee and still is in compliance with and auth orized by law. WHEREFORE, sai respondent respectfully prays that sai complaint be dismissed.

Attorneys for the A. A. A. A. ar McKercher & Link, New York; th S. N. P. A. is represented by Finlay Campbell, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and th American Press Association by Brodet Raphael.

N. C. Goodfellows Elect Wistar

C. W. Wistar, of the Charlotte, N. C Associated Press bureau was elected pre ident of the Goodfellows Club, compose of editors and traffic men of the A. P. i North Carolina, at the organization mee ing held recently in Greensboro. Milto Garges, of New York, chief of the tra fic department of the A. P., and U. I McCall, of Atlanta, Ga., Southern divi ion superintendent, were visitors at th meeting.

Does the defeat of Warren mean war between the President and the Senate?

What have been the consequences of such action in the past?

Was the President within his constitutional rights in re-submitting the nomination? Could he legally have given Warren a recess appointment?

The events leading up to and following upon each previous repection of a cabinet appointment were set out and the precedents covering points in dispute were given in a report mailed to all clients March 18.

EDITORIAL RESEARCH REPORTS

1425 G Street Washington, D. C.

ASSOCIATED EDITORS SERVICE

DAILY

Layon McDuffer—Comic by Payne.
"Kids" Pantomime—Comic by Striebel.
Quillen's Paragraphs.
"Aunt Het," by Quillen.
"Willie Willis," by Quillen.
Mothers and Their Children.
Golf as Champions Play It.
Color Cut-Outs.
Al Demaree's Sport Cartoons.
Word of Comfort.

WEEKLY

Boys' and Girls' Page.
Economists' Forum.
Auto Sense—Williamson.

SEMI-WEEKLY

Barrie Payne on Golf (Humor).
Individuality of Dress.

ASSOCIATED EDITORS, INC.

440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep—Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Woodward Bldg., Washington, D.C.

Our Features:
Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune
and others

The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

ATTENTION PUBLISHERS

C. B. HOLLISTER can be reached at the Ambassador Hotel, New York City, until further notice. Newspapers confronted with circulation problems and desiring large immediate paid-in-advance circulation gains are invited to communicate. In position to conduct one more big campaign before July 1st.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Newspaper Features

Intelligently Selected—Properly Prepared

Comics, Fiction, Cross-Word Puzzles, Weekly Features, Daily Fillers and Blanket Services.

Write for Sample Sheets

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York

Billboard Tax Bill Introduced

The first definite blow at billboard advertising ever threatened in Michigan is contained in a measure introduced in the lower house of the state legislature late last week by Rep. Joseph C. Armstrong of Detroit. The measure would place an annual license fee or tax of five cents per square foot on all signboards and billsboards, would place all such outdoor advertising under the jurisdiction of the department of public safety, would require a $10,000 bond of all persons or firms engaged in outdoor advertising as a business, and would place a number of other regulations on billboard publicity.

Silver Cup for Best Weekly

The El Reno (Okla.) American will present a silver loving cup to the weekly paper in the state having the best front page make-up, judged on the basis as that employed by the National Editorial Association in awarding its trophy last June.

112 Pages of Rotogravure

The San Francisco Chronicle, March 11, published a Special Edition to call attention to the forthcoming Diamond Jubilee of California. Besides its regular black and white edition the paper issued 5 rotogravure sections—two of 32 pages each and three of 16 pages.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

Printers' Outfitters.
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

For Sale.
Due to consolidation, the following machines are for sale: Duplex angle bar, double drive press; one Huber, two-revolution, four roller cylinder press. Both with motors and equipment. Miller saw, electric metal furnace, Model L Linotype and other equipment. The Democrat-Herald, Albany, Ore.

For Sale.
One Goss "Straightline" newspaper printing and folding press. Two-plate wide, 4 to 12 pages inset, 24 pages collected; eight columns 13 ems. Folders for either two or three folds. Samples of product furnished upon request, together with any other information sought by any person interested. This press is now taking care in colors of the Comic and Magazine Sections of the St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press, and can be released about July 1, 1925. Price and terms on application to Comptroller, Dispatch Printing Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.

USED BY THE

Johnstown Tribune
Johnstown, Pa.

We refer you to them for their opinion

CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO. CHICAGO — NAME, SERVICE, QUALITY, FAME — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE Conway Bldg. 111 W. Washington St. CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE Marbridge Bldg. Broadway at 34th St. NEW YORK

Used Newspaper Presses

SCOTT	16, 24, and 32 Page Presses.
GOSS	24-Page Press for black or color work.
HOE	Quadruple, Sextuple and Double Sextuple Presses.

Send for list of presses which are available for early delivery.

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY
441 Monadnock Block, CHICAGO
1457 Broadway, NEW YORK

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS
DUPLEX PRESSES
"OUR CUSTOMERS WRITE OUR ADS"
DUPLEX FLAT BED
"When we installed the Duplex your erector tutored an inexperienced man and he's still running the press.
AND IT RUNS, TOO!"
Waurika, Okla., News-Democrat
Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

The Mailing Point is often
The Breaking Point

In the chain of service between subscription order and delivery to the subscriber.

SPEEDAUMATIC equipment stops the break with the DIRECT IMPRINT and daily and accurate correction of the mail list.

Write for details.

The Speedaumatic Company
MANUFACTURING
THE MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM
817-825 WASHINGTON BLVD.
CHICAGO

Wilke's METALS
THE HIGHEST STANDARD

Write for Information Concerning

Wilke's Metal Insurance Plan
It Will Save You Money

Metals Refining Company
Hammond, Indiana
Warehouses in Principal Cities

MODERNIZE
your COMPOSING ROOM
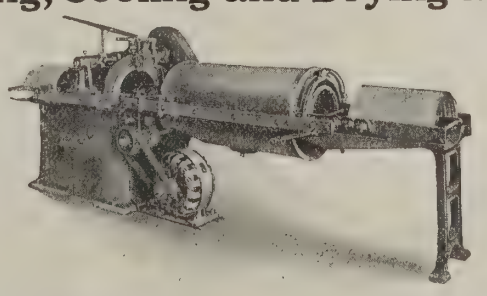
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMENT
Made in both wood and steel.
Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.
For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

N.Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Carried in Stock

Some outstanding and exclusive features of The Goss Combination Wet and Dry Matrix Roller: Patented stretching roller produces dry mats without a wrinkle. Both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Heavy cast-iron cylinders with forged steel shafts. Extra heavy bed—no racks—large enough to run chase with columns crosswise. Rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.



THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
417 South Dearborn St.
Chicago Ill.

Hoe Automatic Curved Plate Finishing, Cooling and Drying Machine

Trims, tail-cuts, shaves, cools and dries six plates a minute.

R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand St., New York City
7 South Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL. — also at DUNELLEN, N. J. — 7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

SELL YOUR NEW OR USED MACHINERY THROUGH EDITOR & PUBLISHER

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."

18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

6c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.

36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Man.
Experienced salesman, copy writer, manager, young, energetic, capable, pleasing personality desires permanent position with progressive daily where good constructive work will be appreciated and rewarded. A real opportunity more essential than initial salary. Record and references okeh. Address C-765, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
18 years' experience leading Metropolitan newspapers. Capable executive; convincing salesman. Thoroughly experienced building and promoting general retail advertising; well acquainted national field. Now employed; age 36, married. Address C-763, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Now employed seeking new connection. Twelve years' experience in selling advertising. Age 35. Thoroughly familiar with local display, automobile accounts and publicity, national accounts and service work, also classified advertising. Employed at present as Advertising Manager of middle western daily with circulation about 85,000. Not satisfied with future here. Can furnish best of references. Address Box C-750, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Thoroughly experienced; high record ability and character. Strong personality; aggressive; resourceful. Successful builder satisfactory accounts. Age 36, good physical and financial condition. Can develop, enthuse and speed up force. Handle hard key accounts; know copy that sells. Have vision, develop and hold business. Optimistic, intelligent selling policy. More business is matter of voltage and proper presentation. Will consider field regardless competition or condition. Welcome any test ability, character. Realize permanency and earnings depends satisfactory results. Know morning, evening, Sunday; cities 60- to 175,000. Enjoy respect and esteem publishers and advertisers. Equipped important work with future. Substantial daily; prefer east or mid-west, growing city. Give essentials night wire; Report short notice; can close now. Strict confidence. Address C-831, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman.
I want to sell your space to advertisers. I have successfully sold newspaper and outdoor advertising. Owing to recent amalgamation in the outdoor field I am open for a connection in which there is good money in return for good work. I can furnish best references. Answer Box C-848, care of Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Solicitor.
Some substantial daily is in urgent need of top-notch display solicitor to build new business and develop hard accounts. This substantial paper wants man of calibre; sure and safe producer, and has important work for him. Am thoroughly experienced, selling and copy. Strong personality. Place me any line to develop space. Character and record clean as the bank. Splendid address; successfull all lines display. Real asset any daily. Have nose for business and ability to produce and hold. Eleven years; five on one paper; age 34; ambitious. Record for new accounts, hard fields, strong competition. Average high, have confidence. Can prove statements and convince. East or mid-west city. Permanent position with future based on results. Outline the task and name the reward. Quick, definite decision necessary. Address C-832, Editor & Publisher.

A large number of competent and experienced advertising men are anxious to increase your lineage for you—Mr. Publisher.

If you want the valuable assistance of any of these men, tell them so in a Help Wanted ad in

Editor & Publisher

Situations Wanted

Advertising Manager—Solicitor.
With real record on small city daily wants to move to city of 20,000 to 40,000. Has proved ability to increase and hold business in the face of adverse conditions. College graduate, 28, married, alert, well-liked. Address Box C-805, Editor & Publisher.

All Around Editorial Man.
Capable news, telegraph, city desks, general or political reporting; fifteen years' metropolitan experience; will go anywhere, available at once. Reply C-843, care Editor & Publisher.

Assistant Editor.
University man, 10 years' experience, with extensive literary background, desires connection as manuscript editor, book reviewer or proofreader. Knowledge of foreign languages. Reasonable compensation. Box C-847, Editor & Publisher.

Business Executive.
and for past several years Business Manager of medium size Eastern paper, contemplates making change. Unquestionable record as to ability and character and particularly strong in increase of business and production at minimum cost. Experience covers Morning, Evening, Metropolitan and Provincial fields. No situation too difficult, but will consider only proposition combining permanency with something more than a job. Will meet you at the A. N. P. A. meeting if you wish. Box No. C-849, are Editor & Publisher.

Business or Advertising Man.
Here's a man with wide experience and demonstrated ability selling space, writing copy, managing, good executive. Want permanent connection with small Southern daily either advertising or business man (will consider good weekly offer). Available at once. Write, wire M. O. Berman, 705 Reed street, Waycross, Ga.

Circulation Manager.
Now employed, desires connection with publisher needing first class man. Sixty dollars weekly minimum salary considered. Will go anywhere but prefer South or Middle West. Best references. Box C-818, Editor & Publisher.

Eastern Advertising Representative.
New York office established 1915. Exceptional personal service available. Favorable acquaintance among Eastern advertisers and advertising agencies. Will consider one additional publication. Box C-840, Editor & Publisher.

Editor for Small City.
Writer who has made good during five years on metropolitan dailies, wants to return to small town work as editor or manager of daily or weekly. Exacting desk, street and makeup experience; formerly city editor in town of 50,000. Twenty-eight years old; university education. If you can offer permanent position where hard work and editorial experience are required, write or wire Box 247, New Castle, Pa.

Editorial Man.
Rewrite man, news executive, editorial writer, desk man, thirty-one, capable, experienced on leading dailies. C-842, Editor & Publisher.

Evening Paper Only.
Desk head big morning paper wants managing or news editorship. Experienced news, make-up, city desks. Thirty-five, married. Michigan or Northern Ohio preferred. C-803, Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Editor.
Open for engagement. Good editorial writer. Reasonable salary. First-class references. C-824, Editor & Publisher.

Foreman Newspaper Composing Room.
40 years of age, 20 years executive, former publisher; best of credentials; harmonizer, systemitizer and efficiency expert (union), East preferred, but will go anywhere remuneration warrants. Room 11, 145 W. 43rd. street, New York City.

Lady Assistant Editor Wanted.
for society news-magazine. College trained; capable writer; must know society. Location, New York. Salary. Should prove genuine opportunity. Write fully in confidence. Box C-841, Editor & Publisher.

Magazine and Newspaper Desk Man.
Thoroughly trained; experienced on news, telegraph and city desks and as head of universal copy desk. Rapid and accurate; considered A1 "make-up" editor. Also several years on trade and amusement magazines in editorial and promotion capacities. Thirty-four, married and temperate. C-820, Editor & Publisher.

A-1 Mechanical Superintendent.
Young, thoroughly practical man in all mechanical departments, with vision and planning in advance for any emergency in order to play safe always. Want connection where everyone else failed thus far to produce results. Will organize to get maximum production and also get organized labor to cooperate. Confidential treatment. Prefer corporation with several plants. Will consider interest. Address C-708, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

News Editor.
Graduate Missouri School of Journalism eight years ago, and since then reporter, news and managing editor paper 6,000 circulation in 15,000 city. Can handle telephone report or leased wire. Good head writer. Available April 1, account consolidation. C. J. Reiter, Bulletin, Rochester, Minn.

News Executive.
Managing or city editor seeks permanent location with small city evening daily, preferably in South or East. Ten years' experience in all around editorial work from reporter to managing editor. Age 31, married, college education, good personality, hard worker, reliable. Thoroughly acquainted with all problems of small daily. A builder of good will and real newspaper quality. C-834, Editor & Publisher.

Rewrite Man or Reporter.
Ten years' experience newspaper game, all branches editorial. Seeking place rewrite man, reporter on live beat. Age 28, single, temperate, prefer position Middle West; other territory acceptable. Now copy desk, prefer more active place. C-839, Editor & Publisher.

Publicity Woman.
Three years' experience with large organization; good writing ability; knowledge direct advertising, editing, printing. Address Box C-838, Editor & Publisher.

Superintendent or Foreman
Of newspaper composing room wishes permanent position with newspaper where efficiency and good work is required; have had practical and executive experience in large and small plants; in charge of one composing room over twelve years. Arthur Heath, 108 Malvern place, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Young Newspaper Woman
Wants position on daily. Experienced. College graduate. Capable of editing woman's and children's pages. Now editor of weekly. C-817, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

Advertising Manager.
For evening newspaper located in a prosperous manufacturing city in the East. The successful applicant must have a record as a trained executive, a person of imagination, a man who thrives on accomplishment, and one who operates only on a straightforward and honest policy. If you are such a man give full details of your education and experience, what you are earning now, what salary and bonus arrangement would interest you. A most attractive opportunity awaits the right man. Apply C-836 Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager.
Unusual opportunity for a man of unusual ability, on a newspaper of 50,000 circulation, within three hours of New York. Box C-837, Editor & Publisher.

Night Editor Wanted.
Fast, news desk. Thirty dollars per week. Hours, four p. m. to midnight. Wire Bridgeport Times, Bridgeport, Conn.

Proof Reader Wanted.
Male or female. Address at once, Bridgeport Times, Bridgeport, Conn.

Wanted.
Desk man to write heads on all leased wire and local copy, afternoon daily 15,000 city; $40 to $45. Bulletin, Rochester, Minnesota.

Wanted.
Experienced circulation manager to handle circulation of approximately 10,000; within twenty-five miles of New York; must be sympathetic but efficient in the handling of boys and familiar with all details of circulation work. Situation open at once for permanent position. Address Box C-846, Editor & Publisher, stating experience and salary expected.

Wanted.
Capable, experienced manager for subscription department rapidly growing magazine. Must be good executive, systematic and energetic. Perhaps you are assistant in some big magazine now and would like to have a better job. Address in confidence with no fear of the application going to your own employer because the position is vacant at the present time. Give full details. Box C-845, Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

A Two Billion Dollar Field
and no business paper in it. I have complete plans for a publication, including 6 months' survey of field, advertising contracts, dummy of first issue, etc. Want connection with publisher or advertising man financially interested. Box C-850, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Small evening paper Eastern Ohio or Western Pennsylvania, by experienced newspaper man, with sufficient capital to meet a substantial cash payment. Address: Purchaser, C-844, care of Editor & Publisher, stating price; terms; and important particulars.

SALES—APPRAISALS

Newspaper Properties

You have a newspaper property which you wish to sell profitably?

Your newspaper property is not making enough money?

You wish to make a sound investment in a newspaper property?

You wish to know the scientific value of any newspaper property?

WE HAVE BEEN SUCCESSFULLY ENGINEERING NEWSPAPER SALES AND APPRAISALS AND PURCHASES AND CONSOLIDATIONS FOR THE PAST THIRTY YEARS.

Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer
350 MADISON AVENUE, NEW YORK
Telephone: Murray Hill 8237

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

SHE HANDLED EVERY TYPE OF NEWS, FEATURES, and desk relief for four years on Western newspaper, leaving to accept Coast publicity offer (one year). Wants position with daily near home (North Central West). Employer writes: "Skillful cleverness as newspaper writer." Age 29. Single. University and School of Journalism. Now available—$35 up. Our No. 1743.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L. BLD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

FEATURE

To Newspaper and Magazine Publishers.
When in need of biographical sketches, wri to Rudolph Lasker, Lock Box 1104, Washin ton, D. C.

PITTSBURGH DISPATCH SUSPEND

New Daily was Launched January by George P. Grise and Associates

The Pittsburgh Daily Dispatch, o ganized and directed by company which George P. Grise, a former em ployee of the old Pittsburgh Dispatch, president-editor, has suspended public tion.

The Daily Dispatch started on Januai 1 and quit publication March 7.

Lack of support is given as the reas for the suspension. The paper had pra tically no advertising and received meag support from a circulation standpoint.

It is understood that a meeting of t stockholders will be held shortly to di cuss plans for the future.

Wealth lies in the art of surrounding yourself with good men. See "Situations Wanted" on this page if you are looking for trained employes.

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

DISGUISING ADVERTISING AS NEWS FATAL

"USE of news columns for advertising, no matter how cleverly disguised, is fatal to the success of a newspaper. A double loss is the unfailing consequence of this practise—loss of reader confidence in the news columns and loss of pulling power for the advertising space."—George C. Wheeler, Editor, Western Farm Life, Before Denver Ad Club.

* * *

BETTER DAILIES BY CONSOLIDATION

"NEWSPAPERS should live and thrive on revenue derived from legitimate business in the communities they serve, and not depend on the whims of rich men to pay their deficits. The trend toward consolidations in many big cities will undoubtedly give these cities better dailies. Too many newspapers are not good for a city, nor for the publishers."—Adolph S. Ochs, Publisher, New York Times, in an Interview With Miami Daily News.

* * *

ADVERTISING REVENUE

"THERE is a mutuality of interest between the advertising and news ends of a newspaper, a mutuality of advantage and obligation, that is not often spoken of, and, I believe, not often contemplated. This should be understood: newspapers do not make a living out of advertising any more than men lives by advertising alone. * * * It should be remembered that business cannot, with profit to itself, support a newspaper by advertising unless the paper has circulation and standing that will tend to make advertising profitable."—Walter P. McGuire, Lapeer (Mich.) Lapeer County Press.

* * *

"EVERY CHURCH SHOULD ADVERTISE"

"EVERY church should have a fund for newspaper advertising and every preacher should be taught the first principles of journalism. The time is coming when the church editor will have more space than the sporting editor. The next great revival will come when the press sets itself to redeem the world. Every preacher should co-operate with the newspaper. It is his best friend."—Rev. J. T. Brabner Smith, Before Methodist Regional Church Council St Paul.

* * *

AGENCY MUST HAVE ADVERTISER'S CONFIDENCE

"AN advertising man must go to a business executive and ask him firmly and without hesitation for the most intimate facts of his business, before he can begin to plan a successful advertising appropriation. Ninety-nine per cent of the job is getting the confidence of the people with whom you are dealing. Make your client give you the exact figures about his business, drawn from the books, and then you can begin to build your case from those facts."—Huber Hoge, President, Huber Hoge, Inc., Before General Advertising and Selling Course, Advertising Club of New York.

* * *

ADVERTISING AND PUBLIC UTILITIES

"ADVERTISING has played a leading role in public utility development. It has brought the advantages of these services to millions. Find a poorly developed utility situation, usually with high service rates, and you will find a non-advertising utility imperfectly meeting public requirements. Look for the town or territory with good service, fully served population and industries, reasonable rates, harmonious public relations, and you will find invariably utilities that believe in and practice advertising on a liberal, intelligent basis."—W. H. Hodge, President, Public Utilities Advertising Association.

* * *

ADVERTISING AS AN ECONOMIC FORCE

"WHILE we proudly boast that the family of the American laboring man has a better standard of living than royalty had 300 years ago, we still are not keeping pace with Science in our standards of living and certainly not in our standards of Life. So while I should blush to pose as a philosopher or even to take issue with the erudite scholars who criticize advertising because of its 'glorification of things,' I maintain that to the plain, plug American business man it seems very apparent that as long as we go on increasing production, advertising must be depended upon to maintain a parity between production and consumption. Otherwise the machinery of Modern Business stops."—Mirco Morrow, Assistant Publisher, Capper Publications, Before 7th District A. A. C. W. Convention, Wichita.

* * *

"THE NEWSPAPER STILL LEADS THE FIELD"

"FROM casual printing of timetables and train notices, railroad advertising departments have grown until today they undertake the full range of aggressive, persistent and enthusiastic publicity—advertising in newspapers, magazines, direct mail, booklets, calendars, maps, blotters, moving pictures, radio, lecture campaigns, displays outdoors and indoors. But above all the modern schemes and devices of advertising, the newspaper still leads the field. Typical, I believe, of railroad advertising budgets, the Northern Pacific provides as much money for newspaper space, as for all other forms of advertising combined. The reason is that newspapers produce more business at less cost."—M. M. Goodsill, Advertising Manager, Northern Pacific Railway.

Imagine Such a Market!!

IOWA RANKS First in per capita wealth: Value of corn, oats, hogs, horses, poultry and eggs; value of farm lands and buildings; total value of farm products; combined value of livestock; farms equipped with telephones; automobiles per capita; percentage of farm lands improved; low illiteracy.

IOWA leads all other states, with $4,274.00 per capita wealth.

IOWA derives from her crops, dairy products, coal, livestock, poultry and industrial pursuits an Annual Income of

$1,876,000,000

IOWA newspapers listed below, go into every home and have become a vital and essential part of the daily lives of the people. They are read thoroughly, thought about, and acted upon, by a possible

2,404,021 customers

These papers await your commands

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
*Burlington Gazette	(E)	10,164	.045
*Cedar Rapids Gazette	(E)	21,481	.07
*Davenport Democrat & Leader	(E)	14,564	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader	(S)	17,895	.06
†Davenport Times	(E)	24,676	.07
*Iowa City Press-Citizen	(E)	6,387	.035
*Mason City Globe Gazette	(E)	12,622	.04
*Muscatine Journal	(E)	7,762	.035
*Ottumwa Courier	(E)	12,852	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier	(E)	17,071	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

ONE of the readers of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, well-known in newspaper circles, writes that he has made a scrapbook of the valuable business and editorial suggestions carried weekly under the heads on this page. He has classified and indexed them and declares they are a constant source of enterprise in his office. The idea is the whole thing in publishing. These "Hunches" and "Dollar Pullers" are particularly valuable because they represent not only ideas, but ideas that have been tried out in practice.

MARYSVILLE (Cal.) Democrat recently persuaded the local Rotary Club to take a full page welcoming the Gidley, Cal., Rotary club into membership in the international organization. A complete list of Marysville Rotarians was printed in the copy.—W. L. B.

Lancaster (Pa.) Daily Intelligencer recently ran a full page devoted to firms and individuals having pets, poultry and supplies for sale. Local kennels, hatcheries, bird shops and cat fanciers bought space. "Save This Page for Reference" was the admonition run beneath a short writeup on the value of pets in the home. —R. B.

The Joliet (Ill.) Herald News built up five pages of solid advertising by instituting an advertisement writing contest for its readers in which it offered $500 in prizes, donated chiefly by the merchants themselves, but headed by the $50 cash offer of the Herald News. Seventy-eight merchants co-operated in the plan. Contestants were advised to select the store about which they desired to write ad-copy, complete their work and submit to the store. Each store thus gave a prize for the best ad it received, the Herald News gave $25 cash for the sweepstakes, $10 second prize and $5 for third, fourth and fifth places. The winning ads appeared at the close of the contest, which was limited to 10 days. The winning ads furnished copy for another layout.—J. L., Rock Island, Ill.

Weeding the chaff from the classified columns strengthens the help wanted section. The following from the Washington Post recently, inspired confidence in the kind of material he had a right to expect in such a section, when he was looking for employment:

"Attention—Only bona fide positions in good faith with definite salary or commission are permitted in the Help Wanted columns of the Post, and we will appreciate it if the readers call it to the attention of the Post if at any time they find an ad for instruction, soliciting business or advertising marchandise under the guise of Help Wanted."—C. M. L.

Spring brings the people out of doors on long hikes and walks. Trips of this kind always suggest taking along a camera. Why not write up some articles under the heading of "Outdoors with the Camera" and run advertisements of photographic supply shops, printing and developing houses, and camera manufacturers.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston, Mass.

One source of revenue which is often neglected by advertising solicitors is the removals. When any retailer moves from one location to another, you will generally find that he is glad to use your columns to tell his customers about it. And, you can also bring us the idea of regular advertising and often sell a series of advertisements.—Donald O. Ross.

Hardly a month passes that a new tire service firm doesn't enter business in cities of 50,000 or more. And an easily remembered phone number is always desired. Here's a good idea you can tip off to the next tire service that enters your field: Have him select "505" as his phone number. If you have ever looked at your speedometer when your car is still you know that the numbers shown are "505." It is not necessary to remember this number just feature, "When a tire goes wrong and you stop your car look at your speedometer. There you will find our telephone number. The number is before you at the time it is needed." It is also well to show illustration of speedometer. The Stewart people furnish these cuts, everyone of which will show the "505."—E. H. Mammen, advertising manager, Paducah (Ky.) Evening Sun.

A way toward ridding a city of the house-to-house canvasser, with his false assertion of lower prices and small profits, was pointed out by the merchants of Madison, Wis., recently, when 28 of them co-operated in a window display drive and a four-page newspaper ad showing why the public should patronize the regular retail store for hosiery. Ad men will find that mills will co-operate and proves good for a big spread.—L. J. Jellison.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

BECOMING increasingly popular as a feature are lists of unclaimed telegrams. The Miami (Fla.) Herald has one of the most attention-arresting methods of displaying this feature by printing the lists beneath an attractive box heading reading "Telegram for You."—George Lemon Sugg, Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

One of the New York papers recently ran a good feature story on how men are evading jury duty at present. There were styles in excuses, the head Jury Commissioner disclosed, and he had seen new ones come in over a period of forty years. A good story for a feature section.—R. M. C.

The Lebanon Democrat at one time offered a prize of ten dollars in gold to the man or woman who presented the oldest issue of that paper to its booth at the county fair. The advertising obtained was far-reaching and was well worth the price.—R. E. Hardaway, Lebanon, Tenn.

New York state is weeding out its careless, negligent and irresponsible automobile drivers by revoking the licenses of persons driving while intoxicated, those convicted of homicide or assault in an automobile accident and speeders who break the law the third time. Oth states are taking or are about to ta similar steps. An enterprising paper, terested in protecting the vast majority careful and thoughtful motorists as w as pedestrians, can begin agitation for tion of this kind through a series articles, pointing out where motoris licenses should be revoked whenever c cumstances indicate the move essential A. C. Regli, Eau Claire, Wis.

A splendid feature story or series c be built up around the many things t the city furnishes free for the enterta ment, instruction or convenience of ci zens and strangers. The Worcester Sa day Telegram worked them all into c story under the heading "Giving Thin Away in Worcester." It detailed the a vantages and privileges offered by t parks, skating rinks, library and ma other things that each city and town h for its residents. The subjects, under standing head, could be run as a series. James H. Guilfoyle, Worcester (Mas Telegram.

Let Your Readers Laugh a Lot With Leacock

His Popularity's Infectious

If your territory is still open, ask for terms

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.
150 Nassau Street, New York City

BY UNITED PRESS

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

Childhood inspires this new puzzle attraction—

CROSS-WORD FAIRIES

By WANDA GÁG

The most fascinating weekly feature ever devised for children.

Secure details of this cross-word puzzle story from

Premier Syndicate, Inc.
241 West 58th Street
New York City

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

"The Chink in the Armor"
by
MRS. BELLOC LOWNDES

A Hair-Raising Mystery
by the Most Famous Writer
of
Tales of Terror

Furnished in Daily Instalments
To run
Four Weeks

Write for Samples

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

4 page ready-print color comics.
Magazine Feature Pages.

Write for samples and rates

NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD. STREET,
CLEVELAND, OHIO

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, - Tenn.

Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page

Look us up in Dun or Bradstreets

LET ELECTRICITY LIGHT THE WAY TO GREATER SALES IN

NEW ENGLAND

More than half of all the homes in the United States, 26,219,100 in all, use electricity. This estimate is based on a recent survey made expressly for the purpose of ascertaining these facts.

New England, as a section of the country, holds second place in the number of homes wired for electric light and household power. There are of which 67.4 per cent use electricity for illumination and household purposes.

1,815,000 New England Homes

New England is an excellent, perhaps the very best, territory for the introduction and sale of all things pertaining to the production and use of "white coal power." Since electricity is a sign of progressiveness, New England is an unsurpassed "try-out" territory for any up-to-the-minute product of value.

Listed below are the papers that are powers in their respective communities and through whose advertising, both the consumers as well as the local distributors can be influenced in favor of your product.

INVESTIGATE THE LOW COST OF ADVERTISING THROUGH THESE RESPONSIBLE MEDIUMS

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,623	.0275	.0175
*Boston Globe	(M&E)	274,892	.50	.50
*Boston Globe	(S)	322,030	.55	.55
Boston Transcript	(E)	34,990	.20	.20
*Boston Post	(M)	271,124	.60	.60
*Boston Post	(S)	351,527	.55	.55
*Fall River Herald	(E)	15,553	.05	.05
*Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	11,383	.055	.045
*Haverhill Gazette	(E)	15,400	.065	.05
†Lynn Item	(E)	16,345	.06	.04
†††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
*New Bedford Standard Mercury	(M&E)	33,883	.10	.10
*New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	26,944	.10	.10
*North Adams Transcript	(E)	9,491	.04	.035
*Salem News	(E)	20,784	.06	.07
*Taunton Gazette	(E)	8,479	.04	.03
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	86,049	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	49,849	.18	.15

MAINE—Population, 768,014

*Augusta Kennebec Journal	(M)	11,264	.05	.05
†Bangor Daily Commercial	(E)	14,750	.055	.05
*Portland Express	(E)	27,251	.10	.07
*Portland Telegram (Sunday Edition Express)	(S)	29,992	.10	.07

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,633

*Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,104	.0375	.025
†Keene Sentinel	(E)	3,609	.03	.034
*Manchester Union Leader	(M&E)	27,864	.09	.07

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

†Newport Daily News	(E)	6,249	.0336	.0296
†Pawtucket Times	(E)	25,555	.07	.07
†Providence Bulletin	(E)	64,524	.17	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(M)	36,686	.10	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(S)	61,575	.15	.15
*Providence News	(E)	26,845	.07	.07
†Providence Tribune	(E)	23,603	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun	(E&S)	4,618	.025	.025
*Woonsocket Call	(E)	13,580	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

*Barre Times	(E)	6,944	.03	.025
†Bennington Banner	(E)	3,067	.0125	.0125
*Burlington Free Press	(M)	12,983	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald	(M)	10,765	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,024	.0214	.015

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

*Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	45,795	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post	(S)	20,017	.10	.10
*Hartford Courant	(M)	37,649	.08	.08
Hartford Courant	(S)	50,247	.11	.11
†Hartford Times	(E)	48,875	.13	.13
*Meriden Record	(M)	7,348	.045	.03
*Middletown Press	(E)	8,050	.0325	.025
†New Haven Register	(E&S)	42,171	.13	.11
*New London Day	(E)	12,079	.06	.045
†††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,494	.07	.06
*Norwalk Hour	(E)	5,842	.04	.04
†South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	4,280	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate	(E)	9,305	.05	.04
*Waterbury Republican American	(M&E)	23,836	.06	.06
*Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,043	.06	.06

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

Education

The Spartans of old made their children repeat daily the names of the heroic three hundred warriors who held the pass at Thermopylae with Leonidas. These three hundred gentlemen of valor became very illustrious in consequence.

As a matter of fact, the reason why many business enterprises today are not so well known as the henchmen of Leonidas is that no one is repeating their names daily. Chief Justice Taft once defined advertising as "damned iteration," because he had seen in advertisements the same name staring him in the face every day for weeks.

Advertising men realize that advertising in its very essence is far more than mere repetition of a name; that it is a constructive science of itself. But industrial fortunes in America have been builded through the standardization of a product by the repetition of its name in such concentrated mediums as the New York Telegram-Mail.

The New York Telegram and EVENING MAIL

Publication Office: 73 Dey Street, New York

Eastern Representative:
DAN A. CARROLL
110 E. 42nd St.
New York City

Western Representative:
J. E. LUTZ
Tower Building
Chicago

JOURNALISM LIBRARY

THIS ISSUE:—HOWARD ON LOGIC OF NEWSPAPER SALES

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Newspaper Advocate 1925

SUITE 1115 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued Every Saturday.

Vol. 57. No. 44 NEW YORK, MARCH 28, 1925 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

SUPPOSE you could take shears to the two largest standard size morning papers in New York .... and cut down the issue along the fifth column from the left for about fifteen inches, and then cut left to the fold .... Discard the trimmed portion and give the readers the reduced remnant—having made sure beforehand that the remnant carried your advertisement. You would have removed about seventy-five percent of your advertising competition from those issues, increased the visibility of your advertising about three times .... and have almost as much circulation as if you had used the tabloid News!

Consider what The News means to you now!

Have you read TELL It To Sweeney?
Write for the series on your business letterhead.

THE NEWS
New York's Picture Newspaper
25 Park Place, NEW YORK
7 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago

ebruary Averages
DAILY—833,290
The largest daily circulation in America)
UNDAY—1,069,478

NO STANDARDIZED INTERTYPE HAS EVER BECOME OBSOLETE

STANDARDIZED MIXER

THE INTERTYPE CORPORATION ANNOUNCES AN EXHIBIT OF ITS SIMPLIFIED AND STANDARDIZED MIXER TO BE HELD IN THE MYRTLE ROOM OF THE WALDORF-ASTORIA, NEW YORK CITY APRIL 20 TO 24, 1925

You are also invited to visit the two Intertype factories which are in Brooklyn. Arrangements can be made at the Exhibit through any Intertype representative.

After May 1st, the new address of the executive offices of the Intertype Corporation will be Fourteen - Forty Broadway, at Fortieth Street, New York City.

Set in Intertype Cloister Bold with Border Matrices No. 348.

Standardized

INTERTYPE

TRADE MARK

NEW YORK CHICAGO MEMPHIS SAN FRANCISCO LOS ANGELES BOSTON LONDON

SAVINGS

ATTAIN GIGANTIC PROPORTIONS IN

New York State

Deposits in New York State savings banks increased 8 per cent during the past year, or approximately

$254,000,000

Total deposits at the start of the year were

$3,400,000,000

This sum represents the savings of 4,375,000 depositors making an average deposit of

$775

The savings and loan association enjoyed an unusually prosperous year and total assets now exceed

$225,000,000

Each day during the year 470 persons enjoyed the feeling of opening a savings account or a total of 140,000 people. The increase per day in savings in New York State is in excess of $675,000.

Where the greatest wealth is located, the greatest opportunities exist. New York State is without a question the wealthiest community in the world. Shrewd National Advertisers insist upon the usage of these dailies in any campaign covering this great state.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
*Albany Evening News (E)	21,982	.08	.08
*Albany Knickerbocker Press (M)	33,239	.10	.10
*Albany Knickerbocker Press (S)	53,649	.14	.14
*Amsterdam Recorder-Democrat (E)	7,502	.04	.04
Auburn Citizen (E)	6,429	.04	.035
*Batavia Daily News (E)	8,737	.04	.04
*Binghamton Press (E)	32,006	.09	.09
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle (E)	67,646	.22	.22
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle (S)	77,839	.22	.22
*Buffalo Courier and Enquirer (M&E)	78,058	.18	.18
*Buffalo Courier (S)	118,603	.25	.22
†Buffalo Evening News (E)	125,618	.25	.25
††Buffalo Evening Times (E)	99,645	.21	.21
††Buffalo Sunday Times (S)	105,977	.21	.21
*Buffalo Express (M)	51,288	.14	.12
*Buffalo Express (S)	53,362	.18	.14
*Corning Evening Leader (E)	8,613	.055	.05
*Elmira Star-Gazette Advertiser (E&M)	33,102	.11	.11
*Geneva Daily Times (E)	5,004	.04	.04
*Gloversville Leader Republican (E)	6,852	.035	.035
*Ithaca Journal-News (E)	7,411	.04	.04
*Jamestown Morning Post (M)	11,112	.04	.035
*Middletown Times-Press (E)	6,714	.03	.03
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus (E)	9,293	.05	.05
*Newburgh Daily News (E)	11,591	.05	.05
*New Rochelle Standard-Star (E)	7,741	.04	.04
*The Sun, New York (E)	253,763	.60	.56
†New York Times (M)	352,100	.75	.735
†New York Times (S)	569,623	.90	.882
*New York Herald-Tribune (M)	270,159	.594	.576
*New York Herald-Tribune (S)	316,585	.6435	.624
†New York World (M)	378,807	.595	.58
†New York World (S)	558,779	.595	.58
†New York Evening World (E)	314,489	.595	.58
*Niagara Falls Gazette (E)	18,103	.06	.06
*Port Chester Item (E)	4,359	.03	.03
*Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise (E)	12,110	.05	.05
*Rochester Times-Union (E)	64,727	.20	.18
*Syracuse Journal (E)	42,103	.14	.14
*Troy Record (M&E)	22,621	.06	.06

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†† Publishers' Statement.

Sell Philadelphians

through The Bulletin

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

"Nearly every Philadelphia retail merchant that advertises uses The Bulletin. Follow him—he knows."

Dominate Philadelphia, the third largest market in the United States. Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is larger than that of any other daily or Sunday newspaper published in Pennsylvania, and is one of the largest in the United States.

Circulation for 12 months ending December 31, 1924—518,357 copies daily

(Copyright 1925—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 | NEW YORK, MARCH 28, 1925 | No. 44

R. W. Howard Tells Administrative Logic of Newspaper Sales

Says Field Should Be Yielded to Competitor If He Is Better Fitted to Serve Needs of the Community, But Declares Red Ink Not the Only Consideration Involved.

By WARREN BASSETT

THE secret of successful newspaper administration is the ability to coldly judge the facts and admit the worst.

In essence, this is the administrative philosophy of Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of the Scripps-Howard Newspapers who recently put theory into practice with the sale to competitors of two Scripps-Howard properties, the Des Moines News and the Sacramento Star.

These sales caused ripples of interest in newspaper circles because of the supposed long-standing precedent of the organization to suspend rather than to sell.

It was more than a curious interest in the inside workings of the Scripps-Howard administrative machine. Fundamental principles of journalism of concern to all publishers were involved—to buy, to sell, or to run along in red ink and hope for better times.

In an interview with EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week, Mr. Howard discussed frankly not only the considerations involved in the sale of the above-named properties but in the purchase and consolidation last week of the Akron (O.) Times by the Akron Press, a Scripps-Howard newspaper.

In his discussion Mr. Howard gave it as his belief that:

1. Red ink is not the only consideration controlling disposal of a newspaper property.

2. When two papers, one weak, one strong, are competing with virtually the same editorial appeal, the weaker should admit the situation and go.

3. Reader confidence should not be bartered away by the sale of a newspaper to a competitor of divergent editorial views.

4. The proper place for newspaper promotion is through the editorial department.

5. Promotion money should be spent liberally when a paper is forging ahead because of editorial appeal; curtailed when that appeal is lacking.

Mr. Howard first discussed the sales of the Des Moines News and the Sacramento Star.

"To begin with," he said, "there was an old theory that under Scripps-McRae management we never bought a newspaper, and never sold.

"All the Scripps-McRae newspapers were founded and directed to fill a definite newspaper need in the communities in which they were published. In those years the general tendency of the opposition press was generally more conservative and reactionary than it is today.

"The idea was that a public existed in most any city which would support a decent, honest newspaper with pronounced liberal tendencies such as ours.

"The present management of the organization as represented by Robert P. Scripps and myself still believe thoroughly in that idea. But there is such a thing as viewing a situation coldly and deciding whether your newspaper or your competitor's is best fitted to serve such a public.

"It is not simply a question of red ink or black. The field must be considered in its entirety—whether there is room for the future development of a newspaper of the aims and ideals of yours. And also, the public which has supported you must be considered—whether it can be fairly and adequately served by other newspapers. When this has been done, and we find that by reason of a better newspaper, or a better start, our competitor has a more commanding position, we do not hesitate to look the situation squarely in the eye and take proper action.

ROY W. HOWARD

"Take the case of the Des Moines News, for example. We found that our paper was trailing the field, the third afternoon newspaper in a city which could not adequately support that many.

"In viewing the editorial situation we saw that Gardner Cowles' Evening Tribune was a fair, liberal newspaper, well fitted to adequately serve the public we were seeking to attract.

"There was but one thing to do—to yield the field to the newspaper best fitted to serve it.

"The same condition existed in Sacramento where we sold the Star to the Sacramento Bee. We had a good newspaper, well edited, competing with one of the best papers on the Pacific coast. It was merely a matter of admitting that the field was already adequately served by a decent, honest newspaper of commanding position.

"The situation in each case was exactly the same as between two pugilists—a good little fellow does not often lick an equally good big fellow."

In Akron the situation was viewed coldly as in the foregoing cases, but the verdict was to buy, not to sell.

"We would never have sold there because we believed we had a stronger position in that field than our competitor," Mr. Howard said. "But there was obviously not room for three successful afternoon newspapers. We negotiated and bought."

However, there is such a thing as publishing a newspaper for principle as well as for profit, Mr. Howard believes. When a paper has found a niche in a community not filled by another, or attracted a loyal group of subscribers because of some special editorial appeal, all the red ink on the shelves should not force a sale.

"We are operating in red ink in some towns where we wouldn't sell for any money," Mr. Howard continued. "In Denver, for instance, our first consideration is not one of money. We feel that the Express, though small, accomplishes a special work in that city; that it acts as spokesman for a group not served by any other newspaper. We would rather kill such a newspaper than sell to the opposition when such an action would mean bartering away reader confidence.

"In an extensive group newspaper operation it doesn't make so much difference whether the paper is making a little or losing a little, making a lot or losing a lot—the test is whether there is a need for such a newspaper."

According to Mr. Howard, a newspaper started in a city where the existing newspapers are highly successful because of big circulations and heavy advertising patronage has a better chance of success than a paper started in a field where existing papers are anaemic and poorly patronized.

"I have often been asked why we started papers in cities where our already established competitors were obviously highly successful.

"The reason is that where a strong newspaper has been built up for a certain public, there probably is another public which is not being catered to. The strong newspaper has educated the merchants to the value of newspaper advertising. When another paper enters and builds up its own clientele it will get advertising, once it can demonstrate reader following."

Newspaper promotion was next discussed. Mr. Howard was asked what he considered the most effective method.

"We know nothing about what is de-

(Continued on page 21)

NEWSPAPER PLANTS SUFFERED LITTLE IN OHIO VALLEY TORNADO

Help for Suffering Townsmen Chief Concern of Press—News Service Men Overcame Great Difficulties in Filing Disaster Story

NO newspaper plants suffered serious damage in the tornado which swept the Ohio valley last week. No newspaper men were killed or seriously injured. Less than a score of newspaper workers were among the thousands who lost their homes when the great wind passed. Newspaper enterprise, the business of giving the stricken region the news of the disaster and of the outside world was carried on during the first days, to be sure, but the former was secondary in the minds and the actions of the press to giving and obtaining succor for those who needed it worst.

In Murphysboro, Ill., at the heart of the tornado, no newspaper plants were damaged, but there was no power or gas for two days. The Daily Independent, through Fred M. Rolens, publisher, declares that it was the only local daily to issue extra or regular editions from the 19th to the 23d of March, its early reports of the storm being set from two cases of hand-type and printed on a hand-power job-press. A copy is reproduced on this page. Eight of the paper's twelve employes found themselves homeless, as did two of the Republican-Era men.

"Words cannot picture the desolation in the finest residential section of the city," Mr. Rolens said. "The schools and industrial plants are also in ruins, but we are rebuilding now and Murphysboro will arise from her ruins a more prosperous city. The spirit of our people is wonderful."

Carbondale, ten miles east of Murphysboro, virtually escaped damage, and became the centre of relief work and the filing of news. The day after the storm, the Free Press was the only paper issued in the county and did not miss an issue.

"Our facilities were crippled, however," stated Joe McGuire, editor of the Free Press, "the gas supply being cut off. One linotype operator who lived at Murphysboro was unable to work, his house having been destroyed. Our weekly contemporary, the Herald, with one typesetting machine, set our copy for the day following the storm, which carried a 7,000-word story. Our pony wire service was out of commission, but the Associated Press did very quick work and within less than 30 hours had established a special wire in the Free Press office to send out news to the world."

"Reports that our plant was destroyed in the tornado were erroneous," stated W. H. Purcell, city editor of the West Frankfort (Ill.) American. "Our plant was seven blocks from the storm path and was undamaged. Mechanical and editorial staffs are working night and day in publishing extra editions to keep the public informed of relief plans and of the best means of assistance. We need no personal assistance, but it is impossible to exaggerate the suffering and storm damage in residential sections."

"No casualty to staff or damage to plant," reported the Princeton (Ind.) Daily Democrat. "The building was slightly damaged. Our entire force gave its time to removing the dead and injured from the wreckage and we issued no special editions. A limited force worked on the regular editions while the others devoted their time to aiding stricken people. All the devastated sections were served with the regular edition by carriers. Princeton's devastated sections need help to rebuild the demolished homes. It takes money to do this and our relief committee is co-operating with the Red Cross. Will Balir, president of the Farmer's National Bank, is general treasurer."

Press associations concentrated all men available in the region and filed quick and marvelously accurate detailed stories of the disaster with careful and frequently checked estimates of the number of casualties.

The Associated Press handled the tornado story through its Chicago office, where field men sent their stories and leads were written. Seven news men and four operators wer sent by the A. P. into the stricken district. Fred A. Dye and H. W. Magee of the staff and Ralph Abernathy, Chicago night chief operator, reached Carbondale early Thursday morning on the relief train from Chicago. By 11 a. m. direct communication was established with Chicago over the only Western Union wire available. Abernathy filed continuously until 8.30 p. m., when a direct A. T. & T. wire was connected with Chicago, and a second Western Union direct wire set up.

First A. P. news from Murphysboro was brought to Cairo by Operator Clarence Grubbs, who jumped into an automobile shortly after the cyclone passed, drove to Murphysboro and returned to file bulletins. He made several trips, getting and filing news until staff men arrived.

The next day wires to Benton and Murphysboro were established, making contact with the three strategic points in the tornado area.

The A. P. personnel in the field also included: E. N. Shunk, who was sent from Springfield to Murphysboro and Carbondale; Kenneth Clark, St. Louis correspondent, and Graydon Bower of Cincinnati, who were detailed to Benton and West Frankfort. L. Abernethy, Louisville correspondent, was sent to St. Louis to relieve Clark and take charge of general filing. W. P. Brown, Indianapolis state editor; C. H. Wolff, Indianapolis office, also worked in the tornado area. B. G. Wyrick of Chicago, took charge the first night, writing leads and bulletins.

"The story was impressive to me because it was simply told in practically all accounts I saw, with no adjectives or florid description," said Jackson S. Elliott, asistant general manager of the Associated Press. "The night the tornado story broke was one of the heaviest we have had in a long time, as the hotel fire at Palm Beach, the mine disaster in West Virginia and the adjournament of the Senate were all on the schedule before the tornado story broke."

The United Press used 14 regular correspondents, including C. M. McCabe and Robert Loughran, St. Louis staff men, and it is estimated by Max Buckingham, St. Louis bureau chief, that 50 to 55 men worked on the story sent out by U. P.

First warning of the storm reached St. Louis late Wednesday, with intermittent spells of complete darkness caused by rain and cyclone clouds. Then word came from Southeast Missouri that three people had been killed by a tornado in Annapolis, Mo. Next came a flash from the Duquoin (Ill.) correspondent that 25 had been killed in De Soto. When reports started coming from West Frankfort, it was apparent that a terriffic tornado had swept all of Southern Illinois.

Early Wednesday night the Western Union operator at Murphysboro, badly injured, dragged himself from Murphysboro to Benton and informed St. Louis that the tornado's wreckage was burning and that hundreds were lying dead in the street. Special staff men were rushed to the storm area while local men hounded the St. Louis wire chief all Wednesday night. Wires were opened to West Frankfort, Murphysboro, McLeansboro, and other stricken towns, and the first message came through after six hours in transit.

Throughout the first night the U. P. based stories on railroad and Red Cross information and a few messages that reached St. Louis. After midnight telephone lines were put through to unhit towns and the mopping-up started. The railroads kept "open house" all night and furnished the press with all available scraps of information.

The second day found correspondents on the gorund, but unable to get news out because of broken wires. Some reporters had to walk eight or ten miles to another town to file their stories. Telephone transmission was uncertain and subject to indefinite delay. Roads were blocked with debris and all but impassable to automobiles, and many correspondents

(Continued on page 31)

HOW MURPHYSBORO GOT THE NEWS

The Daily Independent---Extra

Thursday, March 19, 1925.

DEATH LIST

Storm and fire dead 106 here at 9:40. More bodies reachinf morgues hourly. Hundreds injured Many seriously.

DeSoto dead reported 118. School collapsed at 2:30. Town flat.

Gorham destroyed. Countryside southwest hard hit. Carbondale not hit. Country safe east of river. Homes flat north of city. Ava, Ora, Elkville, Vergennes reported safe. Medical aid, supplies rushing in.

Italian woman, 4 children
Mrs.J.W.Gibson
J.W.Mifflin
Frances Hammer
Unidentified woman at high school
Joe Moore
Loris Miller
David Ellis
Sam Kereens
Arthur Duncan
John Hamerhehl and brother Ben
Mary Davis
John Swafford
Frank Baroni.
Mrs.Ardell Spangler and child
Mrs.Louis Miller
3 unidentified children
Robert Piltz
Luella Piltz
Tressy Schmallerbege:
Clara Bailey
Dr.L.R.Wayman's son
1 unidentified girl
3 dead in Tower Grove settlement
August Hassebrook
Alworth Gregory
Helen Bowerman
Mrs.George Baker
John DeWitt
E.J.Bjik

Hassebrock's child
1 unidentified child
Dorris Stevenson
Jerry Callahan's child
Albert Callihan's child
Ernie A.Hinpholiff
Robert Stevenson
1 unidentified girl
Joe Correnti's child
Helen May Cook (child)
Columbus Pierson's child
J.G.Harris
Campbell Lipe
H.S.Coontz
1 unidentified girl
D.E.Darby
Dr.Forshee's son-in-laW
Mrs.Mary Brandon
1 unidentified woman
Mrs Geo.Berger
1 unidentified man
Mrs.Mart Halliday
S.M.Haney,Meridian,Miss.
J.A.Jones
W.E.Neal
Ernest Hardwig
Ben McAllister
Mrs.James Fielding
Son of James Fielding
Claud Lipe
Jerry N. Mifflin
---- Willis (child)
Joe Baroni
Baker's child

Mrs.Wallace Blacklock
Ivan Lipe
Bernard Sheley
Mrs.L.E.File
Minnie Beck
B.A.Orland
E.C.Harris' boy
Octavia Trembly
Evelyn Boston
Edna Hays
Robert McCord's child
Mr.and Mrs.O.S.Silvey
---- Gregory
Earl Russell
John J.Brewer
3 unidentified children
Wm.Spurlozzie
Dolph Isom, colored
Mrs.Jones. colored
Mrs.Kelly, colored
1 unidentified man.
Major Verbal and wife
Mary Mainard
1 Stiver children
3 unidentified women
---- Clements.
Herbert Lennington
Mrs.Sam Rodman
Mrs.Slater, colored
Sister of Necie Coffer
Joe Henry
Albert Nausley, son of Ray
Unidentified lan

Facsimile of First Page of Murphysboro Independent the Day After the Tornado

MEXICO'S PRESS SHAI NATION'S PROSPERI

Newspapers Install New Plants Have Metropolitan Air, K Bickel Says, Reporting Good Feeling General

Mexico is waking up. The cyc revolutions has run its course an Republic settled by Spain has en an era of peace. And, riding or wave of concomitant prosperity, the newspapers of this once war land beyond the Southern border.

Optimisms like these were broug New York this week by Karl A. B president of the United Press Ass tions, returned from a vacation inve tion of Mexico City and Vera Cr

"There is more real prosperity in ico now than ever before in its hist he said in an interview, "and the n papers are reflecting the change noticeably.

"The Mexican cycle of revolutions civil wars with subsequent economic aster, which started in 1910, seem have gone through its every p President Obregon's administration cle away the war clouds and created th mosphere of peace.

"President Calles is an exceedingly and forceful man, who has surrou himself with a group of leaders a whom are now giving sincere consi tion to an economical and careful re

"In the Mexican treasury, wh was in Mexico City, there were 6,00 pesos, an almost unprecedented sum the Republic. Civil servants are now ing paid and government expenses duced.

"The newspapers are showing de signs of this state of affairs. The Me City Excelsior is building a new and installing complete modern mec ical equipment.

This daily is operating its own broadcasting station, and has widely tended its cable and domestic sources.

"El Universal is installing the la battery of presses ever erected sout the border. El Graphico, a tabloid, cl a big increase in circulation, while other tabloid, El Sol, seems to be sound and profitable basis.

"El Globo, a daily started about months ago, is operating from a building of its own and has a metropo appearance.

"What this means as I see it, is Mexican newspapers are now all ge on a self-supporting basis. They ar longer dependent upon subsidies. are growing because they are turning worth-while products."

A. N. A. E. PREPARES PROGRA

Tentative Convention Plans Annou by President Carroll

Tentative plans for the convention gram of the Association of Newsp Advertising Executives to be held Houston, Tex., May 11-14, as part of 21st annual meeting of the Associ Advertising Clubs of the World, announced this week by Frank T. roll, advertising manager, Indiana News, and association president.

The first official meeting of the A A. E. is scheduled for May 11, when afternoon will be devoted to display vesting problems.

National advertising will be the t under discussion on the next day, which a full program of important q tions is scheduled, Mr. Carroll said.

The last official meeting is sched for Thursday May 14, when consid tion will be given to problems confr ing the advertising department a whole.

Founded Arkansas Papers

Newman Erb, financier and rail man, who founded the Little Rock (A Daily Herald and the Freie Presse, this week at the Roosevelt Hospital, N York, following an operation.

A. A. C. W. PICKS HOUSTON CONVENTION SPEAKERS

Notables in Advertising, Publishing, Finance and Business to Appear on General Sessions Program—Coolidge Unable to Be Present, Will Send Address—Departmental Programs Uncompleted

George E. Roberts Sen. Morris Sheppard

PRINCIPAL speakers and arrangement of the general sessions program of the 21st annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Houston, Tex., May 9-15, were announced New York March 23, by C. K. Woodbridge, chairman of the general program committee.

Programs for the departmental sessions and the Pan-American Trade Development Conference, which will be a feature this year's gathering, have not yet been completed, Mr. Woodbridge said.

The list of speakers will include: Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson of Texas, Senator Hiram Bingham, Connecticut, Senator Morris Sheppard, Texas; Rev. Charles A. Eaton, Baptist clergyman and Congressman from New Jersey, Martin Insull, president of the Middle West Utilities Company, Chicago, and George W. Briggs, vice-president of the City National Bank, Dallas, Tex.

Among prominent men who will address the Pan-American Conference are George Roberts, vice-president, National City Bank, New York, and Frank D. Waterman, president of the L. E. Waterman Company, New York, fountain pen manufacturers.

Martin J. Insull

Names of Latin-American civic and business leaders who will address this conference will be announced later, Mr. Woodbridge said.

It had been hoped that President Coolidge would attend the convention and make an address. He will be unable to be present, however, and instead, a message, written by him, will be read at one of the sessions.

According to the program finally adopted this week, the convention will open Saturday evening May 9 at the Houston auditorium with addresses of welcome to the attending delegates by Senator Sheppard, Gov. Ferguson, Mayor O. Holcombe of Houston, Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, president of the Ninth District, A. A. C. W., and William S. Patton, president of the Advertising Association of Houston. Response will be made by Lou E. Holland, A. A. C. W. president.

Following these addresses the official grand ball of the convention will be held, with every effort made to emulate the affair held in Royal Albert Hall, London, last year.

LOU E. HOLLAND, who will preside at Houston over his fourth A. A. C. W. Convention

On Sunday special church services will be held for the delegates in the 14 downtown Houston churches, with sermons on the topic. "Advertising as a Means to World Progress." The church program will be under the direction of Dr. Christian F. Reisner, head of the church advertising department.

At an inspirational meeting Sunday afternoon, Lt. Gov. Lynch Davidson of Texas will preside, and the principal speaker will be Dr. Charles Aubrey Eaton of New Jersey. Music will be furnished by a chorus of 125 Negro voices.

In the city auditorium that evening addresses by Rt. Rev. Clinton S. Quinn, Episcopal Bishop of Texas and Harry H. Rogers of San Antonio, Tex., are scheduled, with a concert by massed bands.

Business sessions open Monday morning May 11, in the auditorium with Mr. Woodbridge presiding. Addresses of welcome to visiting foreign delegates will be made by President Holland and Mayor Holcombe. In reply, C. Harold Vernon, chairman of the 14th District, A. A. C. W., Great Britain; Norman S. H. Catts, of Sydney, Australia; and Arthur Reber of Berne, Switzerland, will speak.

These speeches will be followed by the reading of President Coolidge's message to the convention, probably by one of his cabinet members. Senator Bingham will take the floor next, before adjournment at noon.

During luncheon Monday, the annual meeting of the National Advertising Commission will be held.

The Monday afternoon session has been cut short, in order to permit delegates to leave at 3.30 for a trip down the ship channel to the San Jacinto battle ground, where a pageant is to be staged. Mr. Patton is to preside at this short session, for which speakers have not yet been named.

A woman will open the general sessions Tuesday morning, Mrs. Edith McClure Patterson of Dayton, O., representing the General Federation of Women's Clubs. She will speak on "How Advertising Serves the Consumer." Following her will be Martin J. Insull, president of the Middle West Utilities Company, Chicago, and George W. Briggs, vice-president of the City National Bank, Dallas.

The Joint Assembly, of which Homer J. Buckley is chairman, will meet Tuesday noon.

Sen. Hiram Bingham Rev. Charles A. Eaton

Tuesday afternoon, Wednesday morning, and Thursday morning will be devoted to departmental meetings, details of which are to be announced shortly.

The official dinner of the board of club presidents will be held at the Rice Hotel, Houston, Tuesday evening, for nomination of officers and other business.

The next afternoon, Wednesday, a short business session will be held in the Galveston auditorium, after which there will be an elaborate entertainment program carried out on Galveston beach.

The principal business session of the convention is scheduled for Thursday afternoon, at which reports of officers of the association will be read, the 1926 convention city announced, and officers elected.

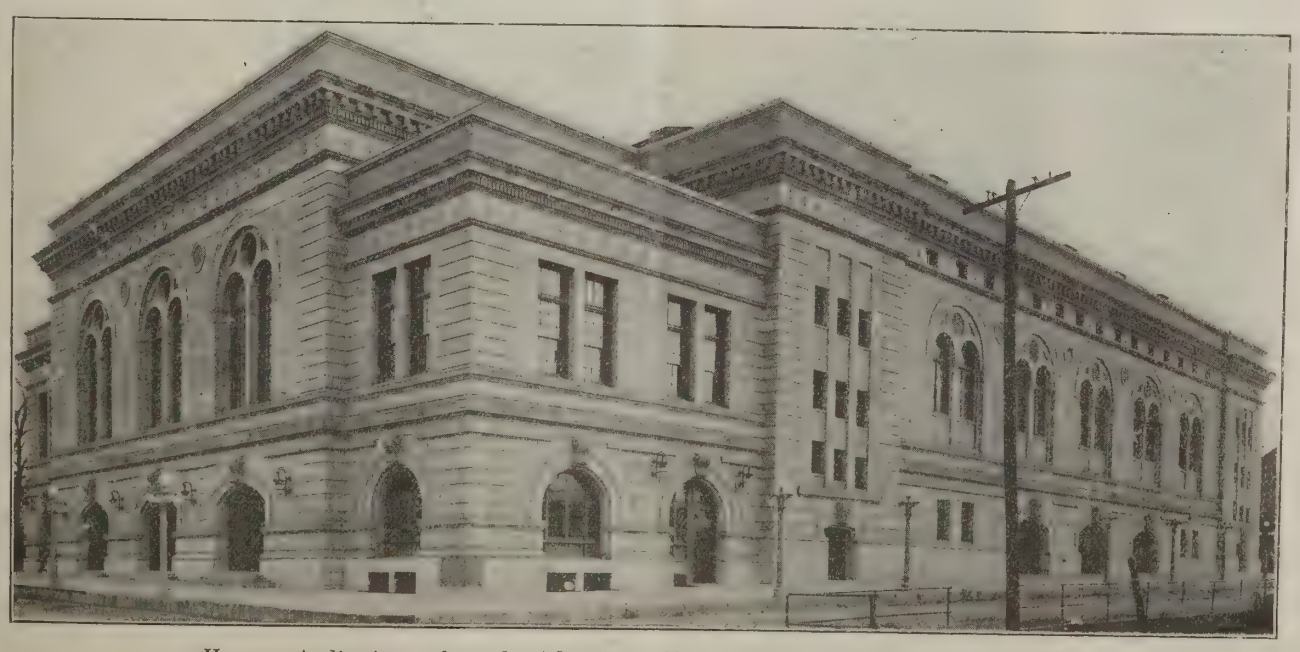
It is understood that President Holland, who has already served three years, will decline another term.

Cities in various parts of Texas are taking keen interest in the five circuit tours which will follow the convention. The cost of these tours to the delegates, as now planned, will be one fare for the round trip, plus $2, and it is estimated that the longest one will cost less than $20 for railroad fare and Pullman.

L. E. Waterman

Delegates will embark for the tours at 11 to 12 p. m. Thursday.

These tours include:



No. 1.—The interests of the Rio Grande Valley, starting at Corpus Christi, will arrange a circle tour to include all the valley towns and Matamoras, Mexico.

No. 2. — Arranged by San Antonio, Austin and Laredo, with intermediate towns participating.

No. 3—Arranged by Fort Worth, Waco and Dallas, including North and Northwest Texas.

No. 4—New Orleans will be the terminal of a tour arranged by Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange ad clubs.

No. 5—Arranged by Mexia, Wortham, Corsicana, to Dallas; includes the Mid-Texas oil fields.

Houston Auditorium, where the Advertising Clubs Will Do Their Convention Business

CLASSIFIED MEN SEEK SALES IDEAS IN HOUSTON MEETING PROGRAM

Meaty Topics Slated for Discussion When Association Members Flock to Texas Next May—Special Session to Be Held with Advertising Managers' Group

BASED on the purpose of developing the best possible sales ideas for classified advertising, the program for the sixth annual convention of the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers, Houston, Tex., May 10 to 14, was adopted at a meeting of association directors in Chicago, and announced this week.

JOHN L. IRVIN

Plans for the program were submitted by Harry Gwaltney, chairman of the program committee.

Following is the complete program:

MONDAY, MAY 11

10.00 A. M.—Opening address, John L. Irvin, president; reports and recommendations of officers and committees; communications; committee appointments.

10.50 A. M.—Purpose and outline of program by member of program committee.

11.00 A. M.—How to Analyze Your Classified Section to Determine its selling Features. (a) Established markets; (b) established preferred market prospects; (c) total newspaper circulation; (d) number of regular advertisers; (e) readers of classified; (f) financial ability of classified readers. Round table discussion.

1.00 P. M.—"Get Acquainted" roll call.

1.15 P. M.—Actual Sales Talks—(a) Arguments used; (b) Methods of presentation. Leaders: R. E. Seiler, Los Angeles Examiner; Walter Murdock, Detroit Free Press.

2.00 P. M.—How to Sell Classified Advertising to—"A Banker," Harry Gwaltney; "A Stove Manufacturer or Dealer," Henry Barringer; "An Oil Company or Automobile Supply House," H. C. McDonald; "A Desk Manufacturer or Retailer," C. C. Armstrong; "A Paint Company," Walter Campbell; "A Coffee Jobber," M. P. Goodfellow.

3.30 P. M.—How to sell yearly contracts—(a) Daily for one year; (b) bulk lineage contracts; (c) successful methods used in getting full lineage contracted for.

TUESDAY, MAY 12

10.30 A. M.—Joint session with newspaper executives.

1.30 P. M.—Foreign classified advertising—(a) "How Can Newspapers Co-operate with Agencies to Increase the Present Volume of Foreign Classified Business?" (b) "What New Classified Business Can Be Developed in the National Field, and How It Can Be Done?" (c) "In What Way Could Newspaper Representatives Be Useful in the Development of National Classified Advertising?" (d) "What Business in the Foreign Field Can Be Developed Direct by the Newspaper, and How Can It Best Be Done?"

2.30 P. M.—Discussion on: "How to Develop and Establish New Classifications or Strengthen Weak Ones"; "When Should a New Classification Be Made?" "What Is the Value of a Column of New Classified Business?"

3.15 P. M.—How and what classified advertising may be developed in the rural districts.

4.00 P. M.—How to develop advertising for the "Wanted" classifications—(a) "What Are Its Advantages and Possibilities?" (b) "Professional advertisers"; (c) "Transient advertisers.

4.30 P. M.—Discussion: Lineage, Measurement, Statistics.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13

10.00 A. M.—Two-minute talks on new discoveries and accomplishments of the past twelve months—Policies—Methods, Ideas in the Sales, Promotion, Mechanical, Clerical and Credit Divisions.

11.00 A. M.—Discussion of association business—(a) "The Classified Journal"; (b) "What Should the Association Endeavor to do during the coming year"; (c) "Election of Officers"; (d) "Reports and Recommendations of Officers and Committees."

THURSDAY, MAY 14

10.00 A. M.—Discussion of the classified calendar; 50 business building ideas; sales contests; ways to save money; effect of new postal rates on direct by mail promotion; and of the question, "What are the advantages and disadvantages of the alphabetical arrangement of classifications?"

1.30—Topics considered will be: What can be done to build "weak" days, such as Mondays, Saturdays? Does the big Sunday volume of classified take lineage from the daily paper? Does it affect the resultfulness of the daily ad? and, What can be done to build up the smaller, weaker months?

SMALL NEWSPAPER GROUP

1.30 P. M.—Call to order by A. T. Miller, chairman.

"Selling Classified Advertising from the Press Room to the Galley Boy," Louis J. Frenkel, Atlanta Georgian American.

Presentation of questions about classified management, publisher co-operation, equipment, promotion, composing room, rates, foreign business, agencies, etc.

Discussion on: Proper organization of classified department of smaller newspapers; development of telephone solicitation and how it can be made profitable with limited prospect lists; telephone solicitation methods and training of ad-takers; can contract advertisers be successfully promoted by telephone solicitors? Methods of training and getting best results from street salesmen.

THURSDAY, MAY 14

10.00 A. M.—Call to order—"Classified Advertising and the Smaller Newspaper," George B. Morgan, Nashville Tennessean. Discussion on: Censorship and exclusion of fake, misleading and undesirable advertising; standardizing the classified page—advantages and disadvantages of display faces, cuts, ornaments, boxes, double or 3-column set-ups, "special" pages; what contract forms are most satisfactory? Yearly, semi-yearly or monthly; use of direct mail advertising in getting new business and building reader interest; how can "counter" business be increased? Does clipping and mail solicitation from other papers pay? Do daily records by classification pay?

"How the Classified Manager Can Help Street Salesmen Produce More Business," L. V. Massengale, Shreveport Times.

"Reader Interest and How to Built It," G. M. Rohrbach, Moline Dispatch.

MRS. HEARST GIVES "GYPSY BALL"

Alexander P. Moore, Ambassador to Spain, and former publisher, was the guest of honor at a costume ball given the night before he sailed for his Madrid post, by Mrs. William R. Hearst, who appeared in the costume pictured above.

ROADS TO LOWER RA... TO HOUSTON IN MA...

Passenger Associations Quote Sp... Fare to Advertising Men Bound A.A.C.W. Meet—Price from 30 Cities Listed

Special railroad rates of fare a... half for the round trip from any ... in the United States to the World ... vertising Convention at Houston, ... 9-15, have been authorized by the ... ous passenger associations.

The rates take effect Thursday, ... 7. They do not include Pullmans, ... will cost about $6 and $4.80 for ... and upper berths, respectively.

From thirty of the larger cities ... parts of the United States, the ... are as follows:

Seattle	$140
Portland	133
San Francisco	101
Los Angeles	88
Butte	107
Denver	58
Santa Fe	60
St. Paul	66
Detroit	90
Chicago	59
Milwaukee	64
Omaha	51
Des Moines	52
St. Louis	44
Indianapolis	57
Cincinnati	59
Columbus	66
Cleveland	72
Pittsburgh	76
Philadelphia	88
New York	92
Boston	103
Louisville	53
New Orleans	20
Baltimore	82
Washington	82
Atlanta	52
Jacksonville	64

PICK THE NINE'S MASCO...

Oklahoma City Papers Conduct S... Contest for Baseball Prize

The best baseball stunt of the se... coming to the attention of EDITOR & ... LISHER, is being promoted by the ... Oklahoman and Oklahoma City T... of which Walter M. Harrison is m... ing editor.

The newspapers received perm... from the owner and manager of the ... Western League baseball team to ... the official team mascot from boys ... schools, above the fourth grade, in ... standing in their studies and deport... This calls for a voting contest. ... boys and girls cast votes for the ... popular boy in each school, above f... grade and under 14. On Saturd... week after election; indoor and ou... baseball tournaments will be held a... the several choices and by this elim... tion process the mascot will be foun... is agreed that the mascot will be ... on one complete trip around the ba... circuit during the summer. Boys ... fighting for the honor and the big fu... Mr. Harrison advises that the stun... had 100 per cent response. It furn... a good news story daily, setting the s... ranks wild with excitement, intere... fans and giving the papers the appr... tive regard of parents and school au... ties.

Paper Gets Town a Slogan

The Times-Herald has just comp... a contest for a slogan for Norris... Pa. A committee of nine repres... tive citizens of the town was sel... to judge the winning slogan. How... the success of the campaign, which l... only two weeks, was such that o... last day five additional people ... asked to serve. The prize winning ... gan—"NORRISTOWN—Rivals ... Best, Surpasses the Rest," was su... ted by Arthur Marland, who wi... presented with a sterling silver tr... donated by the Times-Herald thr... its publisher, Ralph Beaver Strassb...

WORDS AND MUSIC — BY DEEMS TAYLOR

Critic of New York World Staff, Success as Composer and Newspaper Man, Began Writing as "Smeed" in F. P. A.'s "Colyum"—Has Had Story Book Career

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

DEEMS TAYLOR

Deems Taylor knows no reason why music critics should be abstruse and ponderous.

"If one can't make one's opinions reasonably simple and understandable to almost everybody, one doesn't know much about one's subject," he holds.

Reporting should be synonymous with talking, in his opinion.

DEEMS TAYLOR, composer and music critic for the New York World, has been leading these last few days rather a story-book life. Twice in a week or so a composition of his, played by the Philharmonic orchestra, has swept New York audiences to their feet. There have been those crys of "Composer, Composer," which greet so suddenly the obscure musician of fiction, who awakes, you know, to find himself abruptly famous, after long garret years of raw carrots, lentils, and communion with his soul.

"Storms of applause" said newspaper accounts, "finally brought the embarrased and reluctant Mr. Taylor to the platform for a speech."

The Philharmonic was playing "Through the Looking Glass," a suite written by Deems Taylor of the World.

Mr. Taylor, in a gorgeous purple-and-black silk dressing gown, slipped over pale-blue pajamas, ushered me at about 1.30 o'clock of a morning this week into his living room in a 57th street apartment house. He is a short man, about 5 feet 7, has sandy hair, and wears tortoise shell glasses. He is 39 years old.

Left alone a moment, I looked at the grand piano, on the rack of which were scores, ready to be filled in with notes by this brilliant New York composer.

Can he be interested in anything but music? I wondered.

Then he came back and the question was answered by conversation.

Mr. Taylor is leading the double life of composer and critic and has somehow the wit and ability to be enthusiastic about both of them.

While he can flaunt journalistic cynicism, he can also be as interested in his work of musical criticism and reporting, as in the pleasure of music creation.

"Of course," he told me, "like most of the newspaper men I know, I'm always about to quit. But like them, too, I stick on.

"Newspaper work is like drink. The only way for some to quit is to have left alone in the first place.

"But while in it, there is a sparkle to the jag that makes the morning after feeling of the pay check of small account compared to the thought of getting drunk again."

Yes, Mr. Taylor can talk as enthusiastically about newspaper work as he can about harmony and counterpoint.

"Reporting," he said, "should be, I think, synonymous with talking.

"To write successfully for newspapers, one must speak rather than write, and speak informally, too. In writing music criticisms I try to say what I think of what I have heard as if I were talking to someone, not necessarily musical, but interested in the subject.

"If one cannot make one's opinions reasonably simple and understandable to almost anybody, one doesn't know much about one's subject.

"There are roughly two distinctly different styles of writing. There are writing authors like Joseph Conrad and Henry James and talking authors like George Bernard Shaw.

"The latter is the style, I think, best suited for newspaper work. Newspapers are read hastily and the less conscious readers are of the words, the more likely they are to get at the ideas."

Mr. Taylor as an example of the conversational writer talked of Heywood Broun, whose desk is next to his on the World.

He himself first began "talking" in daily newspapers for pay in 1916, when he became second assistant editor and contributor for the Sunday magazine section of the New York Tribune.

His journalistic gateway was guarded by that St. Peter to young writers, Franklin Pierce Adams of the "Conning Tower." As Robert Benchley, Laurence Stallings, and Newman Levy were admitted to the heaven of success by F. P. A., so Deems Taylor found the gate unlocked through contributions to the "Colyum."

Mr. Taylor wrote under the name of "Smeed," his first name spelled backwards. His first contribution was printed in 1906. Five years later he met Mr. Adams, and in 1912, F. P. A. got him a job on the Western Electric News, an employes' magazine, which he ran for four years.

In 1916, F. P. A., then on the Tribune, helped him obtain his first regular newspaper position on the Sunday magazine section. Working a year, Deems Taylor somehow managed to save $700. He wanted to see the war, but the trouble was to get abroad, since he couldn't pass the army tests.

"I would like, if you don't mind, to be a war correspondent for the Tribune," he told the Sunday editor.

He didn't get the job. But he was granted a year's leave of absence and while abroad spending his $700 he did send some mail stories to the Sunday magazine and one cable.

Returning in 1917, he tried free-lancing for a while and had a couple of stories printed in Century Magazine. In the fall of that year, however, he was again ready for regular employment and got work supervising the editorial page of Colliers.

About this time, the composing side of his life became bread-winner and it was not until 1921 that he again went back to regular newspaper work.

In that year, James Huneker, internationally known music critic of the World, died. When World executives began casting about for a successor, F. P. A. again stepped in and suggested Deems Taylor. Mr. Taylor was introduced to Herbert Bayord Swope, the World's executive editor, who did the usual thing asking him to write a letter, telling why he should have the job.

"I wrote and told about my musical qualifications, but I had no idea why I should have the position and frankly said so." Mr. Taylor recalled.

He got the job.

Running parallel with this newspaper career was the life of Taylor, composer of music. In 1906, the year he sent his first contribution to F. P. A., Deems Taylor was a student at New York University.

Came time for the Senior show. The "big boys" of the campus, who were going to write the book and music were fired. Taylor and William LeBaron, now known as a playwright and at present production manager for Famous Players came forward and announced they were willing to try their hand at it.

"He'd write the book, and I'd write the music, we said, and, accepted in exasperation by the Senior Class, we proceeded to do it with agility," Mr. Taylor remembered.

"The name of the show was the 'Isle of Skidoo.' It was terrible, but nevertheless was produced in Carnegie Lyceum with suitable enthusiasm."

Graduated that year, Deems Taylor, now determined to chase the mad ideal and become a great composer, crashed into the necessity of earning a living. He became sort of literary office boy for Nelson's encyclopedia, reading proof and checking up material.

"Oh, I also wrote articles on pins, minting and handball," he laughed. "It was a magnificent article on handball.

"And I drew colored plates of the United States flags."

Years later a book salesman knocked at the Taylor door. He just wanted the man of the house to look at this marvelous encyclopedia he had to offer. Just look at it, you know.

Then he opened the page to the colored plates of the flags.

"See," he said, "all drawn by experts."

He failed to clinch the sale.

While writing of handball, pins, mints and drawing flags, Taylor kept in touch with LeBaron. Together they formed a Gilbert and Sullivan team for New York University's dramatic society.

In 1907 they wrote another musical comedy for the seniors called "The Oracle," which was produced, and followed in succeeding years with "Captain Kid & Company," and "The Echo."

Meanwhile, tired of encyclopeding, Taylor tried another way to make a living. With Robert Ament, now art editor of the Sunday World, he went into partnership in a commercial art business. They did book plates, posters, and lettering, finishing the year with a net loss of $17.

But Victor Herbert, the late light opera composer, had happened to attend one of New York University's musical shows. He sought out Taylor afterwards.

"If you are going to write music," he advised, "you ought to know something about it."

Consequently Taylor took the summer off to study harmony and counterpoint at home under a certain Oscar Coon, who, he recalled, wore a long white beard and lived on Scotch whisky and bananas. Conn's only reading was Shakespeare and Bach's Preludes. He read the latter as anyone else might read a novel. Concentrated training under him must have given Taylor a good foundation for a musical career.

In 1909, however, he was forced to go back to the encyclopedia, this time with the Britannica, collecting evidence for a suit against a competitor who, it was believed, was copying the Britannica biographies.

This literary sleuthing came to an abrupt end, when in the Spring of the same year, Charles Dillingham bought "The Echo," one of the University shows. Riding on the top of a wave, Taylor lived on expectations for a year. The musical play opened in 1910 in Chicago, closed, and entirely rewritten, finally came to New York, where it played several months, before going out on the road.

Soon after this, Taylor, broke again, appealed to F. P. A.

"You write for my column," grumbled that gentleman, "why not write humorous verse for the magazines? Write one thing a day and send them out."

With this advice, he dismissed him, and Taylor went out and established a record. For about three months he actually lived on money received from humorous verse of his making printed in magazines.

"The strain told, however, and I cracked under it," Taylor laughed. "I couldn't think funnily any longer, so I went over to Newark to work, punching player piano rolls from 5 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock at night.

"The light began to dawn on me at this time, and I saw I wasn't going to be a great hit as a popular composer. I noticed an announcement in Musical Courier of a prize contest for a symphonic poem, and I decided to try to be serious for a change."

Then it was he wrote "The Siren Song," which has been played by the Philharmonic Orchestra. It won the Courier's prize.

In 1921 Mr. Taylor was married to Mary Kennedy, an actress, now appearing in "The Blue Peter" on Broadway. Mrs. Taylor is also a co-author with Ruth Hawthorn of "Mrs. Partridge Presents," which is also now playing in New York.

Besides "Through the Looking Glass," Mr. Taylor has also written "The Highway Man," music for the poem by Alfred Noyes, and the incidental music for the Broadway successes, "Liliom," "Will Shakespear," "The Adding Machine," "Casanova," and "The Beggar on Horseback."

At present he is writing a new orchestral suite, and is planning to compose music for another operetta.

His "Through the Looking Glass" brought him story book attention, and the facts of his life build up a pretty plot, which seems somehow to be leading to a brilliant climax.

$100,000 Libel Suit Dismissed

On motion of counsel for both sides, the $100,000 libel suit filed by Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Lawson against the St. Louis Post Dispatch, has been dismissed in Federal court at Waco, Tex. The suit grew out of news reports concerning plaintiffs' daughter, Miss Louise Lawson, mysteriously slain in New York City last year.

Direct Cable Service to Italy

The Commercial Cables-Postal Telegraph System announced this week its direct connection at the Azores with the new cable of the Italian Submarine Cable Company, which makes possible for the first time direct cable communication between the United States and Italy.

WHY DISCUSS GLOOMY NEWS SUBJECTS, WHEN YOU MAY TURN YOUR BACK?

Editor Foster Candidly Takes His Readers Into His Confidence by Revealing One Day's Experiences—His Cynical Morning Resolution Did Not Survive the First Edition

NO local feature in any newspaper is more discussed in its vicinage than the column "Our City," written daily by Marcellus E. Foster, on page one, column one, of the Houston Chronicle, of which he is both the real editor and the real publisher.

Mr. Foster contributed a column recently which was so striking and so significant to the newspaper audience that EDITOR & PUBLISHER herewith reproduces it in full. It is signed "By MEFO," which everyone in Houston and vicinity knows is M. E. Foster.

It read as follows:

One day in the life of a column-conductor:

* * *

Coffee in bed. Thoughts struggling for expression. One hundred and fifty thousand words in the dictionary, but they refuse to group themselves into any sentences worth putting into type.

* * *

What's the use anyway? Why forever discuss the problems of the weak and downtrodden? Why not look the other way and not see man's inhumanity to man? Whenever you attack or expose something you make somebody mad. Why do it? Wouldn't it be far easier to see only the beauty on earth and not the dirt and grime? Why uncover things that are unpleasant?

* * *

Breakfast resolve: Today I shall write only about the joys of living, the progress of Houston, our great buildings and our vast industrial and financial resources. Aren't those the subjects in which we are all really interested anyway? You can't hurt anybody's feelings by talking about the dollar. Don't we all honor that above all else?

* * *

Walking to the office: Spring sunshine, flowers blooming, trees budding, the singing of birds in Sam Houston Park; Stark, the caretaker, happy and smiling. A little further on, the sounds of hammer and saw, concrete mixers crushing rock, new buildings going up, the great Auditorium being remodeled, a monster garage just nearing completion, everybody busy, nobody unhappy, nothing wrong with the world.

* * *

At my office: Some letters of praise, many of censure. Thinking again: Why not make them all sing your praises? Why hurt the feelings of any living soul? What do you accomplish? Let's quit talking about poverty, crime and disease. Why see the evil when it can be so easily overlooked?

* * *

Then a young man who has been waiting outside for two hours gets into the office. He tells a tale of cruel mistreatment by policemen who arrested him and then beat him because he wanted to know what crime he had committed. Begs me to say something, not for him, but for other poor unfortunates who may be subjected to similar abuse if our guardians of the peace are not told that the citizen has some rights. Why should I? What would be the result? Mainly the hatred of every man who thinks a uniform gives him the right to kick and cuff.

* * *

Then the phone rings. A lady tells me of horrible conditions she has seen on our prairies. Dead animals left there to breed disease, and to scent the air, destroying all the sweet odors of early spring. Why should I worry? I don't live out there. If I say anything about it some county official will have his feelings hurt. Let the buzzards do their work.

* * *

A gray-haired man craves admission. I am getting peevish, but finally agree to listen to his story. His son fought in France. He was at the battle of the Argonne. Gassed and nearly died. Finally returned to Houston. Has a job which pays him $30 a week. Wife and two little children to support. The father tells how the government has recently mistreated the boy because of a technical error in making some sort of report. It will cost him $42 unless I agree to do something. Just write a letter to so-and-so, or perhaps a paragraph in "Our City." Why should I do it? It is true that boy fought for me and for you. We sang his praises a few years ago. We gave him and his kind flowers and cigarettes. We hailed them as heroes while they were facing death. But now our great government penalizes him for a little error of calculation and the majority of the people have forgotten there was a war. Why should I remember?

MARCELLUS E. FOSTER

* * *

Again looking through the mail. Here's a letter from a fellow who says he is desperate. "I am down and out," he writes. "Can't even get a ditch-digger's job in this city of which you brag. I am an ex-service man. My former employer didn't hold my job for me. Have had only odd jobs since then. I haven't even the money to pay for an advertisement in your paper asking for work. I can keep books and use a typewriter fairly well. You don't know me from Adam, but your column shows you have a sympathetic heart. Sometimes I think I will end it all, and give your paper another bit of sensational news." Not my fault that he can't get work. I didn't send him to war. Telling his story will not add anything to my bank account. Why bother about him? N. B.—You will find his advertisement in the classified columns. I changed my mind just a little.

* * *

Confound it, here's another letter about the dirt and trash in our streets. Some lady wants me to tell about conditions in her section of the town. "It's disgraceful," she writes. "Jump in your car some day and take a look for yourself." Why should I? What you don't see can't disturb you. Let's take another street. Suppose there are disease-breeding conditions out there? This isn't a health department. Let 'em alone. Maybe the sun will destroy all the germs. Besides that, it isn't a pleasant subject to write about, and some reader would have his or her aesthetic sensibilities grievously shocked.

One Dan Morgan, M. D., of Galveston sends a postal card objecting to the exposure of prominent men in Texas. Suppose he is talking about that prison investigation. Says there is "too much pestiferous publicity regarding well known persons," Maybe he is right. What's the use of fighting for better treatment of convicts? They don't advertise nor subscribe for newspapers. What do you gain by taking up cudgels in behalf of poor devils like that? They had no business committing crimes anyway. Let the guards beat them, and shoot them, and let the higher officials steal all they can get their hands on. The excitement will soon die down. Everything will go on just the same, and nobody will be unhappy except the fellow who is being persecuted. What does he matter in a big state's progress?

* * *

All that was written yesterday. This is Sunday. Beautiful day, isn't it? Fine weather we are having. A little too dry, perhaps, but the golf links are in good shape. Let's play the game this morning and keep our minds on the beauties of nature and man's utilization of it. Then tonight we will go to church and drop a dollar in the basket for the heathen Chinese. We must bring those lost souls into the folds of Christianity.

TRIPP EMPIRE GROUP CHIEF

Becomes General Manager of F. E. Gannett's Group of Six Papers

The appointment of Frank E. Tripp of Elmira, N. Y. as general manager of the Empire State Group of Newspapers has been announced by F. E. Gannett of Rochester, editor and publisher of that group of six papers. He becomes Mr. Gannett's personal representative in editorial, advertising and management matters, operating for all papers of the group.

Mr. Tripp has spent his life in the newspaper business. He started as a carrier boy 37 years ago with the oldest of the Gannett group of papers and has filled practically every position in both the business and editorial ends of a newspaper. With Mr. Gannett he is the owner of the Elmira properties, the Star-Gazette, Advertiser and Telegram and for the past two years has been publisher of those papers. Prior to that he was advertising manager for seven years, after having spent 16 years in the editorial departments.

The Empire State Group consists of the Rochester Times-Union, Utica Observer-Dispatch, Ithaca Journal-News and Elmira's three papers named above. Mr. Tripp will divide his time among the papers of the group, retaining his headquarters in Elmira for the present.

Hendersonville Times Sold

J. T. Fain, for some time connected with the Spartanburg (S. C.) Sun, has purchased the Hendersonville (N. C.) Times from W. E. and John W. Eubanks for approximately $20,000, according to announcement this week. The Times, operated for several months last year as a daily, has been a semi-weekly for the past few months. It is understood that Mr. Fain, who formerly was connected with the Rock Hill (S. C.) Herald, plans to operate the paper as a daily during the summer tourist season.

Editor Celebrates 50th Anniversary

M. M. Beck, editor of the Holton (Kan.) Recorder, March 12, issued the fiftieth anniversary number of his newspaper. Mr. Beck has an unbroken record of 50 years as editor of the paper. E. S. Beck, managing editor of the Chicago Tribune, son of the editor of the Recorder, has a column of reminiscences in the anniversary number.

Dailies Merge in Modesto

Consolidation of the Modesto (Calif.) Herald and News, to take effect April 1st, was announced this week. The combined papers will be known as the Modesto News-Herald. According to present plans one edition will be issued at noon and the other at midnight daily.

WILLIAMS NOW EDITO OF BOSTON AMERICAN

New Hearst Executive Was for Years Editor of Boston Evening Transcript — Started Newspaper Work in South

James T. Williams, Jr., who la month resigned as editor of the Bost Evening Transcript, a post he had he for 12 years, b came editor the Boston Ame ican, March 2 He succeeds L. Southwick.

JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR

In making th announcement th American d voted an enti page to the hi tory of Mr. Wi liams' life, hi achievements newspaper wor and the aims the American, t gether with three-column cut of its new editor.

Born in the South, educated in the Eas familiar with the West, he enjoys country-wide acquaintanceship and ha achieved a national reputation as a pro gressive editor who thinks constructivel and writes with sincerity. He was bor in Lincolnton, N. C., but grew up i Greenville, S. C., where his father no resides. He was educated at the Univer sity of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., an at Columbia College, New York, bein graduated from the latter in 1901.

His first newspaper work was on th Columbia (S. C.) State, going to Wash ington as its correspondent. In 1902 h joined the Washington staff of the Asso ciated Press, and for four years was it representative at the Navy Departmen and with the diplomatic corps. Fror 1907 to 1909 he was Washington corre spondent of the Boston Evening Tran script. He was appointed United State Civil Service Commissioner in 1909, bu held this post only a few weeks, bein compelled to resign due to ill health. H went to New Mexico, and, recovering hi health, for three years as editor of th Tucson (Ariz.) Citizen lead the fight fo Statehood. In November, 1912, he be came editor-in-chief of the Boston Tran script, which position he held 12 years until his resignation last month.

Active in the founding and developmen of the American Society of Newspape Editors, Mr. Williams was its first re gional governor for New England, an the 1923 chairman of its committee o ethical standards. President Coolidg appointed him a member of the board o visitors to the United States Nava Academy in 1924.

The University of the South recently conferred upon him the honorary degre of Doctor of Civil Law.

Mack's Lose Jewels in Fire

For the second time within a few months Norman E. Mack, publisher o the Buffalo Times, and Mrs. Mack have suffered a heavy loss in jewelry. They were forced to watch $25,000 worth o jewels burn with many of their other be longings in the destruction of the Hote Breakers at Palm Beach last week. Re cently burglars took jewelry worth $100,- 000 from the Mack home in Buffalo about $40.000 of the stolen property later being recovered in Cleveland.

Winnipeg Raises Ad Fund

H. C. Hotaling, secretary of the National Editorial Association, was principal speaker at a meeting held in Winnipeg recently for the purpose of raising a $40,000 fund to advertise the lakes and summer resorts in the Winnipeg district. The sum of $26,000 was subscribed within an hour. The fund will be used principally in newspapers of the United States, according to present plans.

TWO-EDGED CAMPAIGN TO SELL 750,000 RAZORS

Auto Strop Safety Razor Company Appealing to Both Dealer and Consumer in Special $100,000 Drive to Reach Huge New York Market—Regular Schedule Unaffected

N amazingly efficient and far-reaching merchandising scheme is being given t in New York newspapers this week by the Auto Strop Safety Razor Company promoting a bargain sale of their product.

. E. Stamplemann

The special campaign, declared by executives steering it to be the biggest ever conducted in the history of the razor business, will, the firm said, be duplicated later in other large cities of the country. Before coming to New York the bargain sale was promoted in dailies elsewhere in test drives with astonishing success.

The drive to reach the huge New York market quickly and in a large scale manner, makes use of 22 newspapers in Metropolitan New York. Of this number five represent the foreign language press. Cost is estimated at $100,000 by S. E. Stampleman, general sales manager.

While this sales promotion stunt is being boosted in New York and elsewhere later, the regular Auto Strop newspaper schedule which this year has an appropriation of more than $500,000, will continue as usual, N. R. Maas, advertising manager, informed Editor & Publisher.

"Our 1925 campaign calls for more extensive use of newspapers than ever before," Mr. Maas said. "We are using space in 350 newspapers in towns of 25,000 to 100,000 three times a week regularly, and in 800 smaller newspapers once a week.

"In addition we use space in the larger city dailies periodically."

The New York drive now under way began with 756-line copy inserted one day last week in the 22 dailies. It was designed to appeal to dealers of the city. Inquiry from retailers regarding the hint given of an "enormous advertising campaign" was sought.

On Tuesday this week full page space, addressed to both dealers and consumers brought the message that there was to be a special sale of $1 Auto Strop razors at 49 cents.

On Thursday this week the actual sale opened with full page display copy. After Thursday the drive was to extend six days with about 5,000 lines of advertising appearing in each daily on the list of 22.

"Within one week after the one insertion, 12,000 dealers in New York were actually supplied with goods ready for the sale," Mr. Stampleman said. "We expect to make it 20,000 by the time the campaign actually gets under way.

"This special advertising drive will, we estimate, bring us a minimum of 750,000 new Auto Strop users in New York City.

"We generally get what we aim at, especially when we use newspaper columns.

"For immediate response there is no other media like the newspapers."

Mr. Stampleman described how dealer requests for information were met by his concern.

The dealer copy carried a special telephone number and to it was also attached an inquiry coupon. To meet telephone requests for information a special exchange was installed with 12 trunk lines.

Copy to dealers was worded as follows:

"To all dealers interested in selling razors: We are about to announce in an enormous advertising campaign the most sensational razor sale ever offered to the public.

"We can't call on every dealer in New York City to explain the details. It is too big a task for such a short time.

"To give every dealer an opportunity to participate in this sensational sale is the reason for this advertisement.

"Over a million men will take advantage of this remarkable offer, we estimate.

"You will want to share in the success of this big sale.

"You will not want to disappoint any of your customers."

So quickly and continuously did calls for information come in, according to Mr. Stampleman, that no attempt was made to explain in detail what sort of drive the Auto Strop company was planning to make. Instead names and addresses of those inquiring by telephone were merely taken, and a broadside prepared, telling in detail about the proposed bargain, was mailed out.

In the broadside, nothing was left to the imagination of the dealer. He was told how long the sale was to last, how much the razor would cost him and how much he was to sell them for, and where and how supplies could be obtained. The same broadside was sent those who used the coupon.

In addition to the newspaper copy 268 salesmen were put to work. They covered every dealer in their respective districts.

Both Mr. Stampleton and Mr. Maas are confident of big results from the New York drive, because of the marked success which accompanied conduct of somewhat similar campaigns in other cities recently.

On a smaller scale the bargain-sale campaign has been now tried out in Chicago, Boston, Syracuse, Rochester, Atlanta, Birmingham, and a last test on which the present drive was based.

These campaigns have run at a minimum of eight days and a maximum of three weeks, depending entirely on the means the firm has of covering the market and its importance.

N. R. Maas

In Philadelphia, using small copy in two newspapers over a period of two weeks, 13,000 razors were sold, Mr. Stampleton said. In Rochester, one newspaper used accomplished the sale of 40,000. One newspaper in Chicago printing a two weeks' campaign was responsible for the sale of 273,000.

Commenting on the value of newspapers for selling merchandise, Mr. Maas said:

"We use all forms of advertising. One electric sign we operate on Broadway costs us $60,000 a year. But we have likewise always used newspapers and always advocated them. Each year we have increased our newspaper appropriation.

"We have done this because newspapers produce results for us and produce quickly."

Newspapers used in this two-edged campaign are:

Newark News, New York American, New York Herald Tribune, Bronx Home News, Jewish Daily Forward, Jewish Day, Jewish Journal, New York Journal, Progresso Italiano-Americano, New York Sun, New York Telegram-Mail, New York Times, New York Morning and Evening World, New York Graphic, New York Mirror, New York News, New York Staats-Zeitung, New York Staats-Herold, Brooklyn Eagle and Staten Island Advance.

The drive was supplemented by copy appearing in newspapers in Passaic, New Brunswick and Atlantic City.

Catching the dealer and his customers at one stroke—through newspaper copy.

DAILIES USED IN NEW CIGAR AD DRIVE

Testimonial Copy for Lorillard Products Forms Basis for Special Campaigns—Newspaper Men Featured in Stunt

A national newspaper campaign for Muriel, club perfecto cigar, product of P. Lorillard & Co., Inc., may develop later using a new series of testimonial copy now appearing in New York dailies, Robert W. Orr, space buyer for Lennon & Mitchell, New York agency handling the account, informed Editor & Publisher this week.

The copy, running under the caption, "The Confessions of Muriel Lovers," carries drawings of prominent newspaper men whose work is syndicated, with text praising the cigar written by them. The drawings are sketched from life by Frank Godwin.

This New York campaign for Muriel is somewhat similar to a drive for Murad cigarettes, another Lorillard product handled by Lennon & Mitchell. Both are based on the testimonial type of copy. Both are special campaigns in addition to the regular Lorillard schedule.

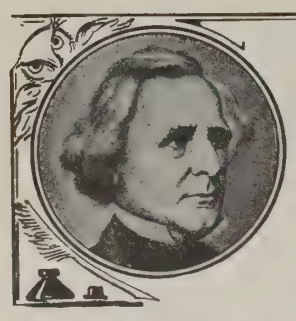
The Murad sales drive, which also started in New York, is now spreading out to a growing list of daily newspapers.

The inquiring reporter idea forms the basis of the Murad copy. Local celebrities are interviewed on the merits of Murads. The advertisements average 12 inches over three columns with text and photographs.

Starting Feb. 1, the Murad stunt is now being put through a schedule of newspapers in the principal eastern cities, and will gradually move west and south, Mr. Orr said.

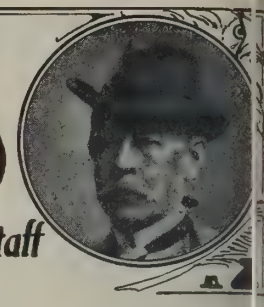
"Increased sales for Murads have resulted in the cities where the copy has so far appeared," he declared. "It is necessarily a slow-moving campaign as far as space buying is concerned, since it hinges on a local tie-up and separate campaigns must be conducted in each city."

The Muriel cigar copy first appeared in New York cities Feb. 15. The series represents testimonials written by 12 prominent newspaper writers and artists who have more than New York reputations.



Among the "Muriel lovers" who have written their "confessions" for the newspaper campaign are H. I. Phillips and Alexander Woollcott, New York Sun; George McManus, comic strip artist; "Bugs" Baer, B. C. Forbes and Alan Dale, New York American; Milt Gross, comic strip artist; Rube Goldberg, comic strip artist; Tad, cartoonist, and Medbury, sports columnist.

Effort is made to place the Muriel copy on sports pages of newspapers, Mr. Orr said.



"We believe that next to the front page, when the advertising appeal is to men, the sporting page is the livest a newspaper has to offer advertisers," he explained.

Radio Campaign Successful

The campaign of the Chicago Tribune to provide radio sets for the needy blind were closed last week, after hundreds of sets had been distributed to blind persons whose names had been submitted by the Council of Social Agencies.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

Mr. Bennett Complimented on His Efficiency

Mr. Bennett regularly received a vast mass of clippings of all kinds from contemporaries, and thus kept himself well informed as to the trend of public opinion.

A New York correspondent of a Western paper amusingly commented on the effect of one of Mr. Bennett's sudden returns from Europe. It was in the Fall of 1886, and he ordered the insertion of the clipping as follows:

"James Gordon Bennett on his return took vigorous charge of the Herald. Every reader can see a wonderful change in all its departments. The editorial page had become of little interest to people outside of New York City. It needs something of the ability of the editorial page which John Russell Young gave it in the days gone by.

"They say whenever Bennett comes home he takes the Herald Building by the nape of the neck, and shakes it up—and wakes it up. The remarkable change in its columns during the past ten days looks like it."

The Howard-Pulitzer Fight

The Herald on February 9, 1887 immortalized the physical encounter that took place between Joe Howard, Jr., and his employer, Mr. Joseph Pulitzer on the previous day.

It seems that Howard had been assigned to report the Montreal Ice Carnival for the World, and had made all preparations to go with a party of friends, and had bought his tickets.

Unexpectedly Mr. Pulitzer changed his mind, and the following colloquy led up to the "scrap."

"What have you been doing today, Joe?"

"Nothing," he replied, "I'm getting ready to go to Montreal."

"I don't want you to go now," said Mr. Pulitzer, authoritatively, pointing his finger at him.

"You d——,———,——," shouted Howard, "don't point that at me!"

Then Pulitzer ordered him out of his office, and on his refusing to go, hit him, Howard punching his boss in return.

Mr. Bennett, roused by Mr. Pulitzer's success in rehabilitating a dying newspaper into a dangerous and prosperous rival, and also not having the kindliest feeling toward Joe Howard, who had left him in the lurch as Washington correspondent, ordered the sporting department to prepare a sensational write-up of the "scrap." That the "boys" eminently succeeded was demonstrated on the following morning, when a mad rush for the Herald ensued, and not a copy could be had at the office or anywhere else by ten o'clock.

With a diagram of the World's editorial rooms, showing the scene of the conflict, the report appeared as follows:

("NOT A 'FAKE FIGHT')

("JOE HOWARD, JR., DOES OR DOES NOT WIPE UP THE FLOOR WITH JOSEPH PULITZER.)

("AN IMPROMPTU SCRAP WITHOUT ROPES OR STAKES.)

"Howard was in fine condition, but Pulitzer seemed finely drawn; the overexertion of swearing to the circulation of the 'Gift enterprise' sheet (N. Y. World) had evidently worn on him.

"FIRST ROUND

"Pulitzer swung his right. Howard countered, and as the room is small, landed on Pulitzer's smeller. The very bluest editorial blood thus suddenly tapped began to flow in streams. However, Pulitzer recovering, did some good two-handed fighting, visiting Howard's bread basket and giving him one or two pleasant reminders on the jaw. Then they sparred for wind. Mr. Pulitzer being fuller of wind than any other man in New York, first recovered. He knocked Howard about for a moment pretty well as he pleased. Pulitzer aimed a left hander at the jugular but fell short, and succeeded in stopping an awful jab, which, had it landed would have put him to sleep for a week.

"SECOND ROUND

"Howard came up fresh as usual, and smiling, led out and Pulitzer dodged—he learned the trick during the few weeks he served in the war, in the rear ranks of the Lincoln cavalry. Pulitzer rushed for his adversary and grappled with him. There was a fearful struggle. They swayed; they reeled; they staggered here and there. Their hot and angry breaths blew on each other's flushed and dripping brows. They fell; Joe Howard underneath. Oh! what a fall! It shook Howard's eye glasses from his 'Bard of Avon' nose. He lost his sight, but he kept his wits. As Pulitzer struggled to his knees, with firm purpose of finishing his antagonist, Howard grabbed him by the lapels of his coat and shook him as a terrier does a rat. So vigorously did he shake that Pulitzer's glasses, too, dropped from the arch of his nose. Neither combatant had then his senses—at least all of them.

"It was strife between blind men. Howard cried a truce.

"'Hold on,' he exclaimed, or rather, 'Get off; I can't fight in the dark. I've dropped my glasses.'

"Pulitzer climbed off. They groped about the floor. Each picked up a pair and adjusted them, but they had exchanged the pairs! About to grapple once more, their fury was frustrated by the interposing rush of editors and reporters."

The Sun next day, in commenting on the fight said:

"The loss of Mr. Howard's eyeglasses at an early stage of the fight undoubte cut short what might have been one of the great, decisive battles of history. * *

"It is not impossible that Howard might have thrashed Ex-Congressman Pu zer, if the fight had proceeded to a finish; but whether he would have thrashed till he squealed is very doubtful."

"Hash"

Much amusement was afforded on both sides of the Atlantic, the appearance of the following facetious cablegram in the Evening Te gram on May 22, 1887, written by Bennett himself, and intended as sharp "dig" at the enterprises of the two Pulitzers, with a side slap a well known Paris correspondent. It reads as follows:

"HASH"

"PARIS, May 21, 1887.—The most remarkable breakfast ever given in Paris was served on Thursday by Mr. Henry Haynie, correspondent of the Philadelphia Tim Boston Herald, Chicago News, San Francisco Chronicle, Cincinnati Times, Pi burgh Dispatch, Oshkosh Repudiator, Paris (Ky.) Badaxe and other papers. had invited Joseph Pulitzer of the World and his brother, Albert, of the Morn Journal to meet a distinguished company. Joseph Pulitzer is owner not only of World, but also of its several editions—the Brooklyn edition, the Hoboken edit the Philadelphia edition, the Faked edition, the Yubadam edition, and the Mixed edition.

"Among the distinguished guests were His Serene Highness, Prince of Limbu the Grand Duke of Mesopotamia; M. de Blowitz; the Akound of Swat; the Sul of Timbuctoo; the King of Siam; a few rajahs from India; some ex-Tamm statesmen, and a dash of Fenians.

"The occasion recalls the memorable dinner given by the late Mr. Sothern, actor, in which every famous personage in America participated by proxy."

Poetic Headlines

In November, 1888, at somebody's suggestion, Mr. Bennett orde the use of what were termed "Poetic Headlines." The innovation beg on the 17th of that month, and lasted just three days, for a veritable sto of protest came from angry readers, complaining of the offensive c tions. We cull a few of the best as samples of what the "boys" were against. There was always a mad scramble in the library for antholog and collections of poetry, the night editor energetically shouting, "Hu up," while the writers' stories lay on the desks awaiting heads.

"Too cold a companion," from Alls Well that Ends Well. Article the frigid manners of President Harrison.

"A Cozening Knave," from Shakespeare. Article on attempt o Boston man to pose as J. G. Blaine, Jr.

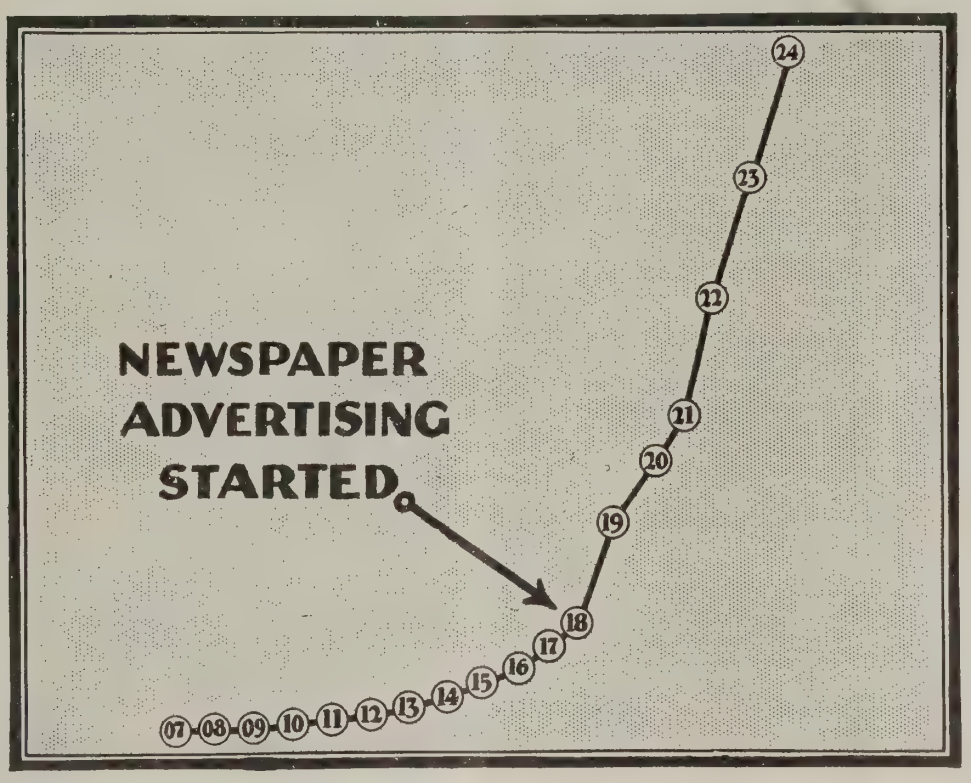
"Why, They are Vipers!" from Shakespeare. Article on Chicago Anarchists.

The Herald Office "A Normal School"

Mr. Chambers returned from Paris early in December, 1887, c tinuing actively in charge until finally on Nov. 1, 1888, he resigned fr the Herald to accept the position of managing editor of the World. Bennett, it was said at the time, regretted the loss of such a valua man, but made no vain plea to have him remain, and in a very kindly w the Herald on Nov. 3, said editorially:

"Mr. Chambers was connected with the Herald for fifteen years reporter, correspondent in Europe and Philadelphia, and last as ne editor—not managing editor,* as sometimes said, for there is no s place in the Herald Office.

"He is a brilliant and active journalist and we have no doubt t as managing editor under so able a chief as Col. Cockerill, he will sh his own qualities and the value of his Herald training. Mr. Chambers only one of many graduates from the Herald school. This office has b for many years a normal school of journalism. We are glad our conte porary has given Mr. Chambers a place which does not exist on Herald, and which therefore he could not hope for here.



"The Herald has a dozen or two of active, brilliant, zealous you men, any one of whom can fill the place left vacant.

"Colonel Cockerill, the Napoleonic young chief of the Wo came here from the World, and taught us all some new things. We th it a compliment to the Herald, that when he wanted an assistant, took him from the Herald Office."

*While Mr. Bennett spoke of Mr. Chambers as "News Editor," his powers were gene recognized as those of a Managing Editor.

(To Be Continued Next Week)

How The Detroit News Helped Sell Holland Furnaces

Holland Furnace Company's Sales Chart Showing How Much More Rapidly Sales Increased Year by Year After Newspaper Advertising Started.

"HOLLAND FURNACES Make Warm Friends"—hardly heard of a few years ago—is rapidly becoming one of the best known slogans in America because its sponsor takes full advantage of the modern newspaper's selling power.

In Detroit, particularly, the success of the Holland Furnace Company has been marked. The Holland sales branches were established in Michigan before other states were entered, but the increase in business in that State and Detroit has been practically as great as in the cities outside Michigan in which branches were opened years after the Michigan branches were established.

As C. D. Karr, advertising manager of the company, says: "It is not difficult to take care of an apple tree so well that in one year's time the size of the apples is increased from 1½ inches to 3 inches but in the year following it would be considered much of a miracle to increase the 3-inch apples to 6-inch apples.

"This seems to me to be very complimentary to the two newspapers—The Detroit News and the Grand Rapids Press. It is principally so to The Detroit News, because it is much more difficult to increase the business of a large branch in the same proportion that it is increased in a smaller branch.

"We do not publish the amount of business we are doing in any one place, but I can tell you that our business in the city of Detroit has grown in a few years from practically nothing to a total each year of hundreds of thousands of dollars."

The Detroit News is used exclusively in the Holland Furnace Company's campaign, as it is by more than 250 other national advertisers. The Detroit News, alone, covers the field thoroughly. In fact, no other city of Detroit's size is covered so thoroughly by one newspaper as Detroit is by The News.

The Detroit News

Greatest Circulation Week Days or Sunday in Michigan

PREFER SALARY BASIS TO BONUS

Seventy-five of 110 Newspapers Covered by A. N. A. E. Survey Pay Advertising Men a Stated Salary Only

A survey just completed by the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives indicates that while a number of American newspapers are now offering bonuses, commissions or prizes to advertising staffs, newspapers operating on the straight salary basis are approximately twice as numerous.

The outstanding problem seems to be to locate the most equitable basis for determining the amount of the total extra remuneration and the basis upon which it should be divided among various individuals.

Systems now in common use vary widely on these points. Many newspaper executives who depend exclusively upon straight salaries, accept the bonus idea as sound in principle but have been unable to find a basis of operation adaptable to their own needs.

The results of the survey are outlined in detail in the following paragraphs. In each case, the individual name of the newspaper has been deleted.

Seventy-five of the 110 newspapers that replied to the questionnaire do not pay a bonus or other remuneration in addition to straight salaries. Of these 75 newspapers, two formerly paid extra remuneration but discontinued it.

Of the 75 newspapers that do not have bonus systems, 16 expressed themselves as favorable to the idea. Ten newspapers, in addition to the two that formerly paid a bonus, expressed themselves as unfavorable. The remaining 47 newspapers merely replied that they do not pay special remuneration of any kind.

Extra remuneration in one form or another, is paid by thirty-five of the 110 newspapers that participated in the survey.

Twenty of the 35 consider their plan a success, while two of the newspapers are uncertain as to the advantage or disadvantage of their system. None of the 35 reported its plan as unsuccessful. The remaining 13 newspapers did not state whether or not the plan is satisfactory but it is presumed that the system in operation is reasonably successful in each case or it would be discontinued.

The individuals receiving the extra compensation vary on different newspapers. Those who qualify for the bonus are listed below, together with the number of newspapers reporting each plan.

Complete advertising department	12
All advertising salesmen, but not executives	7
Display department only	7
Classified department only	3
Advertising executives only	2
Adv. Dept. and other Dept. Heads	2
All departments	2

Reports covering the basis of the extra remuneration were not definite in every case, and although a statistical summary of this question is difficult, one of a reasonably accurate character is given following:

Based upon increased business	13
Special contests, special pages, commission on contracts, etc	7
Percentage of net profits earned	3
Basis changed from time to time	3
Based upon increased revenue	1
Based upon length and quality of service	1

Three of the newspapers did not state the basis upon which they operate and four additional newspapers gave explanations that cannot be summarized.

Rochester Daily Incorporated

Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Rochester (Minn.) Post-Bulletin with a capital stock of $150,000. The two daily newspapers were recently consolidated. The incorporators are Clare W. Blakely, G. S. Witherstine, Amelia A. Blakely and Bessie K. Withstine.

MID-WEEK COPY THE RULE ON THIS PAPER

"WHICH day of the week do you recommend as most productive for national advertising?" is a question placed before newspaper advertising men almost daily. It was answered in Newspaper Advertising, house organ of the Association of Newspaper Advertising Executives, recently, by a six-day metropolitan newspaper, after a study of its own columns, showing the following apportionment of space:

Wednesday,	23.8 per cent
Tuesday,	23.6 per cent
Thursday,	20.0 per cent
Monday,	15.2 per cent
Friday,	12.2 per cent
Saturday,	5.0 per cent

"SWAT THAT FLY"

Simple Idea Created Publicity at Low Cost for Maine Daily

A simple idea that created considerable publicity at comparatively no cost was told EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week by D. L. Minster, circulation manager of the Portland (Me.) Evening Express. The idea proved the start of what is believed to be the first newspaper fly swatting campaign of the season.

"Our editor thought he would have a little fun with the kiddies and offered $1 each to the first three boys or girls who brought the editorial department a fly, and the story of its capture," Mr. Minster explained.

"The noon edition of the Express carried the first announcement advertisement. It went to press at twelve noon and at 1.25 P. M. the first fly arrived in the editorial room and a little fellow went away happy with a brand new crisp dollar bill.

"Up to Friday noon we have had a steady stream of boys and girls with their capture. By starting this campaign at this time we figured out that there would be six billion, seven hundred forty-eight million, nine hundred thirty-two thousand, three hundred and ninety-one flies less this coming season."

BATON ROUGE NEWS SOLD

Bogalusa Publisher and Former Governor Are New Owners

The Baton Rouge (La.) News, established in 1919 has been purchased by Clyde S. Moss, publisher of the Bogalusa (La.) Enterprise, and J. Y. Sanders, former governor of Louisiana. The name of the paper has been changed to the Louisiana Press and it is being issued seven days a week, mornings.

John Franklin, former manager of the American Printing Company, New Orleans, is manager of the Press.

The Average Daily Circulation -- net paid—of the Baltimore Sun (morning and evening) for the month of February, 1925, was:

250,696

For the four Sundays in February the average net paid circulation of THE SUNDAY SUN was 183,667.

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning, Evening, Sunday

NEW NEWSPAPER RULE IN MILWAUKEE

Journal Now Classifies Display Advertisers as "Local" and "General" and Tightens Limits on Former Group

By a change in classification the Milwaukee Journal has shifted about 250 advertisers from a local to a general basis. Under the Journal's new ruling, which is now in force, manufacturers or wholesale distributers of any product, or persons doing a business which is both wholesale and retail, are "general" advertisers. As such they are subject to the rate charged national display advertisers.

The Journal decided to adopt the classification of "local" and "general" advertising because it believed those terms are more accurate than the old classification "local" and "national." Local accounts are to be charged at the local advertising rate on a sliding scale. General accounts are billed at the rate which in the past has been considered "national." General advertisers are entitled to contracts for a year and may buy position. Local contracts run from month to month and no position is sold.

The following seven points are used by the Journal in making public its interpretation of the new ruling:

1. Firms doing a retail to consumer business exclusively through their own retail outlet in Milwaukee are to be considered as "local."

2. Manufacturers or wholesalers, their home office outside of Milwa selling their product to Wisconsin r ers or consumers are "general" adv ing accounts.

3. Manufacturers or wholesalers, their home office within Milwa county, selling their product at whol to dealers, are "general" accounts.

4. Manufacturers or wholesalers, their home office in Milwaukee co selling their product through a com tion of their own retail outlet and through dealers in Wisconsin are eral" accounts.

5. Manufacturers or general distr ers, with their home office within Mil kee county, doing a general busine consumers or dealers in Wisconsin outside of the state are "general" counts.

6. Any advertisement carrying on more retail dealers' names, selling product or service, is subject to a eral" rate.

7. Any advertisement carrying a er's name as a general distributer, is ject to the "general" rate.

A. P. Doubles Service in New Je

The Associated Press March 25 creased its service to five New Je newspapers by expanding from a sing a double wire circuit, with printers ning parallel with Morse. The five da affected are the Union Hill Hudson patch, Newark Ledger, Paterson Trenton State Gazette and Atlantic Press.

N.B.—This adver ment is one series appearing in Enquirer. Each ad tisement personalize Cincinnati suburb b scribing the typ woman characteristi this suburb; in each vertisement, too, Enquirer's coverage the district is shown.

MRS. NORWOOD...

her home is her castle

Some might call her "mid-Victorian"; others "ultra-modern." As a matter of fact she is neither, but a charming combination of both—a woman who has kept the best of the age that's gone; who has added the best of the age that's here!

Musical and literary clubs, Red Cross and Community Chest drives know her well. But while Mrs. Norwood lends herself unselfishly to these activities, her heart remains in her home. Mr. Norwood says she is a "wonderful little manager"—and she proves it every day in her buying.

It is as a help in this latter duty that The Daily Enquirer enters Mrs. Norwood's life. In the hour after the children leave for school she plans her shopping and reads her paper. A few hours later, with shopping information fresh in her mind, she does her day's buying.

How many Mrs. Norwoods are there? For example, in a single district there are 869 homes. Here 619 Enquirers are delivered every morning.

Combined with such coverage is real purchasing power. Out of Norwood's 5,500 families, 3,210 pay income taxes—a market as fertile as any advertiser could wish. Cultivate it with the home paper of this market—The Daily Enquirer.

I. A. KLEIN
New York
Chicago

R. J. BIDWELL
San Francis
Los Angeles

The CINCINNATI ENQUIRER

"Goes to the home, stays in the home"

Brigg's Service Satisfies!

Boston News Bureau:

"Your first proposals that we run a feature page did not impress us favorably, as you know. We realized your success and the long experience you had had. But we felt that it had been with the regular daily newspapers and that your methods of solicitation and the type of business concerns which you were accustomed to approach might not be suited to the Boston News Bureau, a daily business and financial publication.

"We are pleased to acknowledge that our first impressions were not correct.

"When we agreed with you to publish a feature page we were fearsome that we should be obliged to devote much time and thought to it. As things have worked out we have been obliged to do nothing. Your representatives have not only developed the business but have assumed every detail of the many connected with the page."

Kansas City Journal-Post:

"I am writing you this letter to inform you how well pleased we are with the method and the way you have conducted your affairs while doing business with the Journal-Post over the past two years.

"I am safe in saying that I have never seen any firm handling this line of advertising that is so reliable and satisfactory.

"You have gone after only accounts that are not regular advertisers in the paper and all the business that we have received through you was in the non-advertising class. This is a very satisfactory arrangement that would be impossible to land any other way.

"This condition plus the fair way you have acted makes the whole arrangement entirely satisfactory."

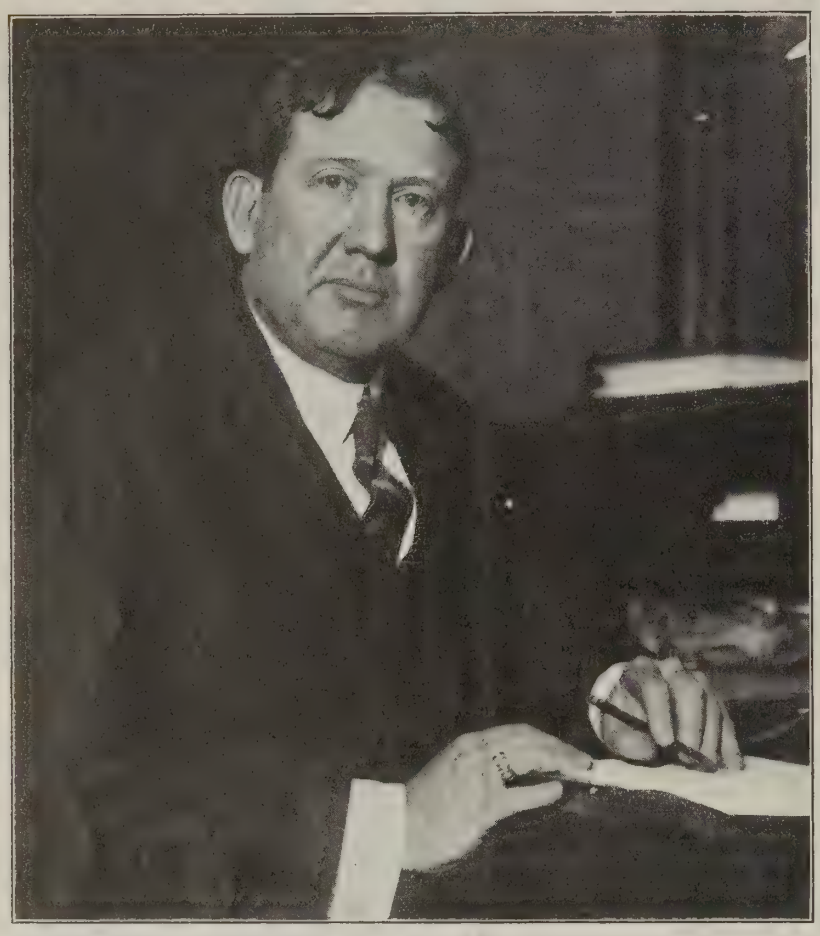
FRANK CROWELL, Adv. Mgr.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram:

"It is a pleasure to advise that we are going to press Saturday, December 31st, with a second feature page containing 128½ inches of advertising.

"We desire to express our appreciation of the splendid corps of salesmen who have secured this business. We are very much pleased with the manner in which they have co-operated with us in placing only the best class of business on this page. The entire crew is to be commended for their efficient methods and dignified solicitation."

Publishers—Write for Details of our Plan



Thomas W. Briggs Co.

Home Office: Columbian Mutual Tower, Memphis, Tennessee

Ask Dun or Bradstreet about our Responsibility—Ask any Publisher about our Service

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

W. P. HOBBY—"Wholly Adequate"

BUSY as a newspaper maker, a figure in Texas politics, ex-Governor W. P. Hobby, principal owner of the Beaumont (Tex.) Enterprise and Journal, and president of the Houston Post-Dispatch, has added a new activity to his list.

He is arranging amusement for some 5,000 advertising men expected to arrive in Houston next May for the 21st annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

And in this role, Mr. Hobby is proving himself, as a metropolitan dramatic critic might mildly state, "wholly adequate." Fellow Texans aptly remark he is ridin' it hard.

"We have 500 Houston people preparing pageants and other spectacles to amuse the advertising delegates," Mr. Hobby said this week, when he was interviewed as chairman of the Houston entertainment committee.

"Our plan is to give them entertainment that truly partakes of Texas. Houston is intensely interested in the convention. The entire citizenship and business interests are going to give the delegates all they have got in the way of entertainment. We are doing the best we know how."

From this statement one phrase must stand out in any consideration of Mr. Hobby, Texas publisher.

I asked him once on what he based his success in the newspaper field principally.

"By always doing the best I know how," was his reply.

He began doing this best in business when 16 years old. Paid $8 a week for general clerical work in the subscription department of the Houston Post, he was transferred to the reportorial staff of the same newspaper. When he was 25, he was made the Post's managing editor.

While Mr. Hobby was still directing the Post's news staff in 1907, the Beaumont Enterprise, which had overtaxed itself in zeal following the early oil boom days, went into bankruptcy. Mr. Hobby was among those present at a subsequent bankruptcy sale. With others he purchased the newspaper and put it on such a firm basis that by 1914 he was able to leave some of the publishing details in the hands of others and become a candidate for Lieutenant Governor of Texas in 1914. He was elected, served three years, and was then named Governor.

During this time he continued to direct the business of the Beaumont Enterprise, and in 1921 he was able to acquire the Beaumont Journal and consolidate the two newspapers under one management. In Beaumont, J. L. Mapes is Mr. Hobby's associate publisher. Last August he became joint owner with R. S. Sterling in the Houston Post-Dispatch.

Native of Texas, it is no wonder that Mr. Hobby is proud of that huge state. He thinks Texas newspapers are superior to those in other cities of the same size in the United States, and declared that the state itself was now in the midst of a substantial boom.

"If you don't believe it," he said, "come to Houston next May and see for yourself."

READERS NEED REFORM

"More Than the Press," Says J. M. Lee in Address

"Newspapers may need reform, but newspaper readers need it still more," said James Melvin Lee, director, department of journalism, New York University, and conductor of EDITOR & PUBLISHERS' "Our Own World of Letters," in a New York address this week.

Speaking on "Crime and the Newspapers," from the viewpoint of newspaper executives, whose opinion he had solicited, Mr. Lee said:

"If any newspaper actually printed what it actually knew about crimes actually committed in high and low estate it literally would turn the world upside down. But what purpose would such publication serve? The newspaper doesn't want to crush society, break up homes, disrupt the church, tear down a university—just for the fun of the thing.

"Every city editor would prefer to send his men out to hunt for the good things of life if only the reading public had as much interest in such accounts as they have in crime."

FOR THE GOOD OF SERMONS

Preachers Need Three Months' Work on Newspapers, Says One of Them

No minister should be given charge of a parish until he has held a reporter's job on a daily newspaper for three months, in the opinion of Dr. George M. Hunter, editor of the Presbyterian Banner, Pittsburgh.

"The experience," says Dr. Hunter in an editorial in this week's issue, "would teach the preacher the strength of brevity; respect for facts; how to make one word do the work of three; choice of adjectives; the power of a wisely chosen noun and how the average person looks at the world around him."

In writing news for the religious press, Dr. Hunter urges his ministerial readers to "state plainly what you have to say and stop."

"Avoid trite phrases such as 'Brother Smith is doing a great work.' Tell what he is doing; let the reader infer whether his work is great or not.

"Take a solemn vow never to use the word 'great.' By constant usage, its edges are worn off."

Gardner Gets Golf Cup

Dr. A. R. Gardner of the Waterbury Dental Company, New York, a member of the Advertising Club of New York, was presented recently, with the $1,500 gold cup offered by the News of the World, London, for the winner of the Walton Heath Tournament in London last July in connection with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World convention. At the same time Mr. Gilbert C. Tompkins of Stanford Briggs of New York, also a member of the Advertising Club, was presented with the two trophies which he won in the Walton Heath Tournament. The presentations were made at the Advertising Club of New York by President H. H. Charles.

Would Publish Village Minutes

A bill which if passed, may produce considerable extra revenue for Michigan weekly newspapers, is a measure introduced in the lower house of the state legislature by Representative Dexter G. Look of Lowell. The bill would add a section to the present act relating to the incorporation of villages to provide that proceedings of the village council be published in the local newspaper, if there be one.

Publisher Suing Judge

Grady Webster, publisher of the Wewoka (Okla.) Capital-Democrat, has instituted suit for $40,000 against District Judge George C. Crump, charging the jurist with attempting to coerce attorneys into withholding legal advertising from his newspaper. Webster publishes the only paper in Wewoka, the county seat of Seminole County.

France Fighting Fraud Ads

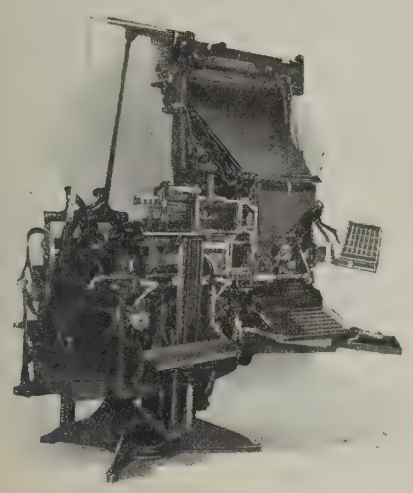
M. Justice Godart, French Minister of Labor and Public Health has launched an "Honesty in Advertising" movement and has enlisted the support of French newspapers.

Douglas Taylor, Sales Manager of Printers' Ink, recently wrote:

"Any keen buyer of space is interested not only in how much circulation you have, but also in how you get that circulation."

The Standard Union circulation has been secured by producing a Brooklyn newspaper honest to the interests of all honest Brooklyn people.

No premiums, no gifts, no schemes, no begging—nothing but the news.



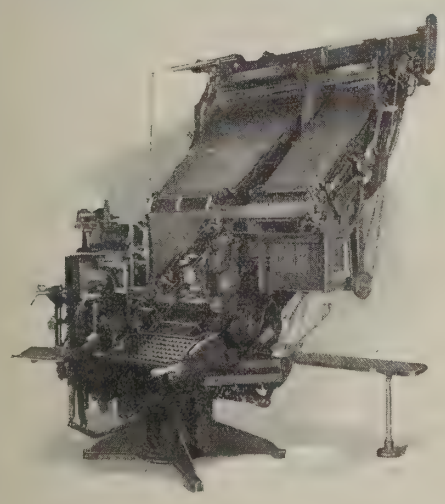
R. J. R. Shuttleworth
President

LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY BROOKLYN NEWSPAPER

PROVED BY SERVICE

Models 25 and 26

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK — TRADE LINOTYPE MARK



Model 25

Two Standard Linotype Magazines, interchangeable with other Linotypes.

Faces from both magazines mixed in the same line.

Continuous distribution to both magazines at all times.

Easy Magazine Shift. Magazines are counterbalanced so that a light touch shifts either into operative position.

Model 26

Just like the Model 25 with the addition of two Standard Auxiliary Magazines, interchangeable with Auxiliaries on other Single Keyboard Linotypes.

Faces from all magazines mixed in the same line.

A Single Power-Driven Keyboard operates all magazines.

A touch on a keybutton shifts the keyboard action from main to auxiliary magazines.

In all parts of the country, in all kinds of printing plants, under widely varying operating conditions, the Models 25 and 26 Linotypes have during the past year won for themselves the enthusiastic approval of operators, machinists, executives and owners.

Here are a few quotations from letters in our files commenting on the operation of these models:

"Our experience with our first Model 26 Linotype machine was so satisfactory that we ordered two more at once."

"We are well pleased with the performance of our new battery of fourteen Model 26's."

"After four months' operation of the two Model 26's I am convinced it is the most practical machine made."

"The Models 25 and 26 have acted like a powerful tonic to the ad alley."

"It is the favored machine of all operators and subs who have a chance at it. Our next machines will undoubtedly be 25's or 26's."

"They are wonderful machines when it comes to mixing faces and fill a long felt want in the job shop."

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Write the nearest Agency for a copy of the folder "Suggested Head Letter Layouts for the Model 26 Linotype" and full information

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

COMPOSED ENTIRELY ON THE LINOTYPE IN BENEDICTINE EXCEPT FOR ENLARGED TITLE LINE

OREGON CIRCULATION MEN OUT IN FORCE FOR ANNUAL MEETING

Circulation managers of Oregon newspapers formed a large and active part in last week's assemblage of the state's newspaper men at Eugene. Proceedings of the group pictured above were chronicled in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of March 21.

CIRCULATORS SUGGEST HIGHER YEARLY RATES

Proposed Increase in Railroad Baggage Rates for Newspapers Denounced at Altoona Meet of Interstate Association

Fixing upon Wilmington, Del., as the next convention seat and electing as president C. T. Buck, of the Lancaster New Era, the semi-annual convention of the Interstate Circulation Managers' Association come to a close at Altoona, Pa., March 24.

In the election of officers, the last item taken up by the convention, Lewis P. Rutherford, of the Wilmington Every Evening, was moved up from second to first vice-president; J. S. Still, of the Baltimore News, was given the second vice-presidency, and J. H. J. Kurtz, of the Lancaster Intelligencer-News Journal, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

The afternoon business session was preceded by a series of discussions centering on whether it is more advisable to have collections made by carriers or by special collectors, on recreation for boy carriers, on the cross-word puzzle craze as a circulation stimulant and on the effect of cash prize puzzles on circulation.

A foreseen advance of 66⅔ per cent in rates for the transportation of newspapers in baggage cars were denounced by the association in a resolution passed at the morning session. The resolution enters "solemn protest against the proposed increase in rates . . . by the Pennsylvania Railroad, Baltimore & Ohio and Reading Railway," and asks that the railroads named withdraw the applications for increased rates and "return to the broad policy which has been of much mutual benefit."

The delegates were welcomed to Altoona by D. N. Slep, president of the Mirror Printing Company. A report from Secretary-Treasurer Henry C. Carpenter, of the Lancaster Intelligencer-News Journal, showed the association to have $151.70 on the credit ledger, the receipts for the past year having amounted to $325.30 and the expenses $173.60.

New zone mailing rates established by the postal department were gone over by R. L. McLean, of the Philadelphia Bulletin, who quoted figures showing what the new rates will mean in the expense of distribution. The only remedy he could see from the standpoint of a publisher is higher subscription rates.

Carrier systems came in for a discussion by A. C. Ginley, of the Atlantic City Gazette-Review, president of the association, who argued adult carriers are the most efficient, even though somewhat more expensive than boys. Fred G. Pearce, of the Altoona Mirror, addressed the convention on the relation of circulation to advertising, insisting circulation means advertising and that each department of the newspaper should be self-sustaining. Each address was followed by an open forum in which questions pertaining to the subject were answered and ideas exchanged.

NEW TABLOID MARCH 31

Philadelphia Daily News Ready to Start Publication

Publication of the Philadelphia Daily News, new tabloid, will start March 31, L. M. Elmoker, publisher, announced this week.

Frederic E. Shapiro, managing editor, has arranged for complete wire of the International News Service, sports wire of the United Press Associations, United News Pictures picture service and International News Picture service and the Henry Miller service of Washington, D. C. Mr. J. H. Keen, former city editor of the Washington Herald, will be picture, feature and dramatic editor.

John C. Marscher, formerly of the New York Herald Tribune, is advertising manager, and C. Israel Lutsky, classified manager.

The Goss Printing Press Company completed the sextuple press purchased from them in five weeks. It is supplemented by a quad press already in the new plant. A complete new stereotyping equipment was purchased. The plant is equipped with fourteen linotypes and a Ludlow machine.

San Francisco Chronicle

PAYING circulation determines the logical choice of an advertising medium. In San Francisco and Northern California it is a recognized fact that The Chronicle following has the buying power.

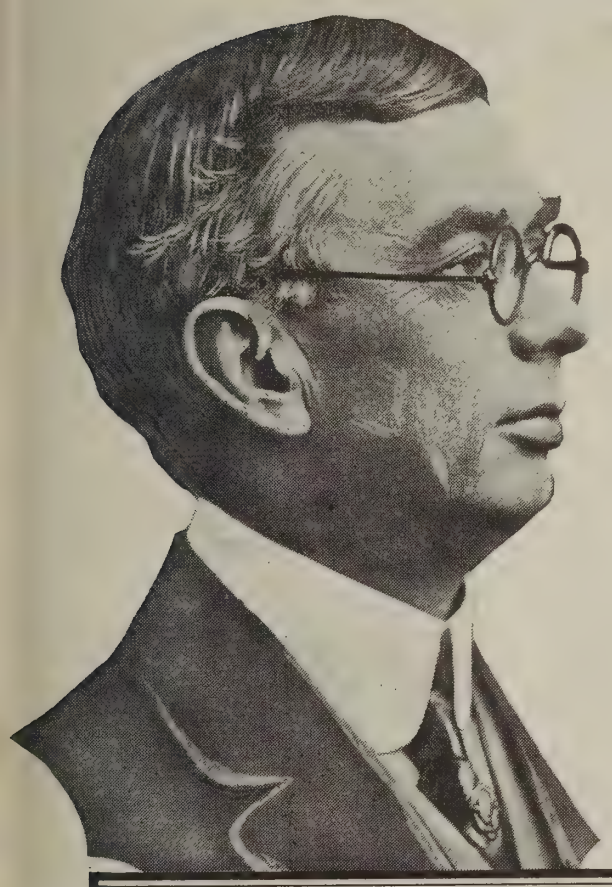
National Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Co.
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago
225 Fifth Ave., New York

In the Course of the Day

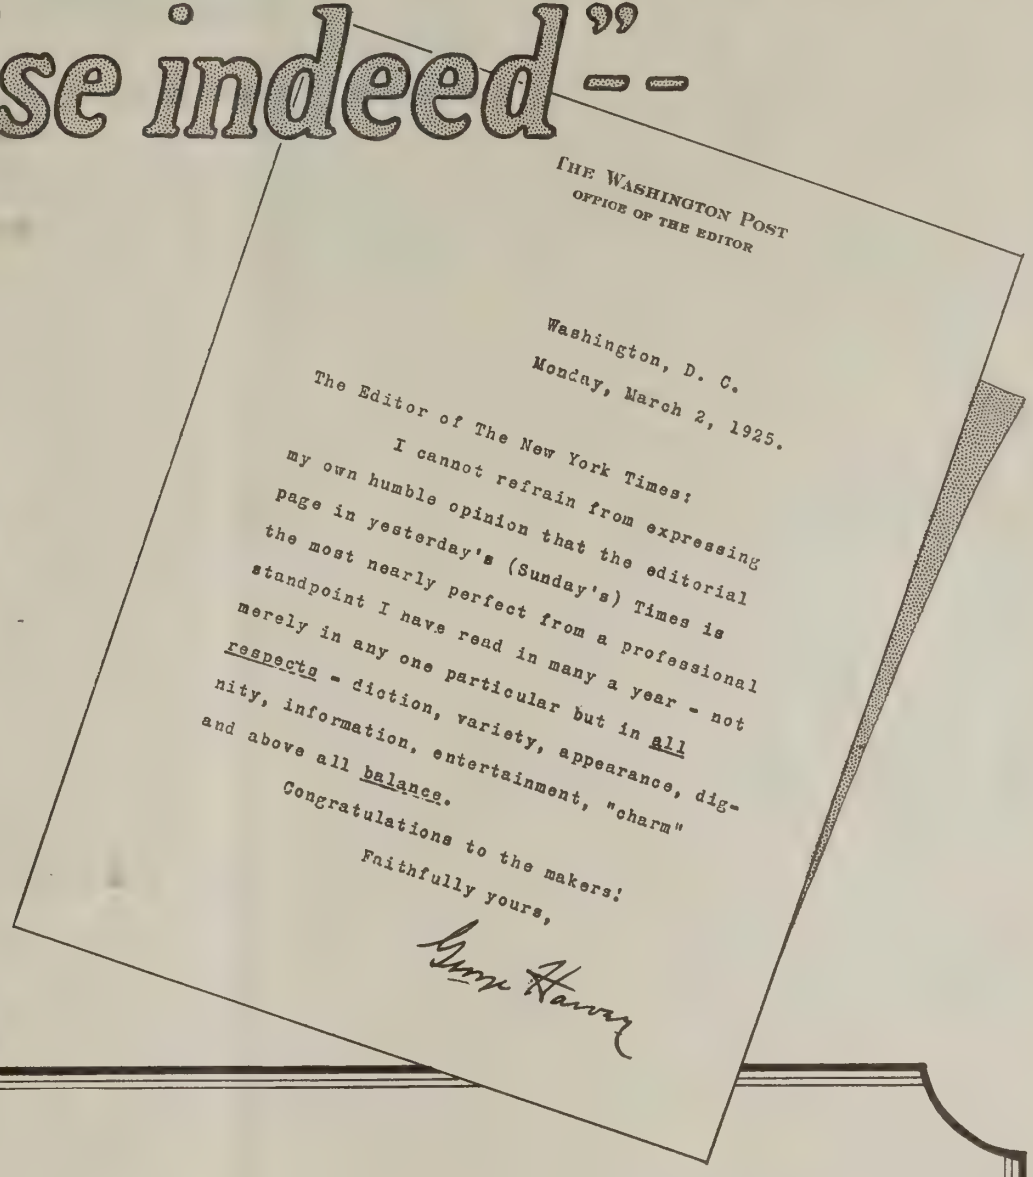
From early morning till late at night there's a steady demand for Rhode Island's representative newspapers

THE PROVIDENCE JOURNAL and THE EVENING BULLETIN

These newspapers have built through rigid supervision of advertising columns as well as the high character of editorial and news pages, a reader confidence and influence that make them valuable mediums for manufacturers who seek good company and a friendly welcome in this prosperous Rhode Island market.



Circulation 101,000 Net Paid



Flat Rate 23 cents a line

Providence Journal Company
Providence, R. I.

Chas. H. Eddy Company — Boston, New York, Chicago
Representatives
R. J. Bidwell Company — San Francisco, Los Angeles

"Approbation from Sir Hubert is praise indeed"--

THE WASHINGTON POST OFFICE OF THE EDITOR

Washington, D. C.
Monday, March 2, 1925.

The Editor of The New York Times:

I cannot refrain from expressing my own humble opinion that the editorial page in yesterday's (Sunday's) Times is the most nearly perfect from a professional standpoint I have read in many a year - not merely in any one particular but in all respects - diction, variety, appearance, dignity, information, entertainment, "charm" and above all balance.

Congratulations to the makers!

Faithfully yours,

Gene Tunney

Strictly a Newspaper—for Intelligent, Thoughtful People

The New York Times

"All the News That's Fit To Print"

Without Comics Without Puzzles

Without Equal in Completeness and Quality of News

DAILY, OVER 350,000 SUNDAY, OVER 600,000

Net paid sale—No returns of unsold copies

ADVERTISEMENTS: INFORMATIVE—CLEAN—TRUSTWORTHY

EDITORIAL

BUILDING REAL-ESTATE PAGES

THE publisher of a city daily asks our opinion on how to start a successful real-estate page. He says his paper carries less than two columns of real-estate, classified or display, and that the efforts of his solicitors have been in vain. His newspaper ranks third in circulation, but is well supported by department stores, specialty shops and carries fair national lineage.

The basis of every successful department page is news. And the direct method of establishing a real-estate page is to set apart properly labelled and adequate space and proceed to make a page which demands the respectful attention of real-estate men and the general public. An advertising solicitor is not needed until a very capable editor, one who knows news and how to play it, has paved the way.

All else is detail, with one scheme perhaps as good as another. One editor may be effective at writing editorials on real-estate, discussing values, trends, styles of architecture, telling stories of successful speculations, arousing discussion of local real-estate planning. Another editor may draw attention by bold illustrated features in the field. Still another may find an improved form for recording transactions or speedier reporting. The page which merely flatters local dealers may not win much business, if it does not contain elements that make it attractive to the public.

Nothing is much better for a page of this kind than the old-fashioned question box, assuming that you have a man capable of giving sound replies to inquiries. The average real-estate owner does not follow the market closely and naturally has many questions to ask, and if replies are liberal and comprehensive they should make interesting reading for both dealer and ordinary reader.

The good editor will be interested in small affairs. He will appreciate the fact that the first down payment on a home represents a major event in the life of the common man. He will have a lively interest in the welfare of tenants and the ceaseless human struggle to establish better homes. He will consider his writing not the hack product of a mere recorder of real-estate trading but a true civic mission.

However the page may be treated in detail, the fact that it is first with the news of the real-estate market will command attention and advertising invariably flows where such interest is served. Your problem is to find the editor.

A check-up of New York state papers shows that more than half use graduated advertising rate cards, as against half that have applied the principle of flat rates.

THE GREAT FUTILITY

THE amazing fact is that war censorship flourishes abroad six years after the Peace Treaty. So convenient is this public gag that, once possessing it, weak governments are loath to let it go.

We learn from Savel Zimand, writing in New York Times, that press censorship prevails today in Russia, Spain, Italy, Hungary, Bulgaria, Rumania and Greece, in some instances being backed by martial law. Internal censorship is continuously practised in Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Japan, Korea and is not unfamiliar in Chili and Brazil.

In every country there is at least "mild" supervision of cables sent abroad. Every correspondent knows that his messages are being read by the Foreign Office of the country in which he is stationed, and acts accordingly.

Severe penalties are imposed in Russia, Italy, Hungary, Spain and Balkan States on editors who violate prescribed rules in reference to making information public and there are instances of discipline of foreign correspondents, Mr. Zimand declares.

People who do not know the facts of state are not free. Censorship is a remnant of that brutal autocracy which this generation made supreme sacrifice to overthrow, yet is one of the neglected problems of this day. If nations can meet to discuss limitation of armament, cannot they discuss the inherent right of peoples to have an understanding of life's questions and events? The more one studies the institution of free press the more one finds it to be the acid test of democracy.

A wholesome tongue is a tree of life; but perverseness therein is a breach in the spirit.—Proverbs: XV, 4.

A DELICATE LETTER

THE letter which you do not enjoy writing demands the payment of a bill. In newspaper practice it is the most dangerous letter that goes from the office. A newspaper cannot afford to lose friends among advertisers or subscribers. But money due must be collected.

The danger that lies behind a vigorous dunning letter is that it may do an injustice. A bill is overdue, it is right that the money should be sought, but you may not know of sound reasons which have delayed payment, tender subjects in the mind of the debtor. If you knew the facts you would not write a caustic dun and above all else you would not be in the attitude of a sarcastic scold.

A letter came this way recently which seemed in such excellent taste that we make bold to pass it along as a model form for a letter to be sent when conventional forms fail. We venture to say that it has pulled a high percentage of prompt replies. Here it is:

"Dear Mr. Blank:

"It cannot be more unpleasant for you to receive this letter than it is for me to write it. I am confident that the small bill—$6.75 contracted January 7, 1925—has merely been overlooked by you, but it stands on our books and I am sort of put in the attitude of dunning by reason of the fact that this is the third time that I have been forced to call it to your attention, as a routine matter of accounting. The amount is so small that we will not talk about it, but in our business, as in all others, these small items are important and we naturally have to clear them up. So will you kindly drop us a check today so I may draw a red line on the book to indicate the account is paid to date?

"Cordially yours,
"Cashier."

A motor car company, fair advertiser, decides to put out another type of car as an auxiliary line, and writes editors asking free publicity promotion on the basis of advertising done for the original car, which revives the thought that there is no nourishment in last year's beefsteaks.

March 28, 1925 Volume 57, No. 44

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Building.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London: The Advertising World represents EDITOR & PUBLISHER for the British Isles, 14 King Street, Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34 rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokio: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50.

COUNTY-WIDE SERVICE

IN its county Indianapolis News has 85,000 circulation, of which 9,000 copies are distributed outside of the city of Indianapolis; the last edition goes to press at 2:30 P. M. and both city and county deliveries are complete before 6 P. M.

This achievement of the News, through the magic of its famous circulation manager John M. Schmid, is one of the classic performances in American journalism. Writing on the subject of good roads, in a recent issue of a trade paper devoted to concrete highways, Mr. Schmid makes some observations which should be recorded for the benefit of newspaper makers in general.

He gives generous credit both to good roads and to the motor vehicle, but the fact remains that these advantages have been open to many other newspapers which have not embraced them as has the News. He expresses the opinion that the responsibility of his newspaper is not limited by the city, but by the trading area and he claims it is the right of every individual in the county to receive the newspaper on even terms with the city dweller.

In March, 1923, the first motor route was laid out and operation started over the roads. The distributor picked up his papers at an outlying distributing station and reached the last subscriber on a 40-mile route almost as early as the city carrier reached his last reader. The route was so successful that more were laid out as rapidly as practicable and at present most rural deliveries within Marion County are made in this way with approximately 20 routes in operation. Forty additional routes operate from towns in adjacent counties.

The News maintains 40 city substations and some of these are utilized as starting points for motor routes. Light touring cars owned by the distributors are used. Payments to the drivers are made on a basis of salary, commission and mileage. Routes are confined as much as possible to paved highways in order to give complete year 'round service. Subscribers living on roads which become impassable during certain seasons are given a box similar to a rural mail box to put up at a convenient place along the paved road.

Theorists who declare that fighting spirit has gone out of the press, should see Montreal Star's cartoons attacking local graft, vicious police administration, prostitution, filth, official incompetence.

ONE TO ANOTHER

Frank P. Adams said not long ago that he thought newspaper men were often unnecessarily "rotten" to each other. Rivalry is frequently carried to the point of absurd meanness. But there are highlights on the picture. Witness an editorial which appeared last week in the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, edited by C. J. Mooney:

"The Commercial-Appeal has just received information of the consolidation of the Akron Press and the Akron Times. Hereafter, the paper will be known as the Akron Times-Press. It will be a Scripps Howard paper.

"L. E. Herman, until recently business manager of the Memphis Press, will be the business manager of the consolidated paper. Mr. Herman left Memphis a few days ago to enter the Akron field. During his sojourn in Memphis he made many friends and we on the Commercial-Appeal delighted to have him as a neighbor.

"Mr. Keefe, who was in charge of the business office of the Press several years ago, has returned to Memphis, and will take up Mr. Herman's work. While we are sorry to lose Mr. Herman, we are glad to have Keefe back. Both of them always stood for those things that were fair. They are keen competitors, but clean competitors."

After Premier Pachich had expelled Theodor Berkes from Jugoslavia because of his direct-term reports of methods used in a recent electoral campaign, the Foreign Minister suggested that he might return if he would agree to act more "correctly" in future, but the reporter replied that he would not subordinate his function to political exigency, wherein, as The Nation says, he honored himself and his profession.

PERSONALS

HERBERT PULITZER of the New York World sailed March 25, on the liner Berengaria.

Horace Crihfield, publisher of the Atlanta (Ill.) Argus and a chain of five other papers celebrated his 50th year March 26, as a printer and publisher continuously in the Argus office.

S. A. Walker, owner of the Warren (Pa.) Times, has returned to his home from Long Beach, Cal., where he was called by the death of his brother O. E. Walker.

Joseph Tarte, president of Montreal La Patrie, underwent an operation in Notre Dame Hospital, Montreal, from which he is reported to be making a successful recovery.

Theodore T. Ellis, publisher of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette has given the Worcester lodge of Elks a $5,000 organ to be placed in the new lodge auditorium and a substantial money gift to assist in the furnishing of the club house.

Ralph Beaver Strassburger, publisher of the Norristown (Pa.) Times-Herald, accompanied by Mrs. Strassburger, has returned from a three months' stay at Palm Beach.

J. B. Sherrill, editor and publisher of the Concord (N. C.) Tribune, recently filled several columns of his paper with tributes from his fellow editors of the South on his 40th year at the head of his present enterprise. The anniversary was celebrated March 1.

Dan A. Carroll, publishers' representative, has been made chairman of the Newspaper Representatives' Division for the coming Home Service Appeal of the Salvation Army.

Clarence W. Barron, editor of the Wall Street Journal, is critically ill at a sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

GEORGE C. CRAMER, editor of the Mackinaw (Ill.) Enterprise-Gazette, for several years, has resigned to be affiliated with a printing concern in Peoria, Ill. He is succeeded in Mackinaw by B. W. Agard.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Withrow have returned to their home in Portland, Ore., after an extended visit in England. Mr. Withrow is a veteran reporter on the Portland Telegram.

George D. Ahearn has resigned from the Springfield (Mass.) Republican to become assistant city editor of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer, Bridgeport, Conn.

Louis D. Kornfield, of the New York Times Paris staff, has been recuperating at St. Germain-en-Laye, near Paris, from a recent illness. He hopes soon to leave for a few months' rest in the Alps.

Harvey W. Root, of Norwalk, Conn., has joined the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer as financial and industrial writer.

Miss Helen Johns, woman's club reporter on the Philadelphia Public Ledger for several years, has joined the Chester (Pa.) Times, doing woman's club and social news.

Erland Richter, former editor of the Swedish weekly, Svea, published at Worcester, Mass., has left for Stockholm.

Howard A. White, 26, has resigned from the Columbus (O.) Dispatch, to enter the consular service at Plymouth, England. He is a former naval cadet at Annapolis and a former student at Ohio State University.

L. J. Burdge has been appointed radio editor of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer.

Charles H. Dennis, managing editor of the Chicago Daily News, spoke last Saturday before former University of Illinois men in Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Edna Cooper has joined the staff of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer as a society writer.

THE BUSINESS OFFICE

T. R. WILLIAMS, former business manager of the Pittsburgh Press, accompanied by Mrs. Williams, is spending some time in Bermuda.

B. F. Grant, general manager of the Salt Lake City Deseret News has returned from an extended business trip to the Pacific Coast.

H. G. Webster, formerly in charge of the art department of the Milwaukee Sentinel, has joined the advertising force of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press.

John H. Eads, for three years with the Fairfield (Ia.) Ledger and formerly of Pittsburgh, New York and eastern cites, has been made assistant advertising manager of the Fort Madison (Ia.) Democrat. He succeeds Paul B. Whallon, for seven years with the Fort Madison paper, who is now on leave of absence.

J. T. Lyons, manager of the Baltimore News, addressed the Kiwanis Club of Wilmington, Del., recently.

Harrington Wimberley, of Altus, Okla., has become general manager of the Cordell (Okla.) Beacon.

Miss Elsie M. Falk, of Austin, Tex., is now advertising accountant for the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer.

Morris E. Swartz, D.D., Chicago, has been appointed editor and business manager of the Washington (D. C.) Christian Advocate by Bishop W. F. McDowell, it was announced recently.

Fred L. Rowe has joined the circulation department of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer.

W. G. Stevens, formerly service manager for the Springfield (Mass.) Union, has resigned his position to enter the selling field.

Miss Lillian F. Clarke, of Austin, Tex., recently joined the staff of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer to take charge of circulation accounting.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

WM. L. TISDEL, from reporter, Denver Times, to night pony editor, Associated Press, Denver office.

Merritt T. Nason, from staff, Springfield (Mass.) Republican, to Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer.

R. M. Johnston, from copy desk, Chicago Daily News, to copy desk, Chicago Tribune.

Owen Flanders, from staff, Providence (R. I.) Journal, to city staff, Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

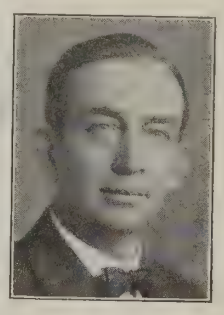
MILES W. VAUGHN will sail April 4, for Tokio to take charge of the far eastern service of the United Press Association. M. D. Tracy, formerly manager of the San Francisco bureau of the U. P., has been appointed New York news editor, succeeding Vaughn.

Homer W. Thorne has been made head of the sporting desk of the Associated Press to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Alan J. Gould, now sporting editor of the New York Evening Post.

J. B. Powers, assistant to the South American manager of the United Press Associations is in this country on vacation. At present he is at Atlantic City.

W. J. Losh, United Press Washington manager has returned from a two weeks' vacation.

William Bird, of the Consolidated Press Association, Paris bureau, is leaving Paris this month for a two months' trip to the United States with his wife and two children.



Don Skene has returned to London with the Chicago Tribune after a long sojourn in Rome. George Seldes has been transferred from Berlin to Rome to replace him.

MARRIED

R. W. GRUBBE, apprentice in roto etching photographic department, Chicago Tribune, to Miss Mary Czech, March 18.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

OSCAR T. CONKLIN, a newspaper man of wide experience in both editorial and advertising fields has just purchased a half interest in the Ventura (Cal.) Free Press,, formerly controlled by David J. Reese. Mr. Conklin is president of the new company and editor-manager of the Free Press.

OSCAR T. CONKLIN

Beginning his newspaper career in Miami, Fla., in the circulation department of the Miami Metropolis, he was soon transferred to the news department and within a few months became the managing editor of the paper. He later became advertising manager of the same paper and a year after was made general manager of the Miami Herald at its organization.

Mr. Conklin's Pacific coast newspaper experience has been largely in Southern California, where, for a time, he was editor and manager of the Anaheim Herald.

For the past eighteen months Mr. Conklin has been national advertising manager of Long Beach (Cal.) Telegram, and upon the consolidation of the Press and Telegram, joined the new company becoming one of the directors of the company, which position he still holds.

In 1916, Mr. Conklin was elected president of the Florida Press Association.

Miss Florence Klein, circulation department, Chicago Tribune, to Ed. Walper.

Paul Norman Weyl of the New York office of the Chicago Tribune, to Miss Eleanor Kelly, March 24.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

A. J. GRAHAM of Columbus, O., has taken over the plant of the Mechanicsburg (O.) News, and will resume the publication of that paper. He also will publish papers for West Jefferson and North Lewisburg from the same plant. S. W. Rawson, formerly of Columbus, who bought the News plant at Mechanicsburg more than a year ago, recently suspended the paper.

Meaford (Ont.) Mirror, has been sold by A. S. Thurston to Thomas S. Whalley of Toronto, who will operate it as one of the publications of Whalley's Press Limited.

W. K. Jacobson, editor and owner of the Washington (N. C.) Progress, has sold the paper to Carl Goerch, former editor of the Wilson (N. C.) Mirror.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

MACON (Ga.) NEWS, 48-page Peach Blossom Festival edition, Wednesday, March 18.

Havana (Cuba) Evening-Telegram, 24-page Good Roads and Construction edition, March 5.

Ottumwa (Ia.) Daily Courier, 20-page spring section, style and auto show features, March 17.

Waterloo (Ia.) Tribune, 30-page Woman's Club edition, edited and distributed by Woman's club.

Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette, a special 16-page tabloid devoted to the interests of mutual savings banks, March 16.

Faribault (Minn.) Daily News "Spring Show Week" edition of 38 pages, March 12.

SCHOOLS

CHARLES E. YOST, advertising manager of the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times and William H. Siviter, financial editor of the Chronicle-Telegraph have been enrolled as lecturers for the course in commercial engineering in the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

More than 300 teachers of journalism in secondary schools in Ohio and members of school publications' staffs are expected to attend a convention at Columbus, April 3 and 4 in connection with the Ohio Educational Conference.

University of Maine, Orono, Me., acted as host to high school journalists on March 20-21, when the third annual interscolastic journalistic conference was held under the auspices of the Kappa Gamma Phi, the newly organized journalistic society.

School of Printing of the South Dakota state college and the rural journalism department will be combined, according to an announcement made by college officials. The combined school will be under the direction of C. D. Byrne, who is agricultural editor and head of the rural journalism department. Seth Thornton, who has been superintendent of the printing school, has resigned his position.

Former students of the late George C. Bastian, instructor at the Medill School of Journalism and copy reader for the Chicago Tribune, have created a fund to provide for two honor keys, to be awarded yearly for excellence in scholarship and capability for journalistic work. The keys will be known as the George C. Bastian honor keys.

Annual convention of the Pi Delta Epsilon, professional collegiate journalistic fraternity, will be held at Syracuse University the week of April 2. The convention will continue through April 3. About 50 delegates from colleges in various parts of the country will attend the convention. Edward McKernon, superintendent of the eastern division, Associated Press, and Dr. William P. Baker, editor of the Syracuse Post-Standard, will address the members.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR recently added a photoengraving department to its equipment. All apparatus is electrically operated.

Forest City (N. C.) Courier, a weekly, has purchased a Reliance printing press.

Pomeroy (O.) News, has purchased a new home on Main street in that city.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

ED DORMAN of the composing room of the Chicago Tribune, recently celebrated his fiftieth year as an employe of the newspaper. He joined the composing staff of the paper in March, 1875, and has remained through the stages of handset newspapers to the present time of machine composition.

George C. Hawman has been made foreman of the composing room of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Times-Farmer. Edward Bennetto recently was made night foreman.

ASSOCIATIONS

LEAGUE OF ADVERTISING WOMEN, New York, held a successful dinner-dance last week, with 675 attending.

Illinois Advertising Clubs, a recently organized State association, will hold its first convention April 8 and 9 at Springfield, Ill. W. Frank McClure is president.

Alberta Press Association will hold its annual meeting in Edmonton Aug. 28 and 29, with banquet on Aug. 28. It is expected that the British Columbia Press Association will meet in Edmonton at the same time.

Western Iowa Editorial Association held its annual convention in Council Bluffs March 20.

WITH THE SPECIALS

DEVINE-MACQUOID COMPANY, Inc., New York, has been appointed to represent the Hagerstown (Md.) Evening Globe in the foreign field.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

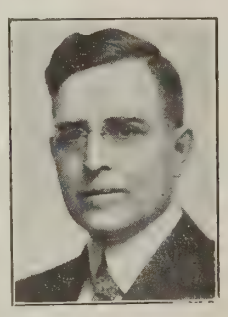
(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

By Henry Edward Warner

THAT DAY

Reprinted by Request

That day we beat 'em to the street! . . .
O boy, the thrill it spelled!
The pressroom sweated blood, and how
That gang of newsies yelled!
Twelve seconds to the good we ran,
Twelve seconds with a shout
That cracked the asphalt in the street
The day we beat 'em out!



Old Barney had the closing take,
And Charle locked the chase;
Kling planed her as she ran the aisle,
And threw the mat in place!
Four minutes in the dry, and down
She shot just nosed by Fate;
A lever yank, a flood of soup,
And Murphy had the plate!

That boy had speed! . . . A lightning flash
Was tame beside his spring
To slam the starter, bolt her down
And signal for the ring!
Once, twice, again! . . . The button pressed!
She leaped, she shrieked, she sped
While newsies howled like demons in
The mail room overhead!

And then . . . we beat 'em out! O boy!
We skinned 'em neat and clean!
That battle of the newsies was
The best I've ever seen!
Twelve seconds by the heart-beats of
A loyal gang and true,
The day that Barney, Charley, Kling
And Murphy jammed her through!

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

RUDOLPH H. HORST, recently elected president of the Indiana Associated Press Editorial Association, is managing editor of the South Bend Tribune. While still a young man, he is, as stated by Mr. B. F. Lawrence, general manager of the Indianapolis Star, who nominated him for the presidency, one of the best known and most competent newspaper men in the state of Indiana.

R. H. HORST

That he never had the slightest intention of becoming anything but a journalist was evidenced early in his life when, at the age of 14, he began work on the South Bend Sunday News. His energy and nose for news soon obtained for him a cubship on The Tribune which carried with it the duties of high school correspondent.

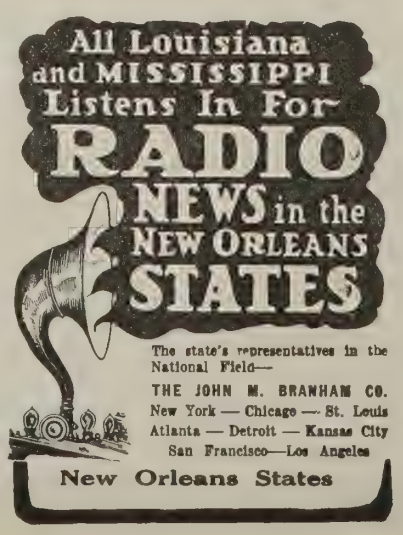
At the outbreak of the Spanish American war in 1898 he volunteered for service and was sent with the 157th Indiana Infantry to Indianapolis with instructions from the Tribune to act as correspondent. His youth and slight physique were against him, however, and he was rejected for actual service and sent home.

In May of the same year he received his first assignment to a beat as a full-fledged reporter. He became managing editor on Dec. 20, 1912, having served on each department desk, including extensive terms as sporting, telegraph and news editor.

Copy Chief Promoted

C. B. Howry, Jr., who has been at the head of the copy department of the Hazard Advertising Corporation, New York, for several years, has been elected vice-president of that agency.

Weissner With Benjamin & Kentnor



C. H. Weissner, for the past ten years with the H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, Inc., New York, on March 30, will join the Benjamin & Kentnor Company, special newspaper representatives. Previous to joining the H. E. Lesan Agency, Mr. Weissner was for four years with the foreign advertising department of the Frank A. Munsey Company, which represented the Baltimore News, Washington Times, Philadelphia Times, Boston Journal and the New York Press.

Engraving Company Cited

Advertising a product as engraving when it is not true engraving as is generally understood, is the basis for a complaint issued by the Federal Trade Commission against the Non-Plate Engraving Company, Inc., New York. The company prints stationery, business cards, letterheads, and allied products by a special process which in its finished state has the appearance of being engraving.

Greensboro Record Now 8 Columns

The Greensboro (N. C.) Daily Record has changed from a seven to an eight-column page.

CIRCULATION PROGRESS

"Tommy" Kavanaugh Preaches to Newsboys in Dayton, Ohio

THOMAS KAVANAUGH

"MAKE all you can and put away part of it," is the text of a sermon "Tommy" Kavanaugh has been preaching to newsboys in the city of Dayton, O., for exactly 24 years. And as a result of his preaching some of the boys who first heard the sermon 24 years ago could easily own newspapers of their own.

When the Dayton Daily News was struggling along with a circulation of 7,000, and one Cincinnati afternoon paper, printed 55 miles away boasted twice as many copies placed in Dayton, T. J. Kavanaugh came to try his hand with the then struggling young publisher, James M. Cox.

In those days the News farmed out its circulation to six or seven men. The new circulation manager believed this method detrimental to the interests of his paper, so he quickly turned the routes over to independent carriers, establishing appropriate supply stations in all parts of the city.

Within a very short time the little red line on the News circulation thermometer was shoving its way upward. Never a promise was made to a newsboy by "Tommy" Kavanaugh that he didn't make good, and this asset, coupled with his fatherly interest in every kid on his staff, served to build for the News a strong circulation organization.

"Watch your collections," he told them. "I'm going to insist on my money from you; you insist on yours from your customers. Get you an account book and learn how to keep it, and get you a bank book and learn how to fatten it up," was the burden of "Tommy's" Saturday afternoon talks to the boys. Long years before we had "Thrift Days," Kavanaugh was teaching thrift to newsboys in the city of Dayton and from him many a lad formed a valuable life practice.

In 1913, "the year of the flood," the News launched a Sunday edition, and Kavanaugh's circulation organization was functioning so smoothly that all records for Sunday sales in his territory were smashed from the very first issue of the paper.

Today this organization distributes a big home edition circulation, as well as a large Sunday circulation.

Frequent treats in the shape of circus and movie entertainments, a yearly picnic with "everything free" at some nearby park in the Dayton district, and various other social stunts have endeared the boys to their manager, as well as serving to keep them on their toes. But nothing, possibly, sprung by "Tommy" Kavanaugh has been as valuable from the standpoint of perfect distribution as his annual Newsboy's edition, issued—the Saturday before each Christmas.

On this day all street sale papers are given to the boys free, while Dayton residents who receive their papers at their homes answer most liberally the News suggestion that they remember their carrier boy on this date. It is not unusual now for a carrier in the residence district to receive from $10 to $30 in cash tokens from the customers he serves regularly.

"WE would not hesitate to recommend the Ludlow system of display composition to any newspaper desiring to get best results for the least money," says Mr. F. E. Tripp,

Publisher of the Elmira (N.Y.) Star-Gazette
Elmira (N.Y.) Advertiser
Elmira (N.Y.) Telegram

MR. Tripp further said: "We have been using the Ludlow system of composition in our composing room for a number of years and find it very satisfactory for both ads and heads. The low cost of maintenance is also very noticeable as the Ludlow machines are in use practically all the time in our plant. We publish the Star-Gazette, which averages about twenty-four pages, the Elmira Advertiser, averaging about twelve pages and the Sunday Telegram averaging about forty pages."

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
SAN FRANCISCO ATLANTA BOSTON NEW YORK

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

R. W. HOWARD TELLS OF NEWSPAPER SALES

(Continued from page 3)

ible from the standpoint of other pubers," he said. "But in our concern notion is centered in the editorial dement."

There is only one foundation that we w of for newspaper growth, and that editorial appeal to readers. Where newspaper succeeds, it is because the or is better than his competitor. At t we have never learned of any other on.

Our method of spending money on Scripps-Howard Newspapers is, I ume, different from that used on e papers. When a paper is forging d in its field, adding subscribers and ling advertising, we provide more more money for its operation. But a paper stands still or lags behind give it less money until we can find ditor with a stronger reader appeal a business manager with more sucul tactics. We try to build papers men rather than with money. With is the old story: 'To him that hath be given' . . . . .

We believe a well-edited newspaper grow without specialized promotion community where there is a need
t. Our sound newspaper successes represented something more than mere expenditure of promotion y."

. Howard said his organization was ed to the "doll and dish" method orralling subscribers—contests and offers.

"hese stunts may add to the circula-igures for a time but no permanent t accrues," he explained. "We imes give away dishes and dolls as ription premiums to meet circulation etition of the same sort, but rarely urate such practices."

Al while speaking of meeting com-n, Mr. Howard digressed a moto say that in his opinion the os-Howard Newspapers spent less n watching their competitors than her papers he knows of. The first is to be sure of your product and ield, then go ahead.

ere is a danger that in watching her fellow's game too closely you orget to play your own," he den Mr. Howard's standpoint, news-budgets are valuable only when rovide liberally for "extraordinary ncies," which cannot be budgeted il.

have no mystic formula for bud-or directing our newspapers. A which provides merely for the expenses means little. The most e feature is the sum set aside for dinary emergencies.

most certain thing in newspaper n is the unexpected. When it ded for you may expect successful tration. A newspaper progresses portion to the way it meets and es the unexpected.

e is no mystery to the Scripps-al formula of operation. We begetting two honest young men ility and enthusiasm and placing charge of a newspaper as editor iness manager. We finance them pportunity to buy a share in the in which they are interested and or the stock out of the dividends.
this plan they administer the airs of the paper far better than y number of absentee executives uarters.

lease make this clear. We have that we possess any monopoly er journalistic originality or tic virtue. We operate on one but we never presume that a g newspaper employing other is less entitled to its place in the lly speaking our relations with petitors in our various cities are cable."

Mr. Howard reiterated the Scri
Howard faith in the ability of yo men.

"Youth sees the surprise ele
Young men have enthusiasm and prolific in ideas.

"In this business there is no reason a young man of 25 cannot prove hi as successful an executive as a m
50 or 60. The chances are a ma have better newspaper ideas at 2 at 50. He has more courage, att the impossible, and more often pro to have been possible after all.

"An old newspaper man is apt t come cynical—he knows too many sons why a thing cannot be done. W a man gets gray in his whiskers time to scrutinize his ideas a sec time."

In conclusion Mr. Howard emphasize that he was still learning from you men.

"Please get me right on this interview.
Go easy on the perpendicular pronouns.
I have no ambition to tell anyone how things should be done—I have not learned yet myself. When I have learned, I'll be through. When a newspaper man begins to tell others out of his vast past experience how things should be done today—it's 'thirty' for him. I am still going to school to the job."

LYNN PUBLISHER HONORED

Charles Hastings Made Honorary Member of Local Typographical Union

Charles H. Hastings, publisher of the Lynn (Mass.) Daily Item, received a rare honor last week when he was presented a solid gold honorary membership card in the Lynn Typographical Union, 120. He is the third person in the history of the International Union to be elected to honorary membership, the other two having been the late President Warren G. Harding, publisher of the Marion (O.) Star, and William Jennings Bryan, publisher of the Commoner.

The presentation to Mr. Hastings was made at a testimonial banquet which was attended by all employes of the Item, including editorial and business office staff and composing room and press room workers. The toastmaster of the evening was Edward F. Giblin, foreman of the composing room.

RUBE GOLDBURG'S STUFF

ALARM clocks usually mean loss of sleep to most folks but Robert T. Wade, editor and publisher of the Morehead City (N. C.) Coaster has arranged an ingenious contrivance whereby an alarm clock and a rat trap give him an extra hour's sleep each morning.

Mr. Wade says that for years he had to get up every morning at 7 o'clock to light the gasoline burner under the metal pot of his linotype machine in order to have the metal ready at 8 o'clock. Recently he installed a new machine which uses electricity to heat the metal instead of gasoline.

Tired of being aroused every morning to turn on the electricity, he bought an alarm and fastened a short stick to the winder. He tied one end of the string to the stick and the other to the spring of a rat trap. When the alarm goes off at 7 o'clock in the morning the winder turns around and tightens on the string, causing the rat trap to be sprung. The trap is attached to the electric switch by means of a piece of wire and as it snaps shut it throws the switch and turns on the electricity. Editor Wade now comes down at 8 o'clock in the morning.

He failed to say what would happen if a rat got tangled up in the trap during hte night.

is v factor [and by characteristic possible uniformly good printing] is th sole reason for the progressively increasing demand for them.

While Certifieds cost a little more when comparing initial prices, they are actually worth much more when comparing the final results—your printed pages. A penny saved is a penny earned. Quite true. But a few pennies put away at the expense of good printing are a fallacy and not an economy.

Events during the past two months have made us more confirmed than ever in our belief that publishers and stereotypers know a good product when they see it and are ready to support it.

Quality like water seeks and finds its proper level.

Samples of Certified cold process dry mats cost you nothing—they are yours free of any charge or obligation. Just let us know what kind of equipment you employ, particularly your casting box, so that we may be able to send you the Certified mat best suited for your needs.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION

340 Madison Ave. New York, N. Y.

"Made in America"

MADE IN U.S.A. BY THE CERTIFIED DRY MATS ORIGINAL CLAUS IDEAL PROCESS

...tising agency, has been oppointed ...andle the advertising of Atwater-..., radio manufacturers. Roy Durs-...informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER in-...ations and research were now being ..., and he would not be able to an-...e the schedule for some time.

...C. Babcock has resigned as space ... of Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc., New ...dvertising agency, effective April 1.

...e Chambers Agency, Inc., with of-...in Louisville, New York, and New ...ns, has added to its force of artists ...E. Schroeder, in the New Orleans ..., and I. Heilbron in Louisville. The ...cy's staff of artists now totals 20.

...W. E. Walker, for seven years with ... La Crosse Tribune and the Madison ...isconsin State Journal, has opened a ...eneral advertising agency in Madison, ...Wis., under the name of the W. E. ...Walker Company.

The Schafer Advertising Company, Mead Building, Rockford, Ill., has been made agent for the Burson Knitting Company, Rockford hosiery concern, and will start soon on a new campaign to establish the reorganized company's products. The Burson mills are reported to have spent more than a million since organization in national advertising ... expect to go into more intensive ad... tising.

Stevens and Wallis, Inc., Salt L... City advertising agents, have starte... daily and weekly newspaper campaig... the mountain states for the Indepen... Gas and Oil Company of Salt Lake ...

The Glove Printing and Adverti... Company of Columbus, O., has beer... corporated by Harry Winstaffer ... others with $10,000 capital.

B. F. Henriquez, for several ... associated with advertising work in ... cago, has joined the Franklin-H... Company, Chicago.

Auspitz & Lee, Inc., 1132 West Th... fifth street, Chicago, has recently ... chartered to conduct a general advert... business. The incorporators are I... D. Auspitz, Jules Levy, and Seymo... Winber.

G. Eley, formerly of Brennan ... Company, Chicago, has severed his ... nection with that agency to take c... of the New York office of the Mar... Company.

...three ...aught ...ppears

...or children ...e list of the ...altimore, Md.

...l Mrs. McIntyre ...w York following a ... Mr. McIntyre writes ...k letter for McNaught

... Seibel ..., with offices in the ...ilding, that city. The syndi-cate has made arrangements with A. M. Powell, sports editor of the Easton Free Press, to write a series of 60 articles on the football prospects of the leading colleges in the country for the 1925 season. Mr. Powell will leave soon on a trip to the various colleges he will cover in his stories.

Irvin Cobb is one of the most recent additions to the list of notable writers contributing to the weekly "Pre-Eminent" articles being released by the Metropolitan Newspaper Service. An article by Mr. Cobb, "If I Were A Woman," will be issued Sunday, April 5. It will carry illustrations by Bert N. Salg, and the Metropolitan announces that thereafter each of these articles will be illustrated in line. The other April releases will be: "Can One's Life Be Dramatized Into Success," by Louis Joseph Vance, illustrated by Hubert Mathieu; "If You Don't Like Your Life, Change It: I Did" by Sophie Kerr, illustrated by Harold Denison; "Why I Like Men Better Than I Do Women" by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, illustrated by Bert N. Salg.

C. C. Powell Newspaper Features Syn-

The Affiliated Press Service, Washington, D. C., is taking a referendum of "modern youth" as represented by the senior classes in high schools of more than 30 cities in the United States, as a basis for a series of interpretative articles for newspaper syndication in May and June. Uthai Vincent Wilcox is manager of the service. Answers are sought to the question as to whether the world is growing better, taking into consideration, the home, church, and companions.

Rube Goldberg, cartoonist, for McNaught Syndicate, Inc., New York, and Mrs. Goldberg, are vacationing in Havana, Cuba.

Adam Breed, editor and publisher of the Hastings (Neb.) Tribune, and former war correspondent, sailed from New York last week on a wild game hunting expedition in the Nairobi district of Africa. He will report his adventures in the newspapers through the United Feature Syndicate, New York.

J. K. Burleigh has been appointed manager of the art department of the Feature News Service, of the Experimenter Publishing Company, New York, succeeding S. Oxberry, resigned.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Cable Confirms Imperial Conference—Machen Forms New Toledo Agency —Barton, Durstine and Osborn Get Atwater-Kent Account

CHARLES W. HOYT, president of the Charles W. Hoyt Company received March 21, a cable confirming the formation of the Imperial Economic Committee for Great Britain. The cable advised that there would be two representatives from each colony and two representatives from Great Britain.

In the local English press of last week it is stated that this commission will consider the most efficient method of spending £1,000,000 to assist in the marketing of Dominion produce.

Edwin A. Machen, formerly president and general manager of the Machen & Dowd Company, advertising agency, has severed his connections with that Company and has organized an advertising business under the name of Edwin A. Machen & Co. Headquarters have been established at 614 Ohio Bldg., Toledo, O.

By the terms of the arrangement, Machen will continue to handle the accounts which he personally looked after as account executive with the old organization.

Associated with Mr. Machen will be Eben J. MacKenzie, formerly of the Machen & Dowd Company, and Eugene F. Goldbach, formerly associated with the Milwaukee Journal.

Barton, Durstine & Osborn, New York

Wilke's METALS
THE HIGHEST STANDARD

Type Metal Insurance

What it Means to You:

TYPE Metals are alloys of lead, tin and antimony. If continued good results are to be assured it is necessary that these three metals be maintained in proper proportions. The true condition of your metal can be positively determined only by chemical analysis. If deterioration has taken place your supply may be restored to its original formula.

"Wilke's" Type Metal Insurance provides the means for maintaining your type metal in perfect working condition at no expense to you. Our representatives periodically take samples of your metal direct from your melting pot, and send them to our laboratory for analysis. We then rebalance your metal supply to its proper working proportions.

This is the only dependable method of keeping your metal strictly up to correct formula. It eliminates guesswork, and places the responsibility on our shoulders.

"Wilke's" Metal Insurance Plan provides a policy on which we pay the premiums and you collect the dividends. It is your guarantee for good slugs, type and plates. It will save you money.

Write for full information on "Wilke's" Metal Insurance Plan

Metals Refining Company

HAMMOND, INDIANA

Warehouses in All Principal Cities

LESSER MAPPING BIG MOVIE AD DRIVE

President of Blaine-Thomson Plans to Spend Bulk of Warner Brothers $500,000 Campaign in Newspapers—Starts Aug. 1

Further details of the Warner Brothers, Inc., $500,000 national advertising campaign announced last week in EDITOR & PUBLISHER were told this week by W. L. Parker, advertising manager of the moving picture producing firm.

MYER LESSER

Myer Lesser, president of Blaine - Thompson, Cincinati advertising agency, is making personal charge of the account. He expects to have the newspaper schedule completed shortly.

The campaign is set to start in actual publication about Aug. 1, and will be a concentrated sales drive accomplished within about three or four months.

While the bulk of the appropriation will go into newspapers, the magazines and other forms of advertising will not be entirely eliminated, Mr. Parker said.

The newspaper copy, which will range from full page space to 14 inches on single columns, will be designed to interest theater-goers in the 1925-1926 Warner Brothers' program.

"The drive will be well sustained, according to Mr. Parker, with copy appearing at least once a week in the newspaper list, irrespective of whether or not Warner pictures are showing in the various cities.

"Our production program is more ambitious this year than we have ever before attempted," Mr. Parker said. "It will consist of 26 productions, with the possible addition of three more, featuring such stars as John Barrymore, Syd Chaplin, Lowell Sherman, and our 'wonder dog' Rin-Tin-Tin, and the European director, Ernst Lubitz.

"Consequently we felt we must advertise on a larger scale than ever before. We will cover as completely as possible the newspaper field of America.

"Two fiscal years ago, when we launched our first extensive national campaign, spending about $400,000, we relied entirely upon magazines. This year we are going to use a greater number of newspapers.

"Mr. Lesser also conducted this campaign for us. It met with satisfactory response. We used double-truck copy in Hearst's American Weekly, and space in the Saturday Evening Post, Cosmopolitan Magazine, and the rotogravure sections of the leading metropolitan dailies.

"We went in rather for massive display copy. Where we had one big advertisement that year, we plan to have smaller ones this year."

WEEK'S AD TIPS

Sterling Beeson, Inc., Second National Bank Building, Toledo. Reported will shortly place orders with newspapers for the Conklin Pen Mfg. Company, Toledo.

Knew Company, 9 East 40th street, New York. Reported to have secured the accounts of Knufman Hats, New York and London Shoe, New York.

Charles Blum Advertising Corporation, 1116 Walnut street, Philadelphia. Placing orders in some newspapers that have rotogravure sections for Arthur J. Collins & Son, nursery stock seeds, etc.

Albert H. Dippy, 903 Fox Building, Philadelphia. Has secured the accounts of Sherman Bros. & Company, "Betholine" gasoline, Baltimore, and N. S. Groves & Sons, Baltimore.

Gardiner-Mace Company, 9 East 40th street, New Yrok. Has secured the account of Marcello Company, face powder, La Crosse, Wis.

J. Goulston Advertising Agency, 18 Tremont street, Boston. Reported to have secured account of T. D. Whitney Company, linen, Boston.

Gundlach Advertisnig Company, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Reported to be planning test campaign in newspapers in a few selected cities for the San-Detach Brush Company, Nashville.

William Irving Hamilton, 267 5th avenue, New York. Reported to be placing account of Heher Bros. Company, "Vixen" and "Heller" files and hammers, Newark, N. J.

Joseph Katz Company, Frankin street and Park avenue, Baltimore. Placing orders with some New York newspapers for Wertheimer Bros., "Entertainer" and "El Dallo" cigars, Baltimore.

H. H. Levey, 1328 Broadway, New York. Making trade deals with newspapers for the Forty-fourth Street Hotel, New York.

Lord & Thomas, 247 Park avenue, New York. Again placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Julius Kayser & Company, gloves, underwear, New York.

Morris-Harris Advertising Company, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Reported to be making contracts with newspapers in large cities for the National Trading Company, hair nets, Chicago.

New York Advertising Agency, 154 Nassau street, New York. Has secured the account of the Apple Gum Company, New York.

Irvin F. Paschall, Inc., McCormick Building, Chicago. Reported will use some newspapers for the First National Hosiery Stores, St. Louis.

Peck Advertising Agency, 6 East 39th street, New York. Placing orders with some New York newspapers for the Tiffin Candy Company, New York and Long Island City.

Picard, Bradner & Brown, 16 West 46th street, New York. Has secured the "Easton's Mayonnaise" account.

Fred M. Randall Company, 1047 Book Building, Detroit. Reported to have secured account of the Nufuel Heating Corporation, Detroit.

Reincke-Ellis Company, 215 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Middle western papers receiving schedules on Enterprise Paint Company, Chicago.

Roberts & MacAvinche, 30 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Copy being distributed generally to newspapers on Cluett, Peabody Co., New York.

Frank Seaman, Inc., 470 4th avenue, New York. Reported to have secured the Knickerbocker Ice Company account.

Sherman & Lebair, Inc., 120 West 32nd street, New York. Reported to have secured account of the Puro Filter Corporation, Philadelphia.

F. P. Shumway Company, 453 Washington street, Boston. Reported to have secured account of the Hygenia Brush Company, Boston.

Simpson Advertising Service, Syndicate Trust Building, St. Louis. Reported will start an advertising campaign in Farm papers for Associated Corn Products Manufacturers, gluten feed.

Walter B. Snow & Staff, 60 High street, Boston. Has secured the account of Renauld et Cie of America, "Renauld Perfume," Boston.

M. Spivak Advertising Agency, 286 5th avenue, New York. Placing orders with some New York newspapers for the Denville Silk Company, "Velvet Rose Silk," New York.

Stack Advertising Agency, Inc., Heyworth Building, Chicago. Renewing some newspaper contracts for Swift & Company, meat packers, Chicago and the Northern Pacific R. R. Company, St. Paul, Minn.

Stack Advertising Agency, 29 East Madison street, Chicago. A general list of newspapers receiving copy on the Santa Fe Railway, Chicago.

Steuerman Service, 15 East 26th street, New York. Placing orders with some newspapers in New York and vicinity for Bromley, Inc., clothing, New York.

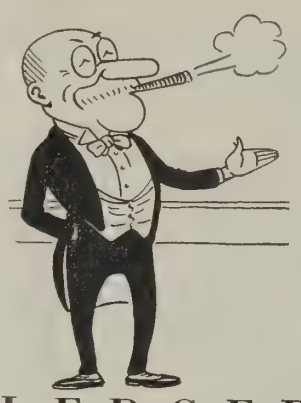
Stewart—Davis Advertising Agency, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. One time orders going out to a small list of papers on United Profit Sharing Company, New York.

Street & Finney, 40 West 40th street, New York. Has secured the account of the Ucan Hair Cutter Company, New York.

David C. Thomas Advertising Company, 28 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Contracts and schedules being issued to metropolitan newspapers on the American Appraisal Company, Milwaukee, Wis.

Charles H. Touzalin Agency, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. One time orders being issued to a few middle western newspapers on Electric Maid Baker Shop.

Williams & Cunnyngham, Inc., 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making contracts with newspapers in various sections for Hart, Schaffner & Marx, clothing, Chicago.



Ad Men Asked to Boost Air Mail

Executives of the first and second districts of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World meeting in New York last week passed a motion providing for a speaking campaign to urge national advertisers to support the air mail service.

Merger in Florence, S. C.

Absorption of the Florence (S. C.) Daily Times by the Florence Morning News-Review was announced March 26.

"UNCLE TOBY"—By Henry Steinlauf

A new six-column strip featuring a Droll "Old Batch" whose perspicuity reveals the funny weaknesses of those about him. He thus is a comedian of the positive type, not the stupid butt of others' wit.

For terms and samples, wire

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA

Trade Mark FLEXIDEAL Reg U S Pat Off

THE IMPORTED DRY MAT OF SUPERIOR QUALITY

Write for Free Samples

FLEXIDEAL COMPANY, Inc.

15 WILLIAM STREET NEW YORK CITY

The INDIANAPOLIS NEWS

A DAILY REFERENCE—

THE INDIANAPOLIS NEWS is the favorite newspaper of Indiana women because it carries the unabridged department store advertising.

Thousands of business men refer to it daily for complete financial news.

The Indianapolis News reaches both women and men in Indiana.

FRANK T CARROLL
Advertising Manager

Chicago Office
J. E. Lutz
The Tower Bldg.

New York Office
Dan A. Carroll
110 E. 42nd St.

GOLD MEDAL AND $15,000 IN PRIZES FOR 1925 ADVERTISING TRIUMPHS

Rewards for Best National and Local Campaigns, Institutional and Selling and for Single Advertisements and Research

ANNOUNCEMENT of the terms under which the Harvard Advertising Adwards for 1925, founded by Edward W. Bok, will be administered, have been issued by the Harvard Business School. The classification of the awards is similar to that adopted in administering the 1924 awards.

A gold medal will be awarded to the individual or organization deemed by the jury of award to merit recognition for distinguished contemporary services to advertising.

Two prizes of $2,000 each for advertising campaigns. Only advertising campaigns which have been directed primarily through the media of newspapers or periodicals may be submitted. These awards require submission of manuscripts.

One award will be given for the national advertising campaign of the year which has come under the consideration of the jury of award as the campaign most conspicuous for excellence of planning and execution which seeks publicity on a national scale or over a large territory for products or an institution.

The jury of award may make two awards of $2,000 each under this head: one for the national campaign of a general or institutional character deemed best; the second for the national campaign deemed best in advertising specific products.

In this class also an award will be given for a local advertising campaign of the year which has come under the consideration of the jury as the campaign most conspicuous for the excellence of its planning and execution which seeks publicity in a relatively limited territory or in a single locality for products or an institution. The jury award may make two awards of $2,000 each under this head: one for the local campaign of a general or institutional character deemed best; the second for the local campaign deemed best in advertising specific products.

An award of $2,000 will be given for the advertising research of the year which has come under the consideration of the jury as most conspicuous because: (a) it has brought about economy or secured efficiency in advertising by producing information of general value in furthering the knowledge and science of advertising, or (b) it has reduced or precluded unwise and wasteful expenditure in a specific advertising program. An award may be given for either or both of these classes.

Three prizes of $1,000 each for excellence in the technique and substance of particular advertisements which have appeared in established American or Canadian newspapers or periodicals.

The jury may consider individual advertisements and make awards under the following classification:

For the advertisement most effective in its use of text as the chief means of delivering its message.

For the advertisement most effective in its use of pictorial illustration as the chief means of delivering its message.

For the advertisement most effective in its combination of text and illustration as the means of delivering its message.

In its consideration of advertisements the jury will give attention to the excellence of typography, and correct and effective use of English.

No advertisement shall be awarded more than one prize.

For 1925 the awards will cover the period Oct. 1, 1924, to Dec. 31, 1925, and are limited to newspaper and periodical advertising in the United States and Canada. The jury of award will be selected by Dean Wallace B. Donham of the Harvard Business School.

MONTREAL EDITOR CONVICTED

Fined and Given Month in Jail for "Kidnapping" Officers

Roger Maillet, editor of Montreal Le Matin, was sentenced last week in the Court of Sessions to pay a fine of $100 or serve one month in jail, upon conviction of assault. The case will be appealed.

The case is an aftermath of the by-election in St. Ann's Division on Nov. 5, last. Maillet, a worker on behalf of the Conservative candidate, drove two provincial police officers, a deputy-high constable and a canvasser for the Liberal candidate, in his car to Westmount, where, under threat of a revolver, he put them out of his machine.

Judge Perrault said the law allowed him to reduce the charge, and he found the accused guilty of simple assault.

BUSINESS SHOULD BE BETTER—WOODIN

Car Builder Tells New York Ad Men Farmer Has $12,000,000,000 to Spend—Loft Traces His Success Course

Watch the farmer for 1925 prosperity and build business by advertising, New York advertising men were told this week by two speakers at an Advertising Club luncheon.

William H. Woodin, president of the Amercian Car & Foundry Company, discussed the business trend of the year, while George W. Loft, president of Loft, Inc., New York candy firm, told how newspaper advertising, begun in a small way, brought him big success.

"We are beginning this year on a broad foundation of confidence," Mr. Woodin said. "Last year this country had an income of $55,000,000,000, of which $11,000,000,000 was saved.

"We have a wonderful background for prosperity. Today we have confidence, easy money, high wages and settlement abroad. Also, for the first time in 10 or 15 years, the railroads are above water and able to look flotations in the face.

"And the biggest customer, the biggest producer and seller is the neglected but fundamental farmer. He is not the so-called rube of yesterday. He has become a tremendous factor in this country.

"The rural population in the United States numbers approximately 51,000,000 or 48.2 per cent of the total population. The gross value of the farm prod[uc]ts are $24,000,000,000. While the far[mer] spends eleven or twelve billion dol[lars] raising his crops, he still has twelve [to] thirteen billions left to spend elsewh[ere] making him the biggest buyer by fa[r] this country."

Mr. Loft began with much more mo[dest] figures, when he followed Mr. Woo[din]. He told how he started with very l[ittle] money and one store many years ag[o] New York.

"In 1901," he said, "I spent $7.50 for [the] first newspaper advertisement, and I [had] to keep my store open an hour late[r] night to pay the bill.

"Business, I figured, increased abou[t] or $5 and I decided I must go in har[d] go broke. The newspapers gave me cr[edit] and I went in hard. In 1921, in one [New] York newspaper alone, we spent $50[0,000] for advertising."

NEW JOURNALISM COURSE

Legislature Grants $2,000 to Rut[gers] at Instance of State Press

R. E. Lent, Passaic Daily News, pr[esi]dent of the New Jersey Press Associat[ion] announced this week that the New Je[rsey] Legislature had appropriated $2,000 [for] the establishment of a part-time pro[fes]sorship in journalism for 1925-192[6] Rutgers University, New Brunswick. [The] advisory committee of the associat[ion] composed of prominent Jersey publis[hers] and editors, will be appointed by the pr[esi]dent to aid the university in establis[hing] the journalism course.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

LET US BUILD YOUR CIRCULATION
Famous stories by famous authors.
Service for Authors, 33 W. 42d St., New York.

"S T O R I E S"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.,
2044 Margaret St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Fashions

WEEKLY STYLE PHOTO SERVICE.
20 latest fashions and captions weekly.
More than 100 papers use it. Write for low rate.
Styles Service Syndicate, 353 5th Ave., N. Y.

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

FOR LARGE AND SMALL PAPERS
A non-technical, weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D. C.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Twin Forces of Uplift

The press and the pulpit are the twin forces which ought to pull together to raise the standard of morals of a community. Both are seeking to make a better place in which to live.

In many communities, publishers and pastors have worked together to use display advertising space to carry the message of religion to those who do not go to church. Sometimes pastors write these messages—sometimes the publishers use material prepared by an outside agency.

Proofs of ads, 250 words long, which have been used successfully elsewhere, are available for a stamp on application to Herbert H. Smith, 723 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, Pa. The price for use is only 3 cents per week per thousand circulation.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A. A. C. W.
Dr. Christian F. Reisner, President, 701 West 177th St., New York

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World
383 Madison Ave. New York City

The SERVICE STATION

Q. Have you any figures showing what proportion of net sales retail merchants in cities of various sizes appropriate to cover newspaper advertising?—R.

A. The most recent reliable figures available are found in a recent report of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. They are not based upon theories or opinions of what should be spent to produce maximum results, but are based on the percentage of net sales spent for advertising by retailers in the lines mentioned below:

	Percentage for Advertising Grocery Stores
Sales
Less than $30,000	0.2
$30,000 to $50,000	0.2
$50,000 to $100,000	0.2
$100,000 to $150,000	0.3
$150,000 and over	0.3
Shoe Stores
Less than $30,000	1.6
$30,000 to $50,000.	2.1
$50,000 to $100,000	2.2
$1000,000 to $250,000	2.8
$250,000 and over	3.8
Department Stores
Less than $250,000	1.7
$250,000 to $450,000	2.2
$450,000 to $1,000,000	2.9
$1,000,000 to $4,000,000	2.9
$4,000,000 to $10,000,000	2.9
$10,000,000 and over	3.2
Jewelry Stores
Less than $20,000	2.6
$20,000 to $50,000	2.9
$50,000 and over	4.3
Drug Stores	0.7
Specialty Shops	3.4
Clothing Stores (Men's)	1.98
Hardware Stores
Less than $25,000	0.66
$25,000 to $40,000	0.65
$40,000 to $60,000	0.79
$60,000 to $100,000	0.71
$100,000 and over	0.70

* * *

Q.—Please advise what are accepted as a sound basis for estimating newspaper good-will?—Subscriber.

A.—There are various methods, none exact. There is the old theory that good-will may be computed at the rate of $10 per subscriber, but EDITOR & PUBLISHER does not believe that this is a fair rate for all papers, and rather that it is an underestimate for many successful papers. Don C. Seitz holds that good-will may be computed from an average of five or six years' gross receipts from advertising and circulation. He makes it clear that he assumes that circulation is established and that the five or six years were normal. Louis Wiley has said that good-will might be found to be equal to gross receipts from advertising and circulation for the year preceding the date of calculation, provided the year was normal. Another method is to multiply annual net profits by ten to find good will value. Another is to calculate (a) $10 per subscriber, (b) average gross receipts from five years, (c) ten times annual net receipts, and find the average of the results of these three methods and call it good-will value. The best method known to EDITOR & PUBLISHER is to estimate good-will value from the actual earning power of the property, considering 10 per cent of profit to be a good return from any investment.

Hearst 'Frisco Editor in New York

E. D. Coblentz, managing editor of the San Francisco Examiner, is visiting in New York, and while there is making the New York American offices his headquarters. He refused to discuss the purpose of his eastern trip. With him is John McNary, foreman of the Examiner's composing room. Another Hearst executive also in the city is William Curley, editor of the Chicago American.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

April 4 — Minnesota Associated Press Members, meeting, Minneapolis.
April 15-27—Navy Trip to Hawaii for Newspaper Men.
April 17-18—Pacific Slope Newspaper Conference, Portland, Ore.
April 20-21—Associated Press, annual meeting, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.
April 20—Conference of Regional Publishers' Assns., New York.
April 22-23—American Newspaper Publishers' Assn., annual convention, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.
April 25—Georgia Press Assn., convention, Savannah, Ga.

RADIO AD TEST ENDS

Victor Company Discontinues Broadcasting to Check Results

The Victor Talking Machine Company's experiment with radio broadcasting ended with the concert of March 26, and Ernest John, advertising manager, informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER it would probably be more than a month before his firm would know whether or not the new advertising practice would be continued.

Seven concerts were given by the Victor company, broadcasting from WEAF, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company station in New York, and 13 allied stations throughout the country. At the start it was announced as in the nature of a test.

"The problem of tabulating responses and checking up results will require at least a month," Mr. John said.

On March 21, the New York Times published a report that broadcasting by Victor and the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company has "not stimulated the sale of phonograph machines, but that the sale of records has increased notably."

Mr. John declared that the results of the broadcasting could not be stated at this time.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

"Try All Circulation Methods"

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER:—In your paper of March 14, I noticed an article about circulation progress written by the circulation director of the New Orleans States.

While I agree with him on the service you must render to hold circulation, I differ with him as to the methods of getting circulation.

Many times homes have been visited and you could not sell them your paper because they had become accustomed to reading a different paper. Now in order to win this home from another paper or get your paper into this home you must use systematic methods. I might say that you might sample this home or leave a sample copy for a few days. That might bring the subscription wanted, but then again the question might pop up as to whether you had sampled that home long enough for it to become accustomed to reading your paper like the other one.

There is nothing else in the world to do to get this home to taking your paper but to use different methods. I do not believe in premiums but I do believe in using every method known to get subscriptions.

As I stated above I am not in favor of premiums but the average American citizen is always looking for something for nothing. If you have a bargain sale or give something extra in addition they will come to you. If you do not believe this, notice the advertisements in the papers. Notice how the advertiser cuts prices on certain articles to get people into his store to buy other articles. He will lose on one article but will gain it back on another.

This same thing applies to newspapers. You have newspapers to sell and if you cannot get the people to subscribe at the regular stated price then you will have to use science and other methods to get them. I say use any method available to get a non-subscriber to take your paper.

If you could go and get a home to take your paper for three months and they did not continue to take it then the fault is with the editorial department, because by that time you have sufficiently educated this subscriber. Once you have him your work is finished and it is up to the editorial department. The old saying is, if you don't succeed try, try again. Maintaining service is necessary to hold circulation but don't forget to use any method available and don't stop until you get the subscription.

E. D. HOOD,
Circulation Manager,
Savannah Morning News.

The Three Leaders
in advertising lineage for 1924
THE BALTIMORE SUN
THE DETROIT NEWS
THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE
have been using our checking proof service for the past five years—since our very beginning in 1920

We hold subscribers on "good service"—not contracts

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

The Business Men
of your community will value the authentic statements of
ROGER W. BABSON
on the business and financial situation, above any other single piece of news that you can print.
Supplied weekly through the Publishers Financial Bureau, Division of BABSON INSTITUTE, Babson Park, Mass.
SPECIMEN RELEASES AND RATES ON REQUEST

FOR PROMPT SERVICE
TYPE · BORDERS · ORNAMENTS
BRASS RULE
Printers' Supplies · Presses · Paper Cutters
Hamilton Wood & Steel Equipment including our
AMERICAN CUT-COST EQUIPMENT
Carried in Stock for Prompt Shipment
American Type Founders Company
Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond, Atlanta, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Spokane, Winnipeg

CIRCULATION SUPREMACY IS A VALUABLE POSSESSION
The circulation supremacy of any newspaper in any territory is its most valuable asset. It is listed above physical property—buildings and equipment. But, unlike other assets, it can be wrested from its possessor and the law provides no recourse for its recovery.
Our plan builds and holds circulation. It makes the first newspaper more secure or it makes second or third newspapers first.
Communications Invited in Confidence and without Obligation
HICKEY-MITCHELL CO.
(Builds and Holds Circulation)
Pierce Bldg. St. Louis, Mo.

MANLY M. GILLAM DEAD IN 79th YEAR—LEFT FOOTPRINTS IN PUBLICITY

He Created Wanamaker Store Advertising Style—Built New York Telegram Classified Page to Supremacy from Scratch Start

By EUGENE V. LAMBERT

MANLY MARCUS GILLAM, one of the few remaining survivors of that group of geniuses who built the beginnings of the structure of modern advertising, died in his 79th year March 23, at his home in Flushing, N. Y. He was best known to present-day newspaper men for his close association with the New York Herald and Evening Telegram of James Gordon Bennett, which he served as advertising counsel from 1897 to 1911.

M. M. Gillam

Mr. Gillam was born April 15, 1846 in Bradford County, Pa., and took pride in relating that he was "farm raised, on grain, dairy and fruit,"—a nurture that was to be reflected in later years in his first great achievement in advertising. Farm chores took him from the little red school house at a tender age, but, having an insatiable desire for study, he used to induce his brother to do his work while he stole a few hours with his books, to the great displeasure and scorn of his farmer-uncle. He was a soldier in the Union Army at the age of 17 and served in the quartermaster department until the close of the war.

His early business career include experience as bookkeeper in a Vineland, N. J., lumber yard, shorthand writer for the Pinkerton Detective Agency, private secretary to Henry Brock of Boston, known in 1871 as the "commercial agency meteor."

The following year Gillam turned to newspaper work as reporter for the Boston Daily News, and from 1872 to 1878 he was city editor of the Boston Post.

Returning to Pennsylvania in 1879, he became managing editor of the Philadelphia Record and in his seven years' tenure of that post he entered on the first phases of his all-inclusive advertising career.

William M. Singerly, owner of the Record, complained to his managing editor one day that the milk from his herd of prize Holstein cows, amounting to hundreds of quarts a day, was being wasted. Mr. Gillam suggested that he send the milk to the city market and originated the idea of advertising the product by writing a history of the Holstein cattle, which appeared in daily single column instalments in the Record. The concluding paragraph of each story informed the reader that the rich milk of these prize animals was for sale at the city market after four o'clock, a. m. When the series ended, the Singerly cows were unable to meet the demand for their product.

Another achievement of Mr. Gillam's through the Record was the success of the "Little Tycoon" a comic opera which had failed in other cities and was in a fair way to do likewise at the Arch Street Opera House, an unremunerative theatrical venture of the Record's proprietor. Gillam brought the show to public attention through a series of articles on the Orientals and their habits and the "Little Tycoon" set a record for a long run in Philadelphia. Kellar the magician was another to feel the wizardry of Gillam's ideas when his appearance on the Arch street stage seemed doomed to failure. Gillam delved into the lore of Indian magic and told Philadelphia about it, also where to see a demonstration.

These stunts caught the eye of John Wanamaker, already a figure in Philadelphia commerce, and in 1886 Mr. Gillam joined the Wanamaker forces and wrote the "news of the store," developing the style that has marked Wanamaker advertising and exerted a profound influence on all department store copy. During his nine years with the Wanamaker store, Mr. Gillam became known as the "father of department store advertising." The next three years were spent as merchandising and advertising counsel for several merchants and manufacturers and as secretary of the New York Retail Merchants Association.

During this period Mr. Gillam imported the first "horseless carriage" brought to America and made a notable advertising demonstration with it. He was then with the Pope Manufacturing Company of Hartford, Conn., destined to become one of the pioneer automobile manufacturers of the country. He also introduced the Columbia chainless bicycle, sweeping the country in one day from coast to coast, through what was regarded in those days of primitive press agentry as the biggest free write-up on record. He promoted R. H. Foerderer's vici kid products, doubling a $6,000,000 business in one year. "Glazed kid" was another leather product to achieve household fame under his publicity.

In 1896, while he was secretary of the retail merchants association the New York Herald raised its advertising rates and the merchants withdrew their copy en bloc. Herald representatives tried in vain to lift the boycott, but Gillam, working from within, convinced the merchants that they, not the Herald, would be the worse sufferers if they continued to do without Herald advertising. The business was restored, and James Gordon Bennett, sitting in imperial majesty in Paris, invited, which was a euphemism for command, Mr. Gillam to visit him in France. Mr. Gillam declined, but when Mr. Bennett visited in New York in 1897, he succeeded in inducing Gillam to become the Herald's advertising counsel.

During his first year on the Herald, Mr. Gillam executed the most thoroughly successful classified advertising campaign that newspapers had ever seen. For two weeks the Evening Telegram carried displayed announcements that, after a certain date, the Telegram would be a "medium of exchange" for those who desired to "exchange what you don't want for what you do." No information or instructions whatever were given to the advertising force.

Inquiring readers were advised to wait until the stated day. Telegram employes, as well as the public, were on tip-toes with expectancy. When the day arrived, there appeared a sold salf-page of classified advertising, under a full-page heading, "WANTED TO PURCHASE, SELL, OR EXCHANGE." Every advertisement was a bona fide offering. How was it done?

With the strictest secrecy, mailers, compositors, stereotypers, and pressmen, well removed from contact with the public, were asked to search their houses and unearth all the useful articles they had cast aside and to state in advertisements what they cared to sell or exchange them for.

The result was one of the greatest assortments ever offered to the public through newspaper advertising—books, parrots, clothes, shoes, cats, guns, jewelry, opera glasses, furniture, invalid chairs, trunks, etc. etc., for sale or exchange for some more-to-be-desired commodity.

The original, or free, advertisements were soon cancelled as results were reported as satisfactory and within a week, there was not a free advertisement in the exchange columns and the public was buying the space to the extent of more than a page a day. Furnished Rooms, Board, Apartments, Real Estate, and other classified headings were added, all at one cent a word until at least five pages daily were given over to this business, when the rate was changed to a line basis.

The Commercial Advertiser and the Journal made desperate efforts to share in the harvest, but the Telegram campaign had been too carefully planned.

Mr. Gillam ended his active connection with the Herald and Telegram in October, 1907, when Mr. Bennett announced that he desired to appoint a "board of control" to manage the papers. Mr. Gillam refused to share his business authority with any committee, and although he continued as advertising counsel until 1911, he moved from the Herald office to his own suite with the Gillam Service, at a nearby address. Incidentally, records show that the New York Herald's high-water mark for advertising was reached in October, 1907.

On three occasions in later years Mr. Gillam was approached with the proposal that he take over the active management of the Herald and Telegram, but no agreement was ever reached, due, in all probability, to the uncompromising spirit that characterized both Mr. Bennett and his former counsel.

Standing well over six feet tall, and magnificently proportioned, Mr. Gillam was described by his Herald associates as "having the physique of a giant, the brain of a master and the heart of a woman." When, as advertising director of the Herald, he expressed a desire to interview a member of his staff, Mr. Gillam was keenly hurt to learn that the subordinate was told that he was "wanted on the carpet."

He was a devoted husband to his wife who for more than 17 years was a semi-invalid, as the result of a railroad accident, and he was also deeply shocked in his closing years by the death of his son, Capt. Walter Ernest Gillam, who was killed on the Vesle River in August, 1918, in action with the 306th Machine Gun Battalion, 77th Division. He is survived by one son, Arthur L. Gillam, who is an official of the American Reptile Study Society, and four daughters Miss Eva M. Gillam, Mrs. Alice M. Munyon, Mrs. Ada B. Munyon, and Mrs. James Gillies.

Veteran Journalist Dies

Henry Wood Booth, 88, widely known newspaper man, and father of George G. Booth, one of the owners of the Detroit News, and E. W. Booth, editor of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press, died at his home near Detroit, March 17. He is survived by his widow and nine children. Mr. Booth was born in England, but came to this country at an early age. In 1874 he started the Toronto Sunday Times, which failed. In 1895 he began writing for the Detroit Tribune, and later became business manager of the Quarterly Register of Current History. For two years he was managing editor of the Chicago Commercial Journal.

New Mill Unit Started

The Inland Empire Paper Company of Millwood, Wash., has started construction on a mill unit which will cost it is reported, $105,000. The company's product, about 100 tons a day, is mainly newsprint.

NO STATE PAPERS IN TEXAS

Texas is too large to be covered by one, two, three or four newspapers.

Texas has some of the best newspapers published.

Among them

The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE

AND

The BEAUMONT JOURNAL

For information about Texas, ask Beckwith—He Knows

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON

Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

120 West 42d Street New York

MOST NEWS

The largest morning daily circulation in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh Post

MORNING AND SUNDAY

October circulation (net paid)
Daily Circulation 137,824
Sunday Circulation 197,347

Member A. B. C.

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

in Louisville

you get Coverage when you buy

The Courier-Journal AND THE LOUISVILLE TIMES

MORNING-AFTERNOON-SUNDAY

Represented nationally by the S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

Obituary

JOHN B. ALEXANDER, for 50 years editor of the Oswego (N. Y.) Times, died at his home in that city. He retired in 1922.

J. C. CAVANAGH, for 45 years editor of the Fort Bragg (Cal.) Advocate, died March 13 after a year's illness. He was 55 years old and his family will retain ownership of the paper.

WILLIAM A ST. GEORGE, 29, reporter on the staff of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer died Saturday, March 21. He formerly was a member of the staff of the Brooklyn Times.

WILSON W. COOKE, 22 a reporter on the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, died recently after several days' illness. Previous to joining the Gazette-Times, he worked as a reporter on the Detroit Times and News, the Toledo News-Bee and Michigan papers.

JOSEPH EMILE GENTESSE, 51, one of the veterans of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette composing room dropped dead in his home city recently. He had been on the Telegram for more than 25 years.

RICHARD FORESTER, 5, son of Richard A. Forester, Columbus correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star, died at his home in Cincinnati a few days ago.

MRS. ELIZABETH TOYE, mother of Joe Toye of the Boston Traveler staff, died March 17 in Jamaica Plain, Mass. She is survived by two other sons, Frederick H., a Boston advertising man, and J. F. Toye, and two daughters, the Misses Mary A. and Catherine E. Toye.

RICHARD BUTLER, said to have been Canada's oldest printer died at his home in Hamilton, Ont., at the age of 92 years. He had served in various capacities, from devil to managing editor, on Canadian newspapers, and was formerly American vice consul at Hamilton. Although a Canadian, Mr. Butler fought with the Union forces in the Civil War.

MRS. MARY F. WOODS, widow of Colonel Edwin H. Woods, long the publisher of the Boston (Mass.) Herald, died suddenly at her home in Brookline recently.

MRS. MARY CAROLINE FAY, daughter of the late Colonel Charles A. Rogers, owner and publisher of the old Boston (Mass.) Journal, died at her home in Boston last week.

PETER P. LENZ, aged 57 years, for the past seven years connected with the advertising department of the Pittsburg Post and Sun died at his home in Bellevue, a suburb, March 22.

FRANK A. GAILY, 52, veteran Kansas City newspaper man, died March 14.

FRANK L. FLAGG, 47, Associated Press operator for the Joliet (Ill.) Herald-News for seven years, and prior to that time an operator for the New York Sun's Chicago office, died March 18 in his home after a week's illness.

MILTON L. SCOTT, 56, former publisher of a string of Utah newspapers died at his home in Provo, March 15.

LOUIS ORR, 54, a newspaper printer at East Liverpool, O., ended his life because of despondency recently.

DANIEL S. DOUGHERTY, 73, for 18 years associate editor of the Southbridge (Mass.) Herald died at the home of his daughter in Centerville, R. I., March 12.

THOMAS LONERGAN, a correspondent for Providence, R. I., papers for more than a quarter of a century at Warren, R. I., was found dead recently.

JAMES F. SWEENEY, 35, for eight years Millbury staff man on the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram died suddenly at his home recently.

AONZO M. MAY, 87, veteran newspaper editor of Iowa, died March 15, in his home in Waukon, Ia. For many years he published the Waukon Standard.

JESSE LAWTON, editor-publisher of the Arapaho (Okla.) Bee and probably the oldest continuous owner of a newspaper property in Oklahoma, died from a stroke of apoplexy in his office March 16.

GEORGE P. MATHES, 75, for 20 years a member of the Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel staff, and known as one of the best political writers in Wisconsin, died recently at his home in Milwaukee, after a short illness.

EDWARD D. BARKER, for many years a proofreader on the Chicago Tribune, died suddenly on March 18. He was the author of considerable verse, and had also gained a reputation as a song writer.

FRANK G. PATCHIN, editor and author of many juvenile tales, who died this week in Jacksonville, Fla., worked at various times with the New York World, Washington Post and Rochester Democrat & Chronicle.

ORGANIZE DIRECT MAIL MEET

Boston Committee Incorporates, As Plans for Convention Progress

Plans are under way for the eighth annual Direct Mail Advertising convention and exposition in Boston, Oct. 28, 29 and 30, and the arrangements committee has organized as the Boston Convention and Exposition Board, Inc. Charles W. Collier, field secretary of the Direct Mail Advertising Association, is its manager-secretary.

The original Boston committee consisted of Arthur Rohn, Smith & Porter Press, chairman; Watson M. Gordon, S. D. Warren Paper Company, vice-chairman; Frank B. Cummings, Storrs & Bement Company, treasurer; Herbert Farrier, Japan Paper Company, recording secretary; Herbert Waters, Boston Mailing Company; L. B. Folsom, Folsom Engraving Company, and L. F. Hamilton, Walworth Manufacturing Company. To these charter members have been added Frank Black, William Filene's Sons Company; Earl G. Manning, John Hancock Insurance Company; Perry Walton, Perry Walton Company; George W. Taylor, Taylor Press; Harold Tolman, Tolman Print, Inc.; William F. Rogers, advertising manager Boston Evening Transcript, and Hamilton B. Wood, Commonwealth Press, Worcester.

New Libel Law for Oklahoma

The Oklahoma House of Representatives on March 17 adopted by section a libel law, designed "to stop all newspapers and other publications, which attempt to injure or blacken the character of any person or corporation by publication of willful falsehood."

COAST PRESS FORMING NEW ASSOCIATION

Delegates from Oregon, Washington, California and British Columbia to Act at Portland April 17-18

Organization of the entire newspaper profession of the Pacific Coast will be effected in Portland on April 17 and 18 at the conference of the Pacific Slope Newspaper Association. First steps toward forming this association were taken at a recent conference in Seattle and the Portland meeting will put it on a definite and formal basis.

Three or more delegates from each of the press associations on the Pacific Coast will be present at the Portland meeting. They will adopt a constitution and arrange for future meetings. The organizations to participate are: Oregan Editorial Association, Washington Press Association, British Columbia Press Association, California Press Association and the Southern Calfornia Press Association.

Hal Hoss, president of the Oregon Editorial Association, has been active in promoting the new organization. It is proposed to take up subjects of general interest, such as reforestation and the promotion of Pacific Coast industries, particularly agriculture.

NEW DAILY FOR McKEESPORT

Alexander to Edit Journal, Which Will Incorporate Next Month

Application for a Pennsylvania charter for the McKeesport (Pa.) Journal Publishing Company will be made in April by a number of prominent business and professional men of McKeesport to publish the McKeesport Journal, an afternoon newspaper. James F. Alexander, of Zanesville, Ohio, will be the editor. He was postmaster of Zanesville during the Wilson administration. The capital stock will be $250,000 and the publication will be started on May 1.

Incorporators are Dr. F. Thoburn Nason, president of the Columbiana Foundry Company and president of the City Bank of McKeesport; A. C. McCune, president of the Potter-McCune Company, wholesale grocers; J. G. Jenkins, real estate operator; J. T. McLane, hardware dealer; Dr. G. P. Gamble, dentist, and Dr. J. W. Stevenson and Dr. Noah Sunstein, both physicians.

J. B. Alexander Dead in Oswego

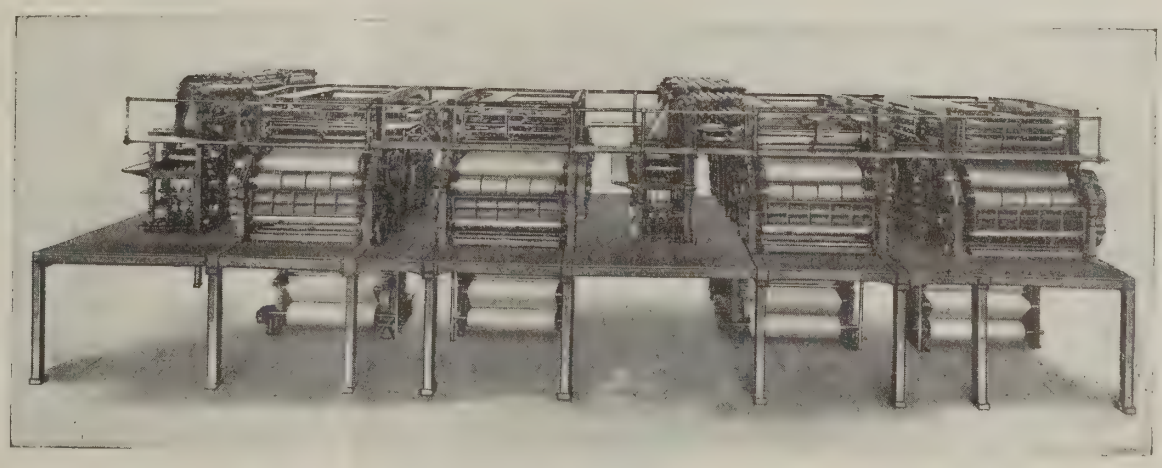
John B. Alexander, 74, former editor and publisher of the Oswego Daily Times, died in Oswego, March 19. He retired from active newspaper publishing in 1922, when he disposed of his controlling interest in the Times. In 1879 he had abandoned law practice to devote his attention to newspaper work. For some time previous to that date he had been gradually making purchases of stock in the Oswego Publishing Company. When he first came into control of the Times, the daily was poorly housed and in 1885 he had a new building erected.

Lindsay Calls Regional Conference

George D. Lindsay, publisher of the Marion (Ind.) Chronicle, and president of the Inland Daily Press Association, has issued a call for a regional conference of delegates from each regional publishers' association in the United States, and Canada, to meet in New York April 20. The conference will act as a sort of clearing house for all regional association matters, he said.

Berkowitz With Ludlow Company

Jack Berkowitz, who until recently was with the Multicolor Sales Company, with New York City for his territory, has joined the New York sales organization of the Ludlow Typograph Company of Chicago, and has been assigned the Brooklyn and Long Island territory.



LOS ANGELES
EVENING HERALD

Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

The SCOTT Double Octuple Multi-Unit Press is running every day at the Boston Herald, and publishers now know that it is possible to make combinations on this press that no other press can do.

ASK THE MEN WHO RUN THEM

SCOTT PRESSES ARE DEPENDABLE.

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.
CHICAGO 1441 Monadnock Block NEW YORK 1457 Broadway, at 42nd Street

44 AD SCHOOL GRADS GIVEN DIPLOMAS

Charles Morris Price School Conducted by Philadelphia Poor Richards Holds First Commencement Exercises—Founder Honored

The first graduates of an endowed school of advertising under the direct control of an advertising club received their diplomas Tuesday evening, March 24. The exercises were held at the Poor Richard clubhouse, Philadelphia, part of which organization the Charles Morris Price School of Advertising and Journalism is. There were forty-four graduates, men and women.

In recognition of the service rendered not only young men and women, but advertising itself, in founding and endowing the school, Michael Geary Price, father of Charles Morris Price, in whose memory the school was endowed, was presented with the first diploma, honoris causa. In acknowledging the distinction Mr. Price said that he believed "the profession of advertising offered the greatest opportunities for the most good" and urged the graduates to strive for quality in their work, and truth in their copy.

The graduates were presented by Thomas J. Mulvey, editor instructor, and the diplomas were conferred by Mr. Price who, also, presented each graduate with a book, "Happy Thoughts," a collection of prose and verse from the writings of Charles Morris Price.

The address to the graduates was made by Bartley J. Doyle, a former president of the Poor Richard Club. Mr. Doyle stressed vision and service to others. Rowe Stewart, vice-president of the Poor Richard Club, assured the graduates that the Club was ready at all times to help them advance in their profession.

NEW VANDERBILT EXECUTIVES

Adams and Smith Named Business and Circulation Managers, S. F. Herald

Charles Adams has been apointed business manager of the San Francisco Illustrated Daily Herald and will have direction of the business and advertising departments, and Robert G. Smith succeeds Harry Waters as circulation manager, according to an announcement made this week by Ben Mellon, general manager of the Vanderbilt Newspapers. A general reorganization of the staff of the paper was completed at the same time. Remodeling of the present plant of the Herald was put under way.

Carl H. Brockhagen, who resigned as business director of the Herald, has joined W. W. Chapin in the management of the Sacramento Union as part owner. Thomas Kaye, advertising manager of the Herald and formerly of the New York Daily News, has also gone to the Union.

Charles Adams was for two years advertising manager of the Fresno Bee and received his early newspaper training in the Terre Haute Post. He has had a wide experience in the advertising and business departments.

Smith joined the Vanderbilt organization two months ago as promotion manager of the Los Angeles News. He received his early training on the Seattle Star and rose to the position of assistant circulation manager. He was circulation manager of the Tacoma Times for two years before he joined the Los Angeles Record, where he was circulation manager for four years.

FITZGERALD JOINS KINOGRAMS

Former Washington Post City Editor Now News Reel Executive

J. V. Fitzgerald, former Washington newspaper man, is the latest editor to enter the motion picture industry. He has joined the Kinogram Publishing Company, makers of Kinograms news reel, as associate editor.

He was city editor of the Washington Post during the four years Edward Beale McLean, owner of the Post and Cincinnati Enquirer, was acting as managing editor of the Post.

He was on the Post staff seven years, serving in turn as sports editor and editorial writer before becoming city editor. He came to Washington from New York, where he was on the staff of the World for ten years.

MOVING DAY FOR TRIBUNE

Chicago Daily Transferring Equipment to New Home This Week

The Chicago Tribune will move into its new tower from March 27 to 29. On March 27 a few offices will leave the Dearborn street building in the downtown district, while the other offices will follow in the next two days.

An elaborate system has been worked out by the purchasing department of the newspaper to create as little confusion as possible during the transfer. Each floor is indicated by a color, and colored tags will be attached to all articles of furniture. A system of locations has been worked out with stars, diamonds, circles, seals, etc., to tell movers just where furniture is to go in the Tower.

The purchasing department will get into the Tower first, followed by the office of the building and other business offices. Captain Patterson and Colonel McCormick, co-editors, and the editorial writers will move from the Tribune plant later.

Canadian Newsprint Exports Gain

Canadian newsprint exports to the United States during February were 2,077,148 hundredweight, valued at $7,442,348, as compared with 1,992,428 hundredweight, valued at $7,359,535 in February, 1924.

Flushing Weekly Added to String

The Port & Terminal Publishing Company, Inc., of Whitestone, N. Y., are now the publishers of eight publications, having just acquired the Flushing Home News, a weekly in Flushing, Long Island.

BOSTON NEWS MEN FROLIC

Press Club Celebrates 40th Anniversary With Banquet and Show

In celebration of its 40th anniversary, the Boston Press Club held its annual frolic at the Colonial Theatre, the afternoon of March 20, followed by a banquet at the clubhouse, 3 Beacon street.

Theatrical stars from numerous shows playing in Boston and other artists contributed to the program which lasted three hours. Eddie Cantor, of "Kid Boots," was master of ceremonies and announced each act, besides singing two of his own songs.

In connection with its "Frolic," the club issued a souvenir program which contained a history of the club, list of past presidents and a picture of its present president, John J. Grant.

Founded in 1885 with a membership of about 50, the club since has had eight headquarters previous to moving to its present home, Feb. 16, 1910. Its members now number several hundred.

John J. Grant was re-elected president of the club at the annual business meeting last week. Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Edward F. Davis, Boston Advertiser; secretary, John F. Cronin, former newspaperman and lawyer.

Wright Resigns as Publicity Chief

Chester M. Wright has resigned as director of the American Federation of Labor Information and Publicity Service and as assistant editor of the American Federationist. He retains his position as editor of the International Labor News Service and English language secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

To Broadcast A. A. C. W. Speeches

Speeches delivered at the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, Houston, May, 9 to 14, will be broadcast by the Houston Post-Dispatch.

SURVEY OF WOMEN JOURNALISTS

University Student Will Find Number Employed and Positions Held

Miss Ferdina Reinholdt, senior in the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks, will lead the department of journalism of the State school in making a survey of "The Woman in Journalism."

The survey will cover daily newspapers and magazines in the United States, and is intended to present findings on the number of women employed in the journalism field in comparison with men.

Positions in this work to which women are generally best adapted, working conditions and salaries and other factors will be included in this survey.

Other members of the senior class are conducting surveys on other problems including newspaper salaries, amount of syndicate news carried by North Dakota weekly newspapers, and undeveloped news sources in the State.

THE First thought of those who advertise to Texans is usually

The Dallas Morning News

—the paper of Prosperity Zone

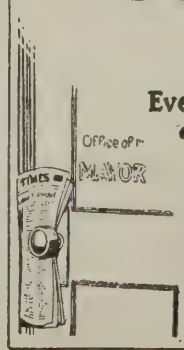
Most in Manhattan

Department stores depend on newspapers for quick, direct, tangible results.

The Department stores of Manhattan — keen, experienced, alert advertisers that they are—use more space in The Sun than in any other New York newspaper.



The six-day Sun publishes more Department store advertising than any seven-day New York newspaper.

The Sun

280 Broadway New York

DURING 1924
The Plain Dealer
published
51% of ALL the National lineage appearing in
ALL Cleveland Newspapers
The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell
J. B. Woodward 110 E. 42d St. New York
Woodward & Kelly Security Bldg. Chicago

The
Pittsburgh Press
A Scripps-Howard Newspaper
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURGH
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
New York Office—52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Chicago Office—5 North Wabash Ave.
San Francisco—Cleveland—Cincinnati

Detroit Times

Evening 220,000
Sunday 250,000

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

THE PHILADELPHIA RECORD
Always Reliable
The Second largest morning daily Circulation in Philadelphia and GROWING!

COOLIDGE BEAMS ON WHITE HOUSE MEN AT ANNUAL PRESS BANQUET

'No Reporters Present," President Dispels Tradition of "Icy Babbittism" and Dour Gravity—Sargent Feted and Advised

By J. BART CAMPBELL

THE pleasant personal relations the large corps of Washington correspondents maintain with President Calvin Coolidge and members of his official family have perhaps never been more strikingly emphasized than during this past week.

Although Federal officials and Washington newspaper men are often compelled to agree to disagree on matters of state and things political the human element is rarely absent from the friendly and often confidential nature of the frequent "get-together" conferences the news gatherers of the national capitol have with the powers that be.

Socially the correspondents have become accustomed to meet the President and his Cabinet, as well as Senators and Congressmen on a plane that not only encourages a better understanding of the reasons behind a conflict of opinion which is essentially human, but has been helpful in developing a saving grace of humor which often lightens alike the burdens of public office and of newsgathering.

When those two old Vermont neighbors and friends—Calvin Coolidge, of Plymouth, and John Garibaldi Sargent, of Ludlow—were guests Saturday night, March 21, at the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents Association at the new Mayflower Hotel there prevailed a frankness of utterance and a spontaneity of good humor which did much to explode the absurd myth that the presence of the President means cold reticence and icy Babbittism.

The President "talked turkey" to the assembled newspaper men, but under the protection from publicity which is always thrown about such gatherings as the White House Correspondents Association and the Gridiron Club stage yearly. It may be stated, however, without breaking the rule against reportorial notebooks on such occasions, that perhaps seldom before has Mr. Coolidge expressed his newsgathering auditors so favorably as he did when he unbosomed himself to them Saturday night with a display of genuine humor and open frankness which would have amazed the discerning few "back home" who apparently still think of him as a man of halting speech, diffident manner and dour severity.

It was the first appearance of the new Attorney General at a Washington gathering, and he too not only entered fully into the spirit of the dinner, but evinced a keen sense of humor and a clear-sharpness of mind comparable with the engaging qualities which the correspondents have finally come to learn the President is endowed with to a degree frequently not realized by some who have not been fortunate enough to come in close frequent contact with him as they have.

The dinner, needless to state, was a rousing success. Besides the President and Mr. Sargent, the correspondents had among their guests Postmaster General Harry S. New, United States Senators, James E. Watson, of Indiana and Robert Nelson Stanfield, of Oregon; Speaker Nicholas Longworth; John Hays Hammond, Congressman Sol Bloom, of New York; Everett Sanders, the President's executive secretary; E. T. Clark, the President's personal secretary; Rudolph Forster, executive clerk of the White House; Judson C. Welliver, chief clerk of the White House; and M. J. McDermott, of the press section, State Department.

Upon Ross E. Bartley, who was with the Associated Press here until he became secretary to Vice-President Charles G. Dawes recently, devolved the responsibility, as retiring president of the White House Correspondents' Association, of introducing the President and the other speakers of the occasion, as well as to formally induct into office the new officers of the association—George Durno, International News Service, president; Philip Orme, Universal Service, vice-president; Dale Van Every, United Press, secretary-treasurer; Grafton Wilcox, New York Herald Tribune; and Charles R. Michael, New York Times, members of the executive committee.

One of the hits of the dinner was scored by John Russell Young, former president of the Association, and a scion of a family of noted newspaper men, who caused Mr. Coolidge to laugh heartily by giving the new Attorney General on behalf of the assembled correspondents the following advice:

"You will be addressed as 'general.' Frequently as Mr. General, but never as Gen.

"It is not necessary for you to strike a military pose when addressed as General, and no one expects you to salute. Salutes went out of fashion in official circles when the late Brig. Gen. Doctor Sawyer adopted this manner of salutation.

"Under no circumstances should you be allowed to use your middle name—Garibaldi. Save this ace for Columbus day celebrations, and for trying to crash the gate at the Royal Italian embassy.

"You are expected to talk much and do little. The less an Attorney General does the better the department will function.

"By talking for publication you will be better able to let the public know what you are not doing. It is customary to always comply with the requests from news photographers. You will grow to like this. They all do. If the country fails to understand or appreciate what you are doing as the head of the Department of Justice, it will at least appreciate your printed likeness.

"Don't begin at once to lay your plans to go to the Supreme Court.

"Don't go on any of those Mayflower cruises. Although the fishing is good in the Potomac River, no one has been known to have cast a line from this craft.

"Now, sir, in conclusion, don't always look to Plymouth and Ludlow every time you have a vacancy to fill. Bear in mind their population is limited, with no promise of growing, despite the present spotlight."

"Leaving all jesting aside," Attorney General Sargent replied, "I guess I can't go far wrong by seeking the aid and advice of the newspaper men."

1893 SERVICE 1925

as visualized by

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

C. H. WEISSNER

Keeping Staff Personnel

to point of meeting present day requirements and standards—by the selection of men of a proper type to fit our ideal of service is another important factor.

Mr. Weissner for nearly ten years has been an important factor with the splendid H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency of New York and Chicago. Prior to that association he was with the Munsey organization. Through these years of experience he has had opportunity to study various phases of advertising and advertising agency activity. During the world war he was in France, a member of A. E. F.

He joins this organization March 30th, 1925, as a member of our staff.

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

Advertising Representatives of Newspapers

2 W. 45th St New York — 900 Mallers Bldg. Chicago

Van Nuys Bldg. Los Angeles — Holbrook Bldg. San Francisco

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

The High Cost of Postponing Permanent Highway Building

Poor motor roads stifle industry and agriculture, waste huge sums annually in high maintenance costs, and greatly increase gasoline, tire and repair bills.

There is not a state, not a county, not a community, that isn't paying a heavy price for having too few permanent roads.

There are still many sections of the country—even whole states—that are trying to operate twentieth century traffic over nineteenth century roads.

This is costing millions of dollars every year, and will keep on costing millions until we have well developed permanent highway systems everywhere.

Even what we often call the more progressive communities are far behind the demands of modern highway traffic with its 17,000,000 motor vehicles.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Canada to Mexico, we need more Concrete roads—the roads for twentieth century traffic.

Your highway officials want to be of the greatest possible service to you. Get behind them with ways and means that will provide more Concrete roads and streets. Such an investment will pay you big dividends year after year.

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION

111 W. Washington St.

CHICAGO

A National Organization to Improve and Extend the Uses of Concrete

OFFICES IN 29 CITIES

Muffets Corporation

is another of the nationally famous accounts which has recognized the fact that the Washington, D. C., territory cannot be adequately covered without

The Washington Times

The futility of the "one paper buy" argument is nowhere better illustrated than in the experiences of its national advertisers.

PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH

New York City—Boston

G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.

Chicago - Detroit - St. Louis - Los Angeles

covers an ideal test market used by

National Advertisers

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.

National Representatives

Harbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

MOCK WEDDING REUNITES PORTLAND AD GROUPS AFTER STORMY COURTSHIP

A MOCK wedding recently reunited the Portland (Ore.) Advertising Club and the Advertising Men's Association of Portland. The two organizations held their first meeting since the merger on March 18, and an elaborate wedding ceremoney was staged, with Lloyd Spencer of Seattle, president of the Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs, taking the role of the parson.

Miss Peggy Perkins of the Advertising Men's Association was the beautiful, bushing bride while Paul T. Shaw, president of the Advertising Club, was the happy bridgegroom.

An altar of flowers, beautiful gowns for the bridesmaids and all the frills of an elaborate wedding went with the ceremony.

The Advertising Men's Association was formed by men who broke away from the club on the ground that it was not devoting its attention strictly to advertising matters. A compromise in the situation was effected through negotiations conducted by President Spencer. The reorganized club will elect as officers only men actually connected with the advertising business and will devote much of its time to consideration of advertising problems. Women are now given membership in the club for the first time.

NEW HOME FOR PRESS CLUB

Lost $5,000 Bond of National Group Burned by Secretary Mellon

The plan for a bigger home for the National Press Club was given much impetus this week under the most favorable auspices.

Erection of a new building in the center of the national capital, to provide the club with more commodious quarters commensurate with its increasing membership, is proposed. The suggestion is also made that the various newspaper bureaus and the many newspaper correspondents here be housed under the same roof.

The plan was endorsed enthusiastically when it was broached at a gathering taking the capacity of the present spacious club rooms in the Albee Building held Wednesday night for the purpose of celebrating the liquidation of the last penny of the club indebtedness.

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon applied a long, tapering match specially made for the occasion to a final note for $5,000 held against the club while the assembled members and their guests cheered.

Theodore Tiller, of the Baltimore Sun, past president, who acted as master of ceremonies, explained amid laughter the club had finally realized the ambition of every newspaper man—to be absolutely free from debt.

The guests included, besides Mr. Mellon, John Garibaldi Sargent, the new Attorney General; William M. Jardine, the new Secretary of Agriculture; David H. Blair, U. S. Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Warren F. Martin, special assistant to the Attorney General; Elliot Wadsworth and McKenzie Moss, assistant secretaries of the treasury; Speaker of the House Nicholas Longworth, and Congressman Robert L. Bacon, of New York, and William P. Connery, Jr., of Massachusetts.

Post Office Profits from Magazines

The U. S. Post Office Department last year made a profit of $333,769.44 through handling the Saturday Evening Post and $288,930.31 handling the Ladies' Home Journal, according to a letter from P. S. Collins, general business manager Curtis Publishing Company, to Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, which was placed in the Congressional Record March 17. The figures, authenticated by the Post Office Department, and submitted to Senator George to correct statements made by the Senator while discussing the postal salaries bill.

Citizens Fete Editor

In celebration of his fortieth anniversary as editor of the Goldsboro (N. C.) Argus, Colonel Joseph E. Robinson was honor guest at a banquet given for him by the citizens of the community, March with complete newspaper financial service.

A Security Market

Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.

The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.

A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1924, *124,468 total net paid.

Cover the Buffalo Market with the

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS

*Present average circulation 129,834

Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg., New York, N. Y. — Lytton Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

first! in OHIO

3,108,287 LINES

JANUARY 1st to FEBRUARY 28th, 1925

The Dispatch published during the first two months approximately 53% of all Columbus newspaper advertising and 447,195 lines more than all other Columbus newspapers combined.

In 1924 it exceeded the next largest Ohio newspaper by 2,500,909 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City	52,891
Suburban	23,639
Country	21,928
GRAND TOTAL	98,458

LARGEST IN CENTRAL OHIO

Columbus Dispatch

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

In New Orleans It's

THE MORNING TRIBUNE
(Published week-day mornings)
THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM
(Published week-day afternoons)
THE ITEM TRIBUNE
(Published Sunday mornings)

Sold to National Advertisers at a combination rate 15c a line week-days and 18c a line Sundays.

Covering Suburban New York

The New York Evening Journal gives advertisers a larger suburban circulation than any other New York morning or evening paper.

It gives a larger city circulation than any standard size paper in the City, morning, evening or Sunday.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

America's Greatest Evening Newspaper

$44,808,100.00

Is Montgomery County, Penna.

Total Annual Payroll

Get your share of its buying power by advertising in

Norristown Times Herald

Montgomery County's Great Home Newspaper

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities

TRADING POPULATION 167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
New York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World — Morning Edition

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg., Chicago — General Motors Bldg., Detroit

NEWSPAPER MEN RILED WHEN AMERICAN LEGION DROPS PRESS CLUB POST

WASHINGTON, March 26.—"How do they get that way? They can't excommunicate the National Press Club Post. It is a violation of the American Legion constitution, not to mentin the Magna Charta, and the rights of all American and British subjects. Why it's a blankety-blank outrage!"

This was the characteristic verbal explosin of Captain John H. Craig, commander of the National Press Club Post, aide to General Lejeune, U. S. M. C. and soldier, adventurer and writer, this week when the news was broken to him that the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion had "fired" the post for non-payment of dues.

The post has a membership of about 70. Such notables as Vice President Charles G. Dawes, General Pershing, General Lejeune, young "Teddy" Roosevelt, and James A. Drain, national commander of the American Legion, are on its rolls.

District Commander Frank L. Peckham said he had grown tired waiting for the post to "pay up." Captain Paul J. McGahan, of the Philadelphia Inquirer, past district commander, member of the national executive committee of the legion, and also a member of the "fired" post, grew apoplectic.

"If you quote me at all, which I hope you will not—" began Captain McGahan, twisting his croix de guerre angrily.

"How do you get that way?" thundered Captain Craig. "I am a commander of this here post. Silence in the ranks.

"You see it was this way. Posts are given until March 15 of each year, to report their membership. Perhaps that is because it is the same day that the annual income tax report becomes due. Somehow or other our report was not mailed in time to reach headquarters before the 'deadline.' So they 'canned' us, together with the 312th Machine Gun Battalion, Carry On, Kenneth Lewis and James Reece posts."

The membership dues of a post member is the large sum of $5 a year.

FEW NEWSPAPER PLANTS HIT BY TORNADO

(Continued from page 4)

reached the scene aboard relief trains.

Wire trouble ceased after the first day and Friday found the telegraph companies with a squadron of operators at Murphysboro, where the story then centered. Prior to that Duquoin, Benton and Carbondale were sending bases, as they were unhit and were relief headquarters. After the wires were restored and things became systematized, every correspondent districted himself. Staff men centered on Carbondale and Murphysboro, and Loughran made the complete circuit of the district three times. W. H. Purcell, city editor of the West Frankfort American, furnished copy and good color pictures to many correspondents as he was at the center of the storm. His story was the first the U. P. received giving a complete picture of the disaster, thirty minutes after D. A. Purdy had filed the first flash into St. Louis on the scope of the storm.

When a telephone wire was first strung into Murphysboro late Thursday calls were limited to five minutes each, and every correspondent was clamoring for the phone. It was almost impossible to get a call through from St. Louis. Western Union at first had difficulty in handling news owing to the mass of telegrams from people inquiring about relatives in the storm region.

Indianapolis staff men, assisted by eight reporters from the Indianapolis Times and Evansville Press and the entire staff of the Princeton Democrat covered the Indiana tornado story for the U. P. The Evansville Press detailed Paul Hayward, Robert Bowman, Clifton Brooks, Alfred Willoughby, George Albrecht, and William Ritt, while the Indianapolis Times sent John Niblack and Edwin O'Neill. Although there was great difficulty in getting news out, it is stated that at no point was the leased wire service of the U. P. interrupted.

Correspondents of the International News Service located in cities badly hit by the tornado, telephoned in first stories received by this press association, which immediately dispatched staff men and women from St. Louis and Chicago to the scene of the disaster.

F. J. Hughes, of the St. Louis Bureau, was detailed to the section nearest his city, while Harry Reed, Justin Forrest, Sonia Lee and Sarah Brown were sent out to the storm area from Chicago.

Soon after news of the storm broke, L. B. Shelly, who was covering for International News Service out of Duquoin, Ill., sent in a touching message that he had learned his son was one of the victims of the tornado.

"You will understand," he wired, "if I do not cover for you any longer."

NEWSPAPERS VS. MAGAZINES

Space Rates and Circulations Discussed by Bureau of Advertising

Details on distribution of newspapers and magazines by markets and what it costs to buy advertising as they appeared in the 1925 International Year Book of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, have been set in booklet form by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, under the title, "Space Rates and Circulations." The bureau has interpreted the tables, explaining the economy of newspaper advertising and its many advantages over the magazine.

A. N. P. A. Golf Tourney April 20

The first annual golf tournament of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association has been set for April 20, over the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club's course at Rye, N. Y.

Mattoon Bulletin Suspended

The Mattoon (Ill.) Bulletin, a daily established a year and a half ago, was closed March 20 on an order by the sheriff at the request of the First State Bank, Mattoon, which asked an accounting for $3,250 alleged due on a note.

New York Sun Produces Shopping Map

The New York Sun has produced a map visualizing the location of the most prominent shopping places of the city. Designs and data are the work of George B. Benneyan, in charge of the Sun's research department, under the direction of Edwin S. Friendly, business manager.

LUTHERAN PASTOR USING NEWSPAPER COLUMNS

Rev. E. E. Mutschmann, pastor of the Lutheran Church, Bellevue, Ia., believes his calling is a profession and takes advantage of the local newspapers' "professional cards column" to invite the public to consult him on matters of spiritual advice. His "card" appears weekly along with those of lawyers, physicians and other professions.

It reads: "E. E. Mutschmann, Lutheran pastor. Consultation hours Thursday evening from 7 to 8 for all desiring to discuss matters pertaining to their souls' salvation."

He is one of the few pastors in the country who use the newspaper columns in this manner.

WEST VIRGINIA

FOR ITS SIZE FAR SURPASSES IN NATURAL RESOURCES

Although West Virginia takes a place well toward the end of the list of States for area, for importance in industries due to, and dependent upon her natural resources she makes an excellent showing.

It is of great interest to know that in West Virginia can be found:

Largest sanitary pottery in the United States.
More coal than in any other state in the Union.
Largest stogie factory in the world.
Largest patent medicine concern in the world.
Largest sheet glass factory in the world.
Largest axe factory in the world.

Likewise, in proportion to its size, West Virginia furnishes an excellent try-out territory for all merchandise advertised in these listed daily newspapers.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
*Telegraph	(M)	11,605	.06
*Telegraph	(S)	15,752	.06
Charleston
*Gazette	(M)	19,619	.07
*Gazette	(S)	23,493	.08
Clarksburg
Telegram	(E)	9,479	.04
Telegram	(S)	11,797	.045
Huntington
Advertiser	(E)	11,176	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(M)	14,803	.04
*Herald-Dispatch	(S)	14,482	.04
Martinsburg
*Journal	(E)	4,830	.03
Morgantown
†Post	(E)	5,005	.025
Parkersburg
*News	(M)	7,261	.03
*News	(S)	8,840	.03
*Sentinel	(E)	7,751	.03

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

BENJAMIN DE CASSERES has brought together in "Mirrors of New York" (Joseph Lawren) some of those short whimsical essays which have delighted the readers of the New York Times, the Morning Telegraph, etc. Editorial writers who want to take a shot at Manhattan will find enough material in this book to last them for a year—and then some.

"The Psychology of 'The Avenue'" and "The Exquisite Manners of the Newer Gunmen" are two essays remarkably full of literary fireworks.

It is to be regretted that Mr. De Casseres didn't find a little corner in which to chat about the press and include therein some of his epigrammatic comments made at the Newspaper Club.

* * *

ABOUT the best edition of Milton's Areopagitica—a speech for the liberty of unlicensed printing—is the one edited by H. B. Cotterill and published by the Macmillan Company.

* * *

THE late Harry Thurston Peck had some interesting things to say about the American press in his essay "A Great National Newspaper". It may be found in his "What is Good English and Other Essays"—a book which, though out of print, is easily obtainable from secondhand dealers.

* * *

THE magazine article for April that I want to full face and indent is "From Park Row to Early Colorado" by N. P. Babcock in Scribner's Magazine. Mr. Babcock has been, for many years, connected with the Hearst organization in New York City, but the journalism about which he chats in his magazine article is the "Wild West" sort. It took a fearless editor to conduct the News-Democrat of Gunnison, Colo. That paper might quite correctly have been called "The Gunnison Gunner."

I am inclined to believe that Mr. Babcock is in error as to the man who gave the name Epitaph to the newspaper published in the mining camp of Tombstone, Ariz. The man who was entitled to that credit, in my opinion, is the great mining engineer, John Hays Hammond. Details about the Epitaph will be found in my "History of American Journalism" (Houghton Mifflin Co.).

But this matter is only minor. Mr. Babcock gives a graphic picture of newspaper publishing in the frontier towns of the West. So many shots are exchanged that a reporter can easily make himself believe that he is covering a holdup in modern New York, which today seems to be running a close competitor with the pioneer towns of the early West.

While waiting for an assignment from the city desk there is no better article to read in the April magazine than "From Park Row to Colorado."

THERE are a couple of hours or so of inspirational reading in the little book that Ralph Corbett has produced under the title "The Man Who Sells" (Franklin Publishing Company). The contents are alike valuable to the solicitor of advertising, the builder of circulation or the general commercial order getter. The book is built in two parts. The first has to do with the use of the salesman's personality, and in it he is told to "forget the genius stuff. Read, work, sweat and achieve." It emphasizes the fact that the genius "starts out in life with the same funny little pink toes and fuzzy head as the rest of us." The second part has to do with meeting and overcoming sales resistance.

* * *

J W. DAFOE of the Manitoba Free Press hits the bull's eye in his pamphlet "The Editorial Page". He frankly admits that the question "Is the Influenced Editorial Page on the Decline?" is one which he does not care to answer with a categorical "yes" or "no", so dear to the legal cross-examiner.

He does not touch most of the pivotal points which must be considered in answering such a question. He frankly admits that the stage has been reached where it is possible for so sympathetic a student of the press as J. St. Loe Strachy, editor of The Spectator of London, to speak of the good journalist as the "honest tradesman". On this point Mr. Dafoe continues:

> What the honest tradesman deals in is news and information with a judicious admixture of comment and instruction; and he deals in it for profit. Let us not be hypocritical about this fact and seek to camouflage it with attractive disguises. The modern general daily newspaper, which is what I am discussing, is published as a business and necessarily so, in view of the great capital outlay involved and the cost of carrying on.

The conclusion reached by Mr. Dafoe may possibly be summed up in the following extract:

> The influence of the editorial page is more pervasive and less obvious than in former times. The "we-say-so" type of editorial impresses no one. Assaults upon public men or other journals for the crime of disagreeing with opinions expressed in the editorial columns are futile where they are not resented by the reader. A newspaper's influence is determined by several factors. It must, first of all, have established itself with its readers as honest, disinterested and independent. If there is a suspicion of outside control for ulterior purposes—and there never is control for any other purpose—editorial appeal, however brilliantly made, is mostly waste effort.

* * *

JOB plants which print annuals for local high schools may be interested in the pamphlet "High School Annuals" by John E. Drewry, Adjunct Professor in Journalism, Henry Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia.

STAFF HONORS BEAZELL

Dinner Held for World's Assistant M. E. on 15th Anniversary with Paper

William P. Beazell, assistant managing editor of the New York World, was guest of honor at a testimonial dinner given by the staff at the Waldorf-Astoria last Saturday night, March 21, in celebration of his fifteenth anniversary on the newspaper.

W. P. Beazell

The dinner started at 11 o'clock and was attended by more than 60 members of the editorial staff, including most of the editors. John Gordon, of the Sunday department, presided, and many telegrams and letters were read from those who were unable to be present. These included messages from Babe Ruth, Hendrik Willem Van Loon and Herbert Bayard Swope.

The music for the affair was furnished by the World Orchestra, composed of reporters. A walking stick was presented to Mr. Beazell. A poster in water colors done by William Van Benthuysen, of the art department, was signed by those who attended, and presented to Mr. Beazell as a souvenir.

The painting depicted the editor in full armor with several pieces of rejected copy spiked on his lance.

Trial Extras Carried by Plane

For the first time in Texas history, the Houston Press used an airplane to carry editions to La Grange, Tex., about 100 miles distant, containing accounts of a murder trial being conducted in the latter city. When the verdict came, a special extra was issued for La Grange and hurried there by plane, arriving in less than 90 minutes. The stunt attracted wide attention in La Grange and neighboring towns, and nearly 200 persons were waiting for the extra with the court verdict at the landing field, where the plane had stopped daily for more than a week, C. J. Lilley, editor of the Press, said.

New Type Faces Announced

Among the new typefaces recently completed by the Ludlow Typograph Company is the Number 11 Light Italic Series which is based on the Goudy Oldstyle Italic; new True-Cut Caslon Italic, based on the original of William Caslon; and the Ludlow Black Series in all sizes from 12 to 48 Point. Specimens of these three faces have already been sent to the trade.

AUTOMOBILE FEATURES

Touring — Camping—Traffic — Gasoline — Upkeep—Roads — Legislation — Taxation — Insurance — Garaging — Used Car Buying and Selling and all the other

BIG SUBJECTS OF MOTORING COVERED IN A BIG WAY

The Ullman Feature Service
Woodward Bldg., Washington, D.C.

ASSOCIATED EDITORS SERVICE

DAILY

Layon McDuffer—Comic by Payne.
"Kids" Pantomime—Comic by Striebel.
Quillen's Paragraphs.
"Aunt Het," by Quillen.
"Willie Willis," by Quillen.
Mothers and Their Children.
Golf as Champions Play It.
Color Cut-Outs.
Al Demaree's Sport Cartoons.
Word of Comfort.

WEEKLY

Boys' and Girls' Page.
Economists' Forum.
Auto Sense—Williamson.

SEMI-WEEKLY

Barrie Payne on Golf (Humor).
Individuality of Dress.

ASSOCIATED EDITORS, INC.
440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania stand first in total wealth . . . but fourth in per capita wealth.

California, Oregon, Washington stand sixth in total wealth . . . but first in per capita wealth.

Surprising anomalies are revealed in a new study by Editorial Research Reports of the distribution of wealth in the United States.

This report, tracing the distribution of wealth and the movement of population from the Civil War to date, presents an index to the economic development of the last half century.

EDITORIAL RESEARCH REPORTS
1425 G Street Washington, D. C.

SERVICE
THE CHARLES PARTLOWE COMPANY
America's Largest Circulation Building Organization
-RESULTS COUNT-
6th Floor Occidental Bld.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Our Features:
Irvin S. Cobb
Samuel G. Blythe
R. L. Goldberg
Roe Fulkerson
Don Herold
O. O. McIntyre
Nellie Revell
Will Rogers
H. J. Tuthill
Albert Payson Terhune
and others
The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

ATTENTION PUBLISHERS

C. B. HOLLISTER can be reached at the Ambassador Hotel, New York City, until further notice. Newspapers confronted with circulation problems and desiring large immediate paid-in-advance circulation gains are invited to communicate. In position to conduct one more big campaign before July 1st.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COML EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

"Some Things We Do—Ana Some Things We Don't" is a booklet that would interest you. Write for it.

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

Honorary Degree for Kennedy

Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass., in June will confer for the third time in its history, the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, this time upon Will P. Kennedy, of West Springfield, Mass., house correspondent at Washington and special writer for the Washington Evening Star. He will be the first newspaper man so honored. Rev. Joseph N. Dinand, S. J., president Holy Cross, made the announcement that the trustees of the college had unanimously voted to confer the degree upon Mr. Kennedy at the college commencement exercises on June 16. Mr. Kennedy was graduated from Holy Cross in 1900 and was a newspaper man in Boston, Springfield, Worcester and Holyoke, before going to Washington.

Albany Writers in Annual Frolic

The New York State Legislative Correspondents Association holds its annual "stunt" dinner, March 12.

Atlantic Buys Youth's Companion

The Atlantic Monthly, Boston, has purchased an interest in the Youth's Companion, also of Boston, and will be active in its management. The new board of directors will include Ellery Sedgwick, president, and MacGregor Jenkins, treasurer, of the Atlantic Monthly Company. The policy of the Youth's Companion will remain unchanged.

Boston Globe Veteran Honored

A "get-to-gether" of the Boston (Mass.) Globe staff was held last week in honor of Edward P. Collier, who for 50 years has been composing room accountant. Mr. Collier joined the Globe forces at the age of 13, and has been a valued member ever since. William Francis Ellsbee, 81-year-old member of the composing room staff, spoke.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

For Sale.

Due to consolidation, the following machines are for sale: Duplex angle bar, double drive press; one Huber, two-revolution, four roller cylinder press. Both with motors and equipment. Miller saw, electric metal furnace, Model L Linotype and other equipment. The Democrat-Herald, Albany, Ore.

For Sale.

One Goss "Straightline" newspaper printing and folding press. Two-plate wide, 4 to 12 pages inset, 24 pages collected; eight columns 13 ems. Folders for either two or three folds. Samples of product furnished upon request, together with any other information sought by any person interested. This press is now taking care in colors of the Comic and Magazine Sections of the St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press, and can be released about July 1, 1925. Price and terms on application to Comptroller, Dispatch Printing Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Wanted To Buy.

There are scores of good second-hand, stereotyping newspaper presses in storage. One reason they remain in storage is that the owners ask first hand prices. If anybody has a real bargain in a 24-page press, write full particulars. C-861, Editor & Publisher.

Printers' Outfitters.

Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

N.Y. DAILY NEWS

HALF-TONES

Best in the World

Made by

POWERS

NEW PROCESS

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE

145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City

Established a Quarter of a Century

USEFUL VALUES in Newspaper Plant Equipment

Goss Comet 8-page Newspaper press — almost brand new.

Hoe Matrix Rolling-in Machine.

Hoe Double Steam Table.

Hamilton Steel Type Cabinets.

Steel-top Form Tables.

Stereotype Chases.

Thomas W. Hall Co., Inc.
512 W. 41st St., New York City

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS

DUPLEX PRESSES

"OUR CUSTOMERS WRITE OUR ADS"

DUPLEX TUBULAR

"The Duplex Tubular turns out its work very easily and at extremely low cost."

Los Angeles, Calif., Daily Illustrated News

Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

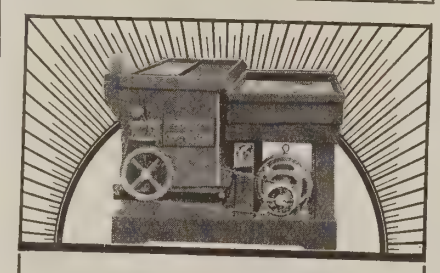
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

MODERNIZE

your

COMPOSING ROOM

with



HAMILTON EQUIPMENT

Made in both wood and steel.

Manufactured by

The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.

For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

THE APPROPRIATE ETCHING DEVICE FOR THE NEWS PAPER

NEW PRICES:

"MIGNON" .....$ 625
"SIRIUS" .....$ 890
"DIAMOND" $1025

AXEL HOLMSTROM
ETCHING MACHINE CO.
328 Chestnut St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Don't "Pig" Metal It Wastes Money

Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER

Eliminates the Metal Furnace

Printers Manufacturing Co.
417 South Dearborn St.
Chicago Ill.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.

USED BY THE

OMAHA BEE
Omaha, Nebr.

We refer you to them for their opinion

CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO. CHICAGO — NAME, SERVICE, QUALITY, FAME — CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE
Conway Bldg.
111 W. Washington St.
CHICAGO

EASTERN OFFICE
Marbridge Bldg.
Broadway at 34th St.
NEW YORK

Hoe Quick-Lock-Up Flat Casting Mould

The throwing of a single Lever locks this Hoe Flat Casting Mould which is carefully designed and constructed for perfect Balance as well as Quality and Durability.

Made in three sizes—five, seven and eight columns.

If It's a Hoe, It's the Best.

R. HOE & CO., Inc.
7 South Dearborn Street,
CHICAGO, ILL.

504-520 Grand St., N. Y. City
Also at
DUNELLEN, N. J.
7 Water Street,
BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."
18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.
6c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.
36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Bookkeeper.
Experienced; capable; A1 references. Now employed Pacific Slope. Available reasonable time. Write or wire Box C-872, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man
for newspaper or agency office work. Age 35. Seven years' eastern experience, nine years on Pacific Coast. Qualified to take full charge National Advertising Department. References. Box C-873, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Ready April 15th. Ten years experience newspaper management, sales, advertising, local, national. Qualifications submitted. Interview necessary. C-851, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
18 years' experience leading Metropolitan newspapers. Capable executive; convincing salesman. Thoroughly experienced building and promoting general retail advertising; well acquainted national field. Now employed; age 36, married. Address C-763, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
For 12 years (until one year ago) advertising manager of the Sioux City (Iowa) Tribune; although advertising manager was always in contact with owners regarding policies and every phase of the paper. Its publishers, John H. and Eugene Kelly, are the principal owners of the Sioux Falls Press and I was delegated to establish this paper, having an interest in it. However, I have the best reasons for seeking a change. Also formerly advertising manager (practically manager) of the Lexington (Ky.) Herald; Meridian (Miss.) Dispatch; and was assistant to Louis Wiley when he was advertising manager of the New York Times. Have a continuously successful record. C-871, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman.
Capable, aggressive, experienced and able to sell the hard ones. Quick to make friends, and can get more space from your regular advertisers through my knowledge of advertising. Looking for place where there is opportunity to match ability and experience against an unlimited opportunity to develop and expand. A good starting salary demanded and more when the business produced justifies. Box C-854, Editor & Publisher.

Business Executive.
and for past several years Business Manager of medium size Eastern paper, contemplates making change. Unquestionable record as to ability and character and particularly strong in increase of business and production at minimum cost. Experience covers Morning, Evening, Metropolitan and Provincial fields. No situation too difficult, but will consider only proposition combining permanency with something more than a job. Will meet you at the A. N. P. A. meeting if you wish. Box No. C-849, are Editor & Publisher.

A quick dependable and economic service is at your command. The Classified Department of EDITOR & PUBLISHER is prepared at all times to aid you in getting a job, filling a vacancy on your staff, selling your used machinery or finding a man with capital to invest in your business.

Avail yourself of this service!

Put your wants in a classified ad and mail it now to

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Situations Wanted

Cartoonist—Comic Artist.
Amateur, 29, married. Ability to turn out finished work. No professional experience. Wish newspaper position with opportunity to learn. Let me send samples. Address Box C-868, Editor & Publisher.

Circulator-Field Man.
Long experience, good reference. South preferred. C-878, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
With eighteen years' experience in circulation work wishes to connect with live paper; will guarantee result. Can furnish the best of reference; wife's health requires change of location. Answer W. T. Buck, care Herald, Augusta, Ga.

Circulation Manager.
Capable executive with twelve years successful experience, initiative, ability to handle circulation promotion efficiently and economically and to analyze difficult circulation problems successfully. Now employed. Want position in Southern States. Address C-857, care Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
First class working circulation manager of proven ability wants job May first. Extra good street and suburban salesman. Good organizer. Well acquainted with other departments. Good paper in territory not less than 100,000. West or Mississippi Valley. Address C-865, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
With practical working experience on morning, evening and Sunday papers desires to connect with a publication with opportunity for progress and advancement. With present publication past 10 years, last 6 years in charge. References all employers and can give satisfactory reason for making change. Address Box C-869, care Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Energetic, ambitious married man, age 39, with 12 years' practical experience seeks position with opportunity and future. Proven producer clean circulation. Ten per cent increase last three months. My specialty city circulation. Prefer middle west. Now employed. Unkept promises reason of this ad. Sixty dollars minimum salary. Address Box C-877, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
Available May 1st. Have outgrown present connections. Address C-863, Editor & Publisher, for further details.

Classified Manager Solicitor.
Young. Experienced in organization, selling, and writing copy. Good personality, initiative, reliable. Fine recommendations. Prefer live Real Estate town in Middle West. Record for new business. Adress Box C-859, Editor & Publisher.

Eastern Advertising Representative.
New York office established 1915. Exceptional personal service available. Favorable acquaintance among Eastern advertisers and advertising agencies. Will consider one additional publication. Box C-840, Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Capable of taking entire charge of news and editorial pages. Knows news and can write strong editorials; age 45; wide experience West, North and South; hard conscientious worker. Looking for opportunity to serve appreciative employer rather than fancy salary at the start. C-867, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Man.
Rewrite man, news executive, editorial writer, desk man, thirty-one, capable, experienced on leading dailies. C-842, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Man.
Newspaper man of twelve years' experience as reporter, copy-reader, head of universal desk and news editor, now employed, seeks position as slot man, news or managing editor of daily in southeast or south. Afternoon preferred. Married. C-855, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer.
Forceful writer, enthusiastic, tireless worker, thoroughly dependable, age 44; life-time of varied newspaper experience; 15 years New York City. Highest references and samples of work on request. Ready to go anywhere. C-866, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Evening Paper Only.
Desk head big morning paper wants managing or news editorship. Experienced news, make-up, city desks. Thirty-five, married. Michigan or Northern Ohio preferred. C-803, Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Newspaperman.
University graduate, prime of life, familiar with all departments—editorial, advertising, circulation, business management—would like to manage, or become connected with, small city daily. Highest recommendations. Box C-862, Editor & Publisher.

Farm Editor.
Agricultural College and School of Journalism graduate. Farm raised, city paper trained. Two years reporting and feature writing. Middle West preferred. Box C-853, Editor & Publisher.

General Manager-Publisher.
I know a newspaper doctor—a publisher of rare experience and proven successful record who has never become connected with a really successful newspaper and hsa never felt an unsuccessful one. His experience has been East, West and South. He is neither too young nor too old. He knows newspaper organization and operation as a human should. He gets the maximum out of the force and tools at hand. His character is established and leaders in each city where he has been publisher or manager will testify to his ability and his personality making lasting, worth-while impression on those communities. He has been owner or part owner of several newspapers—Morning, Evening, Sunday—but it is not absolutely essential to let him have a stock interest to get his services as publisher or general manager, though, having sold for associated owner the property he last brought to success, he wishes a connection as publisher or general manager with a bonus arrangement and merely nominal salary. He is no glad hand artist, but a man of education and refinement capable of making and holding real friends. His thorough experience and his personal integrity mark him as a worthy associate by other publishers. He is a Christian and is married. If you know where such a man is needed let me put you in touch with this man. Box C-875, Editor & Publisher.

A-1 Mechanical Superintendent.
Young, thoroughly practical man in all mechanical departments, with vision and planning in advance for any emergency in order to play safe always. Want connection where everyone else failed thus far to produce results. Will organize to get maximum production and also get organized labor to cooperate. Confidential treatment. Prefer corporation with several plants. Will consider interest. Address C-708, Editor & Publisher.

Publisher or General Manager.
I would like a connection in about sixty days as publisher or general manager of either morning, evening, or combination and Sunday newspaper, and would like to make appointmet for conference during A. N. P. A. meeting with owner who needs man of highest character, with proven successful career, who loves work and about whom, as an associate, he could feel absolutely satisfied in advance. Sale of my newspaper for profit causes me to seek a new location. I am willing to buy an interest or make a contract on salary and bonus basis. Address Box C-874, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter.
Graduate of School of Journalism and three years valuable experience. News direction and feature-writing tendencies. Thrive on hard work. Box C-852, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter.
The writer knows nothing about the publishing industry but does know that it is necessary at times to get interviews and that is not always easy. Some celebrities thrive on publicity, others do not approve of it. Those in the latter class and also criminals when they talk with a reporter who makes notes will shut up like a clam whereas a reporter who can get the gist of the interview without a note will always get more details. The writer knows one such whose ability is not appreciated where he is and has known him to write five and one-half columns on an address without his taking a note. If you can use such a man write George Donovan, 63 Hughes street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Rewrite Man or Reporter.
Five years' experience all branches editorial on New York City newspapers. Seeks similar position in Baltimore or Washington, D. C. territory. Age 24. Excellent recommendations. C-858, Editor & Publisher.

FOR SALE

Hoe Lightning Sextuple
48 PP. PRESS Good as new

Bought in 1918 and used less than one hour per day.
Equipped with complete modern stereotype outfit, all in fine order.
Printed the Evening Journal, Albany, New York, until consolidation.
Price many thousands below cost of new outfit.
Send for details and price.

Baker Sales Company
200 FIFTH AVE., NEW YORK CITY

Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer
350 MADISON AVE., NEW YORK CITY

Also in Journal plant, three Linotypes and a lot of other good equipment. Send for list.

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of
PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL
of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

COMBINATION TELEGRAPH, NEWS, MAKE-UP AND FINANCIAL EDITOR. After ten hours' intensive work nightly for over five years on morning paper, desires day work and opportunity to realize on broad foundation already laid. The paper, located in eastern city of 50,000, shows his clever make-up ideas. Age 32; Asking $45. Our No. 1679.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Situations Wanted

Superintendent or Foreman.
Of newspaper composing room wishes perm nent position with newspaper where efficien and good work is required; have had practic and executive experience in large and sm plants; in charge of one composing room ov twelve years. Arthur Heath, 108 Malve place, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Telegraph Editor.
Experienced man, now handling full wire port and also sports writer of some ability sires to make change. Single, 32 years o References. Prefer midwest location but v consider others. Address C-864, Editor & P lisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIE

Wanted.
Small evening paper Eastern Ohio or West Pennsylvania, by experienced newspaper m with sufficient capital to meet a substan cash payment. Address: Purchaser, C-844, c of Editor & Publisher, stating price; terr and important particulars.

SPECIAL EDITION

A Different Kind of Special Edition
For Southern publishers—the kind that cre permanent advertisers and increases revenue volume. Our organization is composed viewpoint. Southern Publicity Co., Box 18, trained newspaper men who know the publish Grange, Ga.

Help Wanted ads will be found on page 35.

NTERTYPE CORPORATION ELECTS

I. R. Swartz Again Named President —Directors Re-elected

The annual meeting of the stockholders f Intertype Corporation was held at the ffices of the Corporation, 50 Court treet, Brooklyn, on March 16th.

Messrs. Morgan J. O'Brien, Marsden . Perry and Richard H. Swartwout ere unanimously re-elected as directors f the Corporation for the ensuing term f three years.

President H. R. Swartz announced that he executive offices would move May 1 rom 50 Court street, Brooklyn, to 1440 Broadway, at 40th street, New York ity, but that the factory addresses in Brooklyn, N. Y., would remain unhanged.

At the meeting of the board of direcors on March 17, the following officers ere elected: President, H. R. Swartz; hairman board of directors, Richard H. Swartwout; vice-presidents, G. C. Willngs and C. W. Gaskell; treasurer, H. A. Grube; secretary, H. G. Willnus; assistant treasurer, H. Hardy; assistant ecretary, F. Hoffmann.

Changes on Washington Herald

Clifford Meredith has been promoted rom Sunday editor to news editor and it. Clair McKelway from reporter to assistant city editor of the Washington Herald. Meredith replaces Frederick Shapiro and McKelway, J. Harold Keen, oth of whom have become associated ith the Philadelphia Daily News, the ew tabloid about to be launched by Lee Ellmaker, former Washington correpondent and late secretary to Congressman William S. Vare, Philadelphia polician, who is reported to be financially nterested in it.

Cleveland Times in New Home

The Cleveland Times this week removed from the building which had housed it since its establishment to its own new home at Payne avenue and East 22nd street, issuing its first edition from the new edifice, March 24. The Times occupies the entire new building, with the business office, classified and circulation departments on the first floor and the editorial and mechanical departments on the second floor. The presses are in the basement. Coincident with the removal the Times bought and installed another 24-page Duplex press and five new linotypes, making 18 the paper is now using. The new building occupies a half block, fronting on Payne avenue.

More Room for Cleveland Press

The Cleveland Press has completed the addition to its building in East 9th street, and has begun publication partly from the annex. A battery of new linotypes, added press facilities and almost double the former space given over the publication are now being used.

Radio Plant for Madison Times

The Madison (Wis.) Capital Times is now erecting a broadcasting station, cooperating with the University Music Shop. Local talent will supply the programs. Madison has already one broadcasting station connected with the University of Wisconsin physics department.

Contracts Let for Hearst Hall

Contracts for the preliminary work on the new Hearst Hall at the University of California have been let. The building which will cost $1,000,000, a memorial to the late Phoebe A. Hearst, is being erected by William Randolph Hearst to replace the one destroyed by fire.

THE P's AND Q's OF ILLINOIS

PROSPEROUS

Illinois ranks third among all states in prosperity. It has a crop value of $864,737,833, while the value of manufactured products totals $3,250,000,000. The per capita wealth is $37.95, whereas the total wealth is $22,232,794,000.

PROGRESSIVE

Illinois has made rapid strides in all fields of endeavor. Within her boundaries is to be found the second largest city in the United States. The meat packing industry has grown to a stupendous degree—being now one of the greatest sources of revenue. Approximately 85% of her farm lands are improved.

QUANTITIVE

Illinois' showing in agricultural pursuits is amazing. She produces annually 290,000,000 bushels of corn, and 125,000,000 bushels of oats besides 65,000,000 bushels of wheat. There are 12,286 miles of railway within this state of 56,665 square miles and almost 7,000,000 people.

QUALITATIVE

Nowhere within the United States can be found newspapers possessing to a greater degree, high ideals, well stimulated interest, far-reaching influence, unquestioned prestige, and effective advertising. Use them regularly —as they are first-class, low-salaried salesmen.

		Circulation	Rates for 2,500 Lines	Rates for 10,000 Lines
*Aurora Beacon-News	(E)	17,408	.06	.06
*Chicago Herald & Examiner	(M)	348,005	.55	.55
*Chicago Herald & Examiner	(S)	1,018,917	1.10	1.10
Chicago Daily Journal	(E)	120,449	.26	.24
*La Salle Tribune	(E)	3,230	.025	.025
*Moline Disptach	(E)	10,680	.045	.045
*Monmouth Daily Review Atlas	(E)	5,314	.035	.035
*Peoria Star	(E) 29,197..(S)	22,236	.075	.06
*Rock Island Argus	(E)	10,605	.045	.045
*Sterling Gazette	(E)	5,734	.04	.04

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

ADDITIONAL CLASSIFIED

HELP WANTED

dvertising Solicitor Wanted.

ly national weekly newspaper with third of a illion circulation and very low milline rate. Must know agencies and large national adversers. Give experience, age and salary exected. No triflers or flashes, please. C-856, Editor & Publisher.

dvertising Manager.

or evening newspaper located in a prosperous anufacturing city in the East. The successful applicant must have a record as a trained xecutive, a person of imagination, a man who rives on accomplishment, and one who operates nly on a straightforward and honest policy. f you are such a man give full details of your ducation and experience, what you are earning ow, what salary and bonus arrangement would nterest you. A most attractive opportunity waits the right man. Apply C-836 Editor & ublisher.

anvassing Crew Manager.

n experienced result-producing house-to-house anvassing crew manager; one who knows the ock system of canvassing for daily and unday home delivered circulation in connecon with travel and pedestrian accident inurance. To the man who can qualify and roduce, the position would be permanent with orth while compensation with a well known ily and Sunday paper in a city of fine climate population more than 250,000. State exrience, give reference, and address C-870 o the Editor & Publisher.

assified Advertising Manager.

nusual opportunity for a man of unusual bility, on a newspaper of 50,000 circulation, ithin three hours of New York. Box C-837, ditor & Publisher.

Help Wanted

Circulation Managers.
Two ambitious circulation managers, must be over 30 years of age with experience in hiring and training canvassers. Further expansion of large circulation organization opens two desirable positions with earning possibilities of $2,600 to $5,000 per year. Answer with full particulars regarding last ten years' experience and references as to personal habits and character. Ernest A. Scholz, circulation director, Butterick Publishing Company, Butterick Building, New York City.

Lady Assistant Editor Wanted.
for society news-magazine. College trained; capable writer; must know society. Location, New York. Salary. Should prove genuine opportunity. Write fully in confidence. Box C-841, Editor & Publisher.

First Class Manager
for Department of Advertising of Select Monthly Magazine. Must be well acquainted with national field. $50 to start, with healthy bonus on producing the goods. Excellent, permanent future for right man. Give references, religious and fraternal connections, and enclose recent photograph. Box C-876, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Experienced women's page editor on afternoon daily near New York City. Write qualifications, salary expected. Box C-860, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Experienced circulation manager to handle circulation of approximately 10,000; within twenty-five miles of New York; must be sympathetic but efficient in the handling of boys and familiar with all details of circulation work. Situation open at once for permanent position. Address Box C-846, Editor & Publisher, stating experience and salary expected.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

"LOOK to the farmer for 1925 prosperity," President Woodin of the American Car & Foundry Co., counselled advertising men of New York this week at their club house.

And his advice applies to a great number of newspaper business offices.

The newspaper that gets country circulation, not on some poor make-shift edition, but with the best paper of the day, and then proceeds to sell that circulation to merchants who want the farmers' good dollar, is right in line with this advice.

"HOW Well Do You Know Kingston? Its Business Men and Merchants?" was the title of a double-page spread containing 21 individual advertisements run in the Kingston (Ont.) Standard recently. The space was sold in connection with a moving picture of Kingston business houses presented at a local theater. Prizes were offered to theater patrons for most complete identification of the firms.—W. L. B.

One St. Louis newspaper reprints three or four advertisements from its classified page on page 1 each day with a snappy editorial sermon in a little box on the efficacy of that particular kind of classified advertising.—David Resnick, St. Louis Times.

In line with the general overhauling and repairing that comes into each household in the Springtime, why not get up a page or a large group of display ads from watchmakers and repairers of watches and clocks, calling attention to the necessity for giving a Spring cleaning to the old clock, and regulating the inaccuracies of the recalcitrant wrist watch.—C. M. L.

"You get a lot of enjoyment out of the Star. Why not share that pleasure with a neighbor and at the same time get a copy of the latest motion picture fiction? If your neighbor is not a subscriber to the Star and will agree to take it for ten weeks, we will present you with any book of your choice from a wide selection." This plan has brought the paper a considerable number of permanent subscriptions, the kind the advertiser likes. —B. A. T.

Are you one of that numerous coterie of newspapers that have found that your readers relish fiction? Here's a plan that may increase the interest still further and increase circulation. At some regular period, preferably during December, print ballots in your newspaper giving readers an opportunity to vote their preferences from a list of fiction which you will be able to offer them during the succeeding year. The result of the ballot will solve your problem of which fiction to print, your readers will be better satisfied and your circulation will benefit.—F. T. H.

A field of advertising that is not fully exploited by many newspapers is the farm field. Moreover, every newspaper seeks new country subscribers. A farm page kills the two birds with one stone. —Henry R. Helsby, Olean (N. Y.) Times.

Immediately following April first, the one day on which more moving is done thany any other day of the year, why not have one or more pages of classified display advertisements of various firms that have moved, giving their old and their new addresses. Office buildings should prove a particularly good field by getting the cooperation of the building manager. Down the center of the page, all the firms advertising should be reclassified according to building under the two headings "Moved from Flatiron Building," and "Moved to Flatiron Building."—H. J. Ashe, Long Beach, Cal.

Now that state arbor days are upon us any paper can connect on that fact by preparing a feature story telling about the largest elm tree, the largest oak tree, the largest willow, and so on, in the community with pictures of the trees, the conjectures of the local botanists as to the age of the trees, "what was Podunk like when this tree was a sapling," and similar material. Almost every community has trees with some historical interest. Review some of the famous trees of history. Watch for tree planting ceremonies in your community. The paper can show a little enterprise and get some valuable publicity by furnishing a tree for each school to be planted with ceremony on the school grounds by some eminent official with the school children for an audience. Have your photographers on the job for each event.—F. D. H.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

MOST newspapers have run spasmodic or regular yarns on local history that have appealed tremendously to readers. This idea can be expanded upon by one of the older members of the staff and considerable interesting material collected for a series of articles by getting in touch with the state historical society, a huge storehouse of stuff of incalculable value to any paper in the state. Research in the society's files will uncover a lot of "scoops" and there are generally pictures galore that will bear reproduction.—F.D.H.

It is good business for a newspaper to enlist the interest of boys and girls. The Brownstown (Ind.) Banner gives all amateur basketball and baseball teams a scorebook on condition that they will send scores of all games to the newspaper. This plan has been in successful operation for three years and as a result the Banner runs a live sports page. And it is a weekly.—Norman J. Radder.

For the benefit of readers who miss the Sunday issue, the Cleveland Plain-Dealer prints a summary of Sunday's news each Monday under a box head, "Here's Another Chance to See Sunday's News," and with the following explanation: "The following leading news items from the Sunday Plain-Dealer are summarized for readers who did not see the Sunday edition." The summary is classified under "General," "Washington," and "Cleveland." —George Lemon Sugg.

Considerable public as well as private service is being done by the Milwaukee Journal this spring through its offer to the housewives of Milwaukee to aid them in their house cleaning. All the old junk that litters attics—dusty newspapers and books, discarded furniture, automobile tires, old stoves, aged Prince Albert coats, anything of that type—is being called for by Journal trucks and hauled to the Goodwill Industries, where it is refitted and reconditioned for further use by the poorer families of the city. Good fellowship and kind deeds are emphasized in the cleanup.—A. C. Regli.

Coach Stagg of Michigan says Americans are getting to be a "race of softies." Chance for Sunday feature based on interviews with local school coaches, gym instructors, physicians.—R. B.

The pull of Metropolitan weekly short stories is as steady and dependable as that of the locomotives of the 20th Century, the Broadway, the Overland or the Sunset Limiteds.

Selected, sure-fire fiction.

Big names.

Illustrations that catch the eye.

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.
150 Nassau Street, New York City

BY UNITED PRESS

AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

GUS and GUSSIE
By JACK LAIT

Great new daily comic strip will amuse millions. Don't watch it grow—grow with it!

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
241 W. 58th St. New York City

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.

4 page ready-print color comics.

Magazine Feature Pages.

Write for samples and rates

NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

Prunes and Prisms
By
Percival Prim,
The Perfect Speaker.

A Daily Lesson
in GRAMMAR
Written in Lilting Verse
for Old and Young
Write for Option
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

NO MARKET EVER OFFERED GREATER OPPORTUNITIES THAN THE SOUTH

A feature which makes a further increase in the purchasing power of the South is that the climatic and soil conditions are adapted to a greater variety of crops than in any other part of the United States.

The growing season is so long that there is no danger of crops being frozen, either in spring or fall, the grazing season is long, pasture land is excellent, large variety of forage crops can be grown, land values are increasing.

The South's resources in soil, timber, coal, iron ore, sulphur, oil and numerous other mineral deposits, give to this section a combination of advantages and ease of development unmatched elsewhere in any equal area on earth.

Another very great source of revenue in the South is the millions of dollars poured into the Southerners' pockets by the thousands of tourists who flock to the numerous playgrounds the whole year through.

The prospects are nowhere so promising for good returns on an advertising investment today, as in Southern newspapers, particularly those covering the states in this list.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
Birmingham News (E)	76,312	.18	.18
Birmingham News (S)	86,185	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item (E)	11,722	.05	.05
Mobile Register (M)	20,824	.07	.07
Mobile Register (S)	33,130	.085	.086
FLORIDA
Daytona Daily News (ES)	2,648	.035	.035
Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville (M&S)	37,564	.10(S.12)	.10(S.12)
Miami Herald (M)	23,125	.06	.06
Miami Herald (S)	27,921	.07	.07
Orlando Sentinel (M&S)	4,473	.035	.035
†St. Petersburg Independent (E)	6,007	.04	.04
Tampa Times (E)	15,176	.05	.05
Tampa Tribune (M&S)	30,444	.08(.09S)	.07(.08S)
GEORGIA
Augusta Herald (E)	15,095	.05	.05
Augusta Herald (S)	15,554	.05	.05
Macon Telegraph (M)	26,822	.07	.07
Macon Telegraph (S)	27,376	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,372 (S)	22,671	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
Lexington Leader (E)	19,395	.06	.06
Lexington Leader (S)	19,368	.05	.05
Paducah Sun (E)	8,616	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
†Asheville Citizen (M)	14,066	.055	.055
†Asheville Citizen (S)	14,540	.055	.055
Greensboro Daily News (M)	24,423	.07	.06

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
NORTH CAROLINA
Greensboro Daily News (S)	31,592	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (M)	29,921	.07	.07
Raleigh News and Observer (S)	33,403	.07	.07
Winston-Salem Sentinel (E)	14,855	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record (E)	16,107	.05	.05
Columbia Record (S)	15,907	.05	.05
Columbia State (M)	24,246	.07	.07
Columbia State (S)	24,442	.07	.07
Greenville News (M)	20,190	.065	.06
Spartanburg Journal (E)	3,940	.05	.05
Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,726 (S)	9,357
TENNESSEE
Chattanooga Times (M)	24,189	.08	.08
Chattanooga Times (S)	24,726	.08	.08
†Nashville Banner (E)	54,189	.11	.11
†Nashville Banner (S)	53,069	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee (M&E)	12,128	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)	7,184
Newport News Times-Herald (E)	7,326	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press (S&M)	5,622
Roanoke Times & World-News (M&E)	24,993	.07	.07
Roanoke Times (S)	16,894	.06	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader (E)	6,424	.035	.035

 A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

RIGHT AGAIN!

STUART P. WEST is receiving congratulations from every side for his splendid achievement in guiding his readers during the series of developments which have culminated in the present situation of the New York Stock Market.

Stuart P. West had the courage to go against the tide when during the last half of December, the first part of January and a part of February, he warned the public about over-speculation and the danger of rushing into buying at inflated levels.

When the skyrocketing started in New York, Mr. West said again and again that the "figures reached by individual stocks cannot possibly be justified on the grounds of earnings or dividend prospects." He declared that stocks were being forced ahead too fast and that the rise was getting beyond outside conditions. In the end, he said, "it is safe to say that this will demand its proper penalty."

This statement was made on the day when it took the Stock Exchange ticker forty-five minutes after the close of business to complete the full record of transactions, and when numerous stocks were selling 20 to 25 points above where they sold this very week.

Moral: Be sure that you have a reliable financial news in your newspaper. Nothing hurts the prestige of a financial page so much as to mislead the investor. The financial dispatches of the Consolidated Press are written by men who have had the training and background to know what they are writing about. They are not stampeded by surface developments.

It's a mark of reliability to have the Consolidated Press service in your paper.

The Consolidated Press Association

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

New York	Chicago	San Francisco	Paris
Eighth Floor	Fourth Floor	Third Floor	Fourth Floor
World Building	Daily News Building	Spreckels Building	19 Rue d'Antin

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
Not to be taken from this room

THIS ISSUE:—TAKING THE TRICKS OUT OF ADVERTISING.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Newspaper Advocate 1925

SUITE 1115 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.
Issued Every Saturday.

Vol. 57. No. 45 | NEW YORK, APRIL 4, 1925 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

That's Tellin' 'em in Chicago!

Advertising consists in telling potential buyers the alluring story of your merchandise.

Telling your story effectively—lining them up before your sales counters—means reaching them through a medium that they read with interest and confidence. And that medium is THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS.

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS is demonstrably the most effective sales medium in the vast and prosperous Chicago market. The proof of its effectiveness is in the fact that year after year it leads all other Chicago daily newspapers in the volume of display advertising carried.

BECAUSE IT PAID THEM advertisers bought 15,099,486 agate lines of advertising space in The Daily News in 1924—the greatest volume of display advertising ever published in any Chicago daily newspaper in any single year. The next highest lineage record for 1924 was 11,774,440 lines.

Behind this lies the great and responsive "character circulation" of The Daily News—400,000 daily average net paid—approximately 1,200,000 daily readers in the financially competent homes of Chicago and its near-by suburbs.

These are the buyers of this great market—and the medium that they look to for buying information and guidance is

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago.

THE BIG INFLUENCE IN THE BIG MARKET

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,628	.0275	.0175
*Boston Globe	(M&E)	274,892	.50	.50
*Boston Globe	(S)	322,030	.55	.55
Boston Transcript	(E)	34,990	.20	.20
*Boston Post	(M)	371,124	.60	.60
*Boston Post	(S)	351,527	.55	.55
*Fall River Herald	(E)	15,553	.05	.05
*Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	11,383	.055	.045
*Haverhill Gazette	(E)	15,400	.065	.05
†Lynn Item	(E)	16,345	.06	.04
†††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
*New Bedford Standard Mercury	(M&E)	33,883	.10	.10
*New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	26,944	.10	.10
*North Adams Transcript	(E)	9,491	.04	.035
*Salem News	(E)	20,784	.08	.07
*Taunton Gazette	(E)	8,479	.04	.03
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	86,049	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	49,849	.18	.15

MAINE—Population, 768,014

*Augusta Kennebec Journal	(M)	11,264	.05	.05
†Bangor Daily Commercial	(E)	14,750	.055	.05
*Portland Express	(E)	27,251	.10	.07
*Portland Telegram (Sunday Edition Express)	(S)	29,992	.10	.07

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

*Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,104	.0375	.025
†Keene Sentinel	(E)	3,609	.03	.034
*Manchester Union Leader	(M&E)	27,864	.09	.07

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

†Newport Daily News	(E)	6,249	.0336	.0296
†Pawtucket Times	(E)	25,555	.07	.07
†Providence Bulletin	(E)	64,524	.17	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(M)	36,686	.10	(B).23
*Providence Journal	(S)	61,575	.15	.15
*Providence News	(E)	26,845	.07	.07
†Providence Tribune	(E)	23,603	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun	(E&S)	4,618	.025	.025
*Woonsocket Call	(E)	13,580	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

*Barre Times	(E)	6,944	.03	.025
†Bennington Banner	(E)	3,067	.0125	.0125
*Burlington Free Press	(M)	12,983	.05	.05
*Rutland Herald	(M)	10,765	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,024	.0214	.015

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

*Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	45,795	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post	(S)	20,017	.10	.10
*Hartford Courant	(M)	37,649	.08	.08
Hartford Courant	(S)	50,247	.11	.11
†Hartford Times	(E)	48,875	.12	.12
*Meriden Record	(M)	7,348	.045	.03
*Middletown Press	(E)	8,050	.0325	.025
†New Haven Register	(E&S)	42,171	.12	.11
*New London Day	(E)	12,079	.06	.045
†††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,494	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour	(E)	5,842	.04	.04
†South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	4,280	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate	(E)	9,305	.05	.04
*Waterbury Republican American	(M&E)	22,836	.08	.08
*Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,043	.08	.08

 A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.

††† Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

* A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

Newspaper advertising is the cheapest and most effective means of creating sales in NEW ENGLAND.

Investigation will show that the rates of the newspapers listed above are today much lower per line per thousand than they were a quarter of a century ago. Results from advertising, however, are greater, and more wonderful today than at any previous time, due to the increased interest and confidence in advertising.

Daily, veritable miracles of advertising are taking place in these famous NEW ENGLAND newspapers. The use of proper copy for fairly-priced goods for sale at specified local outlets, will inevitably bring results that will well repay the small expenditure of money necessary for complete advertising coverage in NEW ENGLAND.

NEW ENGLAND

IS A TERRITORY OF WONDERFUL OPPORTUNITIES

An army--1000 strong!

¶ Ninety-two square miles there are in Greater Baltimore.

¶ One hundred and sixteen Sun Carrier Routes reach every block of those ninety-two square miles every weekday—and on Sundays, seven days a week the year around.

¶ It takes an army of a thousand to cover these routes as they should be covered and as they are covered! No carrier has more territory than he can attend to personally. No carrier is permitted to bite off more then he can chew.

¶ This insures regular, reliable, efficient delivery of the Sunpapers—Morning, Evening and Sunday—into the homes of Baltimore.

¶ The army of delivery is one thousand strong — and the papers they deliver are strongly entrenched in the esteem and the affection of all Baltimore, as the circulation figures show beyond a question of doubt.

Average Net Paid Circulation for March, 1925

Daily (M. & E.) . . .	248,663
Sunday	183,957

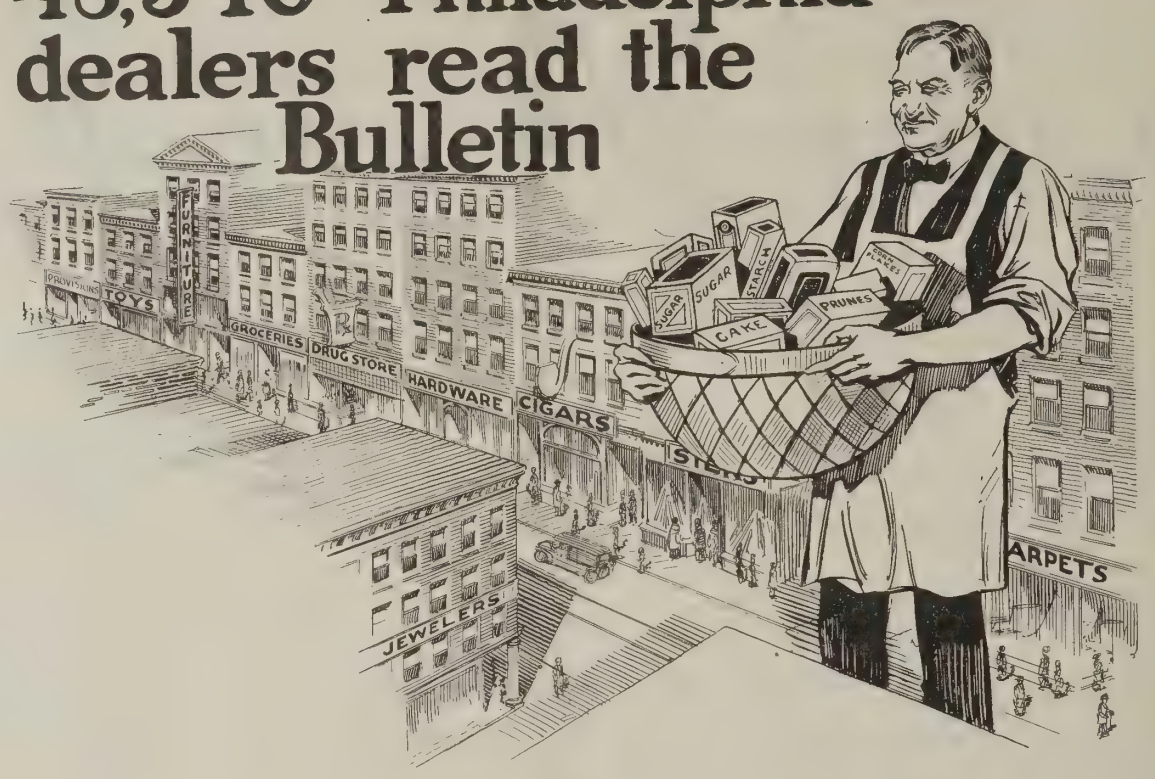
JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago



Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper;" They Say "SUNpaper"

48,346 Philadelphia dealers read the Bulletin

NATURALLY, Philadelphia's favorite paper is the paper trusted and believed in by the 43,339 retailers and 5,007 wholesalers who must be sold before Philadelphia can buy. A vast turnover has accrued to the advertisers who have recognized this fact and dominated both sides of the Philadelphia market in the paper nearly every Philadelphian reads.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The reader confidence enjoyed by The Evening Bulletin is attested by the fact that The Bulletin's circulation is the largest in Philadelphia and one of the largest in the United States.

The Bulletin goes into practically every home in and around the great city of Philadelphia and makes it possible to reach this huge market of nearly three million people — third largest in America—through one newspaper at one cost.

With a circulation of over half a million copies daily The Bulletin dominates Philadelphia.

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

518,357

Average Daily Net Circulation for Year Ending Dec. 31, 1924

(Copyright 1925, Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

ol. 57 NEW YORK, APRIL 4, 1925 No. 45

Half Century Vision Realized by Opening of Chicago Tribune's Tower Home

ig Daily Is Moved Without Hitch in Three Days—Ray Hahne of Purchasing Department in Charge—Unique Color System Used for Transfer

HE Chicago Tribune opened its new Tower building for business on Mondy, March 30, when after three days of tual moving and a week of extensive paration, the business departments, th two exceptions, were moved into the w structure on upper Michigan avenue. e transfer was effected with the rkable record of less than half an ur's delay in the work of these departnts, under the direction of the purchasg department, in charge of Mr. Ray hne.

The only two departments which are to main out of the Tower are the Want d office and the Public Service Bureau. ese will be kept at Dearborn and dison streets, in the Union Trust ilding, where under lease from the ion Trust Company, the Want Ad ice will stay for another half century.

The opening of the Tower, built after a 0,000 prize competition which attracted world's most renowned designers and hitects, is the materialization of a ion of fifty-seven years' standing, durg which time the newspaper has outgown two types of buildings.

The task of moving was a tremendous e, but was accomplished in three days, er twice as many days of preparation. e last article of furniture was set in its ce in the Tower at midnight on Sund, March 29, and the following morng the Tribune was prepared to carry on business just as regularly, but in a w home.

The telephone service was continued hout a moment's interruption, despite monstrous switching involved in the w board. The new switchboard in the wer was prepared, and twenty-eight n cut in all the lines. In the evening, h office had been furnished with a new se telephone directory.

The system which was worked out by purchasing department to effect the oval involved tags and charts, a system elaborate and detailed. Each floor s designated by a color, and corresding colored tags indicated what arles were to be moved to that particular r. For example, everything that was ged red was charted for the fifth r. In addition to the floor scheme, a tem of locations was worked out for h floor. These included stars, diads, circles, seals, crescents, and varied tags, indicating to the movers ctly where in the new building each n was to go. And each item in turn, h desk, with its corresponding chairs r files and other furniture were keyed a number series. The movers were plied with diagrams of the floors in Tower, with numbers of desks and tions marked. Large colored tags disks were placed in the building to the movers.

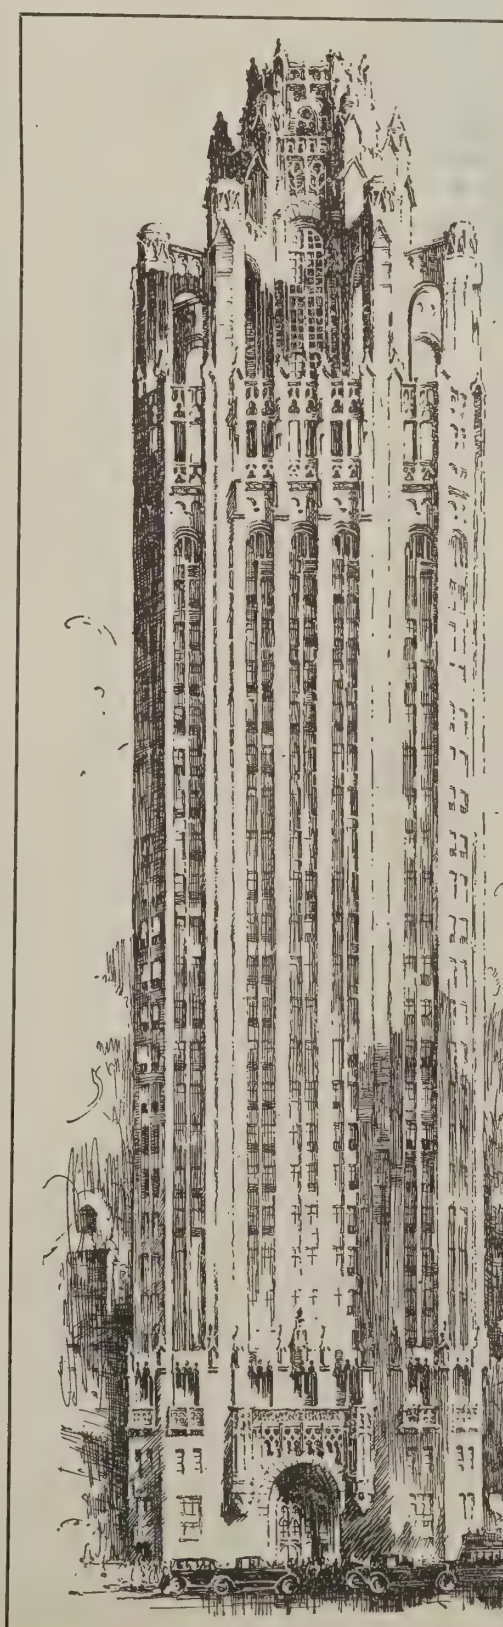
The task involved the employment of teen vans, working with seventy-five the entire period. Eight floors were d, and when the work was completed, Tribune gave the moving men and rers a special supper served by a rer.

the new building, the Tribune intends to occupy, in addition to the plant in the rear, five floors underground and fourteen floors above. The boiler room, the paper storage rooms, where print paper is received from freight cars from the northern forests and mills of the Tribune Company, and the pressrooms will occupy the lower floors. The machinery room and the mailing room for Liberty magazine are on the floor which reaches the level of the boulevard.

It is planned to rent the first and second floors to tenants. The composing room will occupy the third. On the fourth, will be the news departments, Sunday room, and the quarters of the syndicate features.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh are occupied by the auditors' and controllers' departments, while the eighth, ninth, and tenth, are the advertising floors. These floors, in addition to the twelfth, where the business manager, the real estate manager, traffic and purchasing departments, are located, and the eleventh, where Liberty will have its offices, are the sections of the Tower filled during the three days of moving.

The Tribune editors, editorial writers, and the library will be on the twenty-fourth floor. The Tower begins with the twenty-fifth floor, and on the thirty-second, John T. McCutcheon, eminent artist, will have his studio. The thirty-third floor will house the observation room.



The Tower is 456 feet above the upper level of Michigan avenue, while the flagstaff reaches 110 feet additional.

The floors from fifteen to twenty-four are to be rented, and seventy-five per cent of them have been leased already, according to the building managers.

The total space occupied by the Tribune in the Tower is 295,000 square feet, 115,000 feet more than the total area of the entire of the old building.

Perhaps one of the most remarkable features of the new home of the Tribune is the telephone system. A new 700 c. type automatic switchboard is expected to relieve the congestion on the Tribune's telephone wires. Seventy-five per cent of the work which was handled by girl operators will now go over its machine switching apparatus, leaving the girls to handle only incoming calls to the Tribune and Liberty Magazine. The transfer was made from the old system without an instance of trouble on any of the 150 trunk lines or 550 inside phones. The service is in charge of Miss Anna Garrow, chief operator.

In 1868, before the Chicago fire, the Tribune moved to what was considered a fine building at Madison and Dearborn streets. This was destroyed in the fire, and replaced with a finer building five stories higher. In 1901, the growth of the newspaper made another plant necessary, resulting in the erection of the Union Trust building, into which the Tribune moved on April 30, 1902 from temporary quarters in Market street. This was followed by the erection of the Plant on Michigan avenue, and then the Tower, units in Tribune square.

The tallest, and, many believe, the most beautiful newspaper building in the world, took its place this week as a full-fledged element in Chicago's skyline. "Tribune Tower," which adjoins the plant placed in operation three years ago, now houses practically all departments of the Chicago Tribune organization. Leading architects of the Americas and Europe competed for the prize awarded by the Tribune for the best design which was awarded to Howells and Wood, New York architects

FREDERICK ROY MARTIN RESIGNS AS A. P. GENERAL MANAGER

Quits Service April 21, After 4 Years in Present Position—Successor to Be Appointed by Board at Meeting April 22 in New York

FREDERICK ROY MARTIN, for four years general manager of the Associated Press, will resign effective April 21, it was announced in New York this week.

He will not make known his definite future plans until after that date, simply stating at this time that he resigns to be free to form other business connections.

A successor will be appointed by the board of directors at their meeting, scheduled for April 22.

President Frank B. Noyes, of Washington, on behalf of the Board expressed its regret at Mr. Martin's determination to retire and its appreciation of his "intelligent and unremitting devotion to the interests of the organization," explaining that Mr. Martin's continuance in his present position during the past year has been due to the President's earnest request.

Mr. Martin's letter to President Noyes is as follows:

"My dear Mr. Noyes: In accordance with views expressed to you a year ago and formally stated to the Board of Directors in January, I beg to present my resignation as general manager, to be effective after the next annual meeting of the members.

"While the satisfactions of the position are many, the sacrifices involved convince me that I owe it to my family and myself to be free to form other business connections.

"My withdrawal is accompanied by sincere regret at severing happiest association with directors, members and the staff. Particularly would I acknowledge the unfailing consideration shown me by Mr. Stone, both while I was for eight years his assistant and during the five years since he withdrew from active service.

"With assurances of high regard, I am

"Faithfully yours,

"FREDERICK ROY MARTIN."

President Noyes replied as follows on behalf of the Board of Directors:

"My dear Mr. Martin: I am in receipt of your letter stating that you wish your resignation to go into effect after the next annual meeting of the members.

"I have, of course, known of your decision to take this action for almost a year and, indeed, your continuance in your position for this time has been due to my earnest request.

"I am now, therefore, only making formal record of what I have said to you both personally and on behalf of the Board of Directors in January when they were made aware of your purpose. It is a matter of deep regret to us that you are convinced that your best interests make necessary this action on your part and the Board requested me, when I received formal notice of your desire, to express on its behalf its great appreciation of your intelligent and unremitting devotion to the interests of the organization in the years of your connection with it, and of its affectionate wishes for your fullest success in the new activities in which you will enter, in which expression you know, I am sure, that I heartily join.

"Very sincerely,

"FRANK B. NOYES."

In 1912, when editor of the Providence (R. I.) Journal, Mr. Martin was elected a director of the Associated Press. That same year he retired from the board to become assistant general manager. In 1920 he served a year as acting general manager, and succeeded Melville E. Stone as general manager the next year.

When the World War was declared in 1914, Mr. Martin as assistant general manager went to London for the Associated Press, taking in person a large sum in gold to make certain A. P. coverage in the war zone. He expected to remain only a few weeks, but actually stayed upwards of 18 months visiting Berlin, Paris, Rome and other European capitals.

During his term as general manager, he has always been particularly interested in the A. P. personnel, particularly abroad, making numerous trips to Europe and one trip to South America.

Frederick Roy Martin

The biggest development of the A. P. in the past four years has been the greatly increased market and sports service, resulting in extensive expansion of the press association's wire services. Three years ago double wire circuits were extended to the Coast, through the South, and to the South West.

SHAFFER EXONERATED

Held Free of All Blame in Teapot Dome Oil Lease Case

John C. Shaffer, publisher of the Chicago Evening Post and the Shaffer group of newspapers, was exonerated of all blame in the Teapot Dome case in the lease annulment suit heard at Cheyenne, Wyo., closed recently.

Owen J. Roberts, counsel for the government, declared to Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy that "Mr. Shaffer is not at all to be blamed."

"He had expended a large sum in the development of property adjacent to Teapot Dome," he said, "and he was the holder of placer mining claims to land on the Dome itself, on or about March 1, 1923. Mr. Shaffer asked Secretary Fall for land on Teapot Dome, and March 20 he renewed his request. There was no secrecy in connection with any of his dealings."

COAST UTILITY STARTS DRIVE

Pacific Electric Railway Placing Copy in Cities on Its Lines

D. W. Pontius, vice-president and general manager of the Pacific Electric Railway, has announced that that corporation is now launching what he believes to be one of the largest advertising campaigns ever put on by a public utility in California through the medium of newspapers.

The campaign consists of a series of advertisements to appear daily in the newspapers of Los Angeles and all cities located on the lines of the company. Following this series will be weekly advertisements appearing over a period of six months. The appropriation made to cover this special campaign is in addition to the regular yearly expenditure by the Pacific Electric of about $50,000 for advertising in newspapers.

Chicago Advertising Agency Moves

Carpenter & Co., national advertising representatives, have moved from the Peoples Gas Building in Chicago, to the Tribune Tower.

TO AWARD PULITZE PRIZES APRIL 20

Members of American Society Newspaper Editors Serve on Jury —Increased Interest Reported this Year

The Pulitzer Prizes in Journalism w be awarded April 20 at a meeting of t Advisory Board of the School of Jour alism, Columbia University, New Yor it was announced this week. The priz provided for under the will of Jose Pulitzer, late owner of the New Yo World, at the commencement exercis June 3.

This year, for the first time, membe of the American Society of Newspap Editors, chosen by President Casper Yost, served on the juries which pass the submissions for the prizes in journa ism and make the recommendations which the advisory Board makes its fi selections.

The men from the Society were Har M. Crist, managing editor of the Broo lyn Eagle, Maurice S. Sherman, editor the Springfield (Mass.) Union, a Frank E. Gannett, publisher of t Rochester (N. Y.) Times-Union and t Elmira Advertiser. As representatives the faculty of Columbia College, De Herbert E. Hawkes and Ashley Thorndike, professor of English serve while from the faculty of the School Journalism were Director John W. Cu liffe, Prof. Roscoe C. E. Brown, Pr Walter B. Pitkin, Prof. Charles Cooper, Prof. Allen S. Will, Henry Sackett and W. P. Beazell, assistant ma aging editor of the New York World.

An increased number of submissio was considered this year, as a result systematic notification of the newspap of the country and the service of Jero Landfield as executive secretary of Advisory Board, recently appointed the purpose of making the competiti more truly representative of the achie ments of American journalism.

BROADCASTING PLAN NIPPED

Geneva Corps Protests Radiocasti League of Nations Deliberations

PARIS, March 20.—A project to bro cast deliberations of the League of tions at Geneva has been nipped in bud by the Association of Journal Accredited to the League of Nations.

An enterprising person approached Secretariat of the League with a propo to install microphones at the council ta so that wireless amateurs the world o might listen to the weighty deliberati of the wise men at Geneva. The ten ing suggestion was accompanied by ass ance not only of a most wonderful pro ganda but of a share in revenue wh the idea would produce. Listeners-in was found, were to be treated also t daily talk summarizing the work of League.

When the Committee of Journalists credited to the League of Nations lear of this they at once filed a protest v the director of the section of informat pointing out that not only would suc wireless service prejudice the interest professional journalists and the org they represented, but that it could h grave political inconveniences. Who, instance, asks L'Opinion, which pr the news, could guarantee that the hol of the broadcasting concession would give a particular color or bias to event their daily summary according to t nationality or their interests.

No decision has yet been taken, L'Opinion warns the Press of the w to be on its guard against the granting such a broadcasting concession.

Coloroto Corporation Changes Na

The Coloroto Corporation, publish of Liberty Magazine, has changed name to Liberty Weekly, Inc., accord to a recent announcement.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH LOSES SUIT TO CHANGE TEXAS NAMESAKE'S TITLE

No Unfair Competition by Houston Paper in Using Names of Consolidated Units, Federal Judge Holds—Appeal Will Be Taken

HOUSTON, TEX., March 31.—U. S. Judge Hutcheson of the Southern district of Texas has ruled that the Houston Post-Dispatch has not infringed upon the trade-mark of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Hutcheson's ruling was brought about through a suit filed by the Pulitzer Publishing Company against the Houston Printing Company seeking an injunction in Federal Court to prevent the Houston concern from using the name "Post Dispatch."

Attorneys for the St. Louis newspaper will carry the case to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals at New Orleans, and, if that the use of the name "Post-Dispatch" court's decision, will carry it to the Supreme Court.

Judge Hutcheson's decision denies the Pulitzer Company an injunction. The Pulitzer Company in its petition alleged that the use of the name "Post-Dispatch" by the Houston Printing Company materially affected its circulation in Texas, that the name was a trade-mark which had been copyrighted and that the certificate of registration had been issued on March 15, 1924, whereas, the Houston Post-Dispatch did not come into existence until Aug. 1, 1924.

In its answer the Houston Printing Co. declared that when the Dispatch took over the Post on Aug. 1, 1924, the combined name of the two papers "Post-Dispatch" was adopted in order to conserve the good-will that had been established by both publications, that the words "Post-Dispatch" were Publici Juris and could not be appropriated as a valid trade mark, that there is no competition between the St. Louis publication and the Houston paper and that the two names are clearly and easily distinguishable.

The complainant alleged that it had spent $175,000 in advertising its name during the past five years and its name was now being confused by news dealers owing to similarity.

The evidence for the Houston Post-Dispatch developed that the combined name was adopted merely as a way of maintaining good will established by both the Dispatch and the Post and with no idea of reaping any benefit from the publicity given the name of the Pulitzer Publishing Company's paper, that it was practically the universal custom upon the consolidation of two newspapers to use the combination of the names, that practically one out of every 14 papers in the U. S. used either the name "Post" or "Dispatch," that the name "Post" has been used as a newspaper name as far back as 1643.

The evidence also showed that 90 per cent of the Houston Post-Dispatch circulation is confined to an area of fifty miles from Houston.

Judge Hutcheson in summing up the case declared that no unfair competition had been shown as a result of the use of the name by the Houston Post-Dispatch.

ADVERTISING CLUB APPLAUDS FIGHTING EDITOR

arl Magee Tells New Yorkers Ideals Behind Successful Newspaper Battle in Albuquerque Against Corrupt Government and Judicial Tyranny

EW YORK met Carl C. Magee, fighting editor of the Southwest, s week and liked him. The editor New Mexico State Tribune, who gal-tly defeated the infamous principle t a state judge might sit in unchecked wer and silence a newspaper's honest icisms of governmental evils, was ored on Wednesday when several dred members of the Advertising b of New York attended a noon-day cheon in his honor. On Friday eve-g Roy W. Howard gave a dinner at Lotus Club for Mr. Magee whose spaper fortunes were rescued during bitterest hours of his fight in New xico by financial aid by the Scripps-ward newspaper organization.

n his address at the Advertising Club New Mexico editor outlined the mor-and political principles which have nated his free press fight and de-ed that "no one is safe unless all are e under our institutions." He ex-ssed a passionate belief in democracy.

arl C. Magee's story is an epic in erican journalism. He is an interest-survival of the American editor who les in the open for principled objects. believes that "personal journalism" serve as good purposes today as in t generations. For 20 years he was ractising attorney. Owing to the ill-lth of Mrs. Magee he left Tulsa, ahoma, for Albuquerque, N. M., five years ago satisfied a life-long ition to enter the newspaper field.

Ie bought the Albuquerque Journal n Albert B. Fall and associates for 5,000. In Oklahoma Magee had been epublican, and regular in his party af-tions. He says that he entered the w Mexico field with respect for Fall his party.

man of fifty, tall, keen, gray tem-ll, and very active, Magee began writ-editorials which were at first ordi-y, but soon began to take on indi-iality. He made an intensive study governmental conditions in his state wrote about them. He also began ear rumors and investigate them and sently, he says, he discovered condi-ns which cried to heaven for correc-n.

Iagee began to speak plainly in his er. Politicians advised him to "lay f" According to Magee, he was vis-by Fall, and given more violent ad-nition of the same nature. The at-cs in his paper became more regular effective.

Iagee began to use the sledge hammer his editorials. He was convincingly ere. He developed a way of meeting unter attack by anticipating it. He kly admitted mistakes when he made n and got the jump on his opponents. never once allowed them to place him the defensive, and he steadily and ly began to win reader support.

he Journal attained a top circulation 8,700 and along with the assets Magee ed a creditable number of powerful nies who began to work. Suddenly 921 the bottom fell out of the Okla-a oil business and the investments Magee in that section became tem-arily worthless. He had ordered a $40,000 press. The press arrived ultaneously with the fact that re-al dates on notes for the purchase the Journal would not be renewed. help was coming from New Mexico kers. Then Magee turned to the ple.

he state was then in the throes of a ific slump in the live stock industry. in two months, Magee, against the osition of practically every big politi-and financial interest in the state, ed $60,000 in a bond sale. The Jour-was saved temporarily. Later he was ed to give it up. He had paid $115,-for it; he sold it under pressure for 0,000.

"It is silly to think that a newspaper editor can be silenced by political corruptionists for very long if he means business."—CARL C. MAGEE.

Going three doors up the street, Magee started a weekly. In a month it had 6,000 subscribers. Later it was turned into the daily New Mexico State Tribune. He continued to hammer. He made definite accusations against state officials. He accused several of theft. He named names. He asked for a court trial to give him a chance to present his evidence. Among other things he bitterly attacked what he called the "unholy alliance" of the courts and a certain political party in San Miguel county. He bade Judge D. J. Leahy get out of politics and tend to his court. The stage was now set for round two.

A bank failed in Santa Fe and among the losses were the monies of the State Supreme Court held in the account of the clerk of court, Jose Sena. By law, all state monies were required to be turned over to the state treasurer every 24 hours. This had never been done by Sena, and Magee demanded an explanation. He asked that Sena be investigated. Incidentally he said: "I call the case to the attention of Judges Bratton and Botts. Judge Parker is too accustomed to old methods to give it notice."

Magee was arrested for libel. He was not tried for direct charges about Sena but for the words about Judge Parker. Was he to be tried in his home county of Bernalillo? Was he to be tried in Judge Parker's home county in Santa Fe? He was to be tried in the distant county of San Miguel before Judge D. J. Leahy. Was he to be prosecuted by the regular district attorney? No, by "friends of the court," before Supreme Court Judge Roberts and former Attorney General Askren, bitter Magee enemies. The twelve men of the jury were Spanish-Americans, none of whom could read or write English. Judge Parker as a witness for the defense testified he had not asked that the action be brought, did not think it should have been brought, did not consider Magee's words libelous.

Magee refused to be railroaded, as he said half a dozen editors before him had been in Leahy's court. He began to write. As he wrote he was cited for contempt. The state was aroused. When he was sentenced on many and divers charges, Governor Hinkle pardoned him immediately, declaring the proceeding a "blot on the state name."

Magee was tried later in Santa Fe county before Judge Holleman for alleged libel before former Judge Roberts, one of his San Miguel prosecuters. In this case Magee was clearly in the wrong, said so and apologized. He wrote nothing about the case, made no attempt to influence public opinion, stood trial and was acquitted although the judge virtually had instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of "guilty."

Magee was after bigger game now. He got on the trail of Albert B. Fall's prosperity following his resignation from Harding's cabinet. What Magee found in this regard was turned over to Senator Walsh when he inaugurated the Teapot Dome investigation.

There was a contempt of court case still lingering in Judge Leahy's court and it was tried on July 18, 1924. Magee refused to plead, listened to an hour's denunciation from Judge Leahy in which he was compared unfavorably with a "horse thief," a "train robber," and "skunk." He was sentenced to three months in San Miguel jail and was remanded there without delay. A pardon from Governor Hinkle was not recognized by Sheriff Delgado. An irate crowd in Las Vegas, Leahy's home town begged to be allowed to take Magee from jail. Adjutant General Skipwith asked permission of Governor Hinkle to call state militia to remove Magee forcibly from the hands of Sheriff Delgado. Magee personally stopped all action, remained in jail three days and was released on habeas corpus proceedings before the supreme court.

When Judge Leahy came up for re-election several months later Magee stumped the district and drove the judge out of public life and broke an ironclad political machine.

Twice Magee has been "beaten up" by younger and heavier men. Once he was manhandled in the halls of the state capitol while grinning state employees looked on, and his own eleven year old daughter screamed and tried to help her father before a crowd entirely hostile.

"I have never written anything in anger," said Magee to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, this week. "My policy has been to try to think out a problem and decide a policy and then go through with it, depending upon the public to finally accept it. If I go wrong I shall be prompt to say so. I think that one of the silliest things that newspapers do is attempt to pussy-foot on retractions. When the public understands that you are prompt to correct your errors they naturally accept your facts.

"I have had no axe to grind in New Mexico. I am not seeking any public office. What I have been trying to get over in the state is the simple, fundamental, democratic fact that public office is a public trust and not a private snap. If American institutions are to succeed in the large sense there must be absolute security for every man at the bar of justice and the officials of government must administer office honestly and efficiently for all of the people. It is silly to think that a newspaper editor can be silenced by political corruptionists in this country for very long if he means business. It is a fight that cannot be lost if it is fearlessly waged on principle. The people are the final court. They are true. They need only be made to understand the truth. Our paper, from small beginnings, now has in excess of 10,000 circulation, by far the largest in the state. We have had embarrassments in getting advertising, to be sure, owing to pressure from political interests, but the worst of all that is now behind us. Our work is soundly appreciated by business men and the paper is on a satisfactory basis. It works out all right."

Magee is far from being a wild-eyed reformer. He plays no ism, but he does not prevent those who have radical theories from getting space in his paper. "There was a Socialist in our town who took the attitude of a martyr because he said he could not get any paper in town to use his stuff," he said. "I told him I would print his communications and he sent two or three in to me. I printed them and answered them. He found that when he had an opportunity to speak in print he had nothing much to say and that ended it. There is a sound journalistic principle in that incident, I believe."

Magee was asked to relate how he proceeded to get the material which precipitated the Teapot Dome scandals and revealed the interesting fact that they were originally the sheerest rumors concerning the remarkable and sudden prosperity of former Secretary of the Interior Fall.

From slight indications the story grew to the tremendous proportions of a Senate investigation and prosecution.

DRY SQUAD CATCHES A TARTAR

City Aroused When Portland Oregonian Man's Home Is Raided by Mistake

A police raid, staged at the home of David Foulkes, mechanical superintendent of the Portland Oregonian, has stirred up a hornet's nest in that city. The raid was made in search of a still after a police informer became confused and designated the Foulkes' home as one in which he saw moon-shining in progress.

Plain clothes policemen forced an entrance and slugged David Foulkes, Jr., a student of the University of Oregon. They later admitted that the entire raid was a mistake. It was made without warrant and has caused a loud protest from Portland citizens who are demanding that the sanctity of the home be recognized by the police.

The Foulkes family has lived more than 20 years in the house that was raided. Mr. and Mrs. Foulkes have been widely known in Portland for church work and their active support of moral betterment in the city.

Newswriters School Fails

William A. Heacock, who has been operating the National Press Bureau and the Newswriters Training Bureau with offices in Buffalo filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition on March 31. Mr. Heacock listed liabilities of $18,070.70 and assets of $115.06. The liabilities consist largely of sums owed to newspapers for advertising the service offered by the press and newswriters' bureaus. The firm offered a mail course of training for those aspiring to be newswriters.

Florida Ad Men to Meet April 20

Delegates from all Florida advertising clubs will meet in Orlando, Fla., April 20, to discuss means of bringing the next convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to St. Petersburg.

NEW YORK AD MEN BOOM WOODBRIDGE FOR A. A. C. W. PRESIDENCY

Nominated by Harry Tipper to Succeed Lou Holland, Who Declines Fourth Term — Jardine Accepts Invitation to Speak

A BOOM was launched by the Advertising Club of New York this week to elect C. K. Woodbridge, president of the Dictaphone Corporation, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at the Houston convention, May 9-14.

Mr. Woodbridge was nominated by Harry Tipper, of the Class Journal Company, at a special meeting at the club March 30, and seconded by Grover Whalen.

Lou E. Holland, present president, has definitely announced he will not accept a fourth term.

Other candidates who have been mentioned for the office are Rowe Stewart, vice-president and general manager of the Philadelphia Record, and past A. A. C. W. president, and E. T. Meredith of Des Moines, publisher of Successful Farming and other publications.

Mr. Woodbridge is at present chairman of the general program committee, preparing for the Houston meet.

He made several important announcements regarding the program this week. They were:

Change in date and name of the Pan-American Trade Development Conference, which is to be part of this year's meeting. Originally set for May 15, the conference, which has grown to such importance in preparation, will now be known as the International Trade Conference and will be held May 12 and May 13.

Acceptance by William M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, of an invitation to address the opening business session May 11.

Detailed program of the Public Utilities Advertising Association, a department of the A. A. C. W.

In nominating Mr. Woodbridge as a candidate for the A. A. C. W. presidency, Mr. Tipper pointed out it has been a good many years since there has been a candidate from New York.

"We wish to be sure we will be fortunate in the successor to Mr. Holland," he said. "Not one of us in the association can allow any steps to be taken which might lead to inept leadership.

"It is well to act early so as to avoid confusion and so that the decision will not be made without due consideration and therefore be made unwisely."

Mr. Tipper moved that the New York delegates be instructed to cast their ballots for Mr. Woodbridge unanimously and the motion was carried.

In a speech of acceptance, Mr. Woodbridge paid tribute to Mr. Holland.

"No one had done more or sacrificed as much as he has," he said. "He has established an organization that will carry on."

Backing Mr. Woodbridge's campaign are Frederick Hume, secretary of the National Publishers Association and Gilbert Hodges of the Munsey publications.

Meanwhile, the program committee Mr. Woodbridge heads is rapidly completing final details of the Houston convention.

The biggest news announcement this week concerned the International Trade Conference. Co-operating with Mr. Woodbridge in planning for the conference are W. G. Hildebrand, president of the Gotham Advertising Agency, New York, and S. S. Coppe, special representative for Mexican and South American newspapers, with headquarters in New York.

Speakers already named to address the conference include Dr. Julius Klein, director of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, United States Department of Commerce; Senor Manuel C. Tellez, new Mexican Ambassador to Washington; L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union; and Judge E. B. Parker, of Houston and Washington.

The program of the Public Utilities Advertisers Association follows in full:

Tuesday Afternoon

President's Address:

E. Paul Young, Illinois Power and Light Corporation, Chicago, "Costs and Results;" I. M. Tuteur, McJunkin Advertising Company, Chicago, "Better Copy;" Discussion, led by Labert St. Clair, American Electric Railway Association, New York; Edward J. Cooney, Lowell, Mass.; "Interesting Facts about the Exhibit;" Dana H. Howard, Commonwealth Edison Company, Chicago, "Membership Campaign Results;" Donald M. Mackie, Consumers Power Company, Jackson, Mich., "The Association Bulletin;" Leonard Ormerod, Bell Telephone Company, Philadelphia, "Employment Opportunities."

Wednesday Morning

P. C. Staples, Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, "Keeping the Organization Abreast of It's Advertising"; C. R. Winters, Central Advertising Agency, Wichita, Kan., and George Ade Davis, Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company, Oklahoma City, discussing the agency and the direct advertising sides of the question, "Relation of Advertising Agency to Public Utility Advertising."

Marshall E. Sampsell, Illinois Public Service Company, Chicago, "The Use of Motion Pictures by Public Utilities;" J. C. Jordan, Pacific Gas and Electric Company, San Francisco, George McQuaid, Texas Public Utility Information Bureau, Dallas, and B. J. Mullaney, People's Gas, Light and Coke Company, Chicago, "Good Will and Institutional Advertising."

W. H. Hodge, Byllesby Engineering and Management Corporation, Chicago, is president of the Association. Frank L. Blanchard, Cities Service Company, New York, is in charge of the program for the two meetings.

The American Photo-Engravers Association also announced its program.

E. W. Houser, Chicago, is chairman of the department, and E. C. Miller, Chicago, is in charge of the program. Among the speakers will be Lou E. Holland, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and head of the Holland Engraving Company, Kansas City.

The program follows:

C. A. Stinson, president, Gatchel & Manning, Inc., Philadelphia, "The American Photo-Engravers Association's Contribution to Modern Advertising"; J. J. Walden, president, Southwestern Engraving Company, Ft. Worth, "The Development of the Great Southwest Through the Aid of Pictures"; Edward Epstean, Walker Engraving Company, New York, "The Photo-Engraving Process" (Illustrated); O. F. Kwett, president, Northern Engraving Company, Canton, O., "Pictures as an Aid to Distribution of the World's Goods"; Lou E. Holland, "Harnessing the Power of Pictures in Advertising"; H. C. Campbell, president Western Engraving and Colortype Company, Seattle, "Your Story in Pictures Leaves Nothing Untold"; Addresses by President Houser and by Louis Flader, Chicago, commissioner of the Photo-Engravers department.

EDITORS DIVIDED ON BILL

Wisconsin Measure Makes Printing of Assualt Victim's Name a Crime

A bill, now before the assembly of the Wisconsin legislature, will make it a crime for a newspaper to publish the name of any woman who had been the victim of criminal assault. The maximum punishment for its violation will be a year in jail or $500 or both.

While some editors here are defending the bill, declaring that, while no honest publisher should want to ruin the reputation of a woman who had suffered through no fault of her own and while there is no reason why he should be permitted to do so, still other publishers oppose the bill, maintaining that it would open the door to blackmail.

Secure from publicity, a designing and mercenary woman, they claim, would find nothing to restrain her from pursuing an income in this illegitimate manner.

The latter publishers are urging that the proposed law be amended in such a manner to provide secrecy concerning the names of women in such cases in criminal proceedings, with a proviso that in civil suits growing out of such alleged offenses the names of women involved may legally be published.

What makes a skinny girl madder than a bathing party?—Columbia Record.

OLD IRONSIDES ON THE JOB

What would a baseball season be without "Bill" Ironson, veteran International Newsreel photographer? He is seen overhauling his cameras preparing for the opening games.

A. D. LASKER DEFENDS AGENCY SYSTEM

But President of Lord & Thomas Attacks Intensive Research Into Advertisers' Business — Upholds Test of Copy Power

"Advertising agents are receiving too much credit and yet their real force is underestimated."

Around this paradox, Albert D. Lasker president of Lord & Thomas, advertising agency, and former chairman of the United States Shipping Board, built up a defence of the modern agency system and at the same time attacked the prevalent agency practice of extensive research into the business of an advertiser.

He was speaking at the Advertising Club of New York on March 27, at a meeting of the Newspaper Division, of which Edwin S. Friendly, business manager of the New York Sun, is chairman.

"Advertising agencies aid advertisers to reach markets more quickly and at less loss in investment than would otherwise be possible," he said.

"But I see a danger of expecting too much from advertising. I don't believe any agent ever won success for an advertiser who didn't have within his own business the elements of success.

"I believe in research. There is no cause, however, for an agency to become a super-advertising manager or a super sales manager.

"The agency system today is sound. Yet in some quarters there is a tendency to consider results insufficient, and vast investigations of advertisers' businesses are made, leading many to expect impossible miracles from the agent.

"Agency research work should be concerned with the study of trade conditions, the pulling power of copy, and the desires of the consumer. Let us keep within the confines of our own business."

Mr. Lasker began his address by discussing the changes which have occurred in advertising since he entered the business with Lord & Thomas in Chicago in 1898.

"In those days the average banker was prejudiced against a manufacturer who advertised his wares. Advertising was not understood; it lacked general confidence; and became, therefore, the tool of the fraud and the faker.

"Today all that is different. If there is anything today that makes the agency business hard, it is that there is too much good advertising.

"There is a return, it seems, now to the old-fashioned testimonial advertising. But today, even this is done with respectability."

HERALD TRIBUNE MAN DIES

James V. Linck, Assistant Telegraph Editor, Succumbs to Operation

James Volney Linck, 47, assistant telegraph editor of the New York Herald Tribune, died Wednesday morning, April 1, at the French Hospital, New York following an operation. Funeral services were held Friday at the home of a sister in Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. Linck came to the New York Tribune in 1920. In 1922 he left the staff to become head of the copy desk on the New York Herald, returning to the Tribune as assistant telegraph editor when the Herald and the Tribune were consolidated in 1924.

He began newspaper work at 17 as a reporter on the Columbia (Tenn.) Democrat. During his newspaper career he worked at various times on the Chattanooga Times, Memphis News-Scimitar, New Orleans Times-Picayune, St. Louis Globe Democrat and St. Louis Republic, on the latter two papers as sports editor and night editor respectively.

When the United States entered the World War, although he was above draft age, he enlisted in the army and was sent to the first officers' training camp. He received a commission and saw service overseas. On his return he re-entered newspaper work.

TAKING THE TRICKS OUT OF ADVERTISING

How One Newspaper Adds Business to Its Columns by Rigidly Enforcing Strict Censorship Rules—Personal Call Method Employed by New York Sun

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

"ADVERTISING is not a trick; if properly prepared it is the best-known salesman."

This sentence, with its important proviso, appears on the censorship regulations for radio advertising, prepared by the New York Sun, under the direction of Edwin S. Friendly, business manager.

Taking the tricks out of advertising has now become a big part of present day newspaper making. An increasing number of newspapers in this country have established rigid advertising censorship rules, which, they claim, are strictly enforced.

I wanted to see how this promised enforcement was accomplished, and, since the Sun had recently drawn up ten stringent rules for its radio advertising, I called on that office this week and followed the censorship process through from beginning to end.

It was like attending a concentrated course in modern advertising. Together with H. L. Goldman, classified advertising manager, and C. F. Colborn, assistant advertising manager of the censorship committee, I traced down complaints, heard arguments presented, and saw merchants won over, to the plausibility of the trite, simple truth that "honesty is the best policy"—that advertising, properly prepared, is the best-known salesman. I found a pragmatic personal call method, which, its backers declared, added business to the Sun columns, instead of ruling it out.

Mr. Colborn has become, in addition to his other duties on the Sun, a sort of advertising professor for radio dealers of New York. His business is to call on merchants who attempt to mislead and teach them the right way to present their message to possible prospects, to tell them it is to their advantage to take the tricks out of advertising and make their copy an honest, dependable salesman.

I went out with him to call on several merchants who needed this schooling. He talked to them in a direct and forceful manner. The arguments he used may be summed up briefly.

"There is nothing so damning or dangerous as misleading advertising," he told one man.

"It stings the customer. It is injurious to you, because you get a bad reputation, and it hurts the newspaper. We three, you, the customer, and the Sun, are in business together. It is best to be friends."

"Why," the merchant wanted to know, "does it hurt my business"? He had attempted to advertise a radio appliance, which, upon investigation, proved unreliable.

Mr. Colborn answered his question and the merchant was brought around to the newspaper point of view.

"A dissatisfied customer," Mr. Colborn said, "is a bad advertisement, an advertisement that is given free, wide, and powerful circulation."

Before following this educational process of the Sun's censorship department through, I first discussed the fundamentals behind the idea with Mr. Colborn.

"Perhaps no other advertiser is so prone to tricks today as the radio store," he said.

"Radio is so new an industry that many of those in it are inexperienced in advertising. The radio public has become dazed. They have been 'gypped' so often many don't know where to go for reliable radio merchandise.

"Many radio merchants feel they must resort to tricks to bring people into their stores. Competition is keen.

"They advertise bargain prices on some appliance and when people come to the store to inquire for it, they say they are all out of that particular piece and try to sell them something else.

"Such a practice is as damaging to the newspaper as it is to the advertiser.

"On the Sun we had drawn up rules for other advertising, but we needed new ones to curb the misleading statements of the radio men.

"From complaints we received from readers, we drew up a set of ten regulations for radio advertisements."

The rules, as prepared for distribution among agencies and advertisers, follow:

1. Fraudulent or misleading advertisements are not accepted.
2. A sufficient supply of the article advertised must be on hand to satisfy a reasonable demand. When only a limited number of the article advertised is on hand the advertisement must say so, or give the number to be placed on sale.
3. When only a limited number of the article advertised is to be sold each customer, the advertisement must say so.
4. An accurate description of merchandise advertised must be presented so that the reader will know the true nature of the article advertised.
5. When an article is on sale for a limited time only, the advertising must say so.
6. The merchandise described must be sold at the prices named in the advertising copy.
7. If the article advertised is a discontinued model or a second, the advertisement must say so.
8. The use of cuts and illustrations taken from competitive advertisements will not be permitted.
9. No advertisement should reflect discredit on competing products or services.
10. Any advertising that in the opinion of the Sun's Advertising Censorship Committee would injure the confidence of Sun readers, or be injurious to reputable advertising will not be inserted.

Around these regulations as hub, the wheel of Sun censorship enforcement revolves.

All copy submitted for insertion in the Sun is carefully read for misleading statements and to see whether or not it meets all censorship requirements.

If there is any doubt about it, Mr. Colborn is informed. He takes the matter up personally with the advertiser, talks to him, explains why the rules were drawn up, both as his own protection and for the protection of the newspaper.

Nine times out of ten, the advertiser, after argument, will see the newspaper's point of view, and change his copy, according to Mr. Colborn.

"We have had our regulations in force now about six weeks," Mr. Colborn said. "In that time it has been necessary to call on about 24 radio advertisers and lecture them on truth in advertising.

"And we have barred only one advertiser from our columns. This case we have turned over to the New York Better Business Bureau and the Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World for investigation. He has endeavored to get back into the Sun, promising to abide by our rulings, and agreeing to post a bond of $5,000. But we prefer to wait on the judgment of the A. A. C. W. and the Better Business Bureau.

"We have now cut down complaints from readers 50 per cent.

"We still have to keep constant watch, of course. Radio solicitors for the Sun must continually investigate, must shop bargain offers and see that they are bona fide.

"In appearance, some advertisers will follow every regulation, but by some trick method a promise will be made and not kept. Such an advertiser will excuse himself by saying he resorted to 'a trick' to bring customers into his store. Then we have to impress him with the fact that that is bad advertising."

Mr. Colborn turned to his morning's mail.

"Here," he said, "as an example is a complaint from a Sun reader. In our columns we ask for reader co-operation in keeping our advertising columns clean, and we receive it."

The letter told of a loud speaker offered at the bargain price of $18.79, in an advertisement appearing March 28.

At the bottom of the advertisement the advertiser stated: "These Prices Are Good All Week." But the same afternoon the reader had gone to the store, he claimed, and had been told the particular loud speaker he wanted had been all sold out.

Mr. Colborn said he would get in touch with both reader and advertiser.

"The advertiser must make his offer good," he said. "I will go to his store with the reader in person, if necessary, and see that he does.

In the same mail, another reader complained. He enclosed a radio advertisement clipped from the Sun in which a store stated it had 2,160 tubes, of a widely advertised brand, for sale at the startlingly low price of $1.89 each. The store had only allowed the reader to buy one tube. At the bottom of the copy which offered other bargains was a statement in small type to the effect that the store claimed the right to limit the number of the article advertised to be sold each customer, technically complying with rule 5 of the Sun's regulations.

"But his advertisement was nevertheless misleading. He should have stated directly under the announcement offering the tubes at $1.89 that only one was allowed to each customer."

This case called for a personal call and a talk on the folly of tricky copy.

I went with Mr. Colborn and Mr. Goldman to call on this merchant. We "shopped" the tube first. We were told we could buy one for $1.89 and would have to pay $2.10 each for any more we purchased. Then Mr. Colborn called for the proprietor.

"You know the radio business," he told him, "and I think I know advertising. Now this is misleading, dishonest advertising. It makes enemies for you and also hurts the newspaper."

The dealer, truculent at first, soon saw this point of view. He was given one more chance. If he prepared any more misleading copy, he was told, he would be ruled out of the Sun.

"We are simply trying to teach you how to make advertising pay," Mr. Colborn told him.

All the merchants visited appear keen to know how to use advertising space in the best way. And, as one told Mr. Colborn, increased business is resulting, while, at the same time, fewer complaints are being received from the newspaper readers.

Of course some of these complaints are unreasonable, but the Sun is endeavoring to give satisfaction all around to the three partners in business,—the store, the newspaper, and the customer.

SPREADING THE "TRUTH IN ADVERTISING" GOSPEL

With the co-operation of the Miami (Fla.) Chamber of Commerce, the Better Business Bureau of St. Petersburg, Fla., and legitimate realtors, Edward H. Schwab, representative of the National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, spent five weeks in Florida investigating alleged land frauds. He obtained the arrest of three former oil promoters termed real estate dealers, charged with attempt to deceive in advertised land sales. He is pictured above addressing 4,000 people near St. Petersburg on "Truth in Advertising."

AGENTS AND PUBLISHERS MEET

Discuss Better Marketing at Hotel Astor Joint Luncheon

How business paper publishers and advertising agencies can cooperate to reduce the cost of marketing products was the subject of a joint luncheon of the Associated Business Paper Publishers and members of the American Association of Advertising Agencies held at the Astor Hotel, New York, Thursday, April 2.

Principal speakers were M. C. Robbins, publisher of Advertising Fortnightly who presented the business paper side of the question, and Robert J. Tinsman of the Federal Advertising Agency who represented the agency viewpoint.

Mr. Robbins emphasized the fact that industries are so similarly organized within the limits of their own business that it is possible to get from them all the data and information necessary for a concrete study of manufacturing costs and distribution in separate industrial fields.

Business paper editorial staffs with their fund of accumulated data and statistics, knowledge of the buying habits and traditions of the particular field they serve, can be of great service to agencies in the preparation of copy he said. They can advise agencies what message and appeal should be put into advertising.

Mr. Tinsman read a number of letters upon the subject from both agencies and business paper publishers. A few cases of lack of cooperation were brought to light, but the general comment was that better cooperation is the rule at the present time. New advertising is being developed and better copy is being written, and better copy, Mr. Tinsman pointed out, means more sales.

RADIO SECTIONS TALKING TECHNIQUE LAG BEHIND READER'S NEEDS

People Now Buy Complete Sets and Comparatively Few Are Building as Formerly, Says Advertising Man—Would Play Up Human Interest in Program

By EDGAR H. FELIX

EDITOR'S NOTE—Mr. Felix, who has contributed several articles of mutual interest to newspaper publishers and their raido advertisers, gives his views as one of the latter class. His experience in the radio field has been gained on the staff of WEAF, the New York broadcasting station of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and with N. W. Ayer & Son, advertising agency.

IF the question of the form in which radio news is printed were put up to street cleaning and railway employes, they certainly would abolish radio tabloids by unanimous vote. One observant Philadelphia satistician counted 61 tabloids on the floor of a smoker taking commuters home on Saturday afternoon. Two years ago, not five supplements would have been thrown away under the same conditions.

The volume of radio sales and the enormous expenditure made by the industry in newspaper advertising is ample evidence of public interest in radio. What is the cause of waning interest in radio news as now published by the majority of newspapers?

In the course of the last two years, radio has developed from an experimental hobby to a new form of entertainment, but radio sections have remained static, apparently observing no change in the character of their readers. Two years ago, radio editors had magic control over the pocketbooks of thousands of hypnotized radiomaniacs. All that was necessary to cause a million dollar run on all the radio shops in town was to announce a new circuit, "better than anything ever known before," requiring, for example, an "ossified super-bunco coil." Immediately every radio factory within 500 miles worked three shifts turning out the "ossified super-bunco coil." Everybody but the radio fan became rich—manufacturer, jobber, retailer and newspaper—until the merits of the "bunco" coil had been thoroughly exploited. Then the trick was repeated with another new fandangle and the gold rush was on again. After a long and expensive education, radio fans learned that you can get just about so much out of a given number of tubes and the new circuit craze faded into comparative insignificance.

Of course the large number of experimenters converted to radio each month (who have yet to learn their lesson) justify considerable attention on the part of newspapers to home radio construction, but this element no longer predominates. The radio dealer finds his sales turning to complete sets in constantly increasing proportion. The individual sale is becoming larger and larger, but the number who make weekly visits to the radio store for a new stock of parts is becoming almost insignificant. The industry is stabilizing and the high grade complete radio set is coming to its own.

The technical nature of most radio supplements had definitely limited reader interest to those interested in electrical experimentation. Many national radio advertisers avoid radio tabloids and advertise run-of-paper because they know there are more prospects among non-radio owners than among the technically inclined.

So a change is needed in the policy of most radio sections. People are less and less interested in how radio works and more and more interested in the program features. The quality of what is offered to the radio listener by the important broadcasting stations has improved to such an extraordinary degree that the radio audience is hungry for news of the studio. The human side of the art is the subject of interest today.

Some publishers have rebelled against the giving of too much "free publicity." They derive no direct revenue from broadcasting stations. Why give them more publicity?

The answer of the radio manufacturer and the radio advertiser is that if you sell the public the attractiveness of radio programs you create demand for radio receiving sets. The advertising available to newspapers in the radio field overshadows that which either the sports, society or dramatic sections offer. On the basis of revenue alone, radio sections are more than justified. From the standpoint of reader interest, radio is equally worthy. Then, why resist the present trend of public interest in radio?

Watch newspaper readers on a suburban train. See them turn to the radio programs. An hour's observation will justify the space devoted to radio programs. If such observation does not bring conviction, perhaps the experience of British newspapers may offer conclusive evidence. British publishers one day decided that broadcasting stations would have to buy the valuable space which had heretofore been given up to the free publication of radio programs. The vigorous protests of readers was so compelling that they all resumed free publication of programs within a week.

If the bare publication of programs is so amply justified, are there not other ways of capturing radio reader interest?

About a year ago an Eastern daily published a column of comment on the preceding night's programs. The circulation department reported immediate gains. For a long time, the column continued to hold reader interest, as evidenced by hundreds of letters received daily. Oftentimes, its writer indulged in caustic comments, which brought forth protests on the part of broadcasting stations and radio readers. After a time, the policy of the column was changed. It became soft-hearted and full of praise. Reader interest vanished. The experience proved that a virile column of comment on radio programs does interest radio listeners. They want to compare their own reactions with those of a lively critic.

Many papers have been conducting columns of comment, some with little evidence that they are worthwhile. Like any other kind of newspaper writing, its success depends on how the job is done. The qualifications of a radio columnist are definite and they must be met if the column is to be a success.

First, he must know how a broadcasting station operates. He must know the effect of poor placement of microphones, the balance of orchestras, the effect of overloading and the result of unskillful operation of input amplifiers. Only extended experience behind the scenes of a broadcasting station gives an adequate background for this phase of his work.

Second, he must know how to operate his own receiving set. Very prominent and competent newspaper publishers have permitted comments in their radio columns, which in the eyes of radio fans, are ridiculous. For instance, we have frequently read of "furious static" on an ideally quiet night, simply because the columnist did not know the difference between the noise caused by static and that heard in the receiver as a result of the electrically driven presses within a few yards of his listening post.

Third, he must know something of music and radio artists. One daily described the rendition of a lullaby as "vigorous and inspiring," and the fortieth appearance of an orchestra as "its radio debut."

Instead of technical features, news of the artists and broadcasting station personnel are highly attractive reading matter to the radio fan. Features on some of the problems encountered in difficult broadcasting feats mean as much to the broadcast listener as does a description of yesterday's triple play to the baseball fan.

A few years from now a description of how to build a radio receiver will command as much space on the radio page as does a story on the apparatus used to shift scenery on the dramatic page of today. The technical data will be confined to radio trade and technical papers, and broadcast listeners will read about the stars of the air with the same enthusiasm that the public reads news of its baseball, dramatic and movie stars. Radio columnists will have larger followings than dramatic and musical critics because radio is in the reach of much greater numbers than all the nation's theaters and concert halls can ever hope to accommodate.

Since radio is so important to the newspaper from the standpoint of reader interest and advertising revenue, why not give it a fair break with the other departments of the newspaper? Why waste valuable space given to it with reading matter which does not meet the needs of the day? Why not give the policy of the radio page as much thought as every other department of the paper? Why not make a real study of what the radio public wants in its radio sections?

Movie Ad Abuse Curbed

According to an order issued by the Federal Trade Commission all advertising material, in connection with reissued motion picture films bearing a title other than that originally used, must clearly and unmistakably indicate the former title under which the picture had been exhibited. This order was the result of a case before the Commission involving a number of film exchanges. Four respondents were ordered to cease from such practice.

California Daily Sued for $90,000

The Anaheim (Cal.) Orange County Plain Dealer, daily newspaper, and its publishers Rollo H. Ernest and Paul V. Hester, have been made defendants in a $90,000 libel suit, filed by Dr. J. A. Geissinger, paster of a local church. The suit is an outgrowth of the recent political fight in which the Klan was the issue.

WHAT IS RADIO NEWS NOW?

TRICK rearrangements of radio coils, condensers, tubes, and transformers have had their day as "Page One Must" material for the newspaper radio editor, Mr. Felix believes. He also holds the opinion that radio stores are now concentrating efforts on selling the customer a complete outfit rather than an assortment of cabinets, wire, tools and kits. Nevertheless, a one-day series of visits to down-town shops in New York disclosed plenty of activity at the radio parts counters. Will this activity continue, or is it the last phase of pioneer days? What do the radio fans want now? The correct answer is important to the editors of several hundred columns, pages, and sections given by newspapers to the radio art. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will present other views in early issues. The right direction may be indicated in one, or possibly in a composite of all. Get your ideas arranged now and turn them into circulation and advertising profit next fall by reading

EDITOR & PUBLISHER EVERY WEEK

SEN. REED SAYS PRESS "RUN BY MORONS"

At Least 90 Per Cent of It Is, He States, Excepting Only Country Papers—Says He "Measures His Words"

Senator James A. Reed, speaking March 28, before a group of Democrats at the Madison Hotel, St. Louis, at a dinner given in his honor, declared that the newspapers of the United States are mostly run by a "bunch of morons" who do not measure up to the level of intelligence of the average citizen. He made a limited exception to this indictment in so far as country newspapers are concerned.

He made this sweeping indictment of the intelligence of the publishers and editors of newspapers of the United States while discussing the state primary law and advocating the return to the convention system of nominations.

"I measure my words and speak plainly in order that I may not be misunderstood when I charge that the press of the country is run mostly by a bunch of morons who do not measure up to the level of intelligence of average citizens," he said.

"Ninety per cent of newspapers are run for revenue rather than upon the basis of principle. That is the condition of 90 per cent of newspapers of United States. About the only newspapers which can be accepted are the country newspapers."

Reed's attack upon the newspapers apparently came as a surprise to his audience.

Commenting editorially on Senator Reed's remarks the St. Louis Globe Democrat said in part:

"Yet he, our Jim Reed, could say nothing stronger about the press than the tepid, insipid, puerile phrase, 'a bunch of morons.' If he had shaken his hoary locks and declared that the press is dominated, controlled and directed by prehensile anthropoids, compared with whom the human imbecile possesses the qualities of genius; if he had said, with his leonine roar, that the editors of the country are creation's chief examples of unmitigated and unrelieved asinity, we would have felt the joy of great relief in the assurance that Richard was still himself. But 'bunch of morons!' What has become of that incomparable and seemingly inexhaustible vocabulary of vituperation which has been his chief political asset? Where are the scathing, scorching, blistering words with which he has been accustomed to dress his imprecations? A 'bunch of morons!' Oh, countrymen, what a fall is there!"

PICTURE FIRM SOLD

Underwood & Underwood, Inc., Combines with Elliott Service Company

Merger of Underwood & Underwood Inc., photographers, with the Elliott Service Company, display advertisers, was announced in New York this week. James E. Elliott will be president of both companies, but the photographic concern will maintain its individuality.

Bert E. and Elmer Underwood, who founded the business forty-three years ago, will retire but will retain an interest in the business, in which their sons E. R. and C. T. Underwood, will remain as officers and directors.

Underwood & Underwood is one of the leading photographic firm of the world supplying news pictures to publications and covering practically every other phase of commercial photography. The Elliott Service Company has been built largely around the use of news pictures and has been the largest customer of Underwood & Underwood.

Wall Street Journal Staff Dines

The staff of the Wall Street Journal held their annual dinner at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, New York, recently. Clarence W. Barron, editor, although ill the time, presided and also delivered a address.

HIGHER POSTAL RATES NEW LANE TO REVENUE

Opportunity Seen for More Newspaper Advertising As New Regulations Force Direct Mail Costs Up Virtually 50 Per Cent—Can Offer More Complete Coverage for Same or Less Cost

By WARNER BATES

FOR the alert newspaper publisher there is a business opportunity in the recent increase in postal rates. Perhaps I should have said "selling opportunity," for this article has to do with selling more newspaper advertising space because of the increased cost of direct-by-mail advertising. From now on the expense of advertising through folders, booklets, catalogues, form letters and any other kinds of advertising done through the mail will be greater than in the past and herein is the newspaper's chance to increase its advertising opportunity.

It is not the intention of the writer to attack in any way the efficiency of direct-mail as a medium for the advertiser, and few modern newspaper publishers will go so far as to attempt to discredit this recognized means of getting the printed word before prospective customers. There is room for most established advertising media in this modern economic world and their variety has undoubtedly had something to do with the growth in volume of modern advertising. Of course, certain media are more efficient for general use by the advertiser than others and when it comes to this point the newspaper will not have to concede supremacy to any other medium, for in its adaptability to national or local coverage, its frequency of issue, its variety of interests to suit men and all classes of readers, its hold on the home, and other reasons, the modern newspaper is admittedly first in the consideration of any advertising program.

Direct mail advertising has its uses, but there have been many misuses of it in the past and in some cases its cost is so excessive as to make it prohibitive. Consider, for instance, that the cost of penny postage on 100,000 mailings is $1,000 and then compare that with the cost of a page advertisement in the average newspaper reaching 100,000 homes. It is easily seen that, leaving out of consideration the cost of the form letter, folder, booklet or other mailing piece, the cost of envelope, imprinting, addressing, sticking on stamps, folding, inserting or any other of the mechanical costs of mailing, the newspaper has a wide margin of superiority in the first comparative cases. Now add one-half cent increased postage to the expense of 100,000 mailings and any publisher can see his new selling opportunity.

Right now is the time to take advantage of this chance to sell more newspaper advertising—now while thousands of advertisers the country over are thinking, studying, wondering what they will do to meet the changed condition brought about by the increase in postal rates. Many advertising plans and appropriations start January 1. For the advertiser whose plans for 1925 include a considerable expenditure for direct mail advertising, there has arisen a serious problem. Every piece mailing originally planned will now cost him approximately half as much again, so far as postage is concerned. If the postage item in the advertising program happens to run into several thousands of dollars, the problem is a serious one, for few advertising appropriations are elastic enough to suddenly absorb an increase of thousands of dollars in any one item.

The situation will be met in a number of ways. Booklets and catalogs will be revised by cutting out pages, the size of large folders will be made smaller to reduce the weight, lighter paper will be used in some cases, fewer words will be used in copy—but in many cases the advertiser will feel compelled to go over his plans again, checking up the efficiency of direct-by-mail advertising for his product against results to be obtained for the same cost in other advertising media, and herein lies the newspaper advertising salesman's opportunity for 1925.

Most newspaper publishers and their representatives will be honest enough to give the advertiser unbiased advice, and further it will not be necessary to do otherwise to win increased patronage for the king of all advertising media, for in many cases the difference in anticipated results for certain products between direct mail work and the use of display space in the newspapers is so slight that the increase of around 50 per cent in the cost of postage will be the factor that will decide the advertiser in favor of the newspaper. But representatives of other media will see the same opportunity that exists for the newspaper and will be on the job to sell their propositions to the advertiser, and so it behooves newspaper publishers to go after the business while the iron is hot and to go after it hard.

Those newspaper representatives who are familiar enough with the fundamental laws governing successful advertising practice to give helpful advice and service to the advertiser will get the lion's share of this new business for their publications. For their advice and service will be honest, and its honesty will show on the surface and give the advertiser confidence in what they have to say.

In few cases will such publishers' representatives advise the discontinuance of all direct-by-mail advertising. They will seek an opportunity to go over the advertisers' program and make suggestions for meeting the new situation brought about by the postal increases. They will make recommendations for altering the plans already made, rewriting some copy to make it shorter without destroying its efficiency, using fewer and more effective illustrations in the catalogue or booklet, obtaining paper that will give as good results and at the same time reduce weight, revising mailing lists, throwing out deadwood and reducing it to worthwhile prospects, etc.

They will work out new plans for covering prospects, dividing mailing lists into specific classes, rotating by classes to accomplish more specific results, intensifying mailings in some cases and discontinuing them altogether in others to make sure of getting business rather than just hoping for results, putting in coupons and other means of getting replies to test results, and so on.

But in many cases, the newspaper representative, thus gaining access to the advertiser's plans and program, will be able to show him where the newspaper will do a better job than the mailing piece. Time after time it will be possible to show the advertiser that by spending his money on direct mail work he is getting his message to his prospects only two or three times a year, whereas the same money spent in newspapers would get into the homes of the same prospects dozens of times in the same period of time, accomplishing by its frequency of repetition alone far more than could be hoped for by the occasional and far-between flashes by mail.

Analysis of the newspaper's circulation will often help decide the case. Proponents of direct-by-mail advertising make much of the fact that it is an effective means of reaching specific classes of prospects. Most any newspaper, if it goes deeply enough into the subject of who are its subscribers, can show the advertiser an impressive list of doctors, lawyers, nurses, readers whose income falls into certain classes, men readers, women readers, flappers, business men, serious thinkers, light thinkers—and, in addition, there is always the background of all the other readers of the paper to add to the impressiveness of the solicitation.

No use to attempt to cover all the points wherein the newspaper excels as an advertising medium—the publisher who is sufficiently sold on his own proposition (and those who are not ought to get out of the business) knows his selling points far better than the writer. My main point in writing this article has been to start newspaper men thinking on an excellent advertising opportunity of the present.

The new rates become effective this month. Advertisers are struggling with their direct mail problem now. Now is the time to sell them the newspaper.

MENTORS OF THE MASSES

Arthur Brisbane, whose column gives millions mental breakfast food, and Carl Laemmle, who makes Universal movies for evening entertainment, met recently at Hollywood.

HIGHER EXPRESS RATES FOR PAPERS PLANNED

100 Per Cent Increase for Handling Newspapers Will Be Asked in Tennessee, Texas and Arkansas, Washington Report Says

By J. Bart Campbell

(Washington Correspondent, Editor & Publisher)

Washington, D. C., April 2.—The American Railway Express Company and the Southeastern Express Company will shortly ask the Public Utilities Commissions of the states of Arkansas, Texas and Tennessee for authority to increase the present intrastate rate on daily newspapers from 50 cents to $1 per 100 pounds, a boost of 100 per cent, according to information reaching Washington this week.

The interstate rate is now $1 per 100 pounds.

S. N. P. A. officials have already taken cognizance of the situation, and is understood to be urging its members to register vigorous protests against the proposed increase with the Commission of each of the states.

All other Southern states except Arkansas, Texas and Tennessee are reported to now have the intrastate rate of $1, but the S. N. P. A. has been seeking to have this rate so its members may all have a 50-cent rate, if possible.

The situation has become particularly acute in view of the fact that the question of increased postal rates goes hand-in-hand with that involving express rates, as in some quarters there is a tendency to justify a boost of one class of rates as justification for raising the rates of another class.

Publishers of Arkansas, Texas and Tennessee are said to be planning organized action in the matter, and plans are reported to be under way to have the publishers of other Southern states join in the fight contemplated against the express companies.

COOLIDGE AD CLUB MEMBER

Made Honorary Member of New York Group at Special Meeting

President Calvin Coolidge was made an honorary member of the Advertising Club of New York at a special meeting, Monday night, March 30th, at its Clubhouse, 23 Park avenue. He had previously notified the club of his willingness to accept. The Prince of Wales, who called at the Advertising Club on his visit to New York last Fall, was unanimously invited to accept an honorary membership.

Four other men, distinguished internationally in advertising and publishing, were elected to honorary membership. They are: John Chesire, ex-president of the Thirty Club of London and a director in Lord Leverhulme's interest; Harold C. Vernon, chairman of the International Advertising Convention last July in London, and also an ex-president of the Thirty Club; Senator Paul Dupuy, proprietor of Le Petit Parisien, Paris; and Marcel Knecht, one of the Directors of Le Matin, Paris.

Ink Company Makes Appointments

Three important appointments, effective April 1, were announced this week by the George H. Morrill Company, ink manufacturers. O. L. Peabody has been named assistant to the general manager, at Norwood, Mass., with charge of the export and carbon black departments; L. S. Allstrum, to be sales manager for United States and Canada, with headquarters at Norwood, and Edmund J. Shattuck, to be district manager at Chicago.

GETTING THE 300,000 LINES NEEDED TO PAY ROTO SECTION'S COST

Community Pages, with Novel Copy Ideas, Start St. Paul Daily News Gravure on Its Second Year, with First Quarter's Quota Practically Filled

By M. W. THOMPSON

Advertising Manager, St. Paul Daily News

WHAT about rotogravure? Is it a problem for many of the newspaper publishers of this country? Frankly, yes; as most of these sections have been taken on during the last few years, during which overhead has been showing an increase, and net profit has been difficult to obtain. These rotogravure sections are intensely interesting to readers, build circulation and undoubtedly will remain a permanent part of our larger newspapers.

There are varying opinions on the amount of reader interest which this section holds, but most any newspaper executive is ready to claim two times the reader interest as compared to black and white, and many well informed newspaper men feel that these sections have three times the reader interest.

Ultimately, an adequate amount of advertising will be developed by the better grade of rotogravure sections, and it will pay most advertisers if properly merchandised. So it is up to the newspaper advertising manager to find an early solution to the problem of sufficient revenue with which to cover production costs.

The nature of this rotogravure advertising problem is readily shown by examining the lineage reports of the 56 newspapers for the year 1924, published in the Gravure Service Corporation lists.

Of these 56 newspapers, 10 show less than 100,000 lines for the year. This amount of lineage will not cover better than approximately 25 per cent of production costs.

Thirteen out of this same list show a total lineage for the year of 100,000 to 150,000 lines. The best newspapers in this group cannot cover more than 30 per cent to 35 per cent of their production costs.

Seven newspapers out of this group show a total lineage for the year of 150,000 to 200,000 lines. A few in this last group may cover 50 per cent to 60 per cent of their production costs.

Ten newspapers show lineage totals between 200,000 and 300,000 lines for the year, and are covering probably 70 per cent to 100 per cent of their production costs.

Out of the total group of 56 papers, it is not likely that more than 12 newspapers are showing an amount of profit worth mention.

Last year the St. Paul Daily News carried a total of 111,902 lines, divided 82,110 lines local and 29,792 national advertising. It was the first complete year that the Daily News published a rotogravure section, and the whole idea was rather strange to the advertising department. The year wasn't satisfactory.

This year we revised our entire point of view on this portion of our paper; reorganized our rotogravure staff and proceeded to sell it in a larger way than before. The result is 68,759 lines of rotogravure advertising for the first three months of 1925, and a reasonable expectation of a tootal of 300,000 lines for the year, or an amount that will carry this section into the class of newspapers where production costs do not worry the publisher.

I believe that we made the same error the first year that a great many newspapers are today making on rotogravure advertising. We tried to sell lineage without sufficient concern about the advertiser's side of the question. This year we are endeavoring to sell ideas, service and high grade copy. We are requiring our advertising men, in conjunction with our art department, to produce copy that has real merit. The fundamental idea of the rotogravure section is pictorial, and it makes its appeal through the eye. Therefore, rotogravure advertising should be pictorial and pleasing to the eye. Average copy that may be effective in black and white loses its interest when produced in a mediocre manner in the rotogravure section.

Discretion should be used on the lines of business which are solicited for rotogravure advertising. (It is vitally necessary that only such lines of business be advertised in rotogravure as will make good for the advertiser, so that satisfied customers may be made.) Our outstanding local account is the fur account of E. Sundkvist & Co. During the past twelve months this account has totaled close to 30,000 lines, and has been run on a basis that is productive and profitable to the advertiser. The copy has been almost entirely pictorial, but each picture carried description and prices. It brought decisive results to the advertiser, and many customers came into the store with a clipping of the coat which appealed to them, and a request to be shown the individual model.

Besides fur advertising, rotogravure sections are carrying copy from shoe stores, furniture stores, jewelry shops, piano stores and milk companies. One of the most obvious openings for gravure advertising is real estate. This type of copy is now running in the Minneapolis papers, and in the opinion of Minneapolis newspaper men, it is perhaps the most logical line of advertising to be found for rotogravure sections.

Full pages of the community type of advertising are a recent development with us in an endeavoor to put on a greater volume of rotogravure advertising. Our staff has been quite successful. We have sold a number of pages in various sections of the city and in surrounding towns. These pages have been about one-third illustrations and the balance advertising. Included in this group of feature pages is a dry cleaners' page, beauty specialists' page, millinery fashion page and a group real estate page.

Besides these, we instituted shortly after the first of the year, a fashion page which carries five to eight pictures of the new ideas in dresses, suits, coats, furs and millinery. This page was sold on a basis of a flat charge to each advertiser, and credit was given on the page to the store showing the particular piece of wearing apparel.

This last Sunday a full page of business cartoons was sold without difficulty. It was drawn by one of the best cartoonists in the Northwest, and in addition to providing advertising revenue, held a great deal of reader interest.

We believe that our methods of handling the rotogravure section will largely solve the problem of the production cost, and at the same time these features have been handled in a manner that maintains the value of the section and will hold reader interest. Some of these features would be impossible in a larger city where far higher rates prevailed, but in the smaller city with moderate advertising rates they are entirely feasible.

A NOVEL GRAVURE AD PAGE

An artist with a gift for caricature drew the copy for this community page of St. Paul real estate advertisers. While the idea is not new, it is by no means trite in rotogravure advertising and when well done is easily sold and has a high degree of reader-interest.

PRESS "BURIES" REPOR MAYOR TRIES RADIC

Station Supported by New York Ta Will Broadcast Hylan's Tale of Administration "From Time to Time"

Declaring the New York newspap had not given fair treatment to his port to the Board of Aldermen on achievements during the seven years his administration, Mayor Hylan on A 1 instructed officials in charge of city's radio broadcasting station WN to broadcast it from time to time.

"Papers like the New York He Tribune, the New York World, Brooklyn Daily Eagle, and the York Times print but the smallest tion of the content of this report, tuc away into an obscure place and endea to destroy the report by flippant erences," Mayor Hylan declared.

"Yet these very newspapers will the widest publicity on the front pa to the misleading and lying propaga of traction and public utility spokes who seek to discredit the Administra and place it in a false light so that billion-dollar traction scheme may put over with a set of public officials are both new and complacent."

In giving front page position to Ma Hylan's order to have the report br cast from WNYC, the Times reca what Grover Whalen, former Com sioner of Plants and Structures, sai year ago:

"Editorial writers are now concer themselves with the possible misuse of municipal station. No Administra would be foolhardy enough to invade sacred precincts of the home of its pe with any political propaganda. The grams broadcast from the municipal tion must, first of all, be of a very h class character; they must be free f politics; they must be educational instructive."

SLOPE PAPERS TO ORGANIZ

Five Coast Groups Will Form Si Unit This Month

The Pacific Slope Newspaper Ass tion will be organized at a joint me of representatives of Pacific Coast ed ial organizations in Portland, Apri and 18. Plans for the meeting were nounced at the annual Oregon New per Conference, held at the Universit Oregon, March 13 and 14.

Every press association on the will be represented at the Portland ing by two or more delegates. The organization will be composed of fiv sociations—the Oregon Editorial ciation, the Washington Press Ass tion, the British Columbia Press Ass tion, the California Press Association the Southern California Press Ass tion.

Hal E. Hoss, president of the Or association; Fred W. Kennedy, of University of Washington, represe the Washington Press Association, Sol H. Lewis, treasurer of the Was ton association, are busy making plan the Portland meeting.

The new group will not exist solel the discussion of journalistic prob but will attempt to bring the repres tives together on questions that co the entire Pacific Coast. At the Por meeting speakers will discuss such jects as reforestation, community se irrigation, agricultural aid, and community and development topics.

Vanderbilt, Jr., Sued for $800,

The Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., are the de ants in a suit for $800,000 dan brought against them by Louis T. G former manager of the United St Veterans' Bureau, Twelfth Distric March 21st. The complaint states th March 23, 1924, the Los Angeles trated Daily News published an a attacking Grant's reputation.

INFRINGING ON GOOD WILL BUILT BY GROUP ADVERTISING UNFAIR

National Vigilance Committee Member Asks That Reputations Built by Localized Industries Be Respected by Competitors

By BYRON L. SHINN

National Vigilance Committee Staff Member

SPEAK of Sun-Maid Raisins, and our thoughts fly to California. Mention Sold Sweet Grapefruit, and we think, instantly, of Florida. Why? Because of Advertising.

We see the words, Colorado Potatoes, and we visualize the smooth, clear-skinned tuber produced in the irrigated valleys of that rugged western state. Illiana Limestone, Oregon Apples, Wisconsin Cheese, Cape Cod Oysters—each carries its definite message and mental picture. Through advertising, these products have become known. Not only, but several firms and corporations are responsible for their production and distribution— a group working together for the common good, far-sighted enough to realize that only through reliability and maintenance of quality can business integrity be firmly established.

Not only have states gained such reputations for various products, but smaller units and cities have become known from coast to coast as the producers of certain things, due in many instances to the reputation of concerns which originally started the industry there. Of late years, these groups have come to realize more than ever what a real business asset and good will is inherent in this opposition of locality reputation, and they have embarked upon extensive campaigns of advertising to call public attention to the kind, character and quality of what they have to offer. Coincident with this has come group supervision of activities and mutual co-operation to bring about better working conditions, more efficient operation, higher quality production.

Possibly, no city is better known for the production of any specific product than is Pittsburgh, with reference to steel. Good steel is produced elsewhere, but every erector and fabricator knows that Pittsburgh Steel is backed by a guarantee of many years of experience in the steel business. He may desire to buy Pittsburgh Steel, because of this confidence. To every producer located in Pittsburgh territory, this reputation of Pittsburgh Steel is not only a business asset, but a property right. As such, he is entitled to have it respected, and have steel produced elsewhere sold as and for what it is and not as Pittsburgh steel.

Comparable to the reputation of Pittsburgh in the steel industry, is the City of Minneapolis, as regards flour. Minneapolis Flour, through advertising, has become well-nigh a household word. Years ago, the courts recognized the property right of the Minneapolis millers in this designation, and restrained competitors outside Minneapolis from selling their product as "Minneapolis flour."

Other notable illustrations are exemplified by the men's clothing industries of Rochester, N. Y.; the furniture industry of Grand Rapids, Mich.; the shoe manufacturers of Lynn, Brockton and Haverhill, Mass.; the prune growers of the Santa Clara Valley in California. These items are extensively advertised, because their producers recognize the market value of advertising. The result is that today, "Rochester Clothes," to one out of ten men on the street, means a suit manufactured in the modern, up-to-date clothing factories of Rochester. In the same way, "Grand Rapids Furniture" does not mean to the housewife furniture of any particular style or pattern, but denotes origin—that the furniture comes from Grand Rapids, Mich. "Lynn Made Shoes" carries its message of shoes produced in that first prominent shoe manufacturing center of our country. Other prunes may be just as sweet and have just as many wrinkles, but many people believe that Santa Clara Valley prunes are preferable. They have a right to exercise that preference and not have prunes produced elsewhere sold them as "Santa Clara."

Too often, advertisers are prone to overlook the rights of competitors in such names and designations. You hear the argument advanced that no one can secure any right to the exclusive use of a geographical name. Therefore, why should not one use the brand "Pennsylvania Oil," if he wants to, even though it be made from petroleum drawn from the wells of Oklahoma? Why not, indeed? But the advertiser has forgotten that genuine Pennsylvania oil bears a certain reputation, because of its merit, which has been carefully built up through years of honest and conscientious merchandising by a group of refiners, who have taught the public that from Pennsylvania lubricants, certain definite results may be obtained; also, that the public, who may have a preference for Pennsylvania lubricants, have a right to exercise that preference if they choose, and to have oil sold them as "Mid-Continent Oil" if it comes from that oil base, or as "Pennsylvania Oil," if it is Pennsylvania oil.

Strangely, some advertisers, who respect the trade-mark rights of individual competitors, utterly ignore the rights of group advertisers in these geographical designations. Why this should be is hard to understand even granting that the theory of the law, that all are presumed to know it, is not absolutely applicable in fact. If the careless use of these terms, however, is due to lack of information, it is high time that this knowledge be brought home to the advertising fraternity. Competition is to be desired, for that is the life of trade, but that competition should be clean and open. No one should attempt to trade upon or capitalize the reputation which it has taken competitors many years and thousands of dollars to establish. Both practically and legally, there is no difference between trading upon the good will of a competitor by simulating his individual trade-mark, or cashing in upon the reputation he has built up, as one in a group which has become known for the production of some definite, specific commodity. To employ a homely adage, "Let every tub stand on its own bottom."

The National Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and the affiliated Better Business Bureaus and Commissions, have, as a part of their service to advertising, co-operated with advertisers and manufacturers in protecting their individual trade-marks. In the same way, they stand ready to assist in the protection of the trade-mark of a group when the association of one with the other has been created through advertising and the mark has become known as an identifying designation.

If you are located in Chicago, Mr. Manufacturer, say so and build your own reputation. If you are located in San Francisco, New Orleans, or New York, do likewise. Good will can be built for any industry in any city, if quality and honesty are injected into the goods. Make your own reputation and, while you are doing it, respect that which your competitor has already established, if only that others may, in turn, respect yours.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

THAT HOME FEELING

By Henry Edward Warner

Did you ever have the feeling,
Touring in some foreign country,
Of an alien? . . . of an Arab
From his desert snatched in travel?
Did you ever sense the distance
Separating you from comrades,
Though by surging crowds surrounded
On the boulevards of Paris?
That aloneness! . . . have you felt it
When by darkness overtaken
In the canyons; or when hiking
You have lost year way, and turning Feel confusion and confusion,
Then come suddenly to compass! . . .
From the pushing crowd about you
Steps a single man! . . . you know him! . . .
He is one you hated, maybe,
In the village of your school days;
But you greet him . . . you embrace him! . . .
He is manna to your hunger!

Or, out there where bands are playing,
Where the alien hordes, rejoicing,
Swing in stepping columns, marching
While the understanding masses
Cheer and cheer! . . . and you, you only
Of the thousands, you are lonely! . . .
Nothing is there in the shouting,
Nothing in the gala gathering,
Nothing in the joyous tumult
For the stranger come to watch them!
Gloomy is his soul, despondent
Is the spirit sunk within him! . . .
Then . . . a miracle! . . . unfurling
From a staff somewhere, or swinging
In the column, show the colors
Of his nation's flag! . . . What is it
Lifts his spirit, sends him cheering,
Joins his ardor in the clamor,
Sends him shouting with the tumult
For the stars and stripes effulgent?

So to me, as are the colors
To the patriot, are presses! . . .
So the smell of ink, the clicking
Of the matrices!. . . the mauling
Of the forms! . . . the heat of metal,
And the presses spitting papers! . . .
Set me where you will, though alien,
Let me smell the ink, and let me
Hear the cylinders roaring madly
And the newsboys crying shrilly! . . .
There is Home, although to reach it
I may cross a thousand oceans!

INSURANCE CONTROVERSY ENDED

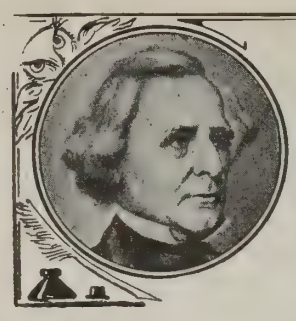
Chicago Tribune Travel Accident Policies Held Valid by State

Ending the insurance policy controversy between the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Herald and Examiner, Attorney General Carlstrom of Illinois has submitted an opinion to the state insurance department, declaring that all Tribune travel accident policies issued are "good and valid contracts of insurance in the hands of the insured," and the department had "no power or authority to cause the surrender and cancellation of paid policies."

L. R. Brooks, promotion manager of the Herald and Examiner, which has been issuing policies to subscribers for several months, recently filed a complaint at Springfield, demanding such surrender and cancellation on the contention that the policies were illegal because they are issued only to readers of the Tribune, and discriminate in their favor. It was also contended the policies were illegally drawn since they failed to specify, in addition to the $1 consideration paid by the insured, the consideration paid by the Tribune to the Federal Life Company, enabling it to issue a policy for the premium of $1. Attorney General Carlstrom included in his opinion that the entire consideration must be expressed.

At the hearing on the complaint, it developed that "such other consideration" included service, specifically; advertising, securing of policy holders, and issuance of policies.

Motor Advertisers to Meet in June



Advertising managers of automobile manufacturing concerns will meet next June to discuss the differential between lacal and national advertising rates in newspapers, the Automobile Chamber of Commerce, New York, announced this week. The exact date or the place has not yet been determined.

Terre Haute Ad Man Wins Prize

L. H. Quinn, advertising manager of the Kleeman Dry Goods Company, Terre Haute, Ind., in competition with advertising writers all over the country, won the first prize in the Irene Castle Corticelli Fashions advertising contest, for the best advertisement. The copy appeared in the Terre Haute Tribune Sunday, January 25.

Six Papers Install Ludlows

Six newspapers, the New Brunswick (N. J.) Home News, Louisville Courier-Journal, Pasadena Star-News, Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News, Mansfield (O.) Journal and Akron (O.) Beacon Journal, recently installed new Ludlow Typographs.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

(Continued from last week)

At this time, a young man who had done good work as a reporter under the eyes of Mr. Bennett as early as 1875—Thomas H. Hamilton was the financial editor. He and Edward A. Kane, both active and zealous news gatherers, had been Mr. Meighan's main reliance at night to run to fires and cover the police stations, Mr. Hamilton at that time being a champion pedestrian. Mr. Kane, due to an invalid wife, was forced to accept a position in the Index Department, to secure regular hours, but Tom Hamilton continued as an all around reporter, and was finally sent to Wall Street in 1880, where he achieved a fine reputation and made many lasting acquaintances among the bankers and brokers of that district. There was a saying in "the street," "if Hamilton says so, it is true."

Mr. Jay Gould never forgave Bennett and Mackay for their daring financial exploit in laying the two Commercial cables across the Atlantic without the aid of Wall Street or a big bond issue, and which cut so deeply into the revenues of the Western Union cables. It rankled in his heart, and he pursued a systematic policy of hostility to Bennett and the Herald.

The quarrel culminated on March 31, 1888, with Jay Gould's open letter attacking the personal character of Mr. Bennett, and which he courageously published in full in the Herald, coupled with a savage editorial reply—Gould being termed "the skunk of Wall Street."

Mr. Reick's Connection With the Herald

The late Mr. William Charles Reick, destined to figure very prominently in Herald history, according to his own statement was born in Philadelphia, on September 29, 1863.

He received a collegiate education and entered journalism at the age of nineteen. For a short period he was a reporter in Newark, and was one of the large number of local correspondents that the Herald maintained in the territory surrounding New York City.

His work attracted the city editor's attention for its accuracy, conciseness and prompt dispatch, rendering it fresh, "live" news, and in this way the ambitious young reporter scored several "beats." The result was that when the schedule for resort news was arranged in the summer of 1883, Mr. Reick was called from Newark and sent to Long Branch, where Lily Langtry and her friend, Freddie Geghard, were then staying, part of the time living in Freddie's private car, switched on a sidetrack. It was the talk of the town. The Sun and the Star printed lively stories about the situation, and Reick in his correspondence gave the actual facts, which duly appeared, resulting in Mrs. Langtry sending a complaint to the office. Mr. Reick was recalled, verified every statement he had made, and the fair Lily got no retraction.

Mr. Reick at the end of the season returned to New York, and was assigned to general reportorial duties. His work was at all times satisfactory, with the result that Mr. Chambers, then in the editorial chair, took a great liking to him and finally made him his private secretary.

He continued at this post of duty for a time, but was frequently sent out on various assignments.

On December 2, 1885, a mad dog bit four little boys, sons of poor people residing in Newark, and Mr. Reick was sent to report the occurrence. Naturally fond of dogs, he investigated the case from every angle, and his long stories in the Herald, supplemented by those of the papers of Newark and the New York Sun, roused the public of that city, as well of New York. A prominent physician, Dr. O'Gorman, took hold of the case, sterilized the children's wounds and appealed to the citizents for funds to send the boys to Paris, where, a short time before, Pasteur had discovered his serum, that was a preventive to hydrophobia.

A cablegram was sent to Pasteur as follows:

"Four children have been bitten here by a supposed mad dog. Dog killed. Will send children if you will take charge of them."

Pasteur's reply by cable was: "Send the children at once."

By this time a fund of more than $1,000 had been raised, Mayor Hewitt, of New York, being a contributor, and on Dec. 9, the children, under the immediate care of a Mrs. Ryan, a Canadian by birth, and who spoke French, sailed for France on the S. S. "Canada," the party being under the personal charge of Dr. Frank Billings, of Newark.

Mr. Reick's stories largely aided the humanitarian effort, and no doubt attracted the attention of Mr. Bennett, then in Paris.

The party was domiciled in a hotel near Pasteur's laboratory, where the boys underwent treatment. On Jan. 1, 1886, the children received their last inoculation, and M. Pasteur, as he made them farewell, sa

"Vous etes contents, N'est ce pas."

The boys re-embarked on the S. S. "Canada," and arrived in N York on Jan. 14, in good health and spirits, and were welcomed ho to Newark. An unusual incident occurred on the return voyage, M Ryan giving birth to a baby boy, three days after the ship left Havre.

Mr. Reick continued on duty in the Herald office, until early 1888, Mr. Bennett cabled to Mr. Chambers to send over immediatel good reporter for the Paris Herald. Mr. Chambers promptly selec young Reick, and the night of the very same day, he went on board ship with his baggage and sailed next morning. This was the turn point in his career.

His work on the Paris Herald; his personal demeanor and mark ability made a deep impression on Mr. Bennett, so that when he decid to publish a paper in London, Reick and the late Mr. Alexander Kene were placed in charge of the undertaking—Reick as reporter and outs man; Kenealy as editor.

The first number of the London Herald (European Edition) a peared on Feb. 3, 1889, and was an attractive paper, full of live ne with special cables from New York, and reflected great credit on staff.

Mr. Chambers having resigned as editor of the Herald on Nov. 1888, Mr. Bennett felt the need of a reliable representative in the N York Office, and selected Mr. Reick as his city editor and who was vested with extended powers. This was in 1889, Mr. Reick succeedi "Doc." Cohen, who had been appointed city editor, after Meighan H retired, and before Chambers resigned the news editorship.

It was in November, 1888, that Mr. Meighan severed his connect with the paper, after twenty-one years of active service. Later he beca the associate editor of a new magazine, owned by Mr. Lorillard Spenc while Maurice M. Minton was its editor-in-chief. Subsequently he came the manager of the New York City division of the old United Pre continuing with it for over three years. During this period he also wr many special feature articles for the World, Herald and other papers

(To Be Continued Next Week)

POSTAL NOTICES ISSUED

Local Postmasters Sending Out Announcements of Rate Changes

Local postmasters are now sending out notices of the change in second-class postal rates, which becomes effective April 15.

Particular attention is given the fact that the transient second-class rate of 2 cents for each 2 ounces or fraction, for 8 ounces or less, and the fourth-class rates for more than 8 ounces, will apply to copies of publications sent by publishers when the copies are not entitled to be mailed as subscribers' copies or as sample copies. On all such copies weighing over 8 ounces the service charge of 2 cents must also be paid in addition to the postage at the fourth-class rate.

Second-class publications mailed by publishers are subject to the postage rates fixed by law. All copies of such publications sent by the publishers thereof or by registered news agents, should therefore be mailed at the Weighing Departments where publishers' second-class pound rate mailings are accepted.

No copies should be mailed, with postage stamps affixed, or otherwise, without ascertaining from the Weighing Departments or from the Classification Section, General Post Office, the postage to which they will be subject.

Undeliverable copies which are returned to publishers in accordance with a request and guarantee of return postage on the wrappers, will be subject to postage for such return at the rate of 2 cents for each 2 ounces or fraction thereof, for copies weighing 8 ounces or less and to the fourth-class rates (and 2 cents service charge) for copies weighing over 8 ounces. If the return of undeliverable copies at such rates is not desired, no quest for such return and no pledge s as "Return Postage Guaranteed' sho appear on the wrappers.

Undeliverable copies returned to p lishers because the sending of such co has continued after notice of change address or non-delivery has been s will be subject to postage at the rate 1½ cents for each 2 ounces or fract thereof.

Publishers are advised to take prom action on all notices received regard changes of addresses or undelivera copies.

Buys Interest in Salem Daily

Fred J. Tooze, of Oregon City, st senator from Clackamas county bought the stock in the Salem (Or Statesman, formerly owned by John Brady. He will edit that paper. To formerly conducted the Oregon City Banner-Courier. Mr. Brady was ed of the Statesman.

A.N.P.A. Board Meets

Members of the board of directors the American Newspaper Publishers sociation held a meeting in Boston, Ma 30 and 31. Only routine matters w discussed according to an announcem by Charles H. Taylor, of the Bos Globe, member of the board.

Hearst Executives to Meet

The annual conference of Hearst bu ness executives will be held in Chic April 16-18, it was announced in N York this week. Business, advertisi and circulation managers of the ne papers owned by William Rando Hearst will attend.

FASTER COMPOSITION

of Newspaper Headings, Classified and Display Advertising

Faces from All Magazines Mixed in the Same Line

Ask the nearest agency to send you the folder "Suggested Headletter Layouts for the Model 26 Linotype" and full information about this machine

LINOTYPE MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY LINOTYPE

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS Brooklyn, New York CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED TORONTO

AGENCIES IN THE PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

[COMPOSED ENTIRELY ON THE LINOTYPE IN BODONI AND BODONI BOOK]

533.25.3 F

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

"Get Names, Names, Names!"—W. A. Bailey

MAKING possible a newspaper in his city within five days was the feat accomplished by W. A. Bailey, general manager of the Kansas City (Kan.) Kansan, who, with the aid of Senator Arthur Capper, four years ago organized the daily he now directs.

Mr. Bailey was president of the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, when certain leaders of that city decided they wanted their own newspaper. They were then being served by dailies in the neighbor city in Missouri.

"If the people show me they want to read their own paper and the merchants show me they are willing to support it, I'll help you", said Senator Capper, when sought for aid.

"Get 15,000 subscribers and $200,000 in advertising contracts from your merchants."

On a Monday morning Mr. Bailey from his desk in the Chamber of Commerce set campaign machinery in motion. On Friday he was able to show the publisher-Senator 15,500 subscribers and $210,000 in advertising contracts.

Thus the new newspaper started Jan. 31, 1921.

"In our first issue and since we have run two slogans, around which we have built our newspaper," Mr. Bailey said. "They are: 'This is Our Newspaper' and 'For You and Your Town.'

"We try to make an independent and strong local newspaper. Local news is given the right of way always. We believe that the success of newspapers in cities the size of ours must be built upon the foundation of efficient local coverage.

"In consequence we aim to keep syndicated matter to the minimum, to rely chiefly on our local editorial staff.

"Names, names, names! we tell our reporters and editors. Get local names from every section of Kansas City into the news columns!

"We have a former local boy athlete as sporting editor, and we try to play up local sports on that page. We make a special point to have the school children well represented in the paper, and devote a full page every Sunday to the schools.

"The proportion we aim at for the editorial page is two or three strong local editorials daily, one on a national or foreign subject, and clippings from State newspapers.

"Every Sunday we carry a column contributed by organized labor in Kansas City. Frequently opinions expressed in this column differ from our paper's policy. But the unions are part of the town and are entitled to a voice in their own newspaper. We run their column exactly as written.

"And," added Mr. Bailey, "the people seem satisfied with their 'own newspaper.'"

GLENN HEADS FLORIDA PRESS

Dean Walter Williams of U. of Missouri Speaker at 42nd Annual Meet

Three addresses by Dean Walter Williams of the University of Missouri School of Journalism and a talk by F. H. Jeter, agricultural editor of the North Carolina State College of Agriculture, were features of the forty-second annual session of the Florida Press Association at the University of Florida, Gainesville, March 26-28.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were: William M. Glenn, of the Orlando Sentinel, president; George E. Hosmer, of the Fort Meyers Press, first vice-president; R. J. Holly, of Sanford, re-elected secretary; and Mrs. George Keller, Mount Dora Topic, treasurer.

Dean Williams, in his first address, pointed out seven obligations of journalism.

The foundation of journalism today is truth, according to Dean Williams, and on this foundation must be built a journalism of righteousness, interest, sympathy, leadership, power and sacrifice. A passion for accuracy, ability to write cleanly, clearly and rapidly; ability to see straight; ability to observe; sympathy and friendliness; a belief in his own job, alertness; a power of imagination, poise and self control; a knowledge of news; individuality of expression; a belief in journalism as a profession of public service, and a belief in, and a practice of, democracy, were the traits of an educated journalist stressed by the eminent Missourian in later talks before the association.

Distribution of the special issue of the Gainesville Daily Sun by classes in journalism at the University of Florida was a feature of the closing.

Journalism School Issues Deskbook

The School of Journalism of the University of Missouri has issued a revised deskbook, after a period of four years since its last edition. It contains detailed instructions on editing of copy, writing and other points of accepted newspaper style.

Large Linotype Orders Placed

Large linotype orders recently received by the Mergenthaler Linotype Company include 22 for the Philadelphia Inquirer, 21 for the Chicago Daily News, 21 for the Boston Herald, 16 for the Cleveland News-Leader and 14 for the Providence News.

TITUS JOINS BROOKLYN EAGLE

Hearst Man Named Advertising Director—Cleary Local Manager

The Brooklyn Eagle announces the appointment of Robert V. Titus as advertising director and the advancement of John A. Cleary to local advertising manager. Mr. Cleary, who has been given charge of the Brooklyn advertising, has been with the Eagle for 14 years.

Mr. Titus has resigned his position as manager of the Harlem and Bronx section of the New York American and will join the Eagle April 6.

After leaving college Mr. Titus received his early business training with Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago. Returning from France he joined the advertising staff of the Los Angeles Examiner, serving there two years as local advertising manager. He was brought East by the Hearst organization and made Advertising director of the newly-launched Rochester Journal-American and two years ago came to Manhattan to work on the New York American.

Heaton on N. Y. Herald Tribune

L. L. Heaton, formerly classified manager of the Philadelphia Bulletin, was announced this week as the new classified manager of the New York Herald Tribune. He had spent more than two years with the Bulletin. Prior to that he was connected with the New York Globe. He started newspaper work with the Brooklyn Eagle, having spent 10 years with that newspaper. Since the merger of the Herald and Tribune, there has been no classified manager for the combined daily.

MOST of the far-sighted publishers who were quick to recognize the economies of the Associated Press in its infancy have again shown their alertness by obtaining the exclusive rights in their respective cities to the Consolidated Press—the first service designed to avoid duplication and to furnish instead a distinct supplement to "spot" news reports.

The Consolidated Press Assn.

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

When Murat Halstead was writing Editorials Cincinnati Was a "Morning Newspaper Town"

When the G. A. R. was about as old as the American Legion is now,—when railroad trains were even less common in the Ohio Valley than aeroplanes are today,—when Bakers' four-horse omnibus was the only means of transportation between the post office and Walnut Hills,—Cincinnati was a morning newspaper town. But that was way back in the nineteenth century.

With the dawn of the twentieth century the supremacy of the morning newspaper in Cincinnati was wrested from them. For the past seventeen years the evening Times-Star, both editorially and as an advertising medium, has been the dominant newspaper of this field.

Never once in all these years has any other Cincinnati newspaper carried an equal amount of display advertising. Never once has the leadership of the Times-Star in display advertising, local or national, been threatened.

Today this leadership is more pronounced than ever before. Local advertisers, regardless of classifications, are not only placing more display lineage in the Times-Star but they are placing a larger percentage of their total lineage in this medium.

National advertisers are more and more coming to accept the Times-Star as the only newspaper necessary to tie-up their national campaigns with the local Cincinnati public. Two years ago 147 national advertisers used the Times-Star exclusively in this field. Today the number has increased to nearly 200.

In making up your newspaper schedule remember that the Cincinnati of 1925 is very different from the Cincinnati of 1875.

For detailed information address the merchandising department of Cincinnati's leading newspaper.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

While In New York

be sure to see the latest advances in newspaper presses. Our representatives will be pleased to show you in operation the following

Latest SCOTT Achievements

64 Page Folders

Steel folding cylinders, no ribbons.

Heavy-duty High Speed Printing Units

Solid forged steel cylinders, roller bearings, steel and fabroil gears, greatest accessibility, least space, strongest frames.

New Ink Distribution

Greatest distributing effect with fewest composition rollers.

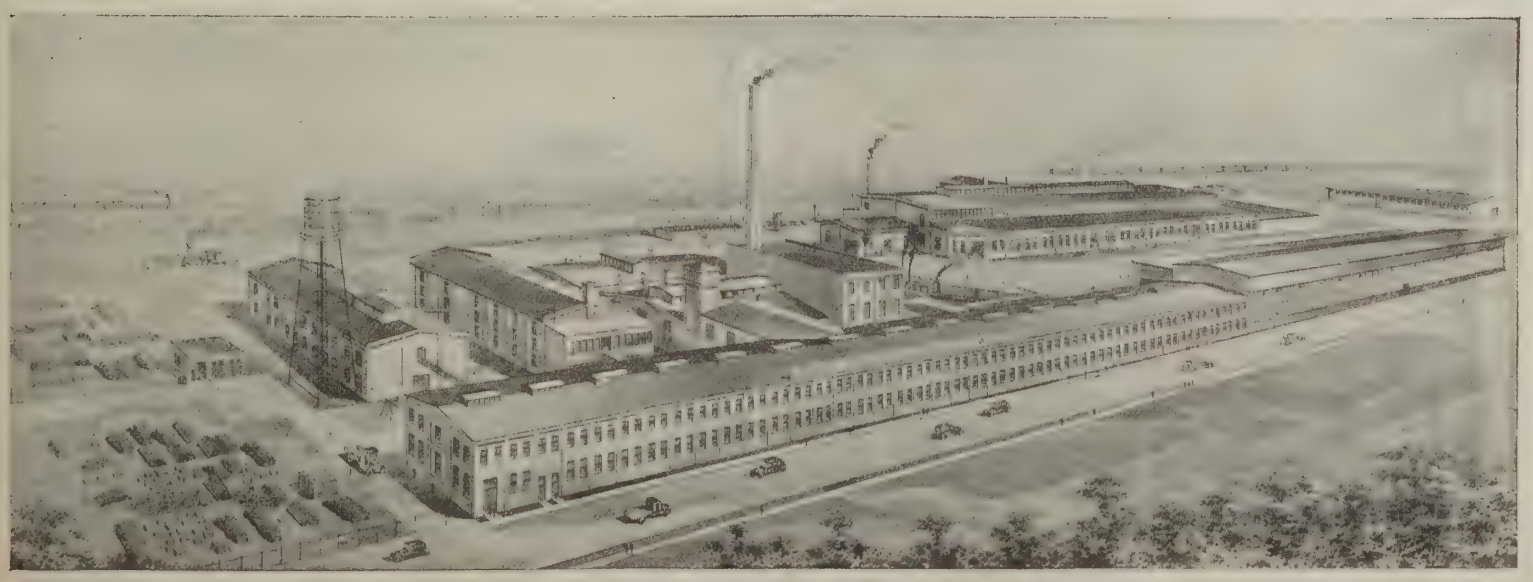
Automatic Web Tension

Saves web breaks, quick roll changes, absolutely automatic.

New Color Press

Solid forged steel printing cylinders, better distribution, greater accessibility, higher speed.

You are also cordially invited to visit our plant at Plainfield, N. J., where we have been building America's finest presses for over 50 years.



Watch for our special announcement in the April 18th issue of this publication."

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office and Factory—Plainfield, New Jersey, U. S. A.

NEW YORK OFFICE, Brokaw Bldg.
1457 Broadway, at 42nd Street

Chicago Office
Monadnock Block

WIRE TRANSMISSION OF PICTURES PLACED ON COMMERCIAL BASIS

A. T. & T. Opens New York, Chicago, San Francisco Circuit April 4—Other Cities to Be Added as Business Grows

THE American Telephone & Telegraph Company this week announced that on Saturday, April 4, it would undertake the commercial transmission of photographs by wire.

The announcement was hailed by newspaper editors and picture service managers as a step which will revolutionize news picture transmission, and a journalistic development almost on a par with the introduction of the telephone and telegraph.

At the outset but three cities will be linked in the picture circuit, New York, Chicago and San Francisco. As the service grows other cities at important geographical centers will be added until wire pictures will be available to newspapers in virtually all sections of the country. The company expects to be serving 15 cities in two years.

The following charges for transmission of a single picture, 5 by 7 inches, have been established by the A. T. & T.:

1. New York to Chicago, $50.
2. New York to San Francisco, and Chicago to San Francisco, $100.
3. New York to both Chicago and San Francisco, $150.

Simultaneously with the A. T. & T.'s announcement that sending of pictures by wire was now commercially feasible, H. B. Baker, general manager of Pacific & Atlantic Photos, stated that 10 daily newspapers were now receiving daily wire picture service by Telepix, a method developed by his company, and that six other newspapers which have contracted for the service will be added to the circuit as soon as machines are available.

"Telephotograph Transmission is the name the A. T. & T. has applied to their picture service. In New York pictures will be received for transmission in the lobby of the A. T. & T. building, 195 Broadway, in Chicago at 305 West Washington street, and in San Francisco at 333 Grant avenue.

At 9 o'clock Saturday morning the A. T. & T. will receive pictures for wire transmission, the actual sending to take place between the hours of 4 p. m. and 11 p. m. A seven-day service will be maintained. On Sunday pictures will be received between 5 a. m. and 11:30 p. m. Either undeveloped films or photographs will be accepted, according to E. L. Behr, who will act as receiver in New York and pass upon the suitability of the pictures submitted for wire transmission. In case prints are submitted they will be photographed and brought down to 5 by 7 inches, the ideal sending size.

Pictures will be sent during the evening hours since regular long distance telephone wires will be used and at this time the cross-country circuits are less crowded, according to Behr. Each machine can both send and receive.

Although A. T. & T. officials admitted that they expected the bulk of their wire picture business would come from newspapers and picture services at the outset, they pointed out that the service has many other commercial uses, a few of which are the transmission of finger prints for the identification of criminals; transmission of advertising copy, fashion designs, line drawings, graphs of business conditions, important stenographic notes, cartoons, lace and textile designs, pictures of broken machinery.

Asked to comment upon the A. T. & T. development, B. A. Caparell, manager of United News Pictures, said:

"The step will revolutionize news picture transmission and bring pictures to the same proportion of value as news today. It means that we will now be able to do with pictures what is done with news, record an event in all parts of the country on the same day it occurs.

"Only those newspapers in the vicinity of the three transmitting and receiving points will be affected at this time, however, the bulk of the newspapers will continue to be served as heretofore."

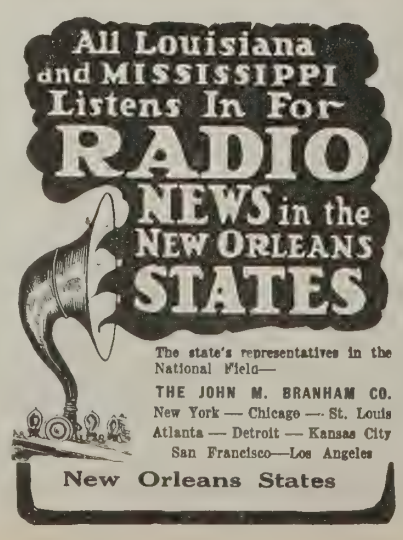
Mr. Caparell said the high cost of sending would probably keep the A. T. & T. service from being widely used at this time. He pointed out that to send but one picture a day from San Francisco to Chicago, to New York, or vice versa, at present charges would cost a picture service or a newspaper $1,050 a week. He also pointed out that the bulk of pictures used by newspapers are of the feature rather than the news type. Spot news pictures with an appeal to all sections of the country are rare and connected usually only with extraordinary events, he said.

"However, when the service is brought down to a more reasonable level where all services and newspapers can participate, it will be a great thing for the picture business and newspapers generally," he declared.

R. E. Boyd, manager of the photograph department of the International Newsreel Corporation, said:

"Since the invention of the telegraph and telephone, no other invention is of such value to the busy newspaper editor as the transmission of news photographs by telephone.

"It brings cities closer together. People are enabled to see almost immediately actual photographs in their home papers of events that are transpiring thousands of miles away. It will practically mean the doing away of long and costly airplane flights.



"It is a great thing to know that a big news story can break in San Francisco and that a few hours after photographs of the event can be published in New York. Photographically speaking, it brings San Francisco within commuting distance of New York.

"We have made successful use of the transmission of photographs over the A. T. & T. wire and certainly intend in the future to take advantage of this new invention."

Telepix, the wire picture service of P. & A. Photos has developed rapidly in the past few months, according to H. B. Baker, general manager. The 10 newspapers now receiving pictures daily by this method are: Boston Post, New York Daily News, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Pittsburgh Post, Detroit Free Press, Chicago Tribune, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Birmingham News, Atlanta Constitution, Los Angeles Times.

The following papers have contracted for the service and will be added to the circuit as soon as machines are available. San Francisco Bulletin, Portland (Ore.) Journal, Seattle Times, Denver Post, Oklahoma City Times and Dallas News.

The Telepix method employs Western Union leased wires, according to Mr. Baker.

PRICE RISE RESULTS PLEASE N. Y. WORLD

Newspaper Increased Subscription Rate from 2 to 3 Cents in January with Moderate Circulation Decrease —Income Advanced Satisfaction over results following three months test of the New York World's increase in subscription price was expressed this week by J. F. Bresnahan, business manager.

On Jan. 5, the World increased its price from two to three cents a copy in Greater New York.

The seven-day April Post Office statement filed this week gives the World's average circulation as 381,536. A year ago the average was 391,421. Last October it was 404,377.

"After three months' experience with the increased price we have no regrets", Mr. Bresnahan said: "We are only sorry we did not raise the price a year earlier.

"The World, as we announced last January, believes that it is unsound for any independent, aggressive, uncontrolled newspaper to have to rely to so great an extent on support other than that which comes from its own readers.

"Under the new price our income is increased 70 cents on every hundred copies sold."

This increase would figure at approximately $2,000 a day.

"We showed declining circulation for about 10 weeks", Mr. Bresnahan continued, "and then struck static conditions. We look for the come-back in the fall."

He pointed out that in New York there was frequently a circulation decrease between the October and April statements due to the stormy season, and the fact there are two holidays in February.

"The news dealers welcomed the change in price," Mr. Bresnahan said. "It gave them the margin of profit they thought they were entitled to."

There was no change made in the commission to wholesaler. The jobber formerly paid 90 cents for a 100 copies and the retailer $1.40. Now the jobber pays $1.60 for 100 copies, and the retailer $2.10.

Mr. Bresnahan described how the increase in price was put into operation.

"We granted newsdealers full return privilege for two weeks. Then for one week we allowed five per cent return. The third week we were back on a non-returnable basis," he said.

Golf News Association

The Golf-News Association, formed for the purpose of furnishing accurate and technically correct news matter to members exclusively, has opened offices at 154 Nassau Street, New York. P. C. Pulver, dean of golf writers who has covered golf tournaments for twenty years for New York Evening Post, New York Sun and a number of other well known dailies, is in charge of the news department. The special features are edited by Wm. Henry Beers, editor of Golf Illustrated. The Association reports that the chief service to members will be a weekly column of live golf news of a general character to be released for Saturday evening and Sunday morning papers.

Norwegian Paper Mills Agency

(INCORPORATED)

33 West 42nd Street
NEW YORK CITY

Telephone: PENNsylvania 7443

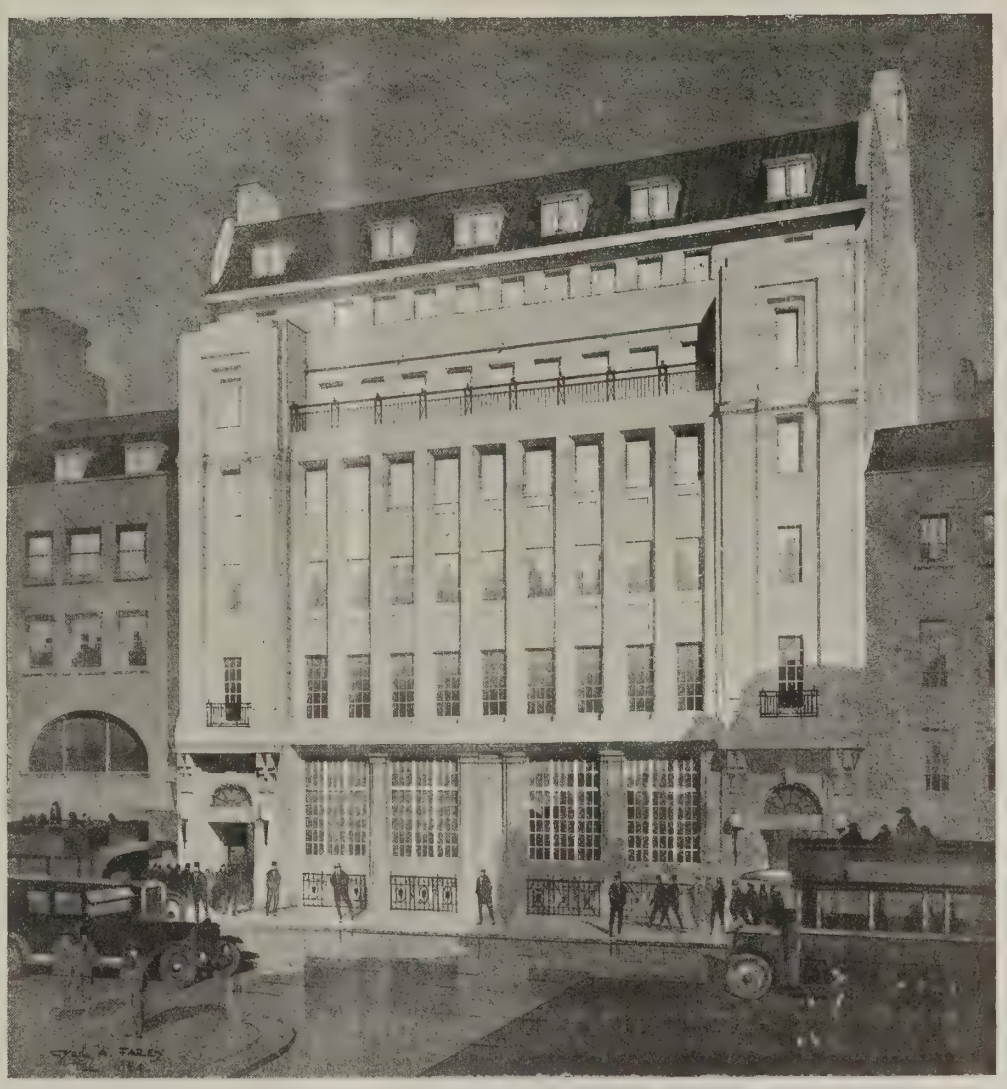
SELLING AGENT IN THE U. S. FOR

NEWS PRINT PAPER

Representing Seven Largest Norwegian News Print Mills with an Annual Capacity of 200,000 Tons.

SOLE SELLING AGENT IN U. S. FOR

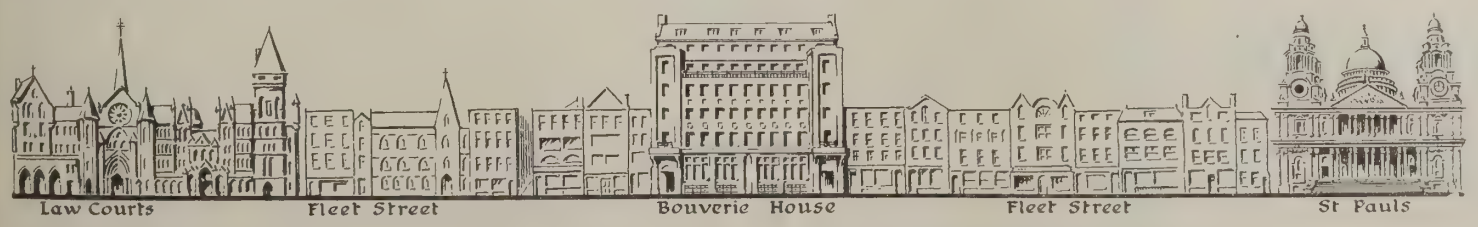
Ankers Traesliperi & Papirfabrik A/S
Bohnsdalen Mills, Ltd.
A/S Randsfjo d Traemasse & Papirfabrik
A/S Holmen-Hellefos
Hunsfos Fabrikker
Union Paper Co., Ltd.



Agent for FOLLUM TRAESLIPERI

Prompt Shipments . . Inquiries Solicited

BOUVERIE HOUSE FLEET ST. LONDON



The Finest Address
IN EUROPE

In
The Very Centre of London's NEWSPAPER
AREA

London Office Accommodation
AVAILABLE FOR YOU

Bouverie House is London's most recent land-mark situated in Fleet Street in the very centre of London's newspaper area. In construction, general planning, lighting, ventilation, lift accommodation and sanitation, Bouverie House represents the latest practice, and the form of flooring used does away with the necessity for expenditure on the part of the tenant on linoleum or other floor covering. The latest type of central heating is installed. The façade of Portland stone with its fine proportions suggests that energy and dignity which characterise business enterprise in the City of London. The environs of Bouverie House are rich in literary associations. Charles Dickens was intimately associated with the area. Samuel Johnson also lived close to the site, and Oliver Goldsmith earned a precarious living in Wine Office Court. To this day at the "Cheshire Cheese," a few doors away, the favourite seats of Johnson and Goldsmith are still pointed out. A limited amount of accommodation will be available in this magnificent office building now being erected. Application for further particulars should be made to Benn Brothers, Limited, 8 Bouverie Street, London.

FINDS EUROPEAN DAILIES ON SOUNDER BUSINESS BASIS THAN AMERICAN

Profit from Circulation, and Rates on Advertising, Rather Than Lineage, the Rule Abroad—Great Plant Economy Noted As Result of Limit On Pages

By S. P. WESTON

Editor's Note.—Mr. Weston, who recently returned from Europe, has been associated in the design of several model American newspaper plants and is a recognized authority on newspaper production. His impressions set forth below are in response to a suggestion by EDITOR & PUBLISHER that a comparison of American with European methods from a quasi-engineering viewpoint would be of interest to executives on both sides of the Atlantic.

ANY comparison between American and European newspapers must obviously take into consideration the difference in the forms of government, the fields and the newspaper readers. To attempt to analyze and contrast the newspaper methods of the United States and Europe on this basis is obviously a very large subject. A comparison of the mechanical operation methods and the difference in administration is more nearly possible. My recent trip to France, Germany and England was for the purpose of investigating certain mechanical printing processes. This took me into the mechanical departments of several of the leading European daily newspapers and also brought me in touch with the administrative heads of papers in Paris, in Germany and in England.

The outstanding difference between the American and European daily newspaper theory is that quantity production is practiced by American newspapers, while minimum size and maximum rates seem to be the rule with European publishers. I think it is generally recognized that the American theory is for bulk circulation and bulk advertising. The Continental, and especially the English, theory seems to be to obtain a profit on circulation first; next to get rates on advertising rather than an amount of space.

Possibly this might be illustrated by the London Times or the London Mail. The Mail for instance, is ordinarily a 16-page paper, selling at two pence or four cents a copy. At the time I was in oLndon, the net daily circulation was 1,853,000 copies. Any American publisher can approximate what the circulation net should be per day on a 16-page paper, with paper costing approximately the same as in the United States. The advertising rate for the Mail is a minimum of £6 per inch per insertion. The position charges added bring the page rate up to the maximum of £1,750 or approximately $7,500 an issue. No discounts are given for quantity or continued insertions. Obviously this rate would not encourage the use of daily page and two-page advertisements by department stores, yet the results from smaller space seem to be surprisingly good.

In looking over the London papers I noted that the largest department store, one which is said to be the largest in the world, was using a 10-inch double column space, or 280 lines. In this limited space, were several brief announcements of special values in various departments. One in particular occupied a space of about 14 lines. I took the trouble that day to go to this store and get in touch with the head salesman of this department. It was evident that they were quite busy and in answer to my inquiry as to whether he found that the advertisement brought results, he said:

"Certainly, any time I have space in our advertisements I always put on extra sales people."

The advertisement in question was one of a number on a solid page of advertisements. Harrods, one of the largest English department stores, I am told, spends approximately $3,000,000 a year in newspaper advertising, and while undoubtedly they use page space from time to time, their advertisements that I saw in the London papers were less than a quarter of a page.

One of the questions that I was most frequently asked by European publishers was how it is possible for the American publishers to print such large newspapers and at the same time have such low rates for bulk advertising contracts. It appeared to be exactly the opposite of the European publishers' theory of a sound business basis.

Methods of handling advertising are also quite different from the American system, the orders usually going through agents, rather than direct to the paper. From an American standpoint advertising in the Continental newspapers is not very highly developed. In Germany and France, especially, the main thought with the advertiser seems to be to affix attention to trade marks and names, rather than to create a buying interest on the part of the reader.

The enormous circulations of the English and French papers is a surprise when a comparison is made between what American papers and European papers offer the readers, on the quantity basis. This, of course, in a large part is explained by the difference in the interest of the readers in the United States and in Europe. I am not dogmatic enough to say which method of news presentation is the best, but with the Daily Mail proving nearly 2,000,000 paid circulation and the Petit Parisien 2,000,000 circulation and a number of other papers with more than a million circulation and with selling prices averaging nearly double American newspaper circulation rates, it would seem a fair assumption that the English and Continental newspapers are meeting the desires of the readers very satisfactorily.

In the mechanical operations of the paper both in England, France and Germany more consideration is given to careful production in contrast to the speed production methods of American papers. In many particulars, their methods are as fast as, and faster than American methods. But as a whole, economy in operation is the first consideration and the speed element secondary.

An interesting circulation angle, especially in London, was the high point which circulation appeared to reach during June, July and August, the months when American newspaper circulation is usually at its lowest. An outstanding fact which might indicate that the European papers are on a sounder operation theory is that there does not appear to be as wide a fluctuation in the gross volume of business and the net returns from year to year as that of American papers. Newspaper property values abroad seem to be very much more stable and I am inclined to think they make a larger profit on the volume of business handled. I base this operation on examination of the operations of two papers over a period of several years.

English circulation methods are certainly aggressive and thorough. The leading English papers as well as the leading continental papers have a very wide distribution, not only in their immediate territory but throughout the continent. The English papers offer a continued and varied list of prizes running into very substantial sums for contests, etc.

The cross-word puzzle was at its height in London and Paris. In London the papers were offering very liberal prizes for solutions, amounting, in some instances, to several thousand pounds. I was told that this form of circulation development was very satisfactory.

In a talk with one of the leading English publishers he expressed the thought that the English and European papers consider the subscriber more on an individual basis rather than from the standpoint of bulk circulation. As nearly as I can remember his statements were as follows:

"It is my opinion that the fundamental basis of a successful newspaper lies in the confidence of the subscriber in the newspaper. We never adopt a new policy with regard to features or news without thoroughly considering it from the reader's standpoint. We try to determine whether it will be interesting and valuable to the reader. It is our theory that the news which is interesting to a man in London should be interesting to a reader outside of London. Our papers are not as local as the American papers, our theory being to print news that is of interest and value to the Englishman wherever he may be located."

Briefly, as I said at the start, I think the outstanding difference between the the European and the American newspapers is that we, in this country, work on a theory of quantity production and wholesale rates while the European papers work on the theory of minimum size and maximum rates. In the plants that I visited I found that the mechanical equipment in the main fully equal to a of American newspaper offices. Ther a marked difference, however, in the of the mechanical departments. Som the papers with the largest circulat are produced from plants half the siz the average American newspaper plan

first! in OHIO

3,108,287 LINES

JANUARY 1st to FEBRUARY 28th, 1925

The Dispatch published during the first two months approximately 53% of all Columbus newspaper advertising and 447,195 lines more than all other Columbus newspapers combined.

In 1924 it exceeded the next largest Ohio newspaper by 2,500,909 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City	52,891
Suburban	23,639
Country	21,928
GRAND TOTAL	98,458

LARGEST IN CENTRAL OHIO

Columbus Dispatch

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

DAILY ROTO SECTIO IN NEW YORK

Evening Post Starts Publication of F Page Rotogravure Pictures Wit Each Issue—Ad Rates Announced

Publication of a daily rotogravure tion by the New York Evening Post gan, according to schedule, April 1.

Distribution of the daily, with its a four-page picture section, proceeded v out any difficulty, according to J. Annenberg, circulation manager.

The Evening Post claims to be the newspaper in the country to print a r lar daily rotogravure section. The Sa day 8-page Graphic issued by the s newspaper, continues unaffected by innovation.

Thomas McVeigh, remains as edito the Saturday Graphic, while John Th formerly assistant make-up editor, been transferred to take charge of daily rotogravure. Several photograp have been added to the staff.

The daily roto section is folded the main news sheets, hiding the f page headlines. It is well printed in of greenish tint.

C. C. Lane, business manager, whe first announced the plan for the jour istic innovation, called attention to fact the Evening Post was the first n paper to print a Saturday Graphic, it was therefore "entirely appro that it should take the first step to publication."

Advertising rates were announced week as 10 cents above the adverti black and white contract.

A Publisher Writes—

THE CLEVELAND TIMES
And COMMERCIAL
CLEVELAND

February 18, 1925.

Mr. Geo. A. Kubler, Pres.,
Certified Dry Mat Corporation,
342 Madison Ave.,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Kubler:

As you know, we have started a Sunday tabloid newspaper which is a splendid success. We are printing a large number of pictures and we have been making many experiments to determine how to get the best results.

We have been using your certified dry mats for work on our daily and also on the Sunday, including the picture pages. To ascertain if we could do better work with other mats we have experimented with every foreign mat made, with domestic dry mats and with wet mats, but we have found nothing that is better than your certified.

In view of the promises you made to me about the quality of your mat I am sure you will be interested in our experiments.

Very truly yours,
O K Shumway
President.

CKS/FH

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
340 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.
"Made in America"

(OMEDY AND PATHOS IN QUESTIONS ASKED NEWSPAPER LIBRARIANS

"When Does a Woman Become an Old Maid" Is One Poser Asked Milwaukee Journal—50,000 Questions Received by Paper Last Year he following account of the questions ich newspaper librarians are asked to nswer was run as a feature recently in Milwaukee Journal.

'HAT becomes of the fire when it goes out? Why is ice cold? Why it the snow blue or pink or green? Vy don't the stars shine in the day ie? What makes roses red? How es that great big fellow, Santa Claus, down such a small chimney with that pack on his back?

lave you been amused, and perhaps tnped, by some 4-year-old's incessant of questions, as the budding mind tted to explore this puzzling universe? Ctainly. And perhaps you have glowed wh a slightly superior feeling at your lligence and cleverness in side-tracking the questions which you really couldn't nwer.

Tayhap, too, you have breathed a oyer of thanksgiving that you have ched that adult stage where reason has aen the place of frank questioning and ld credulity. But is that adult stage to ch you have attained, through no parilar effort on your part, so very different from childhood?

it in for a few hours at the telephone a metropolitan newspaper library, test r own fund of knowledge, and then nwer that question.

)ne of more than 50,000 queries which e hurled at the Milwaukee Journal arians last year came from a mother t8:30 one morning. It was this:

How can I get my daughter out of ?"

A youth, who confessed to 29 years, ephoned to get aid in curing himself of embarrassing habit of blushing in the sence of young women.

What shall we name our twins?" inred a flustered father of the comely ng miss who answered his call in the ilary. "You see," he went on to exln, "we had decided beforehand to call baby Launcelot, but we hadn't counted a girl baby, too. Is there anything t'll fit with Launcelot for a girl, or st we rename the boy and save Launcot for another occasion?"

t 10:30 one Saturday night an excited th called to inquire if it would be sible for him to get married that night Waukegan if he and his girl hurried on the next train and if the marige would be legal if it happened to be formed after midnight.

n contrast to this query are any numof questions from both men and nen seeking information as to how to t proceedings for a divorce.

What pants shall I wear?" a male ce shouted into the phone at the young ar who received the call.

I beg your pardon?" the librarian ied.

What I mean to say is: I've only got minutes to catch a train. I've got to tnd a social function tonight and I nt to know should I wear the pants h the narrow stripes or the ones with wide stripes."

Is it formal or informal?"

Don't know."

Then you'd better take both with you, find out before you dress for the ay."

Thanks. Goodby."

nother youth called to inquire if he uld "feel all right" wearing oxfords the Marquette prom.

When does a woman become an old d?" a feminine voice inquired on anther occasion.

When she feels like one," was the nver.

Oh, thank you so much!" came the rtfelt response.

xtreme tact must be exercised by he who answer questions for fear of fending racial, religious, political or rstitious prejudices. A very small proportion of the questions asked are funny, or ridiculous.

Some contain the element of tragedy. Not long ago a woman called, a very definite note of supersitious terror in her voice, and told of a white dove (perhaps a pigeon) which had come to her home recently and refused to leave. She was certain that it was an omen of death and sought information as to how she could chase the unwelcome bird away.

"How shall we decorate the house for a funeral?" is another question which has been asked more than once.

Sometimes the inquiriers come in person to the library instead of using the telephone. A woman recently came seeking information regarding her husband, from whom she had been divorced for several years. She had heard that he was in the state penitentiary for a long term for a revolting crime. The clippings were laid before her and she read tearfully, finally bursting into a veritable typhoon of grief which attracted persons in other rooms.

"Oh, if I had only stayed by him and been good to him, he would never have done this," she wailed, as she took upon herself the blame for the terrible crime.

A story with a real heart throb in it was brought into The Journal library one afternoon by a young man scarcely 20. He was one of five children. The father and an uncle, who had supported the family, were killed in an accident when the children were young. The mother soon died of grief over the future.

"We just grew up," the youth explained. "We took care of each other and have made our own way ever since. We're making pretty good money now and we got to thinking it over the other night and decided we'd like to put a memorial notice for them in the paper."

After a painstaking scrutiny, the files of the paper finally gave up the record of the deaths of the father and uncle and the date of the mother's death was established.

It is no uncommon experience for the young women of The Journal library to be asked: "How can I get home?" Women particularly, and sometimes men, drive out into the country or the suburbs to get some fresh air and see the scenery and suddenly realize that they are lost. Their first thought, apparently, is to call Grand 6000, give their home address, tell where they are and ask what route to take to get to their homes.

"I just got a new peach colored evening gown," one woman exulted over the phone one day. "What kind of a scarf should I get to wear with it?"

"I am 18 years old," a girl said over the phone, again. "Do I have to give all my pay to my parents?"

Who was the hero of the Newhall house fire? Where can I rent chairs? How do you spell "succinct"? What does "vicariously" mean and how do you spell it? What day of the week was Dec. 12, 1895? Who is the justice of the peace at Bessemer, Mich.? What is the clavilux? What's the name of a newspaper in Moosehaven, Fla.? When was Hiram Bingham elected senator? Can you give me the weather report of October, 1923?

What's the difference between a torte and a tart? How do you pronounce "Worcester"? What should I do to remove ink stains? What's the difference between Buddhism and Mohammedanism? Is it Broadway "street" or "avenue"? What is the population of Wisconsin? What is the acreage of Washington park? Has Wisconsin a motto and what is it? Is there a home for a male deer?

How does one go about getting a Carnegie medal? When was the grain elevator fire in Bay View? What is the highest point in Milwaukee? How much older is Chicago than Milwaukee? What do I bid if I have the ace, queen, ten of hearts, jack, 10?—bridge questions that the experts never thought of.

387,934

THE net paid circulation of The New York Times, average daily and Sunday for the six months ended March 31, 1925, as reported to the Post Office Department, is 387,934. This represents actual sales; The Times accepts no returns. The circulation for the corresponding period of 1924 was 378,174.

Never before has a newspaper which makes its appeal to thoughtful, intelligent people attained this volume of circulation.

Without comics, without puzzles, without any other matter extraneous to the news, The New York Times is strictly a newspaper.

Its news service is unequaled in quality, accuracy and completeness. Its advertising columns are informative, clean and trustworthy.

The circulation record for twenty-nine years shows a steady increase:

1896	21,516
1900	82,206
1905	120,710
1910	191,981
1915	*298,248
1920	*351,939
1924	*378,174
1925	*387,934

Average net paid daily and Sunday circulation reported to the Post Office Department for the six months ended March 31, in accordance with act of Congress, August 24, 1912.*

The New York Times

Read The New York Times—it's a liberal education

Supremacy i

The Pittsburgh Press long has been the strongly dominant pape in the great Pittsburgh market—one of the outstanding and leadin papers in America.

And Pittsburgh Press circulation figures continue to CLIMB!

April 1, 1925 sworn net paid figures, Government Statement
(and A. B. C.) are

Daily - - - 172,102
Sunday - - 235,934

This is an increase, daily, of 9,115

—and an increase, Sunday, of 13,504

—over the preceding six month period.

THE PITTS

A SCRIPPS-
MEM

Represented in the National Ad

New York Chicago Cleveland

Pittsburgh!

Press Circulation for MARCH
(A. B. C. basis)

Daily - - - 179,164
Sunday - - 246,164

During March, The Pittsburgh Press led the next two Pittsburgh papers COMBINED by more than 287,000 lines of advertising. And during March, The Press carried 18,586 more classified ads than ALL OTHER Pittsburgh papers COMBINED.

Few papers show so overwhelming a leadership in both circulation and advertising volume as does this "giant of the newspaper world." Only two evening and Sunday newspapers, besides The Press—in the entire United States—carried 23,000,000 lines or more of advertising during 1924.

The Press is first in everything in Pittsburgh—total circulation—city circulation—total advertising—local display advertising—classified advertising—national advertising; and The Press has no near competitor.

URGH PRESS

RD NEWSPAPER
IE A. B. C.

g Field by Allied Newspapers, Inc.

San Francisco Los Angeles Cincinnati

SUPREME IN

The circulation of the Cleveland Press, sworn statement to the Government for the six months ending March 31, 1925, is:

201,364

This is a circulation increase over the preceding six months' period of 6,549

The Press is absolutely supreme in Cleveland —FIRST in total circulation; FIRST in city circulation; FIRST in Cleveland advertising.

THE CLEVE

A SCRIPPS-HO

Member

The Cleveland Press is represen

Allied Ne

NEW YORK: 52 Vanderbilt Avenue

CLEVELAND SAN FRANCIS

CLEVELAND

The Press, as compared with the second paper, has a circulation lead of 10,194

And Press circulation gains still continue!

Press net paid circulation for March, 1925 was 213,855

AND PRESS

NEWSPAPER
B. C.

national advertising field by pers, Inc.

CHICAGO: Wrigley Building
ANGELES CINCINNATI

*Again and Always---*FIRST!

FIRST IN CINCINNATI

The Cincinnati Post's net paid daily average circulation for MARCH was 174,838

The net paid circulation of The Post for the six months period ending March 31 (sworn Government statement) was 167,983

THE CINC

A SCRIPPS-HO

Member of the Audit Bureau of Circ

ALLIED

NEW YORK CHICAGO CLEVE

*Again and Always---*FIRST!

The Cincinnati Post

—has continuously held the largest circulation of any newspaper in Cincinnati, daily or Sunday, with more than fifteen consecutive years of leadership.

—at

One Cost

—you can thoroughly cover Cincinnati and blanket Southern Ohio, Northern Kentucky and parts of Indiana and West Virginia.

List the SUPREME paper—again and always FIRST in Cincinnati

NATI POST

NEWSPAPER

Represented in the National Advertising Field by

PERS, Inc.

SAN FRANCISCO LOS ANGELES CINCINNATI

AGENCIES SEEK CONTROL OF RADIOED NEWS

Twenty-Five European Services Combine In Movement and Ask That Berne Resolutions Be Made Agenda to Washington Conference—U. S. Wire Services Approve Action

SEEKING to make wider use of wireless for news dispatches possible, an international movement by press associations to adopt universal radio regulations is under way.

Illicit picking up of wirelessed news is the evil, authorities behind the move hope to kill.

Announcement to this affect was made this week in New York by F. Douglas Williams, American general manager for Reuters Limited.

Mr. Williams informed EDITOR & PUBLISHER he had been appointed by Sir Roderick Jones, managing director of Reuters, to take the matter up before the International Radio-Telegraph Convention to be held in Washington next fall.

At this convention the Associated Press, the United Press Associations, International News Service, and Universal Service will be represented.

Mr. Williams will submit a set of resolutions regarding the regulation of wireless telegraphy which was adopted last June by 25 European news agencies at a convention fathered by Reuters held at Berne, Switzerland.

These resolutions, Mr. Williams said, will shortly be presented to Secretary of State Kellogg with the suggestion that they be accepted as far as possible as part of the agenda to the Washington convention.

"This is a splendid move," Karl Bickel, president of the United Press Associations, declared. "We are entirely in accord with it. We have long been combating wireless news theft, especially in the Far East."

Measures proposed for press news protection by the Berne convention, signed by 25 news agencies headed by Reuters, make the following points:

1. Means of secret transmission for news.
2. Limiting receiving range of all private stations.
3. Adoption by all administrations and companies of a sure but rapid means of ciphering, including as far as possible, general adoption of ciphering machines.
4. Provision of penalties, including payment of damages, confiscation of apparatus and forfeiture of license for violation of secrecy of radio messages.
5. Provision for delivery to addresses only of press messages broadcast to collective or circular, but nevertheless definite, addresses.
6. Fixing of a word rate for press broadcasts, irrespective of number of addresses included in the collective artificial address.
7. Reduction of present telegraphic press rates.
8. Extension of press rates to all hours and not just to limited hours of transmission.

The conference adopted a resolution regarding radio telephony, based on the assertion that the radiotelephone is a menace to the news agencies by depriving them of their means of livlihood, and a menace to the public through the easy spreading of "uncontrolled" press news. The resolution requires the license to stipulate that the broadcaster will not spread "political, commercial, financial or other news" except when furnished by a "recognized" news agency.

A further resolution was passed regarding the copyright of press news. It proposes uniform legislation in this matter, and argues presenting to the public a news item constitutes a personnel organization, effort and labor which should be protected. The resolution proposes that the copyright on all news obtained by a paper or news agency will be considered the property of the paper or agency so long as the commercial value of the news lasts. It proposes, further, to include in the next Hague convention (based on the Washington-Paris Convention of 1883-1911 for the protection of industrial copyrights) among the unfair acts for which penalties are provided, the unauthorized reproduction and use, for gain, of news, especially political, commercial, economic and financial news.

From Washington EDITOR & PUBLISHE learned this week, that the United States Government would shortly issue invitations to some 50 governments to send delegates to the International Radio-Telegraph Convention at which this press wireless subject will be given consideration together with radio broadcasting, radio telephony and other developments of the radio science.

Washington officials believe sessions of the conference will last about three months before a convention supplanting that agreed upon at the London conference in 1912 is negotiated and signed.

Great developments have taken place since 1912 in radio communication, and it is necessary to consider the regulation of communications by radio between shore stations located in different countries and also to deal with the subject of radio broadcasting, radio telephony and other radio developments.

It is thought likely that the foreign governments who participate may send on an average three delegates each, accompanied by technical advisers.

The United States Congress at its last session appropriated $75,000 to meet the expenses of the conference and an additional $9,000 unexpended from the appropriations to meet the expenses of the American delegates at the Inter-American Committee on Electrical Communications held at Mexico City in 1924 will be devoted to the expenses of the conference, making a total of $84,000 available.

The text of the resolutions signed by the 25 European news agencies at the conference held in Berne June 6-11, 1924, follows in full:

FIRST RESOLUTION

To seek out and put into effect, all possible technical means or devices to prevent the unauthorized picking up of news, especially:

1. By the adoption by the agencies of such methods of emission as would prevent outsiders from receiving the agencies' wireless material.
2. By authorizing the installation or maintenance of private receiving sets only after having taken all necessary measures to limit receiving capacity of the sets.
3. (a) By the putting into use by the Administrations of simple, although reliable codes, thus permitting rapid decoding.

(b) Especially by the adoption as generally as possible, of standardized automatic coding and decoding machines, for which patents have already been taken out by certain commercial firms.

SECOND RESOLUTION

To put on the same footing as those crimes which are punishable by fine and a prison term, or both, and to specify clearly by legislative action, violations of secrecy of radio communication, and the illicit employ of radio, and to add to the above penalties the seizure of the set and the withdrawal of permit, as is now being done in a certain number of countries.

THIRD RESOLUTION

To adopt an international regulation governing radio message service in the case where a message with a common address is sent to receivers in different countries which as a rule do not deliver notice of the receipt of such messages. Such radio messages should be delivered only to the addresses, and should be received only by them.

FOURTH RESOLUTION

To have adopted and put into effect, by the Administration and wireless companies in the different countries, of the principle already adopted by some of them, of multiple or circular radio messages upon which an average tax per word is charged at the sending point, whatever may be the number of addresses.

FIFTH RESOLUTION

(a) To reduce the press rate actually in existence in international tariffs.

(b) To extend the press rate beyond the time limits now existing for press messages sent by way of telephone or telegraph radio.

To have discussed at the next international radio conference the foregoing resolutions in so far as there has not already been adopted or considered a program permitting the execution of such resolutions in the countries participating in the conference.

Signers of the resolutions are:

Continental Telegraphen Company, Germany; Amtliche Telegraphen Company, Austria; Agence Telegraphique Belge, Belgium; Bulgarska Telegrafna Agentzia, Bulgaria; Ritzaus Bureau, Denmark; Agencie Telegrafica Fabras, Spain; Eesti Telegraafi Agentuur, Esthonia; Suomen Tietotoimisto, Finland; Agence Havas, France; Reuters Limited, Great Britain; Agence d' Athenes, Greece; Magyar Tavirati Iroda, Hungary; Agenzia Stefani, Italy; Latiijas Telegrafa Agentura, Lativia; Lietivos Telegrafa Agentura, Lithuania; Norks Telegrambyran, Norway; Nederlandsch Telegraaf Agentschap, Holland; Polska Agencja Telegraficzna, Poland; Agence Havas Portland branch; Orient-Radio Radio Rumania; Agence Rosta, Russia; Tidningarnas Telegrambyra, Sweden; Agence Telegraphique Suisse, Switzerland; Ceskoslovenska Tiskova Kancelar, Czechoslovakia; Agence Avala, Jugoslavia.

You Can Produce a Better Newspaper

Without Increasing Your Costs

IF working conditions in your ad alleys have forced you to make expensive single-type replacements recently, —Investigate the Ludlow!

If you have been forced to use old, worn, battered or broken type along side of new type and thus lower the typographic quality of your paper, —Investigate the Ludlow!

If you would be rid of all single-type worries such as hunting sorts, picking from live ads and standing forms, —Investigate the Ludlow!

If you would save the time now used for distributing dead forms, —Investigate the Ludlow!

If you wish to print every issue of your paper from new, sharp display faces, and all without increasing printing costs, —Investigate the Ludlow!

With the Ludlow in your plant, you will banish these time-worn handicaps, and in their place have an all-slug composing room system that will supply you at will with an abundance of new, clear-cut printing faces in slug lines always instantly available as needed in any size up to 60 point, including bold and extended, and without machine changes of any kind.

Ludlow Typograph Co.

2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

San Francisco Boston Atlanta New York

Times-Press

Is Now Akron's DOMINANT NEWSPAPER!

There's a NEW story in Akron! The consolidation of two papers has changed the situation! The Times-Press is now Akron's DOMINANT newspaper!!

The Akron Press purchased the Akron Times, the consolidation being effective March 16, 1925.

Before the consolidation, the two separate papers had a combined circulation of 48,332 and a combined advertising rate amounting to 14c a line.

For the present, the new rate for the consolidated Times-Press, daily and Sunday, is only 8c a line

All the editorial features of both papers have been retained. The two staffs of local and suburban reporters have been combined. The famous editorials of W. Kee Maxwell, former editor of the Akron Times will be continued. No feature or news service of either paper has been omitted. The two papers were of similar editorial policy and the new Times-Press is meeting with a highly enthusiastic reception by former readers of both papers.

The Times-Press is giving Akron readers one of the finest newspapers ever published.

At the present rate of only 8c a line, The Times-Press, dominant in circulation, is a particularly attractive "buy" for advertisers.

THE AKRON TIMES-PRESS

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

NEW YORK
CHICAGO
CLEVELAND

Represented in the National Advertising field by

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.

SAN FRANCISCO
LOS ANGELES
CINCINNATI

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

ABSOLUTE TRUTH NECESSARY

"MODERN journalism is constantly striving toward a higher ethical standard. Absolute truth, concise and definite statement of fact and perfect integrity are the qualities desired and necessary for success in he newspaper field today."—Julian S. Mason, Managing Editor, New York Herald Tribune.

* * *

DEFINING THE EDITORIAL PAGE

"IN a spiritual sense the editorial page of a newspaper is its soul. In a material sense the editorial page is its backbone. Everything about a newspaper can be largely determined by an examination of the regular product appearing on its editorial page."—Frank O. Edgecombe, Editor, Geneva (Neb.) Signal.

* * *

WASTE IN ADVERTISING

"FROM the background of an experience of 18 years in observing and handling advertising, I am convinced that many and probably most of the charges of waste in advertising are unfounded at the present time. Unquestionably there is waste, just as there is some waste in every process of production or distribution. There is a good deal of apparent waste in the processes of nature. Our concern must be to reduce the proportion of waste to the minimum."—W. H. Hodge, President, Public Utilities Advertising Assn.

* * *

WHAT IS NEWS?

"THERE is no greater moral and ethical question before the newspaper makers today than the one, 'What is News?' * * * I cannot refrain here and now from saying that I hope we shall some time define news as 'information or opinions that have for their purpose the betterment of humanity and the mitigation of its ills.' To say it in another way, news should be that the publication of which would make men and the conditions under which they live better."—Joseph G. Alden, Editor, York (Neb.) Republican.

* * *

THE FLAW IN COPY WRITING

"ADVERTISING men differ in their powers as much as writers of any other kind; some men can write one thing, some another. It is one of the curses of the advertising business, however, to believe that a man who has shown a masterly of one kind of a public thus understands all kinds. * * * If there is any indictment that can be made in a general way of advertising, it is that it betrays in too many cases a lack of comprehension of the consumer it is endeavoring to influence.—E. St. Elmo Lewis, Vice-President, Campbell-Ewald Company, Detroit.

WEEK'S AD TIPS

Acorn Agency, Inc., 56 West 45th street, New York. Placing orders with some New York Newspapers for J. A. Finn Company, "Ming Soie" silk, New York.

N. W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Placing orders with newspapers generally for the Joint Coffee Trade Publicity Committee, New York.

Brennan-Eley Company, 922 Republic Building, Chicago. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for J. L. Kraft & Bros. Company, Kraft Cheese, Chicago.

Chambers Agency, 614 Maison Blanche Building, New Orleans. Has secured the account of the Chamberlain Hunt Academy, Port Gibson.

Nelson Chesman & Company, 1127 Pine street, St. Louis. Has secured the account of the Val Blatz Brewing Company, Milwaukee.

Maxton R. Davies Company, Keith Building, Cleveland. Now handling account of the Star Rubber Company, Inc., Star tires, Akron.

John F. Delaney Company, 326 West Madison street, Chicago. The Conlon Corporation, Chicago, manufacturers of washing machines, advertising in a few towns where they can secure dealers and cooperation.

Dorrance, Sullivan & Company, 130 West 42nd street, New York. Has secured the account of the American Cigar Company, New York.

Federal Advertising Agency, 6 East 39th street, New York. Now handling account of Wm. M. Crane & Company, smooth top ranges, gas ranges, New York.

Paul Florian Company, 122 South Michigan avenue, Chicago. Newspapers in six metropolitan cities will receive copy on Clinton Carpet Company, Ozite Carpets, Chicago, Ill.

Richard A. Foley Advertising Agency, 219 North Broad street, Philadelphia. Placing orders with some Southern newspapers for Geo. D. Wetherill & Company, paints, Philadelphia.

Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, 450 4th avenue, New York. Has secured the accounts of the Pickwick Candy Company and Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient.

F. H. Greene Agency, Parsons Building, Buffalo. Reported will shortly place orders for the Markeen Hotel, Buffalo.

Guenther-Bradford & Company, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Reported to have secured account of A. J. Kasper Company, "Turkey" coffee, Chicago.

E. T. Howard Company, 33 West 42nd street, New York. Placing orders with some Eastern newspapers for Carbona Products Company, New York.

H. W. Kastor & Sons Company, 14 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Canadian papers receiving schedules on the Wabash Railway, St. Louis, Mo. Papers in the southwest receiving orders on the Puritan Malt Extract Company, Chicago.

Klau-Van Pieterson-Dunlap-Youngreen, 417 Sycamore street, Milwaukee. Now handling account of the Western Metal Specialty Company, Milwaukee.

Lord & Thomas, 724 South Spring street, Los Angeles. Has been retained to conduct a special institutional advertising campaign for the Pacific Electric Railway.

C. P. McDonald Company, Fisk Building, New York. Placing orders with newspapers generally for the Cycle Trades of America, bicycles, New York.

Bruce Morgan Company, 30 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Reported will place western advertising account of Hanan & Son, shoes, Chicgao.

Peck Advertising Agency, 6 East 39th street, New York. Has secured the following accounts: Cadet Knitting Company, hosiery, Philadelphia and the Art Metal Construction Company, Jamestown, N. Y.

William H. Rankin Company, 342 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with some Pennsylvania newspapers for the Manhattan Rome Company, Long Island City.

Stack Advertising Agency, 29 East Madison street, Chicago. Copy being distributed to a general list of newspapers on the Sante Fe Railway, Chicago.

Stewart-Davis Advertising Agency, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Reported to be placing orders with newspapers for the Stearns Electric Paste Company, Chicago.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 410 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. North Carolina papers receiving copy on the Richardson Roofing Company, Lockland, O.

Turner-Wagener Company, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Reported to have secured the accounts of Rumley-Robbins Company, threshers, Sycamore, Ill., and Russell Water Softener Company, Chicago.

Williams & Cunnvngham, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Florida newspapers receiving copy on the Phelps-Hendrickson Company. A small list of papers in the southwestern territory receiving contracts on the Sun Oil Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

SIX PRIZES FOR ADVERTISING TYPOGRAPHY

The Advertising Department of The New York Times offers six prizes for the best typography for an advertisement 100 agate lines deep by 3 columns wide.

First Prize	$100	Fourth Prize	$25
Second Prize	$50	Fifth Prize	$25
Third Prize	$25	Sixth Prize	$25

Entries in proof form must be received by Saturday, April 25, 1925, addressed

Typographical Contest
Advertising Department

The New York Times

TIMES SQUARE NEW YORK

Text of the advertisement:

Strictly a Newspaper—
For Intelligent, Thoughtful People

The New York Times

"All the News That's Fit to Print"

Without Comics Without Puzzles
Without Equal in Completeness and Quality of News

Daily, Over 350,000
Sunday, Over 600,000

Its Advertising Columns are Informative—Clean—Trustworthy

The New York Times accepts no returns
Newsdealers can supply only the regular demand.
Order in advance.

The Best Is Not Too Good for You
Read The New York Times—
It's a Liberal Education

Youngstown Telegram
FIRST
again, again and—again!

The growth of the Youngstown Telegram continues—the supremacy of the Youngstown Telegram continues!

Sworn statements of net paid circulation to the Government follow:

April 1, 1925 31,311
October 1, 1924 30,029
April 1, 1924 28,285

The Telegram carries more Youngstown advertising than any other Youngstown daily. Dominant in circulation and advertising!

The Telegram offers the best home contact with metropolitan Youngstown which includes Niles, Warren, Poland, Girard, Mineral Ridge, Hubbard, East Youngstown, Struthers, Lowelville, Newton Falls with a combined population exceeding 200,000.

The Youngstown Telegram

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

REPRESENTED IN THE NATIONAL ADVERTISING FIELD BY

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.

NEW YORK CHICAGO CLEVELAND SAN FRANCISCO
LOS ANGELES CINCINNATI

EDITORIAL

BRITISH ADVERTISING RATES

WHEN the talk is of British newspaper methods, as compared with those in general American application, the premise upon which all usually agree is that the British publishers levy a far higher tariff on their advertisers than do the metropolitan dailies of the United States. The English newspaper man accepts the situation complacently; the American sighs for a similar formula. Never, to our knowledge, has anyone attempted to reduce the apparently contrasting systems to a comparable basis.

British newspaper advertising space is ordinarily sold by the inch, occasionally by the page, and in a few cases by the "square"—the vertical dimension of which equals the column width. Its price is, of course, quoted in pounds, shillings and pence. The flat rate basis prevails to a greater extent on the larger dailies of Great Britain than in the United States, where complicated schedules are still the rule for local retail advertising. The London publisher concerns himself little with the elaborate distinctions between local and general advertising that American publishers have found necessary. All of these conditions tend to minimize the overhead carried by the British publisher as compared with that of his American colleague, and therefore to increase his net return.

But, passing that, and reducing the British rate cards to dollars and cents and their inch rates to an agate line basis, it appears that the British advertiser pays little more, if any, than does the American, for the privilege of reaching so many thousand or million readers. Taken at random from the latest statistics available and translated into American units, here are some interesting statistics on the London dailies:

Newspaper	Circulation	Agate Line Rate	Rate Per Line Per Million Circulation
Daily Mail	1,745,853	*$2.40	$1.37
Evening News	761,311	1.37	1.79
Daily Chronicle	980,508	1.54	1.57
Daily Express	850,000	1.11	1.31
Daily Mirror (tabloid)	1,000,000	1.55	1.55
Daily News	615,755	.77	1.25
Weekly Dispatch	728,460	1.20	1.64
News of the World	3,500,000	4.28	1.22

Here are some corresponding figures from dailies of American cities:

Newspaper	Circulation	Agate Line Rate	Rate Per Line Per Million Circulation
New York Herald-Tribune	270,159	$0.516	$1.91
Sunday edition	316,585	.559	1.77
New York Evening Journal	666,686	1.25	1.87
New York Daily News	786,398	1.10	1.40
New York Sunday News	807,279	1.00	1.24
New York Times	352,100	.66	1.87
New York Sunday Times	569,623	.792	1.39
New York World	378,912	.44	1.16
New York Sunday World	559,875	.44	.95
New York American	297,420	.60	2.02
New York Sunday American	1,054,933	1.75	1.42
Chicago Daily News	392,731	.65	1.66
Chicago Herald-Examiner	348,005	.55	1.58
Chicago Sunday Herald-Examiner	1,018,917	1.10	1.08
Chicago Tribune	608,130	.90	1.48
Chicago Sunday Tribune	920,638	1.25	1.36
Philadelphia Bulletin	516,609	.60	1.16

The comparison is evident. The British rates per inch or line are high only because their circulations are much larger than is possible in America today. London's dailies have at their doorstep an area the size of New York State, all of it within a day's ride, and living within it, 45,000,000 people. Their tariffs are not exorbitant by American standards; they are not even high, and with the movement toward certified circulations gaining adherents, it is not unreasonable to expect that rates will be higher. And speaking of circulations, it should be mentioned here that this comparison brought to light a typographical error in the listing of British newspapers in the 1925 International Year Book. The Evening Standard, which is one of several London dailies that do not state their circulation figures, is listed as having a daily average sale of 1,500,000 copies. No official of the Evening Standard has ever made any such claim and Editor & Publisher regrets this error in an otherwise correct presentation of important facts.

British circulations are large by our standards and they are expected to bring a profit to the newspaper, irrespective of the volume of advertising that comes in their wake. Cost of white paper, ink, and circulation promotion, it may be assumed, are covered and a handsome margin left over when the newsdealers make their returns to the publisher.

BRANCHES OF PALM TREES

ST. JOHN, XII—12 to 14

ON the next day much people that were come to the feast, when they heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem, Took branches of palm trees, and went forth to meet Him, and cried, Hosanna: Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord.

DECLARE THE PUBLIC IN

ST. PAUL DISPATCH is running a sensible local feature on its first page, which deserves imitation. The city is planning a new city hall. Each day the Dispatch asks citizens where the city hall should be located, with amplified reasons.

The people of a city often need to be reminded that public affairs are their business. The newspaper is the mouthpiece of the citizenship.

Pure cynicism underlies the common notion that the public is not interested in the affairs of city, state and nation, as may be demonstrated by any enterprising editor who proceeds to "declare the public in," by the simple process of interviewing and the publication of letters on public questions.

The cross-word puzzle is now flourishing in England, Japan and Germany, but France remains calm and disinterested.

WRONG PRINCIPLE

IF a newspaper is not to function in such matters as giving to its readers the news of the actions of the community's law-making bodies, its mission is small indeed. The Michigan proposal that the proceedings of village councils be published in local weekly newspapers as legal advertising, is a wholly unjustified imposition upon taxpayers, completely out of tune with the enduring principles of journalism. No institution has a greater sympathy with the struggles of the country press to gain material success than has Editor & Publisher, no one could have higher appreciation of the sacrifices made by weekly editors in the name of good journalism than this paper, but the way out is not to restrict such natural news as the proceedings of a village council by making it an advertising form.

April 4, 1925 Volume 57, No. 45

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
The Editor & Publisher Co.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Building.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London: The Advertising World represents Editor & Publisher for the British Isles, 14 King Street, Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34 rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokio: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50.

THE PINCH HITTER

THERE is nothing in commercial life comp to the newspaper in opportunity to ser classes at all times, in fair weather and f season and out of season, up and down the gra fluctuating prosperity. In times of healthy re ment, following abnormal bursts of trade, the paper serves its finest business cause. It fac the action of the positive spirits in business wh most aggressively when the sledge is moving When commerce is driving the daily press' bu columns are first to respond. Sometimes we w if all business men really understand and app the 365-day per year flexibility of the daily pre its power to pinch hit when the game requires th ball shall be lifted to safe quarters. We kn numerous national advertising accounts that sho running this Spring in newspapers, rather th media where sales processes are necessarily slo

---

Senator Jim Reed, of Missouri, last w declared that ninety per cent of the newspap of the land are run by morons, for reve only, thereby reserving for himself a ten cent hole to crawl through in case of emerge

---

ANOTHER FALSE IMAGE

THE picture that some of the correspond attendance upon the trial of the criminal man have drawn of that man have justifi common criticism that in its treatment of crim the so-called sensational newspaper glorifies de characters and makes infamy attractive.

Chapman is called "arch criminal" and descri of superior intellect, magnificent courage, ma ability and a true genius in evading the conse of evil toward his fellow man. F. P. A. in his ning Tower" described a court scene as depic the press accounts and declared: "Anybod doesn't envy Chapman the feeling that must hav his at that moment isn't human." And that's th

An editorial writer for the Hearst newspa New York took the romance out of the tel accounts of the Chapman murder trial by com the criminal to a rat that has slipped out of only to be caught again, and showing that this c is really a weak, miserable, hunted wretch wh is a complete failure. This was the true pict course, and was sorely needed to offset a false of heroism.

D. P. R. Paid.—No. 57894631. Hon. Reed, Kansas City, Mo. Please wire P. Collect names and addresses ten per American editors and publishers who are commercial morons. Thanx. A. Moron.

SCHOOL NEWS

TWENTY to thirty per cent of the popula the normal American city is composed of children. On every side we see editors c to this important class of readers. Children entertainment in newspapers and get it in full m but a newspaper's function does not end th any means. News of school affairs is not or to children but to their parents, and it sells papers and makes valuable friends.

We have been noticing interesting work alo line by the Lowell (Mass.) Evening Ledg weekly page of news from the public sch written by selected scholars from each school city. The page is smartly edited by E. A. of the Ledger staff, who organized the depa The feature has added circulation and has to the paper many evidences of appreciatio children, their parents' and school authoritie have co-operated in the enterprise and have ac edged the educational advantage in having youngsters doing practical newspaper writing. is keen competition among the children honored post of class correspondent.

It is suggested that in cities where th flourishing organizations of boy and girl weekly news pages can also be operated with of success. When you forget to serve child forget a quarter of your people.

PERSONALS

NELIUS VANDERBILT, JR., been made an honorary member International Printing Pressmen sistants Union of North America.

rt P. Scripps of the Scripps- newspapers was entertained in April 1, as guest of honor of the American Press Association. Fol- the luncheon Mr. Scripps made a dress upon American interpreta- European news and outlined the policies of the Scripps-Howard bers in connection with the amount play of European news.

lr Lew B. Brown, editor and or of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent, the famous "Sun- aper" of St. Petersburg, and Mrs. have made reservations to sail ew York on the Mauretania, May spend three or four months in

A. Park, publisher of the Raleigh Times, W. C. Dowd, Sr., pub- f the Charlotte (N. C.) News, s. Dowd, and P. H. Batte, pub- the Wilmington (N. C.) Morn- r, recently returned from a ten to Bermuda.

K. Grondahl, publisher and edi- the Red Wing (Minn.) Daily an, is taking his vacation in s P. Merrill, vice-president and manager of the Ludlow Typo- ompany, Chicago, has returned rs. Merrill from an extended he Pacific coast.

Miller, editor, South Bend returned recently from a trip rnia.

rd E. Carpenter, of Carpenter & ional advertising representatives, been in ill health for three years, unced his intention of remaining da for the spring months where owly regaining his strength.

THE BUSINESS OFFICE

LEVY has resigned as circula- manager of the New York Bulletin.

G. Barrett, advertising man- the Raleigh (W. Va.) Register, Barrett are parents of twins, a girl, born March 23.

nd Mrs. Frank Dancy Caruthers York will sail April 7 for rance, via Cherbourg, for a va- n the Continent. Mr. Caruthers mber of the New York World staff.

Grabhorn, formerly with the geles Evening Herald has suc- E. A. Barrymore on the Los Daily News advertising staff.

H. Comer, formerly with the ublishing Company succeeds M. e.

H. West, formerly with the Cusack Company, outdoor ad- , has been appointed Philadel- resentative of the Camden (N. -Telegram.

E. Anderson, for the last sev- s manager of national advertis- the Lincoln (Neb.) Star, has e advertising department of the Farmer, Lincoln.

Margaret J. Sines, of the Tren- s business office, is convalescing a serious operation performed at n hospital.

THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

DB HOLLAND has been pro- ted from day editor, Miami Herald, to editorial writer. He place of Dr. J. Delman Kuy- who has for three years written for the Herald and also served r of the Union Congrega- rch of Coconut Grove, a Miami

. Murphy, editor of the Marsh- e.) Southwestern Oregon Daily s resigned to become secretary of the Marshfield Chamber of Commerce.

B. S. Griffith, state editor of the Charlotte (N. C.) News has been made managing editor succeeding J. A. Daly who takes the post of city editor. A. D. Jones, reporter becomes state editor.

Miss Sara Ross, for the past year telegraph editor of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Independent, has left for New York where she will sail for abroad to be married in Antwerp to Harry L. Porter, Jr., a mining engineer.

Mrs. Louis Love, who has been broadcasting through a Philadelphia station for the last two years, has joined the staff of special writers of the Philadelphia Record.

Clarence S. Martin, telegraph editor of the Oswego (N. Y.) Palladium, has resigned to join the New York state comtroller's office at Albany.

John G. Dickson has resigned as news editor of the Greensboro (N. C.) Daily News to do feature writing and special correspondence.

H. F. C. Duberg, for several years editor of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Telegram has resigned. Jack Gardiner, recently with Montreal newspapers has undertaken editorial direction of the Bridgeport Post, Telegram and Sunday Post. Howard I. Comstock, has been named city editor of the Telegram and Harry F. Smith and Elliott W. Platt assistants.

Richard L. Young resigned April 1, from the city staff of the Charlotte (N. C.) News.

Lewis Yeager, for 15 years court house reporter of the Spokane (Wash.) Spokesman-Review has resigned to enter the technical end of the moving picture industry in Los Angeles.

Mason Hood, Charlotte (N. C.) News reporter and L. J. Hampton of the staff of the Winston-Salem (N. C.) Journal, returned recently from a 10-day trip to Bermuda.

Frank Smith, formerly of the Butler (Okla.) Herald, and recently of the Lawton (Okla.) Bee staff, will succeed the late J. L. Lawton as editor of the Arapaho (Okla.) Bee.

J. Clarke Waldron, formerly with the Chicago Tribune, St. Louis Star and St. Louis Times is enrolled as a student in the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri.

W. R. Beaumeir has resigned from the San Antonio Express reportorial staff.

Claude Carmichael, graduate of the School of Journalism, University of Missouri, has been appointed editor and manager of the Okeman (Okla.) Okfuskee County News.

Harry Ferguson, formerly on the staff of the Chicago Herald-Examiner, is now in the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri.

Willard Williams, reporter for the Westport (Conn.) Standard is recovering from a recent severe illness.

Ray Humphreys of the Denver Post reportorial staff has been ordered to San Antonio, Tex., for two weeks training in the Officers Reserve Corps.

W. B Gatewood, formerly with Universal Service at Fort Worth, is now on the staff of the San Antonio Light.

H. G. Head has returned to the San Antonio Evening News copy desk from the Kansas City bureau of the International News Service.

Cliff Wesselmann, formerly cartoonist on the Lexington (Ky.) Herald, is drawing a weekly feature for The Billboard entitled "Celebrities in Caricature."

Thomas J. Cullen and George Reinhardt, have joined the Bridgeport (Conn.) Post staff.

Ted Brewer has resigned from the San Antonio Evening News reportorial staff.

Miss Laura Schmitz, former city editor of the Chillicothe (Mo.) Tribune, has been appointed a member of the Board of Regents of the Northwest Missouri State Teachers College at Maryville, Mo., the first woman to be so honored.

Paul Dollman, formerly of Philadelphia, Milwaukee and Albany newspapers, has joined the copy desk staff of the New York American.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

JOHN H. CASEY, assistant professor in the School of Journalism, University of Missouri, was raised on printer's ink in the plant of the Knoxville (Ia.) Express which his father, W. J. Casey has been publishing for the past 40 years.

JOHN H. CASEY

Upon being graduated from the school in which he now teaches in 1920, Mr. Casey became editor of the farm and market pages of the Nashville (Tenn.) Tennessean, under the well known Col. Luke Lea. Before the year was up, he went to the Orient to join the B. W. Fleisher publications of Tokio, Japan, where he was on the staff of the Japan Advertiser and later was advertising manager and assistant editor of the Trans-Pacific Magazine. He remained in Tokio two years.

After returning by way of China, the Suez Canal and Europe, Mr. Casey covered the state capitol for the Des Moines (Ia.) Register during the summer of 1923. In the fall, he was appointed assistant professor in his Alma Mater where he is in charge of courses in The Country Newspaper, Trade and Technical Journalism, The Agricultural Press, Typography, Newspaper Office Management and Country Newspaper Production.

Mr. Casey's 12 students in Country Newspaper Production publish an eight page typical country weekly for Boone County, Mo., the Herald-Statesman, the first attempt of its kind by any School of Journalism. This paper was started this year in addition to the Columbia Evening Missourian, the daily newspaper published by all the students in the School.

Frank Mallon has been promoted to editor of the lobster trick of the New York Evening Graphic.

Leonard Smith, Albany correspondent of the New York Evening Post, is spending a week's vacation at his home, Montclair, N. J.

Gene Flack, feature writer for several years for the Chicago Herald and Examiner, recently left that newspaper to enter the advertising field.

Miss Betty Martin Snyder, former police court reporter on the Hagerstown (Md.) Daily Mail, has resigned because of ill health.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

EINAR HANSON from editor and manager Madelia (Minn.) Rural News to advertising manager, Chippewa Falls (Wis.) Herald.

Harry Tarvin, from Denver Rocky Mountain News to reportorial force, Denver Post.

H. Conrad Harvey, from classified advertising department, Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Evening Gazette, to advertising staff, St. Joseph (Mo.) Gazette.

P. B. Willett, from Los Angeles Times, to art department, San Antonio Express and Evening News.

John P. Ferguson, from telegraph editor, Buffalo Times, to copy desk, New York World.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

KENT COOPER, assistant general manager of the Associated Press, left this week on a week's business trip through the Southern states.

William Turner, far eastern manager for Reuters, Limited, in Shanghai, China, is on his way to England on vacation. He will be in New York next week, sailing for England, April 13.

C. N. Griffis, correspondent of the United Press at Lima, arrived Thursday aboard the Aconcagua for a brief vacation. Griffis, in addition to representing the United Press, is editor and principal owner of the Lima West Coast Leader, an English language weekly, and recently founded a new weekly in English at Panama.

Floyd Williamson, former night city editor of the Associated Press New York office, more recently correspondent in Pittsburgh, Pa., has been appointed correspondent in Boston, Mass. He is succeeded by P. P. Cronin, Jr.

WITH THE SPECIALS

MERWIN R. CRAWFORD, for the past ten years with national advertising mediums in the New York and Chicago territories, has joined the New York office of Wm. J. Morton Company, publishers' representatives.

John Budd Company's Pacific Coast offices are now located in the Sharon Building, 55 New Montgomery street, San Francisco. Walter L. Doty is in charge. Associated with him is C. Gabriel Payne.

John M. Branhan Company, publishers' representative, after April 10, will occupy new and larger offices in the London Guarantee & Accident Building, 360 North Michigan Boulevard, Chicago.

MARRIED

JAMES R. AARON, formerly connected with the Trenton Times advertising department, to Miss Helen Keephart of the Times business office.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

ST. PETERSBURG (Fla.) TIMES, 172-page Festival of State edition, March 22.

Mexico City Excelsior, 8th anniversary edition, March 18.

London (O.) Madison Press, 32-page Spring edition.

WITH THE ADVERTISERS

L. T. SWALLOW has resigned as advertising manager of the Wayne Tank and Pump Company, of Fort Wayne, Ind. Mr. Swallow has been associated with the Wayne company for the past year.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

BRECKENRIDGE (MINN.) GAZETTE TELEGRAM has installed a Chandler & Price jobber, with a latest series Kluge automatic feeder and a Cheshire & Greenfield trimmer.

Edgerton (Minn.) Enterprise has put in a Johnsonized Gordon press, 11x17.

Kenyon (Minn.) Leader has purchased a Johnsonized 26-inch Oswego Lever cutter.

Tracy (Minn.) Headlight-Herald, has installed an Addressograph machine and plates for mailing list.

Marshall (Minn.) News-Messinger, has a new 34-inch Diamond power cutter.

LeRoy (N. Y.) Gazette-News, has purchased a site in Bank street of that village with a frontage of 122 feet on which a modern newspaper publishing plant will be erected.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

STRUTHERS (O.) TRIBUNE, weekly, recently purchased the Hubbard (O.) Enterprise and will continue separate publication of the paper as the Hubbard Enterprise-Tribune. The Struthers Tribune Publishing Company also publishes the East Youngstown Tribune, weekly.

Sault St. Marie (Mich.) Times, issued Sundays, has been sold to local interests and will henceforth be known as the Cloverland Telegram. The former owners were Thomas J. Green, Lansing; Merlin Wiley, Detroit; and Edward Thompson and Samuel C. Taylor, of Sault St. Marie. The names of the new owners have not been made public, but L. F. Van Allen is to be editor.

Harry E. Young, formerly of the advertising department of the Toledo News-Bee, has purchased the Genoa (O.) Gazette from William Schooler.

R. Honey, former Kansas newspaper publisher, now a resident of Yorba Linda, Cal., has taken over the newly organized Olive (Cal.) Sentinel, which has been publishing for three weeks.

Robert H. Thomas and Douglas F. Hardesty have purchased from I. E. Aucker, the Rimersburg (Pa.) Record. Mr. Thomas who is the new editor, was formerly employed by the Hagerstown (Md.) Morning Herald, and has also worked on newspapers in Baltimore, Washington and New York. J. Reed Aucker, son of the former owner will continue with the Record.

ASSOCIATIONS

INNER CIRCLE, New York organization of political writers past and present, held its annual dinner and revue March 28, at the Hotel Astor, New York. The revue this year was entitled "Cross Words" and as usual poked fun at city and state politicians. More than 1,000 attended. Charles S. Hand, of the New York American, and president of the Inner Circle, presided.

Pacific Northwest Newspaper Association will hold its spring meeting in Vancouver, B. C., April 11. The invitation was extended by R. J. Cromie, publisher, Vancouver Sun. The sessions will be held in the new Province building. J. F. Young, manager of the Spokesman-Review, of Spokane, is president of the association. Harvey J. Kelly of Spokane is secretary.

Oklahoma Press Association will hold its annual spring convention at Sulphur, May 8 and 9. Entertainment features will include a gridiron banquet, editorial ball, golf tournament, trips through Platt National Park and an outdoor supper at Turner Falls, scenic vacation center in the Arbuckle mountains.

Greater Buffalo Advertising club will conduct a cruise to Montreal this year. A four day itinerary is planned. C. V. Merlau is chairman of the cruise committee.

Advertising Club of Dubuque, Ia., has become affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. John Rider Wallis is president, and Alina M. Reiner, secretary.

SCHOOLS

A FOUR-PAGE comic supplement in colors has been added as a regular feature of the Columbia (Mo.) Herald-Statesman, laboratory product of the class in the country newspaper making at the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri. The paper is a typical eight page country weekly which circulates in Boone County. It is published under the supervision of Prof. John H. Casey.

Edwin Denby, of Detroit, former secretary of the navy, will be the principal speaker at the annual Gridiron Banquet at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, April 7th, under the auspices of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity.

Rollo Ogden, editor of the New York Times, and Edward S. Beck, editor of the Chicago Tribune, are expected to attend, and Irvin S. Cobb and Henry L. Mencken have signified their intention of being present.

"Lou Holland Chapter," of Alpha Delta Sigma, national advertising fraternity, was installed in the University of Kansas at Lawrence, Kan., last week by E. K. Johnston, professor of advertising in the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri.

The department of journalism of Tulane University, New Orleans, is providing regular work in laboratory methods in connection with the New Orleans Times-Picayune. Students in advance reporting are turned over by Dr. H. M. Blain, head of the department, to the city editor who sends them out on regular assignments.

Marc N. Goodnow, head of the University of Southern California journalism department, recently made a trip to San Pedro with his class, where they took complete charge of the editorial work on the San Pedro Pilot for one day.

Obituary

EDMUND A. FLETCHER, 75, who, when he retired in 1915, had been 38 years on the staff of the New York Tribune, died in New Jersey State Hospital, Trenton, March 28. At the time of his retirement, he was the Tribune's night editor.

MRS. GRACE VAN BRAAM GRAY, wife of Reynolds C. Moorhead, city editor of the Philadelphia Inquirer, died Saturday, March 28, from the effects of an operation. Mrs. Moorhead began her newspaper career on the now defunct Philadelphia Press about 20 years ago, later going to the Munsey paper, the Evening Times, where she held the posts of dramatic editor and later woman's page editor. After the Times was discontinued she served in various capacities on the North American, the Inquirer, and the Public Ledger.

FERDINAND BLECH, one of the pioneer printers of Los Angeles, one time business manager of the San Francisco Evening Post, and father-in-law of S. Fred Hogue, chief editorial writer of the Los Angeles Times, died recently at the home of his son Charles F. Blech in Los Angeles.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON SEATS, former city editor of the Columbia (S. C.) State and the Columbia Record, died March 26, in a hospital at Jacksonville, Fla.

GEORGE H. FITCH, 72, retired newspaper man, dropped dead recently at Arcadia, Cal. Fitch was for many years an editorial writer for the San Francisco Chronicle.

EDWARD G. INGALLS, 64, for more than 40 years employed as stereotyper on Boston and New York papers, died March 26 at his summer home at Salisbury Beach, Mass. He was employed on the New York Journal for many years as foreman of the stereotypers, and on the Boston Post and Globe. At one time he was head of the Boston Stereotypers' union.

ARCHIBALD MCNEE, 80, veteran Canadian newspaper man and at one time president of the Canadian Press Association, died at Windsor, Ont., March 26. In his earlier years he was a member of the Parliamentary Press Gallery at Ottawa and wrote political articles for many Canadian newspapers. He then became editor and part proprietor of the Windsor (Ont.) Record, holding this position until his retirement several years ago.

SIDNEY OSTRANDER, owner of the San Francisco News Bureau, a financial publication, was killed almost instantly March 24, near Santa Barbara, Cal., in an automobile accident.

LUTHER S. LAKE, 60, representative at Lyons, N. Y., of many newspapers, died at his home in that village. He had served some newspapers as their Lyons correspondent for 40 years.

JAMES E. DOYLE, publisher of the Syracuse Catholic Sun and formerly managing editor of the Syracuse Herald, was buried at Syracuse March 17, following his death from heart disease March 13.

J. A. TYLER, 57, owner and publisher of the Miles (Tex.) Messenger, died recently at Miles. He had long been in ill health.

PAUL WALLACE HANNA, well-known journalist and former Washington correspondent for the Federated Press died suddenly in New York last week. He worked at various times on the Washington Herald, Oakland Tribune, San Francisco Call, before going on the New York Call, which he later served at the Peace Conference at Versailles.

DRURY KINGSLEY UNDERWOOD, for 36 years a prominent figure in newspaper and theatrical circles of Chicago, died on March 29, at Alexian Brothers hospital, Chicago. In his earlier days, he was a co-worker of George Ade, Peter Finley Dunne, and Brand Whitlock. Underwood's last newspaper work was with the Chicago Herald.

DAVID M. KORNFIELD, father of Benjamin B. Kornfield of the Wall Street Journal and Louis D. Kornfield of the Bureau of the New York Times March 30 in Nyack, N. Y.

Railroad Bans News Vendor

Officials of the Norfolk & W Railway announced April 1 that after no news vendors would be a on the company's passenger trains convenience caused passengers outw service rendered, they said.

Rockford Daily Sued for $100,

Suit for $100,000 damages ha filed by Fred T. Peterson, labor date for Mayor, against the Ro (Ill.) Republic as the result of paign story, which Peterson cla "false in implication and libelous."

The patent office at Washington more than $3,000,000 in fees las Still, there is no substitute for w Buffalo Evening Post.

DURING 1924
The Plain Deale published
51% of ALL the National lineage pearing in
ALL Cleveland Newspap
The Plain Deal
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE W
J. B. Woodward 110 E. 42d St. New York
Woodward & Security Bl Chicago

CONCENTRATE SELLING PRESSURE
93% of the circulation of the New York Evening Journal is concentrated right in New York City and its suburbs where advertisers look for the sales against which New York advertising appropriations are charged.
NEW YORK JOURNAL
Largest Evening Circulation in America

THE First thought those who advert to Texans is usua
The Dallas Morn News
—the pap
Prosperity

It covers an ideal test market used by
National Advertisers
TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES
KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

Murad Cigarettes
is another of the nationally famous accounts which has recognized the fact that the Washington, D. C., territory cannot be adequately covered without
The Washington Times
The futility of the "one paper buy" argument is nowhere better illustrated than in the experiences of its national advertisers.
PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH
New York City—Boston
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
Chicago - Detroit - St. Louis - Los Angeles

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"
The World.
MORNING EDITION
The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.
The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

San Francisc Chronicl
PAYING circulati determines the lo cal choice of an adve tising medium. In S Francisco and Nort ern California it is recognized fact th The Chronicle follo ing has the buyi power.
National Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cresm
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chica
225 Fifth Ave., New York

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Edith O'Dell on Trip to London — Rupert Hughes Writes on Modern Femininity—Bernstein Returning in Ill Health

MISS EDITH O'DELL, editor-in-chief and vice-president of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York, will leave next week on a trip to England, combining business and pleasure. She plans to be away about two months.

MISS EDITH O'DELL

While abroad she will make her headquarters at the syndicate's London office where she will arrange for new newspaper features by British authors, and discuss future contributions from writers already under contract, including Ruby M. Ayres, H. G. Wells, Sir Philip Gibbs, and Shaw Desmond.

Miss O'Dell has been editor-in-chief and vice-president since January, 1924, when a profit sharing system was inaugurated by the syndicate. Prior to that she was assistant treasurer of the same organization for seven years.

Rupert Hughes is writing a new weekly feature for Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York, treating on the woman question in general.

Herman Bernstein, editor and former war correspondent, who has been writing articles from Europe for the Federal Future Syndicate, New York, has been forced to cut his trip short due to ill health, and is returning to this country April 6, on the S. S. Cleveland. He has been abroad since last November, visiting England, France, Germany, Poland, Egypt and Palestine.

George Ade is writing an entirely new series of "Fables in Slang" for the Bell Syndicate, New York.

"Monguito," a comic strip in Spanish, by Abril Lamarque, has been added to the list of the United Features Syndicate, New York for Cuban, Mexican, and South American newspapers. Mr. Lamarque is on the staff of the New York Telegram and Evening Mail.

The Bell Syndicate, Inc., New York, this week announced a new weekly feature under the title T"rub's Diary," a series of dog stories by John Taintor Foote, dog expert. The story is told in the first person by the hero of the yarn, a hard-boiled bull pup.

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate has a new series weekly, illustrated, page stories to start May 3. They are stories of the American desert in the days of the prospectors written by H. C. Wire.

The Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York, this week announced new illustrated short stories for April and May by Booth Tarkington, Arthur Somers Roche, P. G. Wodehouse, Henry C. Rowland, Sophie Kerr, Albert Payson Terhune, and E. Phillips Oppenheim.

Donald Lowrie, author of the "My Life in Prison," serial, is writing a new story, "Back in Prison—Why!" for syndication by King Features Syndicate, Inc., New York. Lowrie is dying of tuberculosis in the Arizona State Penitentiary, Florence, Arizona, after having pulled himself out of prison by sheer ability and grit twice. Fremont Older, editor of the San Francisco Call, visited Lowrie in prison and persuaded him to race with death and write his final story.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Rankin Agency Celebrates Ninth Year in New York—Creske-Everett, Inc., In New Offices—Prest-o-Lite Executive Joins Hammel Sutphen & Co.

WILLIAM H. RANKIN COMPANY celebrates its ninth year in New York, April 4, with a formal opening of the new New York office in the Canadian Pacific Building.

On April 15, the Chicago offices will be moved to new quarters in the Tribune Building.

I. A. Groth, head of the Chicago organization will celebrate the beginning of his 27th year with the one organization. He started his advertising career with the Mahin Advertising Company in 1899 and with the other present owners of the business changed its name nine years ago to the Wm. H. Rankin Company.

Robert W. Rinehart, vice-president, opened the New York office in April, 1916. Complete organizations are maintained in both Chicago and New York, with branches in Philadelphia and Akron, and affiliated companies in San Francisco and in Toronto, Canada.

Creske-Everett, Inc., moved their offices March 30, from 19-25 West 44th Street, New York to 300 Madison avenue, where they will occupy an entire floor.

Frank L. Parrill has joined the staff of Hammel Sutphen & Co., Inc., Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Parrill was formerly sales promotion manager of the Prest-o-lite Company. He was also on the merchandising and advertising staff of the Chilton Company, Philadelphia, advertising manager of the Cole Motor Car Company, Indianapolis, and has served with the Homer McKee Advertising Company of the same city.

A. C. Barrell has joined the copy staff of Frank Seaman, Inc., New York agency.

Vaughn Weidel has been appointed promotion manager of the United Advertising Agency, Sioux City, Ia.

O. S. Tyson & Co., Inc., New York advertising agency, has moved to 16 E. 41st street.

George L. Sawyer, formerly New York manager of the Barber-Greene Company, has joined the David C. Thomas Company, Chicago, as vice-president.

The Crawford-Harris advertising agency, Vancouver, B. C., has been reorganized. Joseph Burgess, former manager of the firm's office in Edmonton, Alta., has been taken into the firm and the name changed to Crawford, Harris & Burgess Advertising Service. Enlarged quarters for the business have been taken in the Province Building, while the branch offices in Edmonton and Victoria will be retained.

Joseph N. Sandfield, advertising, 308 North Michigan avenue, Chicago, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court at Chicago. Assets of $924.75 and liabilities of $10,130.85 are listed.

Howard V. Kennington, for the past 10 years associated with the Chicago Herald-Examiner, has left newspaper work to join the Chicago office of Albert Frank & Co.

Experience The Best Teacher

Has taught American exporters that the best advertising medium in Japan is

THE JIJI SHIMPO

時事新報

The explanation is readily apparent to all who have examined carefully the comparative status of newspapers in Japan. There are journals which cater to one political party, to the literati, to gay circles and even to the rikisha men and coolies. But The Jiji Shimpo is known throughout Japan as the Empire's foremost NEWSpaper and the favorite in business circles. The Jiji's circulation is greatest among prosperous Japanese. Its typical readers are found among those progressive Japanese who lead the way in the introduction of foreign goods in our country. To interest them is the foreign salesman's first requirement.

J. P. Barry, an authority on Far Eastern advertising, represents the Jiji in the American field. Mr. Barry is thoroughly equipped to assist you in planning your advertising campaign in Japan, and will take pleasure in serving you in every possible way. Communicate with him at

JAPAN ADVERTISER SUITE

342 Madison Avenue New York City

THE JIJI SHIMPO

Tokyo

"In Japan, the Buyers Read The Jiji"

CIRCULATION PROGRESS

Carrier Welfare Work One Way to Build Sales—Newell

FRANK S. NEWELL

FOR promoting and maintaining circulation, carrier welfare work rather than the use of premiums or contests, often proves most successful, in the opinion of Frank S. Newell, circulation director of the Memphis (Tenn.) News Scimitar.

Newell, although he cannot boast of having carried papers himself or sold them on the streets, keeps his own carrier force intact and hard working, by constantly watching out for their interest and benefit. He was one of the first circulation managers to see the possibilities behind such work, and has been continually active in its direction.

He started newspaper work in the circulation department of the Milwaukee (Wis.) Sentinel in 1913 as traveling representative. Later he became country circulator and in 1916 joined the Cincinnati Post as country circulation manager. Remaining with the Scripps-Howard newspapers, he was sent in 1919 by that organization to take charge of the circulation department of the Houston Press. Two years later he was moved to Norfolk to start the Norfolk Post, where he remained for three years as business manager. He came to his present position from the Washington Daily News, where he worked last year.

HOPE FOR DARLING'S RECOVERY

But Famous Cartoonist's Condition Still Critical, Doctors Report

The condition of Jay N. Darling, cartoonist for the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate and the Des Moines Register remained unchanged at the time EDITOR & PUBLISHER went to press this week. He has been critically ill in a Des Moines hospital since March 12.

Physicians reported Thursday morning that Mr. Darling had passed a restful night and his temperature had receded somewhat, but there is little change. Early this week an operation minor in nature was performed to drain the pleural cavity. This relieved the pain and caused a slight change for the better.

ANOTHER RAZOR CAMPAIGN

Gem Safety Razor Corporation Conducting National Bargain Drive

Another razor cut across the advertising horizon this week.

In addition to the Auto Strop Safety Razor Company's $100,000 test campaign in New York, promoting a bargain offer, first word came of a national drive being engineered by the Gem Safety Razor Corporation of Brooklyn. Both companies are featuring 49 cents as the bargain price for their razors. Both are relying largely on newspapers.

The Auto Strop account is being handled by Lord & Thomas, while the Federal Advertising Agency has charge for Gem.

FLASHES

Love may be blind, but it can see an expensive auto.—Columbia Record.

The cannibals are said to love their fellow men.—Westport Standard.

It is quite likely that a lot of parents had entertained higher hopes for their sons than balloon trousers.—Detroit News.

Doctors report finding a sewing needle in a girl's arm, but don't let them try to tell us of finding a sewing needle in a girl's hand.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The world is improving. Years ago there was a dreary interval between sport seasons.—Nashville Tennessean.

Birds of a feather knock together.—Columbia Record.

The pioneer who blazed a trail through the wilderness to build a home had a grandson who is now looking for 150 vacant acres to set up a golf course.—Detroit News.

About all the use some men have for the Golden Rule is to measure the conduct of others.—Bridgeport Post.

However, cross-word puzzles don't call for as big a vocabulary as trying to raise a window on a railroad train.—Cleveland Times.

If you think business is poor, think of the hairpin maker.—Westport Standard.

Fools rush in where wise men fear to wed.—Columbia Record.

The Anti-Mosquito Association has held its annual meeting. May it succeed in pouring oil on stagnant waters!—Boston Transcript.

The prayer of the bigot is, O Lord, bless us and give our neighbors what is good for them.—San Antonio News.

Unless one wants to lose half a cent by the transaction he will be obliged to buy two of these new 1½-cent stamps. An Eastern editor protests against tying up all this capital.—Detroit News.

Tact is just the art of making the other fellow feel more important than yourself. —Rochester Times Union.

Wonder which muscles those electric hobby horses exercise that a flivver doesn't?—Des Moines Tribune.

Egotism is the anesthetic Nature gives to deaden the pain of being a fool.—Altoona Mirror.

"Don't worry" makes a better motto when you add "Others."—Columbia Record.

A village is a place where people sing "Sweet Adeline" without being drunk.—Baltimore Sun.

Although some manage to get by with an oily tongue, the surest dependence is elbow grease.—Little Rock Arkansas Gazette.

All wild flowers fade quickly, except the blooming idiots.—Columbia Record.

The last word has been said. An invincible navy, according to The Fondu Lac Commonwealth, is necessary because we import the raw materials for chewing gum.—Louisville Times.

For variety we should like to hear some good reporter write his memoirs by interviewing himself. — Cleveland Times.

The same son in the family who thinks it should own two automobiles is often pretty quiet when it comes to that many snow shovels.—Detroit News.

We don't know who lost the war, but Europe seems to be hunting for it.—Columbia Record.

Two things that are difficult to determine are when a pair of galoshes are a perfect fit and when a ukulele is tuned.—Detroit News.

Only way to prune the national budget is to pull off a few plums.—Columbia Record.

TOKIO DAILY APPOINTS TANAKA

Former Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs Heads Japan Times

Tokichi Tanaka, former vice-minister of foreign affairs, has been appointed president of the Tokio Japan Times. He served in the cabinet of the late Admiral Kato and has spent his life as a government official and diplomat.

The Times also announced this week it has begun publishing actual circulation figures, giving percentages, classifying its subscribers as foreigners, Japanese, mercantile firms and students.

GOOD WILL WORTH 50 MILLIONS

Value Shown in Dodge Brothers Sale—Big Advertiser in Dailies

Value of good will, in the building of which advertising is an important instrument, was disclosed this week in the purchase of Dodge Brothers, Inc., automobile manufacturers, for slightly less than $175,000,000 in cash by a banking syndicate, headed by Dillon, Read & Co.

Of the total sum, it was said more than $50,000,000 was paid for good will.

According to figures made public recently by the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Dodge Brothers spent more than $1,200,000 in newspaper advertising during 1924.

J. J. SPURGEON QUIT WASHINGTON POST

Managing Editor Abruptly Severs Connection with E. B. McLean's Daily—Reasons for Resignation Withheld

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 1.—J. J. Spurgeon on Tuesday, March 31, abruptly terminated his connection as managing editor of the Washington (D. C.) Post.

Edward B. McLean, publisher, declined to issue a statement regarding Mr. Spurgeon's sudden resignation. Mr. Spurgeon said he had no immediate future plans.

Mr. Spurgeon has been with the Post since November, 1922. He started newspaper work in Philadelphia when 16 years old. Then he was heralded as the "boy reporter," on the Philadelphia Press.

After six years on the Press, he came to New York and joined the staff of the old Mail and Express. When he was 21 he became managing editor of the Cleveland (O.) World. He was appointed managing editor of the New York World in 1913, serving for two years. Prior to joining the Washington Post he was managing editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger from 1915 to 1922.

Daily Did Not Sway Jury

The Flushing (N. Y.) Evening Journal was cleared of a charge of influencing by a printed story a jury in a damage case which resulted in an award of $27,500 to the plaintiff last week when the Supreme court ruled that the article in question had not affected the jury and that the verdict must stand. Lawyers for the defendant, the Interborough Rapid Transit Company asked that the verdict be set aside on the grounds that the story had influenced the jury's decision in the case.

Why should a publisher send out complete copies as "proof of insertion" when a tear-page showing the advertisement is all that is needed and which is much preferred by the great majority of Agencies and Advertisers?

We hold subscribers on "good service"— not contracts

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

DAILY PAPERS FROM OTHER CITIES
HOTALING'S NEWS STAND
BROADWAY AND 43RD ST.
NORTH END THE TIMES BUILDING

"Perhaps the most cosmopolitan spot in New York City is Forty-third Street and Broadway . . . Here is a mammoth news stand which sells newspapers from every city in the world. . . Every town has similar stands, but none as huge as this and none as varied and as picturesque in its patronage."
—Boston Transcript, Oct. 29, 1921.

HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY, 308 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YORK

CRANTON TIMES BEGINS CONSTRUCTION ON NEW FOUR-STORY HOME

Irst Section of New Plant Will Be Occupied in Fall, When Rest of Structure Will Rise on Site of Present Quarters —Floor Space of 72,000 Square Feet

HE Scranton (Pa.) Times this week started the partial razing of two buildings to clear the site for the erection of its new four-story and basement concrete and steel building, 80 feet wide and 5 feet deep, to be built at Penn avenue and Spruce street. The new home, an architect's perspective of which is shown at the right, will extend Spruce street back to Raymond court, including the site of the present quarters which will be demolished after temporary operation has been begun next fall in the first hundred feet of the new plant. Necessity for continuous operation forces construction of the building in two sections, the first extending from Penn avenue to the present building, affording temporary quarters approximately 80 x 5 feet and the second virtually coinciding with the present building.

Exterior trim will be terra cotta tile, with ornamental metal work in bronze and iron. Steel structure is so designed as to permit addition of four stories whenever they are needed.

Mechanical layout of the plant, which was designed with the advice of S. P. Preston of New York, provides for paper and ink storage, ink tanks reels, transformers and other electrical equipment in the basement, to be excavated beneath the sidewalks and affording about 2,000 square feet of floor space. The general business office on the Penn avenue side of the ground floor, will have about 500 square feet of lobby space, a counter 4 feet long, 3,000 square feet of clerical work space, and will be finished in tile and American Walnut. Behind the business office on the dead side of the building will be the mailing room and paralleling it on the Spruce street side, the press room with two Hoe octuple superspeed machines arranged in line, equipped with Stone magazine reels and Cutler-Hammer drive and conveyors. The presses will be visible from the street.

Two passenger elevators and a freight lift will serve the upper floors. The composing room with 22 type-setting machines and supplementary equipment will be on the second floor. Sufficient reserve space is allowed to more than double the mechanical equipment. The stereotype department at the rear of the building will adjoin the composing room, and will be equipped with casting machines dumping on a plate drop going to the center of the press line on the ground floor.

The third floor will house the executive offices, editorial, news and specialty departments, and the Times radio station, WQAN. A central copy desk on the editorial floor will serve news copy by gravity chute to the composing room, and copy will reach editorial and composing rooms from the ground floor by electric lifts, eliminating pneumatic tubes.

The fourth floor, not at present to be used for newspaper purposes, will provide expansion space temporarily to be rented as offices.

Magnificent plant in course of construction for Scranton Times

NEW HOME FOR LA RAZON

New Structure of Buenos Aires Daily Ready for Occupancy

BUENOS AIRES, April 2.—Final touches are being put on the new home of the Buenos Aires La Razon, preparatory to the official opening.

The building has been constructed especially to house the plant and offices of the newspaper, and contains all the modern conveniences that make towards more efficient publication of an afternoon paper. It is located on the Avenida de Mayo, the principal street of Buenos Aires, two blocks from the home of La Prensa. The composing room is placed in the top or fifth floor, together with the engraving plant. Editorial and executive offices occupy the other floors, while the basement contains foundations for the five big presses which turn out three editions daily.

La Razon is a seven column paper, printed in Spanish and frequently running 24 pages. It has three editions daily, beginning at noon. It prints foreign news from the United Press, the Associated Press, the Havas Agency and its own correspondents.

Dr. Angel Sojo is present director of La Razon.

N. E. A. TO TOUR VIRGINIA

Plans for Entertaining Delegates to Richmond Meet Announced

Plans for entertaining delegates to the National Editorial Association's convention in Virginia June 1 to 18 were announced this week by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, Richmond, Va.

The association has definitely announced that it will meet in Richmond, June 1, 2 and 3, following which it will tour Virginia for 15 days.

In Richmond the convention will be shown the place where Aaron Burr was tried for treason, the historic capitol building, plans for which were drawn by Thomas Jefferson, the statue of Washington by Houdon, and old St. John's Church, where Patrick Henry made his famous "Liberty or Death" speech.

The battlefields of Seven Pines, Drewry's Bluff, and a hundred other places, will all be visited, and a social excursion will be taken to Petersburg, where the delegates will visit the Battle of the Crater and the defenses of General Lee around the city.

Williamsburg, Jamestown and Yorktown, will be visited.

At Norfolk and Newport News the delegates will see the site of the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac.

Monticello, home of Thomas Jefferson, and the birthplace of George Rogers Clark, Monroe's home at Charlottesville; Danville, last capital of the Confederacy, Lynchburg, Roanoke, "Black Horse Tavern," the Natural Bridge of Virginia, and Lexington, where General Robert E. Lee, and Stonewall Jackson, both lay buried, all are to be visited.

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

DON'T FAIL TO BAG
"Big Game," by Louis Lacy Stevenson.
Service for Authors, 33 West 42d St., New York.

"S T O R I E S"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.,
2044 Margaret St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Fashions

WEEKLY STYLE PHOTO SERVICE.
20 latest fashions and captions weekly.
More than 100 papers use it. Write for low rate.
Styles Service Syndicate, 353 5th Ave., N. Y.

Radio

CURRENT RADIO
Daily Service, reliable and timely, that makes radio fans regular newspaper readers. A complete department.
American Radio Relay League, Hartford, Conn.

FOR LARGE AND SMALL PAPERS
A non-technical, weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D. C.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE SCHOOLS?

Is there any subject under the sun in which your readers are more interested?

A series of
FIVE BIG INTERVIEWS with FIVE of the GREATEST AMERICAN EDUCATORS will answer these questions:

Are petting parties and pocket flasks degrading the students in our colleges?

Is religion being driven away from our youth?

Are the boys and girls of today worse than those of the last generation?

Are big endowments limiting the independence of our colleges?

Who is to blame for the shortcomings of the colleges?

And a score of equally important questions.

The interviews are with Pres. E. M. HOPKINS of Dartmouth, Pres. RAY LYMAN WILBUR of Leland Stanford, Pres. LIVINGSTON FARRAND of Cornell, Pres. WALTER DILL SCOTT of Northwestern and Supt. of Schools WILLIAM McANDREW of Chicago.

This is a sample of the interviews running in THE U.P.C. BIG INTERVIEW SERVICE.

They will be released weekly beginning April 11.

Wire your order to

U. P. C. NEWS SERVICE, Inc.

243 West 39th Street
New York City

FREE PUBLICITY IN DAILIES HURTS MORE THAN HELPS, AD MAN BELIEVES

Only Seven Advertised Products Out of 48 Are Benefitted by Editorial Notice, Pancoast's Survey of Large Daily Reveals

By CHALMERS L. PANCOAST

A NEWSPAPER is published primarily for the subscribers and it is unfair to them to fool them with news matter that is not news.

Paid for advertising has its place in a newspaper and readers find advertising they know as advertising beneficial. They appreciate the newspaper that carries a big volume of advertising—because this appreciation is expressed in large circulation.

An analysis of the various advertising classifications of the average large city newspaper on the basis of publicity support, proves a most interesting study. This newspaper is very strict in its classification of news and leans away from the advertisers rather than towards them.

Out of a total of 48 classifications only seven were directly benefitted by publicity or editorial departments. They were:

1. Amusements.
2. Automobiles.
3. Book Publishers.
4. Financial.
5. Motion Pictures.
6. Resorts.
7. Sporting Goods and Events.

Perhaps amusements received the greatest amount of free editorial support. This was not given to get advertising but because dramatic criticism, news of the theater, is news which the public enjoys, appreciates and demands.

The amount of advertising lineage received by this newspaper from amusements was small in comparison to the lineage from other classifications which received no publicity or editorial support.

The editorial space for amusements was not purchased with liberal advertising. It was devoted to amusements because the readers demanded amustment news. Of course, some newspapers are more liberal in amusement space than others, but if it resolves down to the question "Is it news?" then a newspaper cannot be accused of giving free space for advertising.

In relation to automobiles it was found that the newspaper was giving space to legitimate news of the motor world, instruction on engines, advice and information of a technical nature, road maps, routes of travel and news of various sorts.

It is very easy for a newspaper to step over the line in automobile news, and resort to personal puffs, free write-ups of certain cars and a lot of publicity junk in which the reader is not interested. It is known that some newspapers get automobile advertising on the basis of a generous use of space in free publicity. The only people who read this sort of junk is the poor duped advertiser who thinks he is getting something for nothing. He is really getting nothing for something.

Books was a classification which received the direct benefit of good book reviews, news of the best sellers in bookstores. Book news written for the reader is always beneficial and eagerly read, but reviews written to boost some unworthy book or boost some author who should not be boosted, soon disgusts the reader, and the newspaper loses the confidence of its readers and it enjoys a small circulation.

It is quality of book reviews rather than quantity that makes a valuable book medium. The publisher who is induced to advertise in some medium through a generous offer of free space gets just what he buys. If the medium was worth anything or had the confidence of its readers it would not have to resort to free donations of editorial space in order to get a few advertisements.

Banks and financial advertisers are naturally benefitted by financial and market news, stock transactions, authentic information to investors, etc. This comes under the head of essential news.

Resorts, hotels, railroads are benefitted by society news, summer and winter resort notes and special articles on travel. Such news is seldom used to influence advertising, or at least it should not be. However there is a danger of newspapers falling for news articles which bring in advertising. But articles or stories written for the purpose of advertising something do not ring true and although they may fill space and help land an advertising contract the average reader soon loses confidence in the newspaper that has so little real vital news to put into its columns.

A further analysis shows that about five classifications receive some benefits from the editorial departments:

1. Art and Art Materials—receive benefit from art criticisms, art club news and the activities of art societies, exhibitions, etc.

2. Clothing and Department Stores—benefitted by news of styles and fashions, patterns, style-show exhibits, etc.

3. Furniture—news of decorations, household hints, new ideas in home planning.

4. Churches—report of sermons—religious propaganda, news reform movements and religious world.

5. Real estate—news of real estate transactions, building, etc.

The remaining thirty-one classifications received no benefit directly or indirectly from editorial departments of features.

Classifications such as:

1 Building Materials
2 Cleaners and Polishers
3 Coal
4 Confectionery
5 Dental
6 Disinfectants
7 Educational
8 Food products
9 Florists
10 Foreign Goods
11 Gas and Electrical Fixtures
12 Hardware
13 Heating Apparatus
14 Laundries
15 Magazines and Newspapers
16 Medical
17 Musical Instruments
18 Office Equipment
19 Opticians
20 Paint and Wallpaper
21 Pens
22 Physical Culture
23 Pountry and Live Stock
24 Printing and Stationery
25 Public Utilities
26 Song Publishers
27 Sporting Goods
28 Toilet Goods
29 Trunks—Bags
30 Undertakers
31 Warehouse—Moving

Some newspapers have special departments to encourage advertising, such as:

1 Pure Food Section
2 Radio Pages
3 Garden and Florists Pages
4 Electrical Department

It is a question how much the average subscriber cares about these forced departments written and arranged to obtain the support of advertisers. They are simply a throw-back to a trade-paper age, and have no really important place in a live, wide-awake newspaper whose only interest is giving its subscribers the kind of news that is real news.

The newspaper that finds it necessary to resort to the editorial pages to help get advertising or to support its advertising is only cheapening itself in the eyes of the advertisers.

He buys its advertising space not because it is worth the rate charged, but because he is getting something thrown in for nothing.

The advertiser who does pay the regular rate without the editorial graft is getting cheated. Every advertiser is entitled to the same rates and the same Santa Claus treatment.

Daily Issues Home Building Weekly

The Lowell (Mass.) Evening Leader has started publication of a Saturday tabloid supplement, devoted to home building.

Freak Newspaper Bill Killed

The Ohio senate has defeated a bill which would compel every newspaper writer covering the legislature to commit to memory the Ten Commandments. The proposal was tacked on to a bill providing for the reading of the Bible in the public schools.

Installs Printer Service

The Stevens Point (Wis.) Daily Journal is now receiving the full leased wire service of the United Press by printer telegraph. The Journal's plant was recently completely remodeled and enlarged and considerable new equipment installed including a new Model 14 linotype.

Asbury Recovering from Illness

Herbert Asbury, widely known newspaper man on the staff of the New York Herald Tribune, is recovering from a recent illness at his sister's home in Farmington, Mo.

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON

Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation

120 West 42d Street New York

Peoria
The
Try-Out City
THE PEORIA
JOURNAL
Transcript
Puts Tryouts Over!
CHAS. H. EDDY CO.
New York - Chicago - Boston

Detroit

Fourth
Largest
City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

Beaumont and 20-mile area
Population over 150,000

Ranks in importance to the other four large Texas markets. Sales managers cannot cover Texas with only four papers.

The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL

cover the Fifth Market in Texas and the Third Market in Louisiana.

"Ask Beckwith—He Knows"

Over 50,000 workers are employed in Akron's 25 Rubber factories; not to mention the thousands employed in other industries.

These employes are well paid. They are able to buy luxuries as well as the necessities of life. Their wants are largely supplied through the columns of

AKRON
THE EVENING TIMES

Charles H. Eddy Co.
Boston New York Chicago

Los Angeles Times

The only great morning newspaper in the Pacific Southwest whose ownership, control, direction and whole interests are in the territory which it serves.

World Leader in Advertising for Three Consecutive Years

Norristown
Times Herald

Delivered and READ in the HOMES on R. F. D. routes and small towns in Montgomery County

Pennsylvania

the same day it is printed

)W INTELLIGENT PUBLICITY SAVED THE MILLINERY INDUSTRY

egic Style Propaganda Warded Off Disastrous Shift to Felt Hats—Artists and Style Authorities Aided Campaign

By JUSTINE MANSFIELD

way of a maid with a hat is vious.
act, it was so devious this season breath-taking annihilation of al- the entire millinery trades was ent. Milady was preferring felt imply trimmed or trimmed not at The makers of ribbons, flowers, straws, etc., were compelled to upon the whole feminine world g something on their bobbed heads asn't made by millinery manufac- at all! For the first time in any- remembrance a whole industry was d by the fickle Janes, almost with- rning. It is a fact that one milli- an, unable to stand the strain, was one morning, hanging to a rope, in his show-roms, resplendent with thers and flowers nobody was buyiously some strong medicine was , and at once. The methods of advertising were scarcely possible an emergency, which had already ld to the stage of established style. was only one emergency tool which do the job—the indirect tool of ity, validly based on news-creation. ety women and artists could initi- counter-current of style, then all not be lost. Certainly mere trade had been unvailing. Style is like a idal wave; dykes can't hold it, but werful pull of the gravitational which induces it to flow west can ake it flow east.

big task was undertaken, beginning he semi-anual Style Show in New in February. For the first time in tory of millinery in America, con- effort was applied to stem the tide trend and redirect it. The method familiar in Paris, but America has rather supinely accepted whatever along. This time the thing was han a shift from one color or one to another; it was a wholesale mi- from one industry to another. It not be endured.

basic idea applied as a remedy was rest key leaders of art and society tude in higher millinery standards of . Two groups were used for the e (1) artists, who definitely gave llinery displayed artistic standing,) society women, representative of arers of the millinery, who spon- the "artistic movement" back the standard millinery materials. hough the cooperation of these two , the beautiful and chic millinery ed at the show, procured from the h Avenue and Fifty-Seventh street irs, received a decided impulse of city in its association with these . At the same time the millinery es a whole realized the importance ring up in the public mind with au- of style, authority of beauty and ty of leadership of those who wear . It was a subtly built plan, and it kl.

eworth Campbell, art director of the publications, headed this committee ists of national repute, including l Alva Parsons, who has always dor the advancement of art in in- dustry, and who is head of one of the most important applied art academies in this country, Charles Dana Gibson, Leo Lentelli, well known sculptor, Henri Creange, winner of the Art in Industry Medal, Gifford Beals, president of the Art Students' League, and others. The functions of the committee were two-fold in connection with this Style Show. The first function of the committee was to select the beautiful live models who wore the hats, on the basis of carriage, pose, grace and entire form as well as facial beauty. Their second function on the night of the event, was to judge one of each class of hats represented, on the basis of the beauty of the mode, her hat and her entire ensemble costume.

The stylistic authority of the model hats to be displayed was to be vouched for by a committee on arrangements headed by Mme. Volka, well-known fashion authority. The Duchess de Richelieu and Carmel White, fashion editor of Vogue, headed the group of important society women, sponsoring this new movement to inject higher artistic standards into millinery.

The artist committee judged, according to points, one model from each class in the millinery groups: Ribbons, fabrics, straw braids, ornaments, fancy shapes, flowers, ostrich feathers, lace, etc. After one model in each group had been judged, photographs of all of the winning models were taken by a leading New York photographer. Public approval was then bid for through these photographs, which were used in traveling exhibits to retail establishments as well as by their publication throughout the country. Hundreds of pictures appeared in rotogravure and otherwise, and the counter-current began to work.

The authority given to each one of these models, first from the standpoint of style, by having been selected for the show; and second from the standpoint of beauty by having been selected by a committee of artists, could not be ignored in the merchandising efforts of retailers. They began to shape their millinery purchases, window displays and publicity along the new lines. The exclusion, so noticeable before, of the millinery of standard types, was broken down.

No advertising man need be told all the details of such a campaign, for he can visualize them readily: the news reports of the style show, with photos of the models selected, the articles, the interviews, the special illustrated stories obtained in all parts of the country—merited by the creation of authentic news.

Then the work upon merchandise managers and millinery stores, coordinating with the salesman of the millinery houses so that the goods was available in the stores. And next the store advertising which featured and listed millinery not only of felt, but the newly authenticated styles.

In 30 days' time the millinery trades were humming again with activity, even though the felt hat is by no means yet driven off the millinery preserves! The millinery trades feel that a serious casualty has been averted by the skillful application of the publicity idea, worked out by Edward L. Bernays.

American apparel groups are becoming more and more bold in their endeavors to shape their own style destinies rather than permit a semi-mythical Parisian style leadership to do it for them. As against the use of demi-mondes, horse shows and gambling centers abroad as fashion-makers, there is a tendency to apply direct artistic analysis and leadership. The movement developed a short time ago by the makers and sellers of feminine apparel, headed by Franklin Simon, for self-conscious American style and artistry in textiles, is a movement which is now rightly sponsored and certain to grow in power each year. There is not only the interest of national pride at work, but also the typically American antipathy to waste in industry and merchandising.

Minnesota Merger Announced

Announcement was made March 30, of the consolidation of the Rochester (Minn.) Post and Record and the Rochester Daily Bulletin to the Rochester Post-Bulletin, which will be published every evening except Sunday. C. J. Anderson Special Agency, Chicago, and Ralph R. Mulligan, New York, represent the combined daily in the national field.

Percy Hammond on Trip Abroad

Percy Hammond, dramatic critic of the New York Herald Tribune, and Mrs. Hammond sailed from New York April 1 on a six weeks' trip to Europe. During his absence, Mr. Hammond's work will be handled by Charles Belmont Davis, dramatic editor of the Herald Tribune.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

THE PASSAIC
DAILY NEWS
Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities
TRADING POPULATION
167,395
NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, INC.
National Advertising Representatives
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusively)
York Chicago Philadelphia Newark

A Security Market
with complete newspaper financial service.
Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.
The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.
A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1924, *124,468 total net paid.
Cover the Buffalo Market with the
BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
*Present average circulation 129,834
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.
THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

QUICK STICK
PASTE POWDER
MIXES QUICK STICKS
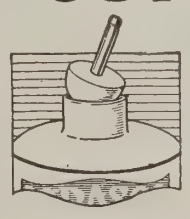
DRIES



A Superior Paste for the Newspaper
Quick Stick is the stickiest all around newspaper paste on the market. Can be used efficiently in every department of a newspaper organization. Mixes in a minute—just add cold water—dries instantly and sticks like glue. Bundles will never pull open and webs once spliced will hold for good. A little Quick Stick goes a long way—see for yourself—mail the coupon.

705 for the Mailing Machine
No. 705 is made expressly to meet the need for an easy flowing paste—it speeds up labeling. It is positively free from lumps—will not clog—gum or harden in the fountain—will not sour or mould—and works perfectly in any standard make of mailing machine. Use 705 in your mailing machine—labels go on in rapid succession—and stay stuck.

COPASCO

for the boys at the desks
When once the men on the desks use Copasco they will demand it. Never needs water—contains just enough moisture—will not soak through, wrinkle or curl the thinnest paper or card. The self-closing stopper on the handy desk container was made purposely for the newspaper office—keeps in the moisture—keeps out the dust and dirt—economical as well as efficient. May we send you a trial order?—use the attached coupon.

THE COMMERCIAL PASTE CO.
Makers of the Largest Line of Adhesives
DEPT. 51 COLUMBUS, OHIO
CLIP COUPON AND MAIL
The Commercial Paste Company,
Dept. 51, Columbus, Ohio.
Gentlemen:
Please send me a trial order of ☐ Quick Stick ☐ No. 705 ☐ Copasco.
NAME .....
ADDRESS .....
TOWN ..... STATE .....
NEWSPAPER .....

PERFORMS STATE SERVICE

Milwaukee Journal's Bureau Issues 31,711 State Automobile Licenses

Permits for automobile licenses to the number of 31,711 were issued by the Tour Bureau of the Milwaukee Journal between Dec. 1 and March 13, inclusive. The total fees collected amounted to $447,706.75.

The Tour Bureau opened its license division Dec. 1, in co-operation with the Secretary of State, who assigned a representative of his department to the bureau as part of the campaign to get autoists to take out their licenses early in the year. In previous years all licenses have been issued directly from the office of the Secretary of State at Madison.

The Journal handled approximately one-third of all the license applications originating in Milwaukee county.

Start Work on Press Club Home

The first step toward the erection of the new $25,000 home of the Denver Press Club was taken this week with the razing of the building which has housed the organization for several years. The new structure will be a two-story fireproof affair, in the heart of Denver's business area. A celebration marked the removal from the old building to the Navarre Hotel, which will be used temporarily by the club.

$2,000 Damage Verdict Affirmed

The supreme court of Nebraska has entered an order affirming the judgment for $2,000 obtained by Thomas B. Murray, former city prosecutor of Omaha, Neb., against the Omaha World-Herald for portraying him as having attempted to frighten voters from the polls at an Omaha city election. The court merely entered an order of affirmation and gave no written opinion on the case. The principal argument was over the question of whether the truth alone is a sufficient defense for a published statement or whether it must also be shown that it was published for justifiable ends and with good motives.

A. E. Dale Takes State Job

Albert E. Dale, city editor of the Albany Evening News, has been appointed by Governor Smith a member of the commission of the port of Albany, which will have charge of the work of organizing terminal facilities in preparation of the Deeper Hudson project. The salary is $5,000 a year. Mr. Dale began his newspaper work on the Albany Knickerbocker Press of which he became city editor and later was manager of the Albany bureau of the New York Sun and on the staff of the Associated Press.

Harwood on A. N. A. Committee

Frank Harwood, advertising manager of the American Tobacco Company, Inc., New York, is now chairman of the Committee of Newspaper Relations of the Association of National Advertisers, Robert K. Leavitt, secretary, announced this week. Mr. Harwood succeeds S. E. Conybear, of the Armstrong Cork Company, resigned.

Agence Havas Profits Increase

From 8,898,000 francs in 1922, the profits of the Agence Havas have risen to 9,806,000 francs in 1923, and the balance sheet for 1924 when issued is expected to show a corresponding increase. Its capital has been increased from 37,000,000 to 50,000,000 francs. While the Agence Havas is best known throughout the world as a news agency it is to its advertising branch that the greater part of its prosperity is due.

Sir Charles Returns to London

Sir Charles Higham, British advertising agent, completed his trip to this country in the interest of the India Tea Growers Association's advertising campaign and returned to London, April 4 on the Homeric.

Do You Understand the Relation of Chemistry to Your Business?

This Book Will Inform You—

"Chemistry in Industry" Price $1.00

Distributed at Cost by

The Chemical Foundation, Inc.

To "advance chemical and allied science and industry in the United States," we are publishing the last word from acknowledged national authorities in the following industries:

Abrasives, Alcohol, Coal and Coke, Cotton, Electricity, Fertilizers, Gas, Glass, Iron and Steel, Leather, Non-Ferrous Metallurgy, Packing House, Paper and Pulp, Perfumes and Flavors, Petroleum, Photography, Resin, Rubber and Textiles.

21 chapters donated by these authorities, written in concise, every-day language every individual can easily understand.

The edition is large, the publishing cost small and The Chemical Foundation can seek no profit.

This 372 page illustrated book on Chemistry—its vital relation to the industries of the world, is making a tremendous appeal to executives, industrialists, financiers, factory owners, managers, superintendents, buyers, foremen, workers, chemists, students and teachers.

Send $1.00 (check, money order or currency) to Dept. 42

The Chemical Foundation, Inc.
85 Beaver St., New York

EVERY READER A PROSPECT

IOWA—1st IN LITERACY

No sane advertiser would advertise to a people incapable of reading. Such money expended would be a total loss. In this case, therefore, an area possessing the greatest number of readers would be most receptive to advertising. Iowa is an ideal try-out territory because it is just such an area.

There are 600,000 persons at school in Iowa, or one-fourth of the total population. The public school system is highly advanced in method and provides for the people of all classes. Approximately 76 per cent of the total population have completed the course in the grammar schools and 14 per cent have gone through high schools.

IOWA SPENDS $14.05 Per Capita ANNUALLY FOR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES

A people is judged by its attitude toward education—and its newspapers.

Iowa Excels in Both

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 line
*Burlington Gazette .....(E)	10,164	.045
*Cedar Rapids Gazette .....(E)	21,481	.07
*Davenport Democrat & Leader....(E)	14,564	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader ....(S)	17,895	.06
†Davenport Times .....(E)	24,676	.07
*Iowa City Press-Citizen .....(E)	6,387	.035
*Mason City Globe Gazette .....(E)	12,622	.04
*Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,762	.035
*Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	12,852	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier.....(E)	17,071	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

dYou Cash in On "Cross Words"?

rEditor & Publisher: I noticed in a re- tsue of Editor & Publisher that the Edi- ia Department of the New York State Pub- ge Association went on record that cross rouzzles have been of no particular service b ding circulation, although cross word puz- s iemselves had been of splendid service to ading public.

Th brought to my mind a very interesting son—

Wit, if any, coordination or cooperation ex- :tween the news department and circula- :epartment to insure immediate circulation yu in matters of interest to the public?

Yc years I have watched newspapers compla- t introduce features into their columns b t previous promotion, although merchants b hout the country have found it highly aageous to herald the opening of a new er a new department by consistent and per- e advertising, entertainingly and attrac- l presented.

ld no brief for the cross word puzzle. I eiever worked one. But I have seen my e mother, sister and the boys at home, to thing of our office associates, chasing an ri eft to newt, and then to salamander, ien back to eft again with all the zeal ithusiasm of early crusaders.

ve observed, gratifyingly I might say, that ys have increased their vocabulary, ex- d. their knowledge of literature, history, 'e Bible, and facts worth knowing in a hich his been nothing short of amazing.

T convinced me that the intriguing feature t by the newspapers primarily as an en- ament has a decided educational value.

T province of a newspaper is usually briefly lined; to enlighten, to instruct and to en- a. I do not recall a feature which in the t uarter of a century has so universally g the consciousness of the country as cross ouzzles.

nhe circumstances it has been a source of sty, or at least failure to understand, why c and circulation managers have not com- eto cash in on something of such universal ert.

t s true that many newspapers have put vious kinds of not too carefully thought oss word puzzle contests. Since the word nst" is taboo in many newspaper offices, t call them campaigns.

t also true that circulation has been jumped vious parts of the country from 5,000 to)t in a single week. But generally at the f a month the hysterical effort which s this splurge sagged and circulation drop- ick nearly to normal.

In observation it would seem that a number nspapers have done a lot of work, made a motions, received a lot of letters and n in the final analysis (if they made one, d I seriously doubt) that the outcome in t tion growth was practically nil.

T point I bring out is—"Why?" Surely, tense interest brought about by the cross puzzle is cashable from a circulation stand- n.

My editors—the smart ones, at least—now upon the circulation department as their rganization. Quite a number of men who newspapers have come to realize that they n be considered great editors unless the t they produce is readily sold. There has yvisely grown up in the past few years a ution and understanding among editors and tion managers which have been very bene- l) the newspapers, especially when coordina- f effort in these two important branches wspaper development has reached the ht point of perfection.

t would seem, therefore, that the present sword puzzle craze and its relation to cir- an building could be utilized to advantage ciferences between the editorial and circu- o departments, as to how to coordinate the rl of their departments and reader interest th new feature and turn all of this into an niate cashable asset.

now of several instances where this has mone. The returns have been most grati- not only to the heads of the department but to the management of the newspapers as well. The editor convinced the circulation manager of the tremendous interest in this feature. The circulation manager in turn visualized this to carriers and agents and vitalized their minds by pointing out ways and means for them to utilize this interest in increasing sales and therefore in increasing profits.

Never in previous years have so many dictionaries been sold. Now since the public has been buying dictionaries by the hundreds of thousands because of its interest in solving puzzles it naturally follows that the editors who have given some thought to presenting their puzzles in the most fascinating way and circulation managers who have cooperated with the news and editorial departments have cashed in on this interest by greatly increasing sales and subscriptions.

If you can get a reader to take a newspaper for 63 days it becomes a habit.

There will follow in the wake of the present cross word puzzles others of an educational nature. In fact several universities are even now at work on this problem. Therefore, there is still opportunity for team work between the editor and the circulation manager which will make for increased reader interest and added circulation growth.

Very sincerely yours,
W. G. Bryan.

Higher Copy Prices

To Editor & Publisher: I have read with interest your editorial in issue of the 21st inst. prefaced by the statement that "We know of no instance where a newspaper of established quality has raised its retail copy price and suffered a severe circulation reversal." Your editorial was evidently based on the experiences of the largest papers, but the statement is just as true regarding the smaller publications.

When the drastic regulations of the War Board were promulgated in 1918 the Eagle-Star immediately advanced its single copy price to 5 cents, cleaned up its circulation list and adopted the pay-in-advance policy for mail subscribers and advanced its carrier price to 20 cents per week. Since then no papers have been mailed to subscribers unless paid for in advance, and the advanced carrier price has been maintained ever since.

We believe the Eagle-Star is the only daily newspaper in Wisconsin that gets more than fifteen cents per week for carrier delivery. How it affects our circulation may be known from the fact that in a city of 14,000 people our carrier boys are taking out each day only a few less than 2,800 copies, exclusive of street or transient sales. That is certainly pretty full coverage for the size of the city. I believe the Sterling (Ill.) Gazette can report equally as good results in its field. There have been years since this advanced price went into effect when the newspaper would have reported no profit but for the increased receipts due to the difference between 15 and 20 cents per week.

Newspapers generally are sold too cheap. I believe if the most of the better class of newspapers, both in the smaller and in the larger cities, were to increase delivery prices to 20 cents per week for six issues, there would be little decrease in circulation to start with, and none after the people became accustomed to the price.

Frank E. Noyes, Manager Marinette (Wis.) Eagle-Star.

To Editor & Publisher: Noticing the recent correction in your magazine headed "Dr. Hornaday's Mistake," and referring to the fact that Dr. Hornaday had mentioned only two newspapers in America who were printing weekly a special page devoted to game, fish and forests, I cannot allow the occasion to go by without reminding you that the St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press has published such a page for the past several years, and during the outing season of the summer we publish a page at least twice a week aside from the Sunday pub-

R. J. Dunlap.
Assistant Managing Editor.

SENATOR COUZENS ADAMANT

Still Refuses to Allow Tax Hearings to Be Reported

Washington, D. C., April 2.—Stubborn refusal by United States Senator James Couzens to permit newspaper men access to the hearings being conducted by the special senate committee investigating tax and prohibition conditions, of which he is chairman, is costing both news services and newspapers real money.

In order to obtain a transcript of the testimony given each day behind the locked doors of the committee room newspaper correspondents whose papers care to pay the bill have been compelled to pay as high as $29 per copy.

In other words, it has been costing both news services and newspapers $29 a day to obtain legitimate news which could be gathered for nothing if newspaper men were not barred from the committee room while the hearings are in progress.

It is understood the Associated Press has been compelled, as well as the "specials," to hire stenographers, in order to furnish clients with a story of each day's hearings. The transcript is seldom available until long after the committee recesses late each afternoon, so afternoon newspapers are not only denied any news of the hearings at all except what they may pick up from their morning competitors, but the morning newspapers are late in getting each day's story, for it is nightfall before correspondent buying the transcript are able to begin work on it.

Senator Couzens was appealed to Thursday by a group of indignant correspondents to lighten their duties, which his secrecy has rendered increasingly difficult and irksome, but he remained adamant against what he termed "bothersome" newspaper reporting.

He told the correspondents he not only did not want them around while the hearings were in progress, and proposed to continue to bar them from the committee room, but he did not believe the presence of newspaper reporters at a hearing helped a committee to examine witnesses. He also thought some senators were apt to act differently if newspaper reporters were listening to them.

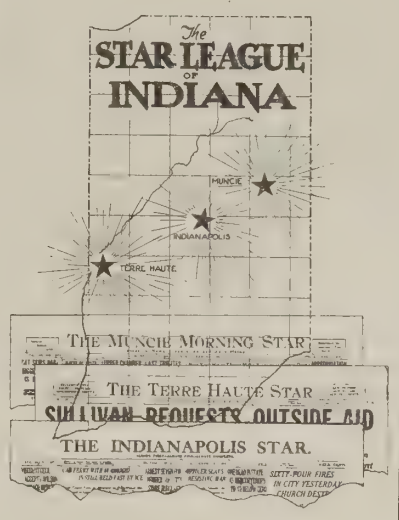
Los Angeles Evening Herald

Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 6,631 Daily Average Circulation.
Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1923, 167,649 Daily. Six Months Ending Sept. 30, 1924, 174,280 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 6,631.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.



In New Orleans It's
THE MORNING TRIBUNE
(Published week-day mornings)
THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM
(Published week-day afternoons)
THE ITEM TRIBUNE
(Published Sunday mornings)
Sld to National Advertisers at a combination rate 15c a line week-days and 18c a line Sundays.

Have you heard of Theophilus Brown? Well . . . you will!

THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

Dominant and headed upward in the rich Louisville field
The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times
MORNING-AFTERNOON-SUNDAY
Represented nationally by the S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

Imperial Selected by

IN the past year you have seen pictured in this column advertisement, many of the leading newspapers of the country who depend on the Imperial Plus Plan. You have read about cities in which every newspaper has selected Imperial as its type metal mainstay. And now comes a group of newspapers, all members of which rely on the Plus Plan.

The Star League of Indiana comprises three splendid papers, the Indianapolis Star, the Terre Haute Star and the Minneapolis Star, which serve over 150,000 readers in 25,000 square miles of the Hoosier Corn Belt. The publishers of these three scintillating Stars recognized the necessity of keeping type metal up to its highest efficiency and thereby adding many years of life to their metal. That's why they chose the Imperial Plus Plan.

Have You Read the Plus Plan?

To read the Plus Plan is to be convinced of its advantages for your shop. It answers a need for a reliable, efficient and economical plan for getting more and better work from type metal. Send for the Plan today.

Imperial METAL

Linotype—Monotype—Intertype
Stereotype
Elrod—Ludlow—Linograph—Thompson

Imperial Type Metal Co.

Philadelphia—Cleveland—New York—Chicago

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

A BOOK about a newspaper man, written by a newspaper man, and principally for newspaper people—such is "Eugene Field's Creative Years" (Doubleday, Page & Co.) by Charles H. Dennis. The volume stresses Field, not so much as a man of letters as a daily worker in a newspaper office. Its author is the managing editor of the Chicago Daily News and incidentally, the man who edited Field's copy. Newspaper friends have been urging Mr. Dennis for years to prepare such a volume.

The chief charm will be found in the intimate and sympathetic glimpses of Field. For example, Mr. Dennis says that Field would arrive at the office about eleven each day, remove his coat, get out a rusty pair of shears and an old cigar box, and then go to the room of the exchange editor where he would scan his favorite newspapers. Field would then gouge the pages with his scissors to clip out bits of articles, headlines, printed names, or any fragment that would suggest a paragraph for his column. With his box full of such clippings he would then go to his own room. He would seldom settle down to work, however, until he had lunched with some member of the staff.

Field usually wrote in his shirt sleeves, but not until he had removed his shoes and put on a pair of disreputable slippers which dangled from his toes when he elevated his feet, as was his custom, to the top of the desk. He would not use his desk, but rather a piece of stiff cardboard on which he placed a sheet of paper with ruled black lines and a blank sheet of paper over that. He always kept on hand a collection of colored inks and generally began his copy by drawing an elaborate initial letter—strikingly illuminated. Only one who knew Field extremely well could go into such details as Mr. Dennis gives in this volume.

To a young man who wrote to find out how he might become a reporter Field replied in a letter from which the following is taken:

> To be a good reporter these qualifications are necessary: Health, the news instinct, a sense of humour, the ability to write a simple style in a legible hand, eternal vigilance, temperance, amiability, patience, determination and ambition. Then, furthermore, it behooves the reporter to be a constant student and reader, informing himself fully upon every variety of subject that interests mankind.

Of Field's big following in newspaper circles no better expression can be found than the parody "An Editorial Lullaby", which originally appeared in the Philadelphia Times. It begins as follows:

Wynken, Blynken and Nod one night
Sat in a room sky-high,
Sat in a blaze of electric light
Rubbing each weary eye.
"Where shall I put them and what do you choose?"
The office boy asked the three.
"Pick us out the Chicago News
If that it has come, perdie;
Tired of other exchanges are we,"
Said Wynken,
Blynken,
And Nod.

Ray Stannard Baker covered Field's death for the Chicago Record. It is a wonderful "obit", as the reprinted parts given toward the close of the volume show.

Field showed his remarkable newspaper instinct when he wrote his story about the Custer massacre on the Little Big Horn from extremely meager information. This story was originally printed in the St. Joseph (Mo.) Gazette in the early summer of 1876 and gave the world the first news of that terrible disaster to Custer (see page 24).

Of the strong professional interest that Field took at all times in the work of making a newspaper the following quotation, which appeared in his column little more than a year before his death, and at the time of the strike of railroad workers in Chicago, is given by Mr. Dennis:

> The Chicago press is covering the strike admirably. It is a business involving labor, danger, patience, discretion, discrimination, ingenuity, skill and expeditiousness. The qualities answering these demands are being exhibited to a degree by the Chicago newspaper reporters at this time; the excellence of their work has been sustained through a period of exceptional excitement and fatigue. Never before have reporters responded with such promptness to the demands of duty, and never before have such even and well-sustained results been wrought out amid confusion, tumult and danger. We have always been proud of our Chicago reporters; as a class they are a manly, dutiful, ambitious, courageous, keen lot of fellows. We are prouder of them now than ever before. We hope that no evil will befall them in these trying times and that there will soon come a suspension of this terrific strain upon their energies.

"Eugene Field's Creative Years," possesses a distinct literary charm and will enlarge that already wide circle of readers who find delight in the works of the author of "Little Boy Blue". But a formal review of the volume as a piece of literature belongs to some other periodical. I am giving the book a rather extended mention, not only because Field belongs to "Our Own World of Letters", but also because the author is one of the finest types of newspaper executives which American journalism affords.

* * *

IN the London Spectator, edited by J. St. Loe Strachey, an article recently appeared entitled "As I See the British Press". In an editorial note Mr. Strachey says that the author is the London correspondent of a famous American newspaper, but warns his readers that opinions expressed in the article are not necessarily those held by him.

London newspapers, according to the article, are either intentionally long-winded and dull or they are intentionally breathless and bright. By way of an illustration the Times is given for the former and the Daily Express for the latter. Amazement is expressed that no newspaper appears in the twilight zone between the dullness on one hand and the dazzle on the other.

Mention is made that the Manchester Guardian, though not a London newspaper, is the world's pre-eminent journal of opinion—though not strictly speaking, a newspaper. The Washington correspondent of the London Times is regarded as probably the ablest political foreign correspondent alive.

Of our own newspapers the article comments as follows:

> American newspapers try to be "bright" and "snappy" and to "get down to the level of their public," but they are as children in comparison with the London popular press.

Unfortunately, the writer in the London Spectator dismisses the subject with the passing mention just quoted and does not go into detail to prove his point.

* * *

WITH apologies to the old-fashioned country weekly a good time will be had by all who read the pamphlet containing the addresses on journalism delivered at the University of Nebraska when the State Press Association held its fifty-second annual convention at that institution. Copies may be obtained upon application to M. M. Fogg, Director, School of Journalism, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska.

Joseph G. Alden, editor of the York Republican and president of the Nebraska Press Association opens the pamphlet with "A Profession of Power and Purpose". I like what he says about the opportunities in rural fields and smaller cities. The paper that I like to run in my pipe dream is not a metropolitan daily but a community weekly. I have good company in this respect, even in the Newspaper Club of New York City.

M. A. Brown, editor of the Kearney Daily Hub, is the author of "Newspapering in Nebraska, 1870-1925"—an interesting chat about numerous Nebraska papers with close-ups of several editors. This article is rich in historical data.

Real human interest will be found in the article "The 'Colyum'" by Ole Bu field manager of the Nebraska Press A sociation. He preaches a good sermon this paragraph:

> In the first place, a column must always clean. It is true that some folks appear to joy suggestive stuff. But my opinion is most people don't. Where you can make person smile with something suggestive, will disgust a dozen who don't like it. always regret it when I read so-called fu stuff that depends upon its dirt for the Writers should have higher ideals than I always go over my column carefully week before I send it to the printer, and out everything that appears to have a do meaning, or that has any tendency to sug tiveness.

J. P. O'Furey, editor of the Ce County News, contributes the article t ought to have the widest reading paper on scientific management for c munity weeklies. Mrs. Marie We editor the Norfolk Press, represents women and their opportunity in the c munity field with a very practical pa in which she outlines "A Woman's portunity for Service" in journalism.

ATTENTION PUBLISHERS

C. B. HOLLISTER can be reached at the Ambassador Hotel, New York City, until further notice. Newspapers confronted with circulation problems and desiring large immediate paid-in-advance circulation gains are invited to communicate. In position to conduct one more big campaign before July 1st.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATIO
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Newspaper Features

Intelligently Selected—Properly Prepared

Comics, Fiction, Cross-Word Puzzles, Weekly Features, Daily Fillers and Blanket Services.

Write for Sample Sheets

Readers' Syndicate, Inc.
799 Broadway New York

D. P. SYNDICATE
GARDEN CITY, NEW YORK

LORD GREY'S OWN STORY

Intimate diary recollections o the man who dominated British politics in 1914 and issued th famous "White Papers"—As Si Edward Grey, premier, he elec trified the world with his cham pionship of the Allied cause, afte having done his best to preven war.

These memoirs form a nev record of modern history, by a brilliant writer and one of th world's great men.

Bound and indexed reports for January, March and February available to new clients. They cover the following subjects:—

Stock market boom and public investment
Isle of Pine Treaty
Party politics in Europe
World Court and Geneva Protocol
Status of child labor amendment
Four years under the budget
Parliamentary secretaries' profits and wages since 1920-1921
Ten months under Dawes plan
Record of the 68th Congress
Filibusters and Senate rules
The President's power of appointment
Shifting of wealth in the U. S.

EDITORIAL RESEARCH REPORTS
1425 G Street Washington, D. C.

ASSOCIATED EDITORS SERVICE

DAILY
Layon McDuffer—Comic by Payne.
"Kids" Pantomime—Comic by Striebel.
Quillen's Paragraphs.
"Aunt Het," by Quillen.
"Willie Willis," by Quillen.
Mothers and Their Children.
Golf as Champions Play It.
Color Cut-Outs.
Al Demaree's Sport Cartoons.
Word of Comfort.

WEEKLY
Boys' and Girls' Page.
Economists' Forum.
Auto Sense—Williamson.

SEMI-WEEKLY
Barrie Payne on Golf (Humor).
Individuality of Dress.

ASSOCIATED EDITORS, Inc.
440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Mr. Publisher or Business Manager

The International Circulation Managers' Association can supply you with a competent circulation manager. Write

CLARENCE EYSTER
Sec'y-Treas., I. C. M. A.

Peoria Star Co.
Peoria, Ill.

36 PLAN HAWAIIAN TRIP

...rs, Publishers and Correspondents to Make Navy Trip

Thirty-six editors, publishers and ...wspaper correspondents have accepted ...tions extended by the Navy de... ...ment to accompany the Pacific fleet ...s maneuvers in Hawaiian waters ... 15 to 27.

Following is the list of editors who ... signified their intention to make the ...

Frederick I. Thompson, Birmingham ...Herald; Chas. S. Osborn, Jr., Fresno (Cal.) Republican; Frank F. Barham, Los Angeles (Cal.) Herald; W. H. B. Fowler, San Francisco Chronicle; Frank S. Hoag, Pueblo (Col.) Star-Journal; Paul F. Mueller, Chicago Abendpost; J. M. Stephenson, South Bend (Ind.) News-Times; B. F. Forgey, Ashland (Ky.) Independent; Ernest L. Peterson, Dickinson (N. D.) Press; J. S. Leach, Bartlesville (Okla.) Enterprise.

J. T. Cushing, St. Albans (Vt.) Daily Messenger; J. E. Hanway, Casper (Wyo.) Casper Tribune; W. D. Adams, Charlotte (N. C.) Observer; S. G. Goldthwaite, Boone (Ia.) News-Republican; H. E. Montgomery, Junction City (Kan.) Union; F. K. Boal, Washington Correspondent, Pittsburgh Sun; T. R. Williams, Talladega (Ala.) Talladega Home; Karl Bickel, president, United Press Associations; J. E. Langdon, Sacramento (Cal.) Bee; V. Y. Dallman, Springfield (Ill.) State Register.

Verne E. Joy, Centralia (Ill.) Sentinel; D. W. Stevick, Champaign (Ill.) News-Gazette; R. C. Harbison, San Bernardino (Cal.) Daily Sun; R. G. Breckenridge, Pueblo (Col.) Star-Journal; R. F. R. Huntsman, Brooklyn Standard Union; M. M. Harris, San Antonio Express and News; W. F. Wiley, Cincinnati (O.) Enquirer; Hilton V. Brown, Indianapolis (Ind.) News.

J. Vance, New Britain (Conn.) Daily Herald; C. F. Renich, Woodstock (Ill.) Daily Sentinel; J. E. Brimblecom, National Editorial Association, St. Paul, Minn; J. E. Chamberlain, Boston Evening Transcript; F. P. Glass, Jr., St. Louis (Mo.) Star; Carter Field, Washington Correspondent, New York Herald Tribune; Robert G. Armstrong, Los Angeles Times.

Labor Paper Incorporated

The Galesburg (Ill.) Labor News has been incorporated with $1,000 capital.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

...ale.

...oss "Straightline" newspaper printing and ...ng press. Two-plate wide, 4 to 12 pages ...24 pages collected; eight columns 13 ems. ...s for either two or three folds. Samples ...duct furnished upon request, together with ...her information sought by any person in... ...d. This press is now taking care in ... of the Comic and Magazine Sections of ... Paul Sunday Pioneer Press, and can ...leased about July 1, 1925. Price and ... on application to Comptroller, Dispatch ...ng Co., St. Paul, Minn.

...rs' Outfitters

...ng Plants and business bought and sold. ...can Typefounders' products, printers' and ...nders' machinery of every description. ...r, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New ... City.

...We can increase your business—you ...nt it increased.

...You have thought of press clippings ...urself. But let us tell you how press ...ppings can be made a business ...ilder for you.

BURRELLE
45 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
...tablished a Quarter of a Century

MODERNIZE
your COMPOSING ROOM
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMENT
Made in both wood and steel.

Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.

For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

"Sellegrams"

...hen you want to save time in ...nding a message, you use a ...legram.

...s quick; it gets your message ...ere in the shortest possible ...me.

...hen you want to make quick sales of ...w or used machinery use EDITOR & ...BLISHER equipment ads. They're ...ellegrams," quick and efficient.

For Sale.

Practically new Goss Comet flat bed web press—has run less than three months—new owner of paper will install 16 page web press latter part of May—$3,700.00 of the purchase price is in notes at $100.00 per month which may be assumed, balance cash. Ask for details No. 657. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York.

Wanted To Buy.

There are scores of good second-hand, stereotyping newspaper presses in storage. One reason they remain in storage is that the owners ask first hand prices. If anybody has a real hargain in a 24-page press, write full particulars. C-861, Editor & Publisher.

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control.

USED BY THE OLEAN TIMES
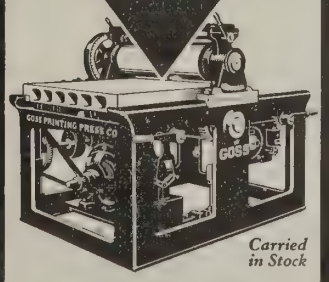
Olean, N. Y.



We refer you to them for their opinion

CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO
QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

MAIN OFFICE
Conway Bldg.
111 W. Washington St.
CHICAGO

EASTERN OFFICE
Marbridge Bldg.
Broadway at 34th St.
NEW YORK

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY

Carried in Stock

Some outstanding and exclusive features of The Goss Combination Wet and Dry Matrix Roller: Patented stretching roller produces dry mats without a wrinkle. Both ends of cylinder are set at same time. Heavy cast-iron cylinders with forged steel shafts. Extra heavy bed—no racks—large enough to run chase with columns cross-wise. Rolls wet mats in 11¼ seconds; dry mats in 22½ seconds. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.

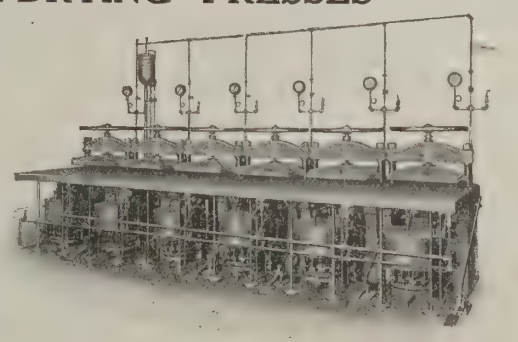
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

N.Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.

MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
417 South Dearborn St.
Chicago Ill.

Wilke's METALS
THE HIGHEST STANDARD
Write for Information Concerning
Wilke's Metal Insurance Plan
It Will Save You Money
Metals Refining Company
Hammond, Indiana
Warehouses in Principal Cities



FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS
DUPLEX PRESSES
"OUR CUSTOMERS WRITE OUR ADS"
DUPLEX FLAT BED
"The fact that The Recorder won the Booth Cup for the best front page among Michigan dailies under 7500 circulation indicates the kind of work the Duplex Flat Bed does."
Albion, Michigan, Recorder
Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

BATTERY OF SIX HOE PNEUMATIC MATRIX-DRYING PRESSES

With Independent Gas-fired Steam Generators.

The quickest and the most economical Presses for the moulding and drying of Matrices.

More than 800 in use

R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand St., New York City
7 South Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILL. — also at DUNELLEN, N. J. — 7 Water Street, BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."
18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.
6c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.
36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Bookkeeper.
Experienced; capable; A1 references. Now employed Pacific Slope. Available reasonable time. Write or wire Box C-872, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man
for newspaper or agency office work. Age 35. Seven years' eastern experience, nine years on Pacific Coast. Qualified to take full charge National Advertising Department. References. Box C-873, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man.
12 years' experience, solicitor, copywriter, manager. Permanent position with greater possibilities where ability will be rewarded and good constructive work appreciated is desired. Employed, age 35, married. A producer who needs little supervision. Good address, appearance, record and references. Initial salary secondary to real opportunity. Address C-891, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
18 years' experience leading Metropolitan newspapers. Capable executive; convincing salesman. Thoroughly experienced building and promoting general retail advertising; well acquainted national field. Now employed; age 36, married. Address C-763, care Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
Young married man with eight years' experience in newspaper advertising wishes to make connection as Advertising Manager on good live newspaper in city of 25,000 to 50,000. Can write and sell copy, plan campaigns and know the classified and foreign field. Have been employed in present position seven years. Available after April 15th. C-880, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Salesman,
experienced as manager, capable of rendering copy service to advertisers. Have worked in cities and small towns. Can furnish excellent references from advertiser as well as publisher. Address C-892, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
Thoroughly experienced with excellent record. Have outgrown present connections. For further details address Box C-887, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager Solicitor.
Young. Experienced in organization, selling, and writing copy. Good personality, initiative, reliable. Fine recommendations. Prefer live Real Estate town in Middle West. Record for new business. Adress Box C-859, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Now Circulation Manager in town of 200,000 wishes to make change. Has had experience on both morning and evening daily and Sunday. Can furnish the very best of reference. C-879, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Capable, aggressive, experienced. Unquestionable record as to ability and character and particularly strong in increase at minimum cost. Knows system. Also a thorough understanding in every department. For full particulars, write C-888, Editor & Publisher.

The Key to the Publisher's Office

YOU want to locate a good position. You have excellent qualifications. You want to let publishers know of your ability. You want to get your story through the door marked "Private".

A Situations Wanted advertisement will open that door. It is the key to the publisher's office.

Situations Wanted

Circulation Manager.
First class working circulation manager of proven ability wants job May first. Extra good street and suburban salesman. Good organizer. Well acquainted with other departments. Good paper in territory not less than 100,000. West or Mississippi Valley. Address C-865, Editor & Publisher.

Editor.
Capable of taking entire charge of news and editorial pages. Knows news and can write strong editorials; age 45; wide experience West, North and South; hard conscientious worker. Looking for opportunity to serve appreciative employer rather than fancy salary at the start. C-867, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Man.
Rewrite man, news executive, editorial writer, desk man, thirty-one, capable, experienced on leading dailies. C-842, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer.
Forceful writer, enthusiastic, tireless worker, thoroughly dependable, age 44; life-time of varied newspaper experience; 15 years New York City. Highest references and samples of work on request. Ready to go anywhere. C-866, Editor & Publisher.

General Manager-Publisher.
I know a newspaper doctor—a publisher of rare experience and proven successful record who has never become connected with a really successful newspaper and has never left an unsuccessful one. His experience has been East, West and South. He is neither too young nor too old. He knows newspaper organization and operation as a human should. He gets the maximum out of the force and tools at hand. His character is established and leaders in each city where he has been publisher or manager will testify to his ability and his personality making lasting, worth-while impression on those communities. He has been owner or part owner of several newspapers—Morning, Evening, Sunday—but it is not absolutely essential to let him have a stock interest to get his services as publisher or general manager, though, having sold for associated owner the property he last brought to success, he wishes a connection as publisher or general manager with a bonus arrangement and merely nominal salary. He is no glad hand artist, but a man of education and refinement capable of making and holding real friends. His thorough experience and his personal integrity mark him as a worthy associate by other publishers. He is a Christian and is married. If you know where such a man is needed let me put you in touch with this man. Box C-875, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Engineer for Publisher.
Will assume entire responsibility for mechanical operations, labor and production of large publishing organization. Young, practical, technical and all-around executive; member Typographical Union. Now with largest newspaper corporation in America, but desire connection where initiative, ability, reliabilty, energy, loyalty, honesty and Merits mean something to employer. C-886, care Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Executive.
A thorough knowledge and experience in all phases of newspaper work. Can qualify from experience and ability as advertising manager, classified manager, auditor, or business manager. Fond of detail and could relieve publisher desiring to devote more time to other activities. Young, single, but not a floater. Best references as to character and ability. Prefer Central States or Pacific Coast. Address Box C-890, care Editor & Publisher.

Newspaperman.
Magazine, trade paper, daily experience, desk and street, seeks permanent place on New York City publication. Can handle reporting, rewrite, editorials, make-up, and do publicity. Married, college graduate. Now in New York. C-885, Editor & Publisher.

Publisher or General Manager.
I would like a connection in about sixty days as publisher or general manager of either morning, evening, or combination and Sunday newspaper, and would like to make appointmet for conference during A. N. P. A. meeting with owner who needs man of highest character, with proven successful career, who loves work and about whom, as an associate, he could feel absolutely satisfied in advance. Sale of my newspaper for profit causes me to seek a new location. I am willing to buy an interest or make a contract on salary and bonus basis. Address Box C-874, Editor & Publisher.

Publisher or Business Manager,
43. Capable of assuming entire responsibility of daily paper ten thousand or more circulation. Successful record but no capital. C-881, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Reporter.
Young man, 30, desires position as reporter on daily paper in East. 9 years' experience on some leading dailies. Address C-893, Editor & Publisher.

Superintendent or Foreman.
Of newspaper composing room wishes permanent position with newspaper where efficiency and good work is required; have had practical and executive experience in large and small plants; in charge of one composing room over twelve years. Arthur Heath, 108 Malvern place, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Syndicate Executive with a good sales record. Is well known to Managing Editors and Business Managers, having been connected with a nationally known newspaper syndicate. Has produced for years and directed campaigns that made some of the greatest of newspaper syndicate features. C-882, Editor & Publisher.

Young Man.
Experienced circulation work desires connection Eastern newspaper. Capable of organizing, operating Branch System. C-883, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

Advertising Solicitor Wanted.
By national weekly newspaper with third of a million circulation and very low milline rate. Must know agencies and large national advertisers. Give experience, age and salary expected. No triflers or flashes, please. C-856, Editor & Publisher.

Canvassing Crew Manager.
An experienced result-producing house-to-house canvassing crew manager; one who knows the block system of canvassing for daily and Sunday home delivered circulation in connection with travel and pedestrian accident insurance. To the man who can qualify and produce, the position would be permanent with worth while compensation with a well known daily and Sunday paper in a city of fine climate of population more than 250,000. State experience, give reference, and address C-870 c/o the Editor & Publisher.

First Class Manager
for Department of Advertising of Select Monthly Magazine. Must be well acquainted with national field. $50 to start, with healthy bonus on producing the goods. Excellent, permanent future for right man. Give references, religious and fraternal connections, and enclose recent photograph. Box C-876, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
High grade man to take charge of circulation and local advertising, Massachusetts daily. Town 18,000. A background of newspaper experience necessary. Position affords steady employment and excellent prospects. Webster Evening Times, Webster, Mass.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Wanted.
A daily paper in a city of about 25,000. Prefer exclusive field. Can pay $100,000 as initial payment. C-889, Editor & Publisher.

FEATURE ARTICLES

Publishers—Attention!
We furnish MSS on all subjects by competent authors. Will take advertising in exchange for all or part of our service. Reasonable rates. Write up your wants. Literary Bureau Pub. Dept. MOJ4, Hannibal, Mo.

Johnston Returns from Cruise

William Johnston, suggestion editor of the New York World, returned this week from a 10 weeks' Mediterranean cruise on the liner Homeric. He sailed Jan. 24, and visited Tunis, Algiers, Cairo, Constantinople, and Monte Carlo.

Kobbe Agency Appoints Staff

Alfred Biggs, Walter P. Mount and C. Curtiss Main have joined the staff of Philip Kobbe Company, Inc., of New York, as account executives. L. Wester has been made assistant treasurer.

SALES—APPRAISA
Newspaper Properti

You have a newspaper prop which you wish to sell profitabl

Your newspaper property is making enough money?

You wish to make a sound inv ment in a newspaper property?

You wish to know the scien value of any newspaper property

WE HAVE BEEN SUCCESSFULLY GINEERING NEWSPAPER SALES APPRAISALS AND PURCHASES CONSOLIDATIONS FOR THE P THIRTY YEARS.

Palmer, DeWitt & Palm
350 MADISON AVENUE, NEW Y
Telephone: Murray Hill 8237

Successful Performanc

This firm has a record of alm 15 years of successful performance the difficult work of
PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL
of newspaper and magazine properti throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNO
Times Bldg. New Yor

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

AGRICULTURAL WRITER AND EDITOR seeks position with newspaper, farm journal or house organ. Knows farming, livestock and poultry; well up in cooperative marketing; expert in organization and publicity. Possesses writing, executive and promotive ability, backed by Iowa college degree and a dozen years in two responsible positions. Would add the prestige of authority to your farm pages. Our No. 1039.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., · SPRINGFIELD, MASS

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPAN

New York, March 25, 1

The Board of Directors have declared a r quarterly dividend of one and one-half pe (1½%) on the preferred capital stock o company, payable April 15th, 1925, to pre stockholders of record at the close of bu April 7th, 1925. Checks will be mailed. fer books will not close.

OWEN SHEPHERD, Treas

CHANGES ON DAILY TAB

Eight New Men Join Staff of Va bilt's Miami Paper

Many changes have recently been in the staff of the Miami Illustrated Tab, the third tabloid paper to be st by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

Kent Watson, former "swing man the Los Angeles Illustrated Daily N has been transferred to Miami to be news and picture editor of the Lindsay McKenna, moving picture w has been made dramatic editor.

The following have joined the st the Tab: Vernon Arnold, formerly the St. Louis Star, copy desk; M Luther, formerly with the Miami H make-up editor; William Wolfe, for with Atlanta Constitution, slot Walter B. Ratliff, former city edit the Fort Worth (Tex.) Press, city Warren W. Wheaton, former Was ton press association correspondent, editor; Seth Clarkson, formerly wit Florida Times-Union, copy desk.

Sphinx Invite the Ladies

Sphinx Club, New York, will ho annual "Ladies' Night" at the Wa Astoria Hotel, New York, April

EGAL RATE BILL" NOW LAW

lication of State, County and Pol-ical Advertising Linked in Texas

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

STIN, Tex., April 1.—Publication of ial state and county notices in Texas vspapers, and political advertising linked together in the same law Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson approved "legal publication rate" measure d by the thirty-ninth legislature. law is effective June 18.

is bill provides the rate for official es such as delinquent tax lists, shall e lowest classified advertising newspaper; and that the schedule of that the paper must be filed with fficial inserting the notices.

e same law provides that political tising shall not be charged more charged for classified advertising a like class of advertising matter." law provides official notices shall be d in newspapers unless the papers e to accept them, when they may be d in the old way by handbills or dars.

HAWAII TO RADIO U. S. am Will Be Broadcast April 10 from Honolulu Advertiser

Honolulu Advertiser on April 10, broadcast Hawaii's first radio pro- to all America.

. Wallace R. Farrington, will ad- Governors of the various States. wave will be 270 meters, 500 watts.

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

April 11—Pacific Northwest Newspaper Assn., spring meeting, Vancouver, B. C.
April 13—Tax Publication Case, before Supreme Court, Washington, D. C.
April 15-27—Navy Department Trip for Newspaper men from San Francisco to Hawaii.
April 16—Sphinx Club, "Ladies' Night," Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.
April 17-18—Pacific Slope Newspaper Conference, meeting, Portland, Ore.
April 20-21—Associated Press, annual meeting, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.
April 22-23—American Newspaper Publishers Assn., annual convention, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.
April 22—Bureau of Advertising A. N. P. A., annual dinner, Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.

Printers Face Assessment Rise

Vote will be taken on May 25 by the International Typographical Union on a proposal to increase the per capita assessment to 40 cents a month permanently to complete and maintain the annex to the new home now being built at Colorado Springs, Col. The present assessment is 30 cents. Work on the annex, which is for tubercular patients and will cost $200,000, is now suspended, owing to lack of funds.

Moved to A. A. C. W. Headquarters

Arrangements have been made to answer from headquarters of the A. A. C. W. in New York City requests concerning church advertising copy which previously had been answered from the Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia.

For the past three years, Mr. Herbert H. Smith has volunteered his services to help papers obtain advertising material designed to assist churches to increase their attendance. Stenographic assistance for the Church Advertising Department has now been afforded in the Educational Department of the New York headquarters. Hereafter, inquiries regarding copy formerly furnished by Mr. Smith will now be directed to 383 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Change Your Records

For church advertising copy and suggestions write Church Advertising Department, care Earle Pearson, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, 383 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A.A.C.W.
383 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.
DR. C. F. REISNER, President

Here are presented facts and figures regarding Indiana which will be of real help to the general advertiser in planning an advertising campaign to cover this prosperous state.

—There are nearly 3,000,000 men, women and children, which ranks Indiana eleventh in the United States.

—It has the highest percentage of native whites in the country with over 92%.

—The state is nearly divided in half between rural and urban population with 49.4% rural and 50.6% urban.

—Over 47% of the entire population is employed in gainful occupations.

—Indiana has over 650,000 automobiles.

—Indiana ranks sixth in coal productions. The state also ranks twelfth in production of petroleum.

With needs to supply, money with which to pay for things needed, Indiana offers a market equal to any in the country.

The papers listed here are leaders. They serve an immense, intelligent, wealthy, family of buyers.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,106	.025
*Evansville Courier and Journal	(S)	32,840	.08
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	31,502	.08
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	34,520	.08
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	41,938	.09
*Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	14,196	.055
Hammond Times	(E)	16,553	.06
*Huntington Press	(M&S)	3,797	.025
*Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,605 / (E) 12,900	20,505	.06
†††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,000	.025
*South Bend News-Times	(M) 10,138 / (E) 12,902	23,040	.06
*South Bend News-Times	(S)	21,298	.06
†South Bend Tribune	(S) 19,388 / (E)	20,627	.06
*Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	22,830	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

A. N. P. A., annual convention at New York, April 20 to 25.

Associated Press, annual meeting, New York, April 20 and 21.

RUGS and carpets are taken up, stored and cleaned, during the spring, or early summer and companies who perform this service may be induced to call attention to it as spring advances.—C. M. L.

Business, professional and industrial offices in your city are always heavy buyers of equipment and supplies. Why not a couple of pages devoted to office devices, stationery, etc. Two jobbers might cooperate in a special campaign of this character, as will the dealers if you go after them in the right manner.—B. A. T.

The Boston Advertiser recently worked this idea in connection with attracting special attention to their advertising sections. Names were picked at random from the city directory and inserted among the advertisements, especially the want ads and a prize of two tickets to a local theater given to each person who called at the office proving that his or her name had been among the ones printed. This is a fine method to stimulate interest.—C. E. PELLISSIER, Boston, Mass.

A page of ads can be grouped under the heading, "Are you ready for April Showers?" Umbrellas, raincoats, slickers, and rubbers are among the possibilities of the ads. Weather reports indicating rain can be added to the heading.—THEODORE F. KOOP.

Greeting card dealers, stationers, and novelty merchants are particularly good prospects at this pre-Easter season.—C. M. L., Washington, D. C.

The Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch on every Kiwanis Club meeting day carries a page of Kiwanians' ads under the heading "The Richmond Kiwanian." Officers of the club are printed at the top of the page directly under the heading and the Kiwanis emblem is generously scattered throughout the layout. In the center of the ads appears weekly the picture of a member of the club with a brief sketch. Various club notices also appear.—George Lemon Sugg, Jackson (Miss.) Daily News.

In an effort to promote by publicity and education, the increased support of Sioux Falls industries, the Argus-Leader is now running each week a page devoted to products made in Sioux Falls, containing advertisements of various manufacturers and other industries, together with one article each week on one of the firms. There is also a feature article on the page concerning the relation of home industries to a city's growth, the title of this week's article being, "Where Mills and Factories Prosper, Stores and People Do Also."—L. J. Jellison, Dubuque (Ia.) Times-Journal.

The Moline (Ill.) Daily Dispatch recently used a page of its own paper to promote advertising, using an eight-column line "The Moline Daily Dispatch Progressive Advertisers' Page" citing in a series of four boxes arranged below numerous national advertised products that have established trade names through consistent and extensive advertising. The remaining three-quarters of the page was devoted to more than a score of brief sketches of businesses of its principal advertisers. It was an impressive ad and considered by the advertising department excellent "opener" for a campaign to bring in further accounts.—LOUIS SAVADGE.

A Massachusetts publication presents a novel idea for selling space to the individual advertiser. Under the caption, "What Store?" appears a cut of the interior of some merchant's establishment. The idea was for the public to discover which local merchant was advertising in that manner. The answer was sealed and locked in the City Hall safe by His Honor the Mayor, thus insuring absolute secrecy. This was a clever idea, not only to arouse local curiosity, but also to bring trade into the merchant's establishment.—George C. Marcley.

Doctors say that the best way to cure "Spring Fever" is by eating plenty of fresh vegetables and fresh fruit. Since this is the case it would be a good proposition for the paper to run a big story to this effect and to group around the story the ads of numerous local concerns handling fresh vegetables and fruits. It should be possible to get extra advertising by means of this stunt.—Frank H. Williams.

Put on a Ford spread in your paper. for a profitable run.

Have ads on the two pages of all the stores, dealers and repairmen who handle Ford products or who handle goods appealing to Ford owners. This would be something new in many cities and not very hard to get up.—Frank H. Williams, Santa Ana, Cal.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

THE Feribault (Minn.) Daily News recently ran an interesting feature hinging upon the election of "Ma" Ferguson as governor of Texas, entitled "If I Were Governor." Local club and business women contributed to the series which ran three times a week.—HARRIETT HILLIBOE.

The sports page of the Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Republican has been carrying a daily box feature headed, "Cedar Rapids Business Men Who Have Been College Athletes." Each day the past athletic achievements of one man, together with his cut, are printed. The cuts add materially to the paper's morgue.—THEODORE F. KOOP.

An interesting regular Sunday feature is the best short story written by local high school students the previous week. The Miami (Okla.) News-Record finds the high school English department glad to cooperate.—JOHN B. OWEN, Miami News-Record.

The Des Moines (Ia.) Tribune-News this spring invited its women readers to submit designs for spring hats holding an Easter hat design competition for which it engaged milliners to make up the chapeau. Designers were to submit descriptions and models for materials costing less than $5 and the contest closed a week ahead of Easter, so that the paper might have bonnet made up and ready for pre tion Easter time. Pictures of the ning design and hat and of other me ious designs were printed.—L. J. Sa

A good lead for a feature story work of the student R. O. T. C. branch of military work is an imp part of most of our college work. people have but a vague idea of what its work really is and just w accomplished. Look up your loca lege outfit and give it a write-up.—PELLISSIER, Boston, Mass.

Decoration Day is just aroun corner. Do you know who was th white man in your country and his grave was dug? We've "dug a crackin' good story about our white settler's grave, its location, dition of marker, etc. Mighty goo a pre-Decoration Day article.—D O. Ross.

GUS and GUSSI
By JACK LAIT
Great new daily comic strip w amuse millions. Don't watch grow—grow with it!
KING FEATURE SYNDICATE, Inc
241 W. 58th St. New York C

"If I Were A Woman
By
IRVIN COBB
For Release April 5
The First of the New Illustrated
Series of Our
PRE-EMINENT ARTICLE SERVICE
"A Lustrous Name - An Arresti Idea - Every Week"
Metropolitan Newspape Service
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.
150 Nassau Street, New York City

Prunes and Prisms
By
Percival Prim,
The Perfect Speaker.
A Daily Lesson
in GRAMMAR
Written in Lilting Verse
for Old and Young
Write for Option
The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
World Building, New York

Thomas W. Briggs Company
Memphis, - Tenn.
Originators of the Permanent Weekly Business Review Page
Look us up in Dun or Bradstreet's

BY UNITED PRESS
AROUND THE WORLD AROUND THE CLOCK
UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
4 page ready-print color comics
Magazine Feature Pages.
Write for samples and rates
NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD STREET,
CLEVELAND, OHIO

A Rich Field for the Man Who Has Something to Sell

PENNSYLVANIA

Here are found nine million people—eight per cent of the population of the United States—80.8% native white and 18.8% foreign born.

There are sixty-seven cities in Pennsylvania with a population of over 10,000 each, and turning out 65% of the State's total industrial production.

Pennsylvania's wealth is more than $28,833,000,000, an increase of over 77% in the last ten years. This is a per capita wealth of $3,187, also an increase of 56%.

Each city has its own newspaper. No other paper will do and no other paper can sell your merchandise in these cities.

Co-operate with Pennsylvania merchants and increase your sales in one of the best territories in the country.

Pennsylvania newspapers listed here are the leading market finders for national advertisers. They have helped numerous manufacturers to win a place in Pennsylvania and hold it. They move merchandise from the dealer's shelf to the home.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Allentown Call .....(M)	29,446	.10	.10
*Allentown Call .....(S)	19,425	.10	.10
†Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	5,725	.03	.03
†Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,189	.029	.029
*Chester Times .....(E)	15,507	.055	.055
†Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,529	.035	.03
*Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,212	.02	.02
*Easton Express .....(E)	21,439	.07	.07
*Erie Times .....(E)	26,258	.08	.08
*Harrisburg Telegraph .....(E)	40,487	.095	.095
Hazleton Plain Speaker....(E) } Hazleton Standard-Sentinel.(M) }	19,510	.06	.06
*Mount Carmel Item .....(E)	4,409	.025	.021
*Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,375	.035	.035
*Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(E&M)	16,284	.08	.07
*Scranton Times .....(E)	41,414	.12	.11
*Sharon Herald .....(E)	6,568	.0285	.0285
†Stroudsburg Record (E) Press..(M)	8,078	.045	.045
*Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	4,564	.025	.021
*Warren Times-Mirror .....(E&M)	7,579	.036	.036
†Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,358	.06	.06
†West Chester Local News.....(E)	10.883	.04	.04
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader....(E)	23,775	.08	.06
*Williamsport Sun .....(E)	19,766	.07	.07
†York Dispatch .....(E)	18,527	.05	.05
†York Gazette and Daily.....(M)	17,604	.05	.05

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

Selling Food

in

New York

IN Metropolitan New York, where the sales opportunities for food producers and distributors are larger than in any other market in the world, The Sun is recognized as the most forceful selling medium for food products of good quality.

Nearly all of the advertisers of food articles of merit in New York use The Sun and many of them place more advertising in The Sun than in any other New York newspaper.

During the last six months of 1924, The Sun published more Food Advertising than any other New York newspaper—seven-day morning as well as six-day evening.

The Sun's remarkable ability to create and increase consumer demand for food products is recognized by New York retailers and serves as an effective aid to national advertisers seeking retail distribution and dealer cooperation in this rich, responsive market.

The responsiveness of Sun readers is indicated not only by The Sun's strength in Food Advertising but also by the fact that The Sun publishes more National Advertising, more Manhattan Department Store Advertising, more Automobile, Radio and Financial Advertising than any other New York evening newspaper.

The following Food Advertisers used more space in The Sun during 1924 than in any other New York newspaper:

Mrs. Allen's Pies
Atwood Grapefruit
Bokar Coffee
Charles S. Cash
Certified Bread
Colman's Products
Crisco
Del Monte
Encore Olive Oil
Gristede Bros.
Gude's Butter
Happiness Candy Stores
Hecker's Flour
Hellmann's Mayonnaise
Kellogg's Products
Lester & Toner
Liebig Malt Extract
Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co.
Mah Jong Tea Co.
Henry Maillard
A. W. McCann
Newberry Bros.
Ocean Spray Cranberry Sauce
Page & Shaw
Pompeian Olive Oil
Postum Cereal Co.
H.-O. Cereal Co.
Ralston Cereal
Daniel Reeves
Ridgways Teas
A. I. Root Co.
Ruffner's Potato Waffles
Sanka Coffee
Sheffield Farms Co.
Thea-Nectar Teas
Westphalia Hams

In addition, the following Food Advertisers also used The Sun during 1924:

Walter Baker & Co., Ltd.
Bau Olive Oil
Beech-Nut Products
Best Foods, Inc.
Blue Label Products
Borden's Farm Products Co.
Certo Sure-Jell
Consumers Pies
Davis Baking Powder
Drake's Cake
Easton's Mayonnaise
Eatmor Cranberries
Ferris Hams
Gillies Coffee Co.
Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.
Gulden's Mustard
Happiness Almond Bars
Heide's Candy
Heinz Products
Horlick's Malted Milk
Horton's Ice Cream
Hydrox Ice Cream
India Tea
Joint Coffee Trade Publicity Committee
J. L. Kraft Bros. Co.
Lea & Perrins
Lipton's Tea
Loft Candy
Long Island Ducks
Marshak's Maltmolak
Maxwell House Coffee
Mazola
Mission Garden Tea
Mueller's Products
National Biscuit Co.
Oh Henry!
Park & Tilford
Phenix Cheese
Premier Products
Pride of the Farm Catsup
Quaker Oats
Royal Products
Rumbel Health Food
Salada Tea
Schrafft's
Louis Sherry
Silz Chicken
Spanish Green Olives
Sunkist Fruit
Sun-Maid Raisins
Swift & Co.
Tao Tea Balls
Tetley's Tea
U. S. Coffee & Tea Co.
Ward's Baking Co.
White Rose Tea

The Sun

280 BROADWAY NEW YORK

JOURNALISM LIBRARY

THIS ISSUE: PRE-CONVENTIONS NUMBER—84 PAGES

JOURNALISM LIBRARY

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Newspaper Advocate 1925

SUITE 1115 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1888; The Fourth Estate, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1918, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879.

Issued Every Saturday.

Vol. 57. No. 47 NEW YORK, APRIL 18, 1925 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

When the People of Chicago Buy—they logically look for their shop news and buying information in The Chicago Daily News, because they are accustomed to finding it there.

And it is there. Not the least of the journalistic services that The Daily News renders the buyers of Chicago is the extent, variety and comprehensiveness of its advertising. Every day this advertising is in effect a directory and guide to everything offered for sale in any part of Chicago. The reader doesn't have to "borrow another paper" to find what is wanted. It is all advertised here—display and classified.

The Daily News is called "the department store of newspapers" because of the comprehensiveness of its service to its readers—in news, editorial features and advertising.

Its scope and variety of reader interest are paralleled by the scope and variety of its advertising, and its readers are responsive to both.

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago

NEA COMICS in COLOR ARE RINGING THE BELL

When a newspaper publisher increases his original order for NEA Color Comic Sections he must be getting results---Circulation must be gaining.

The following newspapers have recently increased their original order for NEA Color Comics---proof that these sections are circulation builders:

Kokomo (Ind.) Tribune
Greensboro (N. C.) Record
Fresno (Calif.) Bee
Mt. Vernon (Ill.) Register-News
Denver (Colo.) Express
Dubuque (Ia.) Times-Journal
Dodge City (Kas.) Globe
Bartlesville (Okla.) Examiner
Gastonia (N. C.) Gazette
El Dorado (Ark.) News

IS YOUR CIRCULATION GAINING?

The Characters in "$alesman $am," "Out Our Way," "Freckles" and "Our Boarding House" form the funniest Color Comic Section in America. Samples and rates on request.

NEA will have its usual exhibit during the A. N. P. A. Convention, April 20-24

NEA SERVICE, Inc.
1200 West Third Street,
Cleveland, Ohio
The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service

Better Than Statistics!

¶"Great figures, those," said one of our good advertisers in Baltimore when we showed him our latest circulation figures—"but I don't need them."

¶"Why?" we asked.

¶"Because I know where my results come from," was the answer.

¶The overwhelming local advertising patronage of the Sunpapers is the result of a day-to-day checking of definite results from definite items.

¶The wise national advertiser follows the local one as closely as the detective assigned to the President follows him.

¶It's a safe system.

¶The Sunpapers have plenty of impressive figures, but what pleases the advertiser most is the impressive results he gets from his Sunpaper advertising.

Average Net Paid Circulation for March, 1925

Daily (M. & E.) . . .	248,663
Sunday	183,957

JOHN B. WOODWARD
Bowery Bank Bldg., New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

MORNING EVENING SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper;" They Say "SUNpaper"

Some Day You'll Do It Why Not Now?

The good plan on the opposite page was proposed first in 1919 and its logic stands the test of time.

If advertising is good for you to sell, it is just as good for you to buy.

Won't you as a publisher introduce this plan or a similar one for discussion at the A. N. P. A. convention in New York?

Read it. Improve it. Then act!

Your trouble will be repaid a thousand fold.

Invest in Newspaper Advertising

E. Katz Special Advertising Agency

Established 1888

Publishers' Representatives

Chicago New York Atlanta
Kansas City San Francisco

TO THE A. N. P. A. CONVENTION, NEW YORK, APRIL, 1925

An Invitation to Newspaper Publishers and Representatives to Subscribe Money for a Campaign to Advertise the Advantages of Newspaper Advertising

To start the ball a-rolling the E. Katz Special Advertising Agency will contribute $1,000. The primary object is to increase national advertising in Newspapers.

The Plan

We propose that a campaign be laid out to nclude advertising trade papers, periodicals ppealing to the big executives (including ankers) not likely to be reached otherwise, ewspapers in advertising centers, trade apers for retailers and jobbers, and direct by ail advertising, all to co-ordinate with the ersonal work of the Bureau of Advertising f the A. N. P. A. To avoid irrelevant ontroversy it is best not to suggest names f periodicals at this time.

Newspapers to Subscribe $5 per Thousand Circulation

An appropriation of $100,000 is reason-ble but if only $25,000 can be collected ow, let's start with that.

We propose that Newspapers subscribe on ie basis of $5.00 per thousand circulation r fraction thereof, as of March 31st, 1925, months' daily average, paid, as per P. O. tatement. Thus if only 100 newspapers sub-cribe, ranging from 5,000 circulation to 00,000 and more giving a general average f 50,000, the fund will be $25,000. For istance, a paper with 10,000 circulation ould contribute $50.

Representatives to contribute any amount tey choose.

The handling of the funds, the prepara-on and execution of the campaign, to be nder the direction of the Bureau of Adver-ing co-operating with a committee of pub-lhers and representatives appointed by the Jureau. The final authority to be the Di-rctor of the Bureau. All mediums to be slected impartially on a business basis with-ct regard for personal friendship or contri-tions.

Development

The effective personal work of the Bureau d Advertising has proved its value. The Bureau today has a splendid working organ-ation with offices in New York, Chicago ad San Francisco. The pioneering for Newspapers deserves wholehearted support.

The Bureau has demonstrated that "the machine works." Further results will be in proportion to money contributed by pub-lhers. The next and logical step is to give th Bureau of Advertising the support of a properly balanced advertising campaign.

The situation is somewhat like that of a manufacturer with his good product already on the market, with his personal sales organization now functioning properly and with distribution expanding logically, and so his next step is an advertising campaign that will best co-ordinate with his sales organization.

The Bureau of Advertising through personal work can reach only a limited number of prospects and cover a comparatively limited territory.

An advertising campaign can multiply the Bureau's splendid work many fold. Advertising would reach countless executives, all of the principal trade centers, in fact it would be working everywhere, all the time.

For Example

Newspapers want to convince the financial men who know nothing or little about advertising. And pretty soon you will find that some bankers, some Boards of Directors, will no longer authorize money for advertising in territory where the Company has no distribution or where the Company cannot sell at a profit.

Newspapers want to convince the sales managers who understand zone merchandising and show them how best results can be obtained through zone advertising.

Newspapers want to convince the advertising manager who is buying color in magazines merely for color's sake. He should first outline the job he has to do and then buy the form of advertising which will best attain the object.

Newspapers want to convince the national advertiser who sends to his retailers and jobbers a list of five women's magazines he is using and makes this unqualified statement: "This advertisement goes into five out of every eight homes in every community in the United States, which includes practically all of the best homes in your town." (sic)

Newspapers want to give the retailers and wholesalers a better idea of what advertising can do and what it can not, and what form of advertising can best help them.

Why, the opportunity for the Newspapers is unlimited. What to say, how, where and to whom, are obvious to the man who knows what Newspaper advertising can do. This is not the place to point out the myriad advantages of Newspaper advertising—its timeliness, its complete coverage, its saturation, its adaptability, its quick action, its flexibility, its low cost, its big results, its dual consumer and trade effect—this is not the place to amplify those things. You Newspaper publishers know them. It is your daily business, your stock in trade.

Commercial Research Possibilities

And ultimately this little start will surely lead to the establishment of a Commercial Research Organization second only to departments of the United States Government. There is only one really great research department in advertising circles today, and, to his credit and profit, fostered by one publisher. Everyone knows that his organization can present to most manufacturers facts about markets and selling not only convincing, but nothing short of amazing.

Now if one lone publisher can do that, balance his opportunity and success against the combined resources of the Newspapers of America!

Advertising is not on trial here. What publisher will deny that the same selling force through advertising properly directed, can do at least as much for Newspapers as it can do for the advertisers in the publisher's own Newspaper?

Appeal for Action

The question is, what is an equitable subscription basis and who will put up the money?

Many will contribute and few will immediately benefit, and some will gain who give nothing. But if we are in a good business, let's show our faith in it.

There is not the slightest doubt in our mind that such a campaign to develop National Newspaper Advertising will be not only a paying investment in lineage, but also a definite factor in raising the standard and understanding of advertising practise.

Our check for $1,000 has been forwarded to Mr. William F. Rogers with the respectful suggestion that this plan be submitted at the April, 1925, session of the A. N. P. A. This contribution is contingent upon the collection of a minimum of $25,000 to be spent in various forms of printed advertising to start as soon as possible in 1925 and to cover not more than 12 months.

Therefore, we urge that the A. N. P. A. adopt in principle this or a similar plan, the details to be worked out by a committee duly appointed, and that an effort be made to start the subscriptions in open meeting at the present session.

E. Katz Special Advertising Agency

Established 1888

5[illegible] West 40th Street NEW YORK	Harris Trust Building CHICAGO	Waldheim Building KANSAS CITY	22 Marietta Street ATLANTA	Monadnock Building SAN FRANCISCO

The Big Market's Big Paper

THE paper which most people read is the paper in which the most people have confidence. The reader-confidence enjoyed by The Evening Bulletin is attested by the fact that The Bulletin's circulation is so much greater than that of any other Philadelphia paper.

The Bulletin goes into practically all of the 412,000 separate homes of the city and 100,000 more outside of the city limits.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

Philadelphia is a huge market of nearly three million people—third largest in America—instantly available through one newspaper, at one cost.

With over half a million copies daily The Bulletin naturally dominates Philadelphia—there can be no substitute for circulation. The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America.

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

518,357

Average Daily Net Circulation for Year Ending Dec. 31, 1924

(Copyright 1925—Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 | NEW YORK, APRIL 18, 1925 | No. 47

Associated Press and A.N.P.A. Meetings Call 600 Publishers to New York

Crowded Calendars Await Visitors—A. P. Business Includes Appointment of New General Manager —Newsprint Definition Big A. N. P. A. Topic—Social Program

WITH crowded calendars awaiting attention, the great convention week of the newspaper year opens April 20 at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York. It is the 25th anniversary meeting of the Associated Press, while members of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association gather for their 39th convention.

On April 20 a special session of the Associated Press will be held to consider problems of importance to members. The regular annual A. P. meeting falls on the following day, and then the hotel will be taken over by the A. N. P. A. for April 22, 23 and 24. A regional publishers' association conference, scheduled for Monday evening at a dinner in the Waldorf, is an added date for this year's convention week. It is being sponsored by the Inland Daily Press Association, and federalization of regional associations is the topic slated for discussion.

Important A. P. business awaiting consideration includes:

Appointment of a successor to Frederick Roy Martin, general manager and assistant secretary, who has resigned effective April 21.

Vote on applications for membership filed by the New York Daily News and Sunday News, Jeffersonville (Ind.) Evening Bulletin, and the Norristown (Pa.) Times-Herald.

Decision in the cases of newspapers, charged with violating association by-laws in broadcasting election returns.

Election of new members to the board of directors, to fill vacancies caused by terms expiring this year.

Discussion of news service problems by members with possible traffic changes.

Vice-President Charles G. Dawes will be guest of honor at the annual luncheon of the A. P., April 21.

Official announcement of Mr. Martin's successor is not scheduled until April 22, when the board of directors holds its regular meeting following the annual meeting of members. It is understood selection has already been made and the choice will be put before members in advance of official action by the directorate.

Applications for memberships by the three newspapers were filed by William H. Field, for the New York Daily News; Claude G. Brodhecker, for the Jeffersonville (Ind.) Evening Bulletin, and Ralph Beaver Strassburger, Norristown Times-Herald. Strong opposition is expected in the case of the New York tabloid. The tendency in New York has been to cut down A. P. membership, rather than expand it. During the past eight years three memberships have disappeared from the Manhattan field.

Eight Associated Press members await decision of the board of directors regarding citations charging them with violating by-laws in broadcasting election returns last November. At a meeting last January, the members presented evidence they had received election news for broadcasting from other sources than the A. P. Cited newspapers were the Chicago Tribune, Boston Post, Buffalo Evening News, Chicago Herald & Examiner, New York American, New York Sun, and St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The decision of the board is expected to be handed down April 20.

Terms of five A. P. directors expire in 1925 and successors are to be elected at the annual meeting. The five are: Clark Howell, Atlanta Constitution, Charles Hopkins Clark, Hartford Courant; Elbert H. Baker, Cleveland Plain Dealer; Stuart H. Perry, Adrian (Mich.) Telegram; J. R. Knowland, Oakland (Cal.) Tribune.

The nominating committee has named these five to succeed themselves and five other nominations as follows:

C. P. J. Mooney, Memphis Commercial Appeal; I. R. Kirkwood, Kansas City (Mo.) Star; William J. Pape, Waterbury (Conn.) Republican; J. L. Sturtevant, Wausau (Wis.) Record-Herald; Harry Chandler, Los Angeles Times.

HONORABLE CHARLES G. DAWES

The Vice-President of the United States, who will address members of the Associated Press at a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria on Tuesday.

New York hotel addresses of visiting delegates on pages 12, 13 and 14, this issue.

A map of convention floor at Waldorf-Astoria, locating all meeting places and exhibits, with personnel in charge of the latter, on page 16.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER headquarters, Room 116, Waldorf-Astoria, all welcome!

The present board of directors held its regular April meeting this week, April 16, 17 and 18. The board, with its newly elected members, will hold its first meeting April 22.

Call for the special A. P. meeting of members, which will start at 2:30 P. M. in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf-Astoria, states that it is made necessary "in order that there may be more time for consideration of matters of general interest to the membership."

"In recent years a one-day session has not been adequate to include the election of directors, with the delay incident to the casting and counting of ballots and the interruption necessary because of the luncheon", it is explained.

It is understood members have objected they had no opportunity for discussion of possible wire service changes, and this meeting will satisfy this request. General consideration of radio broadcasting of news by A. P. members is also slated as a topic.

No official action can be taken on this day, however, and any resolutions passed or suggestions made will be subject to vote April 21.

A PLENITUDE of major problems confront American Newspaper Publishers' Association members for discussion and action during sessions scheduled for April 22, 23, and 24 at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York.

Prepared in order of probable importance these problems are:

1. Newsprint.
2. Canadian export tax on pulpwood.
3. Proposed change in the definition of standard newsprint by the Federal treasury department.
4. Labor.
5. Postal—including plans for new methods of distribution.
6. Traffic problems, with threatened raises in baggage and express rates to be met.
7. Forestry.
8. Printing Trade Schools.
9. Radio.

Although not officially listed for discussion on the convention floor, members will unquestionably give considerable attention to Audit Bureau of Circulations matters, in view of the recent settlement in New York in regard to interpretation of an A. B. C. by-law, providing written requests from bureau auditors for examination of records outside the regular circulation books, and related accounts.

The New York newspaper publishers' agreement with the bureau, which ended nearly a year of controversy follows:

"When an A. B. C. auditor states in writing to a publisher that real or seeming irregularities in the circulation accounts require the examination of records, ledgers, or payrolls outside the circulation records and related accounts, upon the presentation of such statement by the auditor, any record, specifically designated in writing by him as necessary for his intelligent investigation of circulation, shall be provided."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER has been reliably informed that, based upon the New York controversy and its resulting agreement, an attempt will be made to interest A. N. P. A. members in the formation, within the association of a new circulation auditing organization.

Such a step was first discussed at an A. N. P. A. convention two years ago. Then a committee was formed to investigate and report on possibilities. Nothing definite, however, resulted.

The proposed export tax on Canadian pulpwood takes on additional importance as an A. N. P. A. topic this year, in view of the fact the question was roused from lethargy in Montreal, Jan. 31, when, for the first time in history, the Canadian Pulp & Paper Association put itself on record in favor of a tax. American publishers are, it is said, thus faced with the possible skyrocketing of paper prices through Canadian control.

Members will doubtless be called upon to approve the stand taken by A. N. P. A. officials at a recent hearing in Washington in connection with a proposed new definition of standard newsprint paper, and also to assist in formation of an association policy to be held at a future hearing before Judge McKenzie Moss, in charge of customs, in Washington May 5. This hearing was originally set for April 17, but it was set ahead to permit discussion at the A. N. P. A. convention.

Some two months ago A. N. P. A. officials were surprised to learn the United States Treasury Department had under consideration a proposed change in the definition of standard newsprint, which commodity is on the free list at the present time.

At a hearing before Judge Moss in Washington about three weeks ago the import committee of the American Paper Industry appeared as proponents for the new definition, which is approved by the Department of Commerce, Bureau of Standards.

A committee of the A. N. P. A. appeared in opposition to the proposed changes and were the sole opponents, other than a few importers.

The new definition, as recommended by the Department of Commerce, provides, among other things, that sheet news, used by thousands of daily and weekly newspapers, should not remain on the free list.

The A. N. P. A. committee, acting on behalf of the smaller newspapers, strongly protested against any such action and the proponents of the definition finally consented to drop it.

The definition also provides:

1. That newsprint to be used only for standard editions of newspapers, be allowed entrance to this country duty free.
2. That the diameter of rolls be limited to 28 inches.
3. That the spread of weight be reduced, the present minimum of 28.8 pounds being changed to a minimum of 30 pounds.
4. That the new definition exclude unbleached sulphite or ground wood now on the free list from use in newsprint.

The A. N. P. A. believes that in attacking such proposed changes in the definition of newsprint, it has particularly supported the cause of the smaller newspapers in this country.

Report of the A. N. P. A. radio committee of which W. A. Strong, busine manager of the Chicago Daily News, chairman, will undoubtedly contain ref ence to action taken by the committee fore the Third Annual Radio Conferen held in Washington, D. C. last Octob Then the committee went on record opposed to erection of super-power broa casting stations and advertising by rad

The former of the two problems appe now to be a dead issue, but the latter expected to give rise to considerable d cussion.

The A. N. P. A. committee express the belief before the Radio Conferen that listeners were opposed to any fo of direct advertising over the air.

Postal discussion at the convention w center around plans for new methods distribution other than the mails, in vi of the increase in second class rates n in effect.

A special committee has been creat by the association to study the newspa distribution system, and it has alrea made one report, published in EDITOR PUBLISHER Feb. 7. Headed by Geor M. Rogers of the Cleveland Plain Deal this committee has now prepared a s ond and more comprehensive report to submitted to the membership in the As Gallery of the Waldorf next Wednesd morning.

All committee reports are due for su mission to members on that day.

The various committees and their cha men are: Special Standing Committ H. N. Kellogg, chairman; Paper Co mittee, E. F. Adler, Davenport (Ia Times, chairman; Postal Committee, D. Barnum, Syracuse (N. Y.) Po Standard, chairman; Committee on Fe eral Laws, A. L. Miller, Battle Cre Enquirer-News, chairman; Committee Arbitration Contracts, Victor F. Lawso Chicago Daily News, chairman; Comm tee on Open Shop, D. D. Moore, Fo Worth Record, chairman; Committee National Forest Resources, E. H. Bak Cleveland Plain Dealer, chairman; Co mittee on Circulation Audits, Hilton Brown, Indianapolis News, chairma Committee on Traffic, E. M. Antri chairman; Committee on Radio, W. Strong, Chicago Daily News, chairma Budget Committee, Howard Davis, N York Herald Tribune, chairman.

New EDITOR & PUBLISHER photograph of general operating room of Associated Press, recently installed at 383 Madiso Avenue, New York

DAY BY DAY WITH THE PUBLISHERS

April 20—9:30 A.M. First Annual Golf Tournament of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Westchester-Biltmore Country Club.

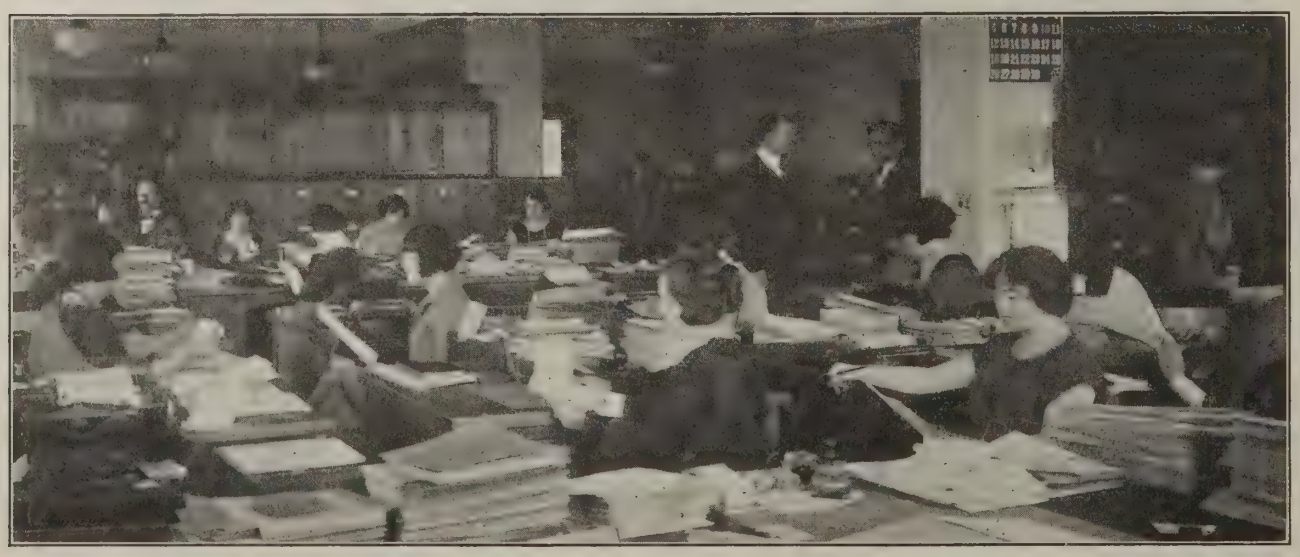
April 20—2:30 P.M. Special meeting of Associated Press Members, Astor Gallery, Waldorf-Astoria.

April 20—Committee in Charge of the Bureau of Advertising, A.N.P.A., meeting, Bureau Headquarters, 270 Madison Avenue.

April 20—7:30 P.M. Regional Conference of Publishers' Associations, Waldorf-Astoria.

April 21—10 A.M. Annual Meeting of the Associated Press, Astor Gallery, Waldorf-Astoria.

April 21—1 P.M. Annual Luncheon of the Associated Press, Waldorf-Astoria.



April 21—7:30 P.M. "Cabinet Lark," M. Koenigsberg, King Features Syndicate, Friars Club, New York.

April 22-23-24—10 A.M. and 2 P.M. Annual Convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Waldorf-Astoria.

April 22—7 P.M. Annual Banquet, Bureau of Advertising, A.N.P.A.

April 23—6:30 P.M. Annual dinner and meeting of Directors of the North American Newspaper Alliance.

April 24—10:30 A.M. Annual meeting of members of the North American Newspaper Alliance, Sun Parlor, Waldorf-Astoria.

A.N.P.A. general work-room at new "up-town" headquarters at 270 Madison Avenue, New York. (EDITOR & PUBLISHER photograph)

HEADLINING entertainment attra tions planned for delegates attendi the A. P. annual meeting and the A. P. A. convention are as usual the Asso ated Press luncheon, April 21, and t banquet given by the Bureau of Adve tising of the A. N. P. A., April 22, wi the added attraction this year of the pu lishers' association's first annual g

(Continued on page 18)

A. P. AND NOYES REACH JUBILEE TOGETHER

Washington Star Publisher, President Since 1900, and Victor F. Lawson, of Chicago Daily News, Only Surviving Founders to Witness Giant Success of Their Ideal of a Mutual News Association

FOR twenty-five consecutive years Frank Brett Noyes, publisher of the Washington Evening Star, has been president of the Associated Press. The event is being celebrated in A. P. circles, which is the whole round world.

Of the valiant little group of newspaper publishers who, more than a quarter of a century ago, led the fight for the truly mutual press association which the A. P. has become, but two remain in the land of the living, Mr. Noyes and Victor F. Lawson, publisher the Chicago Daily News. The latter, born in 1850, never misses a meeting of the board of directors, having been an officer or director of the organization from its inception. Mr. Noyes, born in 1863, devotes the major portion of his time and interest to his office and holds for A. P. a sense of reverence amounting to spiritual quality. The third venerable figure in the triumvirate which conceived and in large measure executed the formation and development of Associated Press is Melville E. Stone, born in 1848, for more than a quarter of a century the dynamic general manager of the most successful co-operative institution in any field of endeavor in this country, and perhaps the world. Mr. Stone is acting today as counselor.

Three men they were with but a single ideal of press service; three men they remain with that ideal merely intensified and glorified by the practical tests of time.

A few days ago this writer called upon Mr. Noyes at the new up-town headquarters of the A. P. at 383 Madison avenue, New York. The difficulty one experiences in attempting to interview Stone is that he insists upon talking about Noyes and Lawson. Lawson will glowingly tell you of the contributions to A. P. that Stone and Noyes have made, but it takes cross examination to get from him his own story. And in interviewing Noyes for EDITOR & PUBLISHER a third John Alden was found, eloquent when pleading the cause of his life-time associates and friends.

"Tell the high secret of success of this co-operative movement in journalism—what one thing has been the ruling factor?" Mr. Noyes was asked.

"Under it all," he promptly replied, "is the original ideal of a soundly dependable fact news report, essentially the product of the members' news staffs and exchanged on association wires, with truly democratic management and no incentive on the part of anyone to profit from this business, but very distinct incentive to create for the association the highest possible quality of service. The Associated Press is remarkable in the sense that it stands today squarely upon the foundations laid down in the year 1893. There has been no single departure from any fundamental principle of control or administration. There have been developments and amplifications in many directions, and the organization has grown tremendously in numbers and in service, but the fundamentals have been conserved without deviation."

Standard-Bearer For Quarter Century

It was interesting to have the figures on Associated Press development since the Illinois corporation was abandoned because the laws of that state did not provide for the type of mutual organization which the creators believed necessary as a foundation; the association was re-formed in 1900 under New York laws, which did provide a consistent legal form. Mr. Noyes, upon investigation, produced for EDITOR & PUBLISHER the following statement:

Year	Income	Leased wire mileage
1894	$992,348.42	20,226
1900	1,492,901.75	27,277
1924	7,043,777.72	98,221

"Those figures might be considered unusual even if they represented an ordinary commercial development," said Mr. Noyes, "but I think they are remarkably significant in the whole field of economics as being the measure of physical growth of a purely mutual association, serving a practical idealism. The Associated Press has been and is the rock upon which the great newspapers of its membership have been brought to success and high usefulness, but its relationship to the political life of our people, and to the peoples of the world, must be estimated as its larger function, in the sense that its cardinal principle of free, full and pure flow of public information works by day and by night to serve the expression, and subserve the formation of public opinion, root and essence of our free institutions and the guide of intelligent individual life and action.

"In the old Associated Press, incorporated in Illinois, some 300 newspaper publishers were loosely federated. Few in this generation appreciate how intolerable the situation had become for newspaper men, all over this country, who sensed public responsibility as vastly more important than private ambition. The story of the old United Press—A. P. battle is a twice-told tale, but in retrospect I should not fail to point out that the identical elements which brought the Associated Press to victory in that strenuous encounter remain as its bone and sinew to this day and shall remain imperishable while democracy continues to be the governmental ideal of the people.

"When we organized under New York state laws the membership had more than doubled and today it numbers 1,198, of which, it is interesting to note, 495 were charter members. There have been a great number of newspaper consolidations and mergers, in recent years, which have caused fluctuation in membership, but the increase has been consistent and regular throughout the years.

"Of the total number some 800 memberships represent full leased wire dailies with approximately 400 so-called 'pony' service members. The qualitative and quantitative advances that have been made during the quarter of a century in the news report are most amazing to me. I have seen droves of little struggling pony newspapers, starting service with a few hundred words in telegraphed skeleton, come up to telephone service of two or three columns of A. P. despatches and then leap in for full leased wire reports, occupying many printed pages daily. The capacity of the metropolitan newspaper press to consume the world's news has seemed fairly inexhaustible and today nearly the whole country is double tracked by A. P. leased lines and all modern communication means are employed as tributaries to the main currents of A. P. telegraph traffic.

"It has been wonderful to see how news processes have been refined as well as augmented. Take for instance, the A. P. situation in Ohio. Our membership there was not satisfied with a general leased wire report transmitted on three wires, being an assortment of world, domestic and state news, but so great was local interest that a fourth full leased line was put into operation to serve nothing to Ohio members but Ohio news. This wire operates both day and night, exclusively serving the local state interest.

"The idea which chiefly animated the founders of the Associated Press remains as its backbone today; I refer to the exchange of news on our wires collected by the staffs of members. It is an unbeatable system, both for achievement and for sound economy. Associated Press naturally becomes the first thought and consideration of the member who realizes that his spirit of giving to the whole is rewarded in manifold by general exercise of the same loyalty. This is co-operation in the full sense.

"It is conservatively estimated that 80,000 trained men are in the service of the Associated Press. There are between 1,700 and 1,800 direct employes. I do not have it in my power to express what I so deeply feel concerning the men who have served Associated Press, and its principles, through these years. It is something that cannot be put into words. Except in actual spiritual service I know of no human

(Continued on page 30)

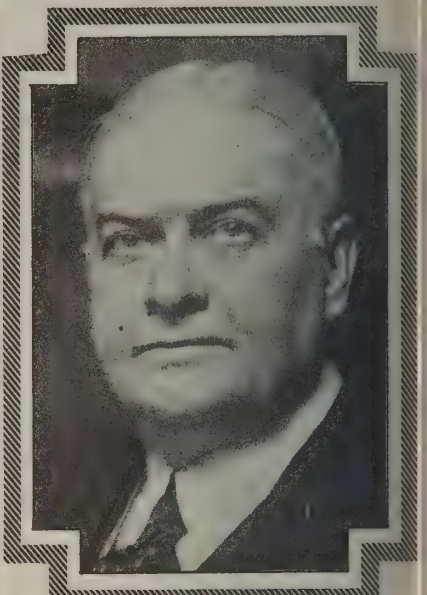
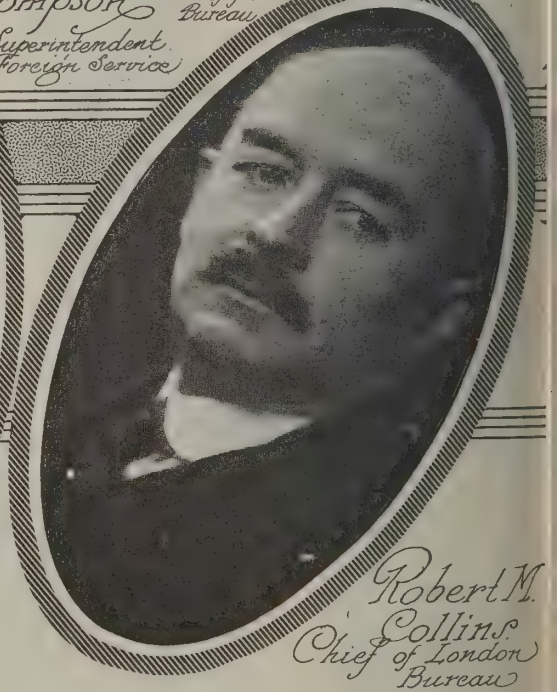
Associated Press Far-Flung Staff Chiefs



L. F. Curtis
Superintendent Markets & Elections

F. C. Scoville
Chief of Mexico City Division

Charles T. Thompson
Superintendent Foreign Service



Elmer Roberts
Chief of Paris Bureau

E. T. Wolford
Central Division Traffic Chief

L. C. Probert
Superintendent Washington Bureau

Robert M. Collins
Chief of London Bureau

Chas. Stephenson Smith
Chief of Berlin Bureau

Joseph E. Sharkey
Chief of Geneva Bureau

C. A. Price
Eastern Div. Traffic Chief

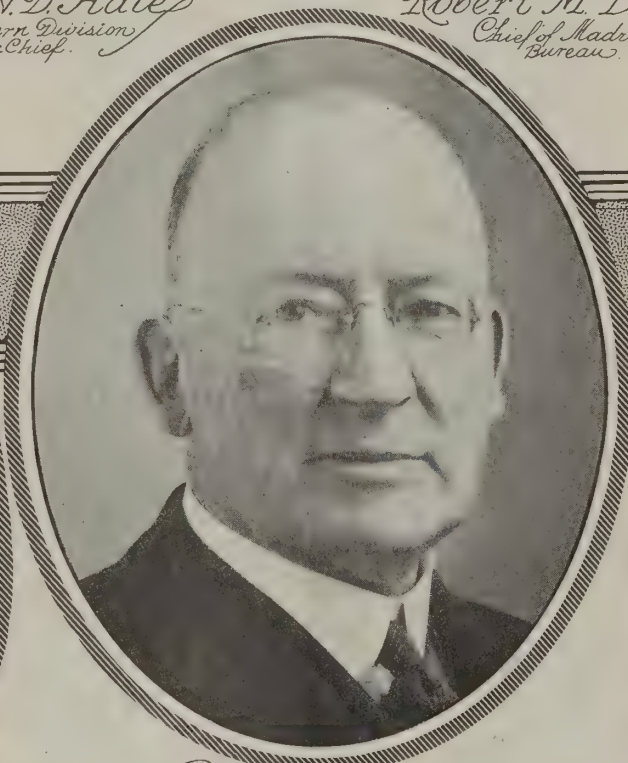
Salvatore Cortesi
Chief of Rome Bureau

L. P. Hall
Western Division Traffic Chief

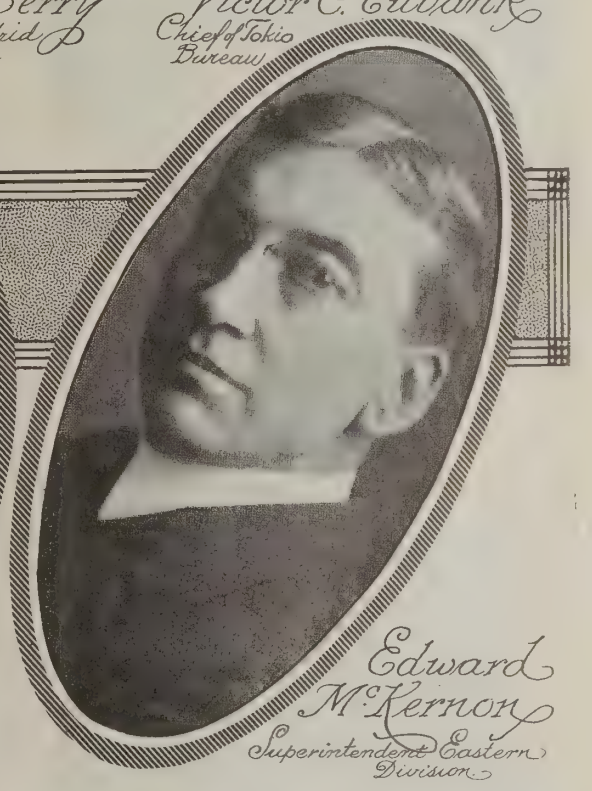
Directing News Service Across the Seven Seas

E. W. Vaiden
Washington Bureau Traffic Chief

A. D. Hale
Southern Division Traffic Chief



Robert M. Berry
Chief of Madrid Bureau



Victor C. Eubank
Chief of Tokio Bureau

Edgar T. Cutter
Superintendent Central Division

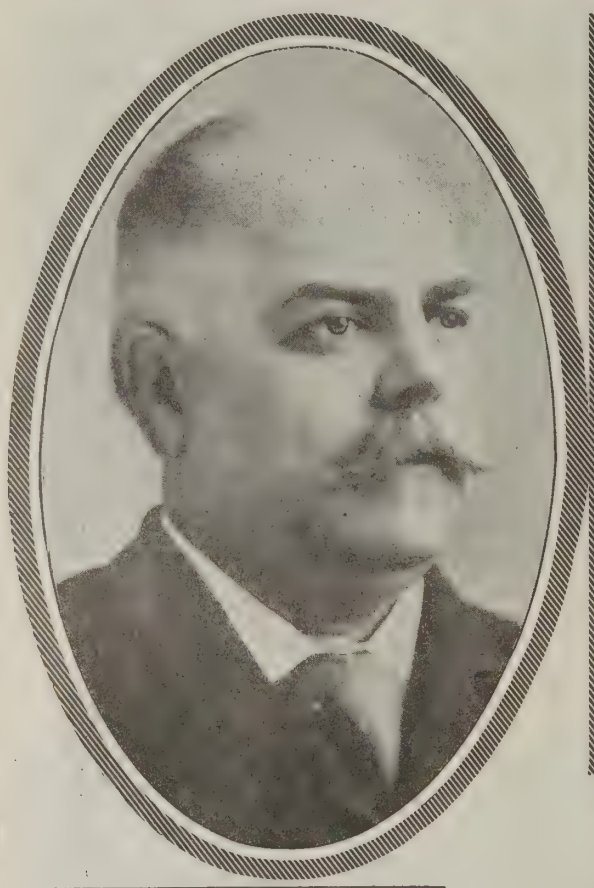
Paul Cowles
Superintendent Western Division

Edward McKernon
Superintendent Eastern Division

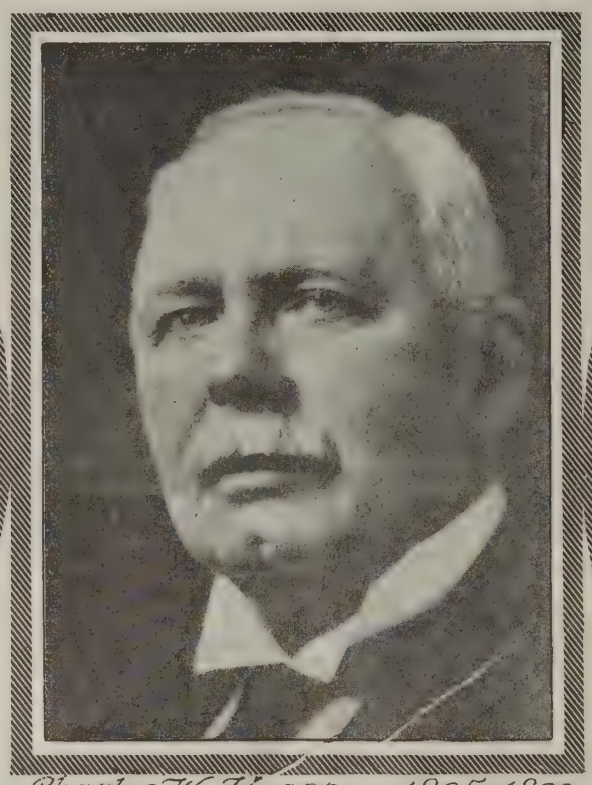
James A. Mills
Chief of Moscow Bureau

Meredith N. Stiles
Chief of Buenos Aires Bureau

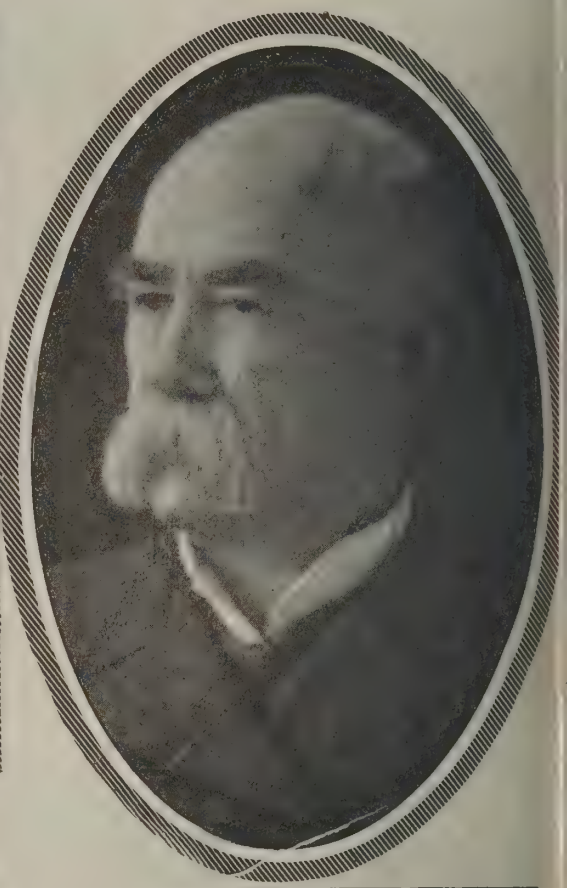
Edward L. Powell
Chief of Manila Bureau



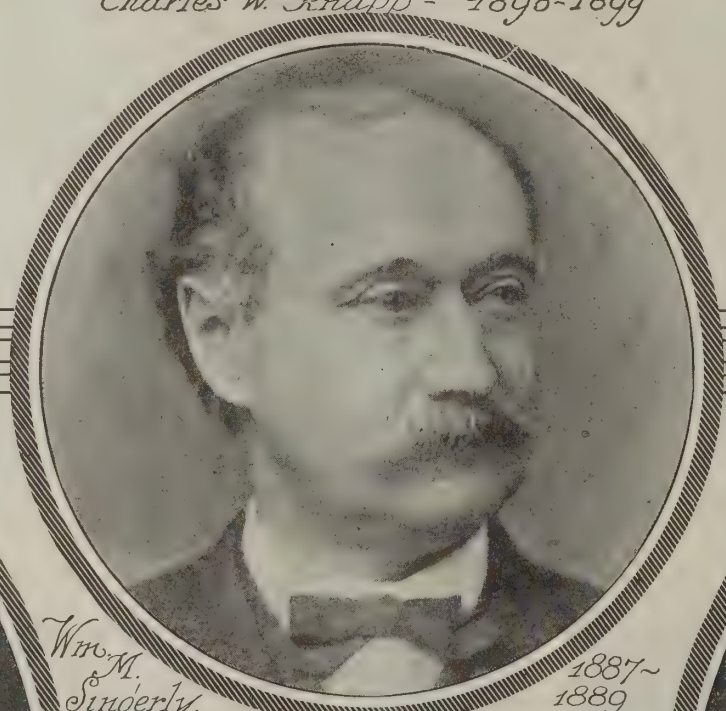
Walter C. Whiffen
Chief of Peking Bureau



U. L. McCall
Superintendent Southern Division

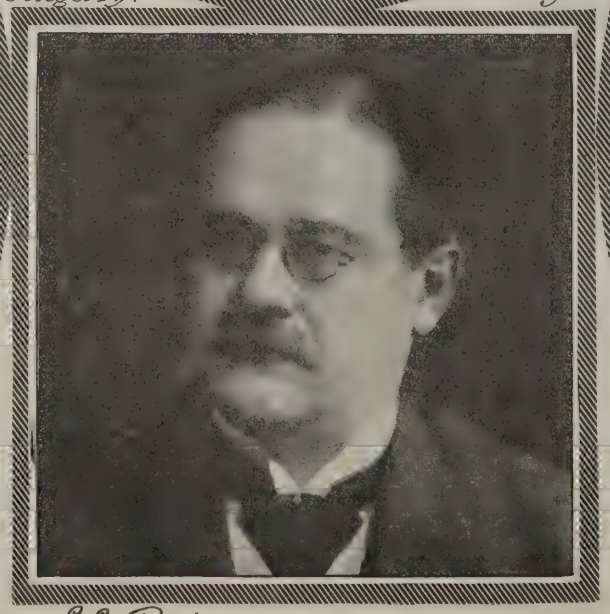


1887—Complete Portrait Gallery of A. N. P. A. Presidents



James W. Scott
1889 - 1895

Charles W. Knapp - 1896-1899

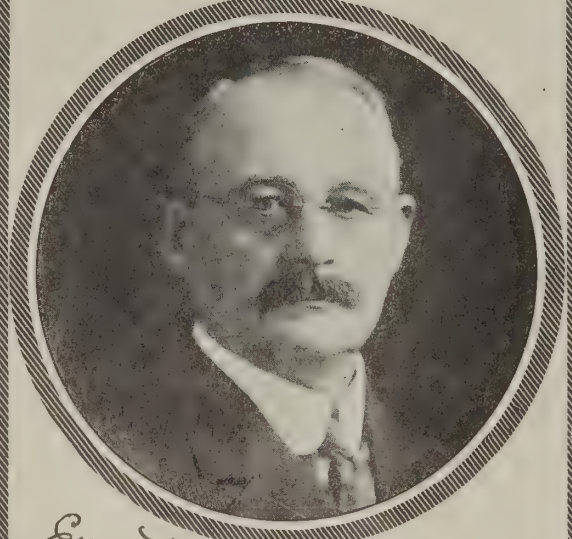


S. H. Kauffmann
1899 - 1902

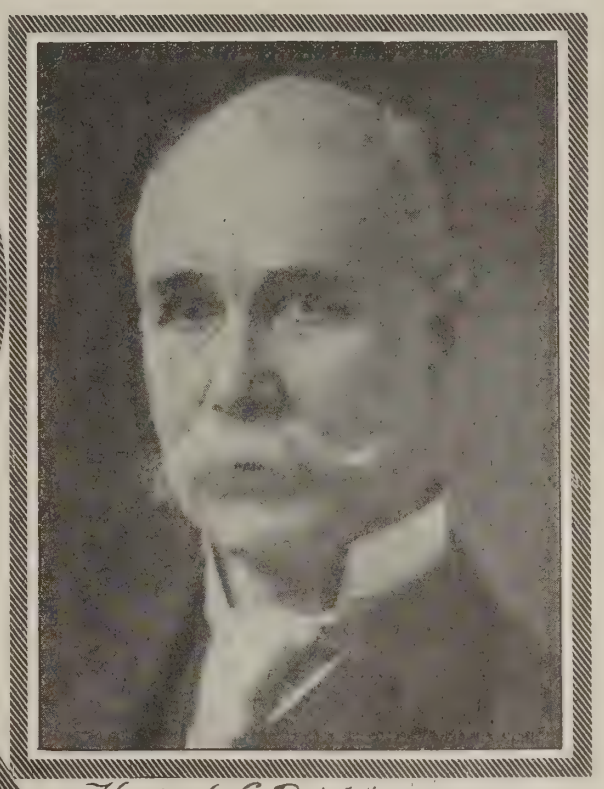
Wm. M. Singerly. 1887-1889

Charles H. Taylor. 1902-1905

S. S. Rogers. 1905-1907.

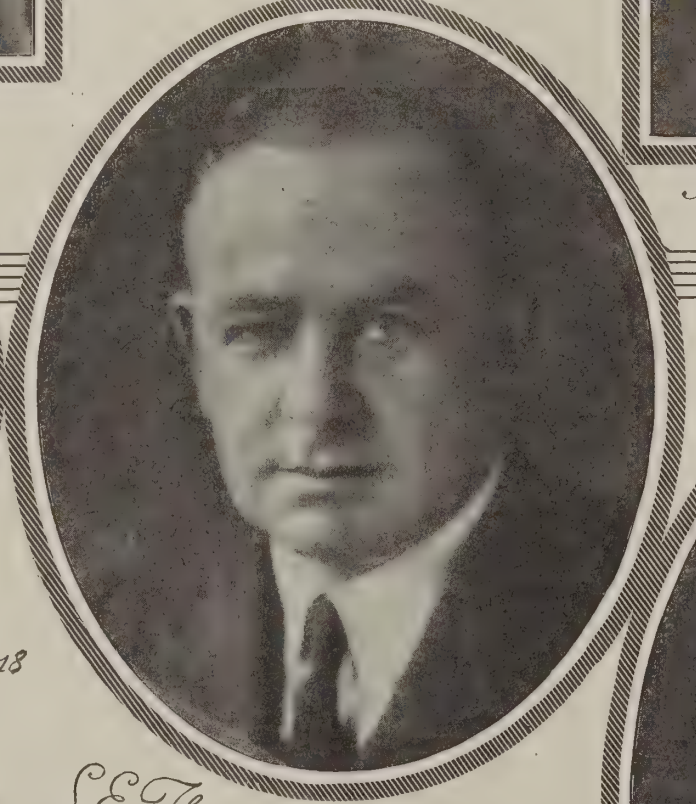


Herman Ridder. 1907-1911.

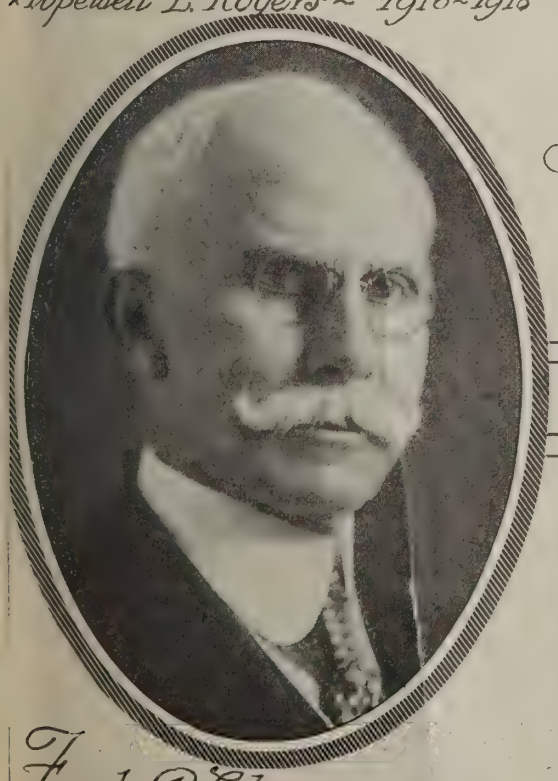


Serving American Journalism For 38 Years—1925

Bruce Haldeman 1911-1912

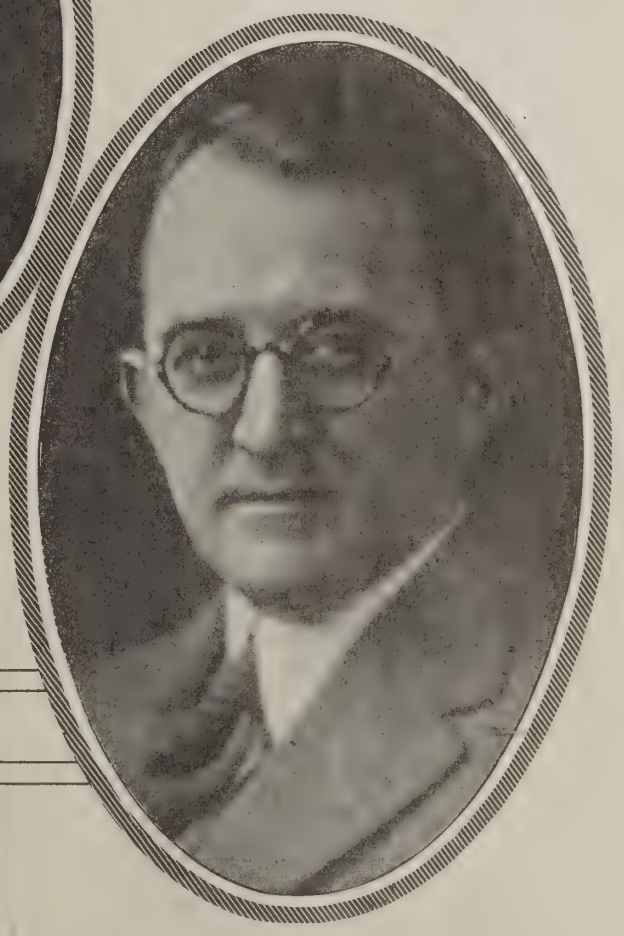


Elbert H. Baker ~ 1912-1914



Herbert L. Bridgman 1914-1916

Hopewell L. Rogers ~ 1916-1918



S. E. Thomason ~ 1924-1925

Frank P. Glass 1918-1920

T. R. Williams ~ 1920-1922

Paul Patterson ~ 1922-1924

NEW YORK ADDRESSES OF VISITING PUBLISHERS

Name of Newspaper	Representative	New York Address
Adrian (Mich.) Telegram	Stuart H. Perry	Waldorf-Astoria
Akron (O.) Beacon Journal	John S. Knight	Biltmore
	John H. Barry	Vanderbilt
Albany (N. Y.) Evening News & Knickerbocker Press	Lynn J. Arnold	c/o J. M. Branham Co., 342 Madison Ave.
	Arthur D. Hecox
Alexandria (Va.) Gazette	Geo. C. Nungezer	Empire
Allentown (Pa.) Call	Royal W. Weiler	Astor
	Clarence J. Smith	Astor
	P. W. Leisenring	Astor
Alliance (O.) Review	Paul C. Siddall
Altoona (Pa.) Mirror	D. N. Slep	Waldorf-Astoria
	H. L. Johnston	Waldorf-Astoria
	F. G. Pearce	Waldorf-Astoria
Atlanta (Ga.) Journal	John S. Cohen	Vanderbilt
	Inman Gray	Vanderbilt
	J. R. Gray	Vanderbilt
	Charles D. Atkinson	Vanderbilt
Attleboro (Mass.) Sun	J. H. Vallette	Elks Club, 108 W. 43d St.
	C. C. Cain	Elks Club, 108 W. 43d St.
Altoona (Pa.) Tribune	Theodore Arter, Jr.	Herald Square Hotel
Amsterdam (N. Y.) Recorder	Gardiner Kline	Commodore
Ansonia (Conn.) Sentinel	H. F. Emerson	Waldorf-Astoria
	L. L. Desaulniers	Waldorf-Astoria
Arkansas City (Kans.) Traveler	Oscar S. Stauffer	McAlpin
Asbury Park (N. J.) Press	J. Lyle Kinmonth	Pennsylvania
Asheville (N. C.) Citizen	Chas. A. Webb	Waldorf-Astoria
Astabula (O.) Star-Beacon	C. A. Rowley	McAlpin
Athens (O.) Messenger	F. W. Bush	Waldorf-Astoria
Atlantic City (N. J.) Press-Union	Albert J. Feyl	Pennsylvania
Auburn (N. Y.) Advertiser-Journal	Victor J. Callanan	Waldorf-Astoria
	Rudolph Chamberlain	Waldorf-Astoria
Augusta (Ga.) Herald	Bowdre Phinizy	Empire
Austin (Minn.) Herald	J. H. Skinner
Baltimore News	J. Thomas Lyons	Waldorf-Astoria
	E. B. Redman	Waldorf-Astoria
Baltimore (Md.) Sun & Eve. Sun	Paul Patterson	Biltmore
	Joseph A. Blondell	Biltmore
	Wm. F. Schmick	Biltmore
	J. E. Murphy	Biltmore
Bangor (Me.) Commercial	S. M. Reynolds	Biltmore
	William N. Hardy	St. James
Barre (Vt.) Times	Oliver L. Hall	St. James
Battle Creek (Mich.) Enquirer & News	Frank E. Langley	Martinique
Baton Rouge (La.) Louisiana Press	A. L. Miller	Waldorf-Astoria
Beaumont (Tex.) Enterprise & Journal	John M. Franklin	McAlpin
Beaver (Pa.) Times	J. L. Mapes	Astor
	John L. Stewart	Waldorf-Astoria
Beaver Falls (Pa.) Tribune	James H. March	Waldorf-Astoria
Bethlehem (Pa.) Globe	J. M. Litsch	Martinique
Binghamton (N. Y.) Press & Leader	R. E. Bennett	Vanderbilt
	L. S. Chubbuck	Vanderbilt
	Frank W. Spaulding	Vanderbilt
Birmingham (Ala.) Age-Herald	Frederick I. Thompson	c/o Associated Press
Bisbee (Ariz.) Review	Cleveland E. Dodge	99 John St.
Bloomington (L. I.) Pantagraph	C. C. Marquis	Princeton Club, 39th St. & Park Ave.
	Adlai E. Stevenson
	Davis Merwin	Vanderbilt
Boston Christian Science Monitor	Willis J. Abbot	Lotos Club
	Norman S. Rose	Waldorf-Astoria
	Charles E. Jarvis	Waldorf-Astoria
Boston Globe	Charles H. Taylor	A. N. P. A., 270 Madison Ave.
Boston Herald	Robert Lincoln O'Brien	Astor
Boston Transcript	William F. Rogers	Astor
Bradford (Pa.) Era	J. W. Milligan	Woodstock or 150 Clermont Ave.
Bradford (Pa.) Herald Star & Record	Robert P. Habgood	Biltmore
Bridgeport (Conn.) Herald	Richard Howell	St. James
	Stephen Oswald	St. James
Bridgeport (Conn.) Telegram & Post	Ed. Flicker	Commodore
Bridgeport (Conn.) Times	Kendall B. Cressey	Biltmore
Bristol (Conn.) Press	Arthur S. Barnes	Empire
Bristol (Tenn.) Bulletin	Guy L. Smith	c/o Frost, Landis & Kohn, 225 5th Ave.
Brooklyn Eagle	H. F. Gunnison
	R. M. Gunnison
	E. G. Martin
	H. M. Crist
Brooklyn Standard Union	R. F. R. Huntsman	c/o Standard Union
	Theodore Bosshard	c/o Standard Union
Buffalo Express	Burrows Matthews	Waldorf-Astoria
Buffalo Eve. News	Edward H. Butler
	J. F. Melia	McAlpin
Buffalo Times	Norman E. Mack	c/o Verree & Conklin, 300 Madison Ave.
	Philip F. Metz
Burlington (Ia.) Hawk-Eye	John F. D. Aue'	Astor
Burlington (Vt.) Free Press	David W. Howe	Shelton
Butler (Pa.) Eagle	John Laing Wise
	Vernon L. Wise
Cambridge (Md.) Banner	P. Watson Webb	Pennsylvania
Camden (N. J.) Courier	J. David Stern	Martinique
Camden (N. J.) Post-Telegram	P. I. Prentice	c/o Geo. B. David Co., 112 East 42d St.
	Newcomb F. Thompson	Benjamin & Kentnor Co., 2 West 45th St.
	M. J. Donovan
Canandaigua (N. Y.) Messenger	J. A. Easton	Waldorf-Astoria
	Ann M. Easton	Waldorf-Astoria
Carbondale (Pa.) Leader	J. L. Druck	Commodore
Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Gazette	J. L. Miller	McAlpin
Charleston (W. Va.) Gazette	W. E. Chilton, Jr.	Alamac Hotel
	Robert L. Smith	Alamac Hotel
Charleston (W. Va.) Mail	B. H. Anderson	McAlpin
Charlotte (N. C.) News	W. C. Dowd	Belleclaire
Charlotte (N. C.) Observer	Curtis B. Johnson	Waldorf-Astoria
Chattanooga (Tenn.) News	W. C. Johnson	Astor
	Geo. F. Milton	Vanderbilt
Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times	H. C. Adler	c/o N. Y. Times
Chester (Pa.) Times	Chas. R. Long	Waldorf-Astoria
	F. C. Wallace	Waldorf-Astoria
Cheyenne (Wyo.) State Tribune-Leader	Wm. C. Deming	c/o E. Katz Special Ag., 58 West 40th St.
	John C. Fleming
Chicago Journal	W. Frank Dunn	Roosevelt
Chicago Daily News	W. A. Strong	Belmont
Chicago Tribune	Col. R. R. McCormick	Waldorf-Astoria
	J. M. Patterson	University Club
	S. E. Thomason	Waldorf-Astoria
Cincinnati Post	Maurice Levy
Cincinnati Times-Star	C. M. Rembold	McAlpin
	C. H. Motz	McAlpin
	Moses Strauss	Waldorf-Astoria
Cincinnati Commercial Tribune	Roe Eastman	Vanderbilt
Clarksburg (W. Va.) Exponent	W. Guy Tetrick	St. James
Clarksburg (W. Va.) Telegram	A. J. Bishop	McAlpin
Clarksdale (Miss.) Daily Register	G. P. Clark	Martinique
Clarksville (Tenn.) Leaf-Chronicle	M. Stratton Foster	Alamac
Clearwater (Fla.) Eve. Sun	David B. Lindsay
Cleveland Press	R. A. Huber	Biltmore
Cleveland Times	O. K. Shimansky	Pennsylvania
Clinton (Ia.) Herald	L. M. Michelsen	Biltmore
Coaldale (Pa.) Panther Creek News	Thomas Kennedy	Cadillac
	Edward J. Donahue	Martinique
Coatesville (Pa.) Record	C. L. Heintzelman	Waldorf-Astoria
Coffeyville (Kans.) Journal	H. J. Powell	Waldorf-Astoria
Colorado Springs (Colo.) Gazette & Eve. Telegraph	C. C. Hamlin	Belmont
Columbus (S. C.) Record	R. Charlton Wright	Vanderbilt
Columbia (S. C.) State	F. C. Withers	Astor
Columbus (Nebr.) Telegram	A. H. Backus
Concord (N. H.) Monitor-Patriot	James M. Langley	Martinique
Concord (N. C.) Daily Tribune	J. B. Sherrill	Continental
Corinth (Miss.) Corinthian	J. C. Bishop	829 Flatbush Ave., Bklyn.
Cortland (N. Y.) Standard	Wm. H. Clark	Bristol
	Edward H. Clark	Bristol
Cumberland (Md.) Eve. Times	Joseph B. Finan	McAlpin
Dallas (Tex.) News	E. B. Doran	Waldorf-Astoria
	Tom Finty, Jr.	Waldorf-Astoria
Dallas Times-Herald	Edwin J. Kiest	McAlpin
Danville (Ill.) Commercial-News	W. J. Parrett	Astor
	John H. Harrison	Astor
Davenport (Ia.) Democrat & Leader	Frank D. Throop	Waldorf-Astoria
Davenport Daily Times	E. P. Adler	Waldorf-Astoria
Dayton (O.) Journal & Herald	E. G. Burkam	c/o Story, Brooks & Finle
	Ralph M. Jones	Pershing Sq. Bldg.
DesMoines ((Ia.) Register & Tribune-News	Gardner Cowles	c/o I. A. Klein, 50 Ea
	Gardner Cowles, Jr.	42nd Street
	F. J. Starzl
Detroit Free Press	W. H. Pettibone	Vanderbilt
	Miss Mary Humphrey	Astor
Detroit News	H. Ponting	Astor
Dubuque (Ia.) Herald	M. R. Kane	Alcorn-Seymour Co., 270 Madison Ave.
Duluth Herald	M. F. Hanson	Chatham
Easton Express	John H. McGrath
	A. M. Umholtz
	J. L. Stackhouse
East Liverpool (O.) Review-Tribune	T. S. Brush	Waldorf-Astoria
Easton Free Press	C. N. Andrews	St. James
	Evan Dalrymple	Empire
Edmonton (Alta.) Journal	John M. Imrie	Waldorf-Astoria
Elgin (Ill.) Daily Courier	D. A. McKenzie	Belleclaire
	Clark E. McKenzie	Belleclaire
Elizabeth (N. J.) Journal	Fred L. Crane	Waldorf-Astoria
	Elmer E. Stanion	Elizabeth, N. J.
	George W. Swift	Elizabeth, N. J.
Enid (Okla.) Eagle & Morning News	Wm. M. Taylor	St. James
Erie (Pa.) Times	John J. Mead, Sr.	Waldorf-Astoria
	John J. Mead, Jr.	Waldorf-Astoria
Evansville (Ind.) Courier & Journal	Ed J. Fehn	McAlpin
Fall River (Mass.) Globe	Henry F. Nickerson
	Fred J. Tangney
Fall River Herald	Edward Gans	Astor
Fargo (N. D.) Forum & Tribune	Norman D. Black	McAlpin
	H. D. Paulson	McAlpin
Findlay (O.) Morning Republican	L. N. Heminger	St. James
Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette	L. G. Ellingham	Waldorf-Astoria
	A. Schaefer	Astor
	Ross Nelson	Astor
	Miller Ellingham	Astor
Fort Worth (Tex.) Record	D. D. Moore	Waldorf-Astoria
Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram	Amon G. Carter	Plaza
	James M. North, Jr.	Astor
	A. L. Shuman	Astor
Frederick (Md.) Post-News	Wm. T. Delaplaine	McAlpin
Freeport (N. Y.) Review	James E. Stiles	Freeport, N. Y.
Galveston (Tex.) News	Louis C. Elbert	John Budd Co., 9 East 37t St.
Gary (Ind.) Post-Tribune	J. R. Snyder	c/o Knill-Burke, Brokaw Bldg., 42nd St.
Geneva (N. Y.) Times	G. B. Williams	Hotel Sherman Square
	W. A. Gracey	Hotel Sherman Square
Glens Falls (N. Y.) Post-Star	J. I. Fowler	Astor
	A. P. Irving	Astor
Gloversville (N. Y.) Herald	Emmett H. Cullings	Waldorf-Astoria
	Flora M. Cullings	Waldorf-Astoria
Gloversville Leader-Republican	Edward H. Mills	Waldorf-Astoria
	Frank L. Rogers	Waldorf-Astoria
Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald	A. H. Vandenberg	Biltmore
Grand Rapids Press	Edmund W. Booth	Plaza
Greensboro (N. C.) News	E. B. Jeffress	c/o A. N. P. A.
Greenville (S. C.) News	B. H. Peace	Cadillac
	R. C. Peace	Cadillac
Guthrie (Okla.) Leader	L. G. Niblack	Vanderbilt
Hagerstown (Md.) Herald	S. E. Phillips	Waldorf-Astoria
Hamilton (Ont.) Herald	R. B. Harris or J. B. Fraser	Prince George
Hamilton Spectator	F. I. Ker
	James R. Allan
Hannibal (Mo.) Courier-Post	E. L. Sparks	Waldorf-Astoria
Hanover (Pa.) Sun	Hugh B. Hostetter	York
Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot & Eve. News	Richard M. H. Wharton	Waldorf-Astoria
	Homer E. Moyer	Waldorf-Astoria
Harrisburg Telegraph	H. A. Fry	Astor
	A. R. Michener	Astor
	E. J. Stackpole, Jr.	Astor
Hazelton (Pa.) Plain Speaker	John R. Dershuck	Waldorf-Astoria
Hazelton Standard-Sentinel	Henry Walser	Waldorf-Astoria
Hendersonville (N. C.) Dispatch	Henry A. Dennis	Pennsylvania
Houston (Tex.) Chronicle	Steve Kelton	Bretton Hall
	Gough J. Palmer, Sr.	Cadillac
Houston (Tex.) Post-Dispatch	Ray L. Dudley	Astor
	G. M. Bailey	Martinique
Hudson (N. Y.) Star	Albert W. Fell	44th St. Hotel
	Emory C. Van Loan	44th St. Hotel
Hudson (Mass.) Sun	Dustin Lucier	Pennsylvania
	Daniel Fitzgerald	Pennsylvania
Huntington (Ind.) Press	A. J. Wilhelm	St. James
Huntington (W. Va.,) Advertiser	J. H. Long	Pennsylvania
Huntsville (Ala.) Times	T. E. Pierce	Pennsylvania
Hutchinson (Kan.) News & Herald	W. Y. Morgan	Alamac
Indianapolis Commercial	Mark R. Gray	Astor
Indianapolis News	Hilton U. Brown	Astor
	Frank T. Carroll	110 East 42nd St.
Indianapolis Star	B. F. Lawrence	Vanderbilt
	Jas. A. Stuart	Astor
Ithaca (N. Y.) Journal-News	John W. Baker	44th Street Hotel
Jackson (Miss.) News	Frederick Sullens	Empire
Jamestown (N. Y.) Journal	F. P. Hall	Pennsylvania
	H. M. Hall	Pennsylvania
Jamestown (N. Y.) Post	Edward L. Allen	Cadillac
Janesville (Wis.) Gazette	H. H. Bliss	Waldorf-Astoria
Johnson City (Tenn.) Chronicle Staff-News	Guy L. Smith	c/o Frost, Landis & Koh 225 5th Ave.
Kansas City Journal-Post	W. Laurence Dickey	Waldorf-Astoria
	Ralph Ellis	Waldorf-Astoria
Kansas City Star	Irwin Kirkwood	Ritz-Carlton
	H. J. Haskell	Ritz-Carlton
Kingsport (Tenn.) Times	Thomas H. Pratt	Astor
Kingston (N. Y.) Freeman	Jay E. Klock	Waldorf-Astoria
Kingston (N. Y.) Leader	Ira V. D. Warren	Belmont
Kokomo (Ind.) Dispatch	Paul Poynter	St. James
Knoxville (Tenn.) Sentinel	Senator L. D. Tyson	Waldorf-Astoria
	Mr. & Mrs. Wiley L. Morgan	Waldorf-Astoria
La Crosse (Wis.) Tribune & Leader-Press	Frank H. Burgess	Waldorf-Astoria

NEW YORK ADDRESSES OF VISITING PUBLISHERS

Name of Newspaper	Representative	New York Address
ıfayette (Ind.) Journal & Courier	Henry W. Marshall	McAlpin
ıncaster (Pa.) Intelligencer	James H. Steinman	Yale Club
	E. A. McCollough	A. N. P. A. Hqtrs.
	H. C. Carpenter	Astor
.ncaster (Pa.) New Era	J. R. Gilbert	Astor
	O. J. Keller	Astor
ınsing (Mich.) Capital News	Basil Brewer	Martinique
adville (Colo.) Herald-Democrat	S. C. Beckwith Sp. Agcy.	World Bldg.
banon (Pa.) News	John K. R. Schropp	McAlpin
	Henry L. Wilder	McAlpin
xington (Ky.) Leader	H. Giovannoli	Waldorf-Astoria
xington (Ky.) Herald	Desha Breckinridge	Princeton Club, 39th St. & Park Ave.
wiston (Me.) Sun	Frank S. Hoy	Shelton
ttle Falls (N. Y.) Times	John Crowley	Elks Club
ttle Rock Arkansas Democrat	Elmer E. Clarke	c/o John M. Branham Co., 342 Madison Ave.
	John M. Branham	c/o John M. Branham Co., 342 Madison Ave.
ttle Rock Arkansas Gazette	J. N. Heiskell	Waldorf-Astoria
ng Island City Star	LeRoy L. Smith	1 Star Square Long Island City
s Angeles Times	Harry Chandler	Waldorf-Astoria
s Angeles (Cal.) Illustrated Daily News	Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.	Astor & Chatham
	John W. Brodix	Astor & Chatham
	Ben Mellon	Astor & Chatham
uisville (Ky.) Herald-Post	P. O. Sergent	Alamac
	W. W. Stouffer	Cadillac
uisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal & Times	R. W. Bingham	Waldorf-Astoria
	Emanuel Levi	Waldorf-Astoria
	H. W. Stodghill	Waldorf-Astoria
	A. R. Magee	Astor
well (Mass.) Courier-Citizen & Evening Leader	William G. Spence	Vanderbilt
	Robert F. Marden
	S. Foster Whipple
	Miles F. P. Dallison
nchburg (Va.) News	Powell Glass	Waldorf-Astoria
	M. K. Duerson	Pennsylvania
nn (Mass.) Item	Charles H. Hastings	Martinique
cKeesport (Pa.) News	Jess E. Long	Martinique
	William D. Mansfield	Martinique
adison (Wis.) State Journal	Ike U. Sears	Waldorf-Astoria
adison (Wis.) State Journal	I. U. Sears	Waldorf-Astoria
anchester (N. H.) Union-Leader	J. A. Muehling	Waldorf-Astoria
	Major Frank Knox	Waldorf-Astoria
arietta (Ohio) Times	W. P. McKinney	Commodore
	F. B. McKinney	Commodore
arietta (Ohio) Register	J. D. Chamberlain	McAlpin
arion (Ohio) Star	L. H. Brush	Waldorf-Astoria
arlboro (Mass.) Enterprise	Dustin Lucier	Pennsylvania
	Daniel Fitzgerald	Pennsylvania
arshfield (Ore.) Coos Bay Times	M. C. Maloney	Martinique
arion (Ind.) Chronicle	George B. Lindsay	Empire
ason City (Ia.) Globe-Gazette	Jim W. Conroy
assillon (Ohio) Independent	J. J. Bernstein	Waldorf-Astoria
eadville (Pa.) Tribune-Republican	Walter Irving Bates	Waldorf-Astoria
emphis Commercial Appeal	C. P. J. Mooney	Waldorf-Astoria or Roosevelt
eriden (Conn.) Journal	F. E. Sands	St. James
	C. H. Tryon	St. James
eriden (Conn.) Record	W. A. Kelsey	Majestic
	Wayne C. Smith	44th Street Hotel
	E. E. Smith	44th Street Hotel
eridian (Miss.) Star	James H. Skewes	Empire
iami (Fla.) Herald	Frank B. Shutts	Waldorf-Astoria
iami (Fla.) Illustrated Daily Tab	Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.	Astor & Chatham
	John W. Brodix	Astor & Chatham
	Ben Mellon	Astor & Chatham
iami (Fla.) News	R. A. Reeder	Commodore
iddletown (N. Y.) Herald	C. M. Stewart 3d	829 Park Avenue
	J. F. Larkin	829 Park Avenue
iddletown (N. Y.) Times-Press	Fred B. Stuart	270 Madison Ave.
illville (N. J.) Republican	A. L. Wheat	Herald Sq. Hotel
ilwaukee Journal	H. J. Grant	Harvard Club
inneapolis Journal	W. S. Jones	Waldorf-Astoria
	G. B. Bickelhaupt	Waldorf-Astoria
	C. W. Jones	Waldorf-Astoria
inneapolis Tribune	E. P. Stewart	Waldorf-Astoria
	T. J. Dillon	Waldorf-Astoria
oline (Ill.) Dispatch	P. S. McGlynn	Waldorf-Astoria
	August Sundine	Waldorf-Astoria
ontgomery (Ala.) Journal	John M. Branham Co.	342 Madison Ave.
orristown (N. J.) Jerseyman	Alva E. Lamberton	N. J. Newspapers, Inc., 25 East 26th St.
t. Vernon (N. Y.) Argus	Franklin A. Merriam	Mt. Vernon
	Maurice S. Porter	Mt. Vernon
uncie (Ind.) Star	Harry F. Guthrie	Martinique
uskogee (Okla.) News	S. C. Beckwith Sp. Agcy.	World Bldg.
uskogee (Okla.) Phoenix	Joel H. Bixby	Waldorf-Astoria
	J. K. Bixby	Waldorf-Astoria
shville (Tenn.) Banner	Edgar M. Foster	Alamac
wark (N. J.) Sunday Call	Louis Hannock	Newark, N. J.
	Philip H. Baldwin	Newark, N. J.
wark (N. J.) Evening News	Eugene W. Farrell	Newark, N. J.
w Bedford (Mass.) Standard & Mercury	Benjamin H. Anthony	Waldorf
	James T. Murray	Vanderbilt
	George A. Hough	Vanderbilt
w Bernian (N. C.) New Bernian and Sun Journal	I. B. Dawson	McAlpin
wburgh (N. Y.) Daily News	F. H. Keefe	Ingraham-Powers, Inc., 350 Madison Ave.
wburyport (Mass.) News	Edward E. Hicken	Martinique
	Fred E. Smith	Martinique
wcastle (Pa.) News	Fred L. Rentz	Waldorf
w Haven (Conn.) Register	John Day Jackson	Yale Club
	Hugh B. Kennedy	44th St. Hotel
w Haven (Conn.) Journal-Courier	Edward T. Carrington
w Haven (Conn.) Times-Leader	William A. Hendrick	Alamac
w London (Conn.) Day	Theodore Bodenwein	44th St. Hotel
	Orvin G. Andrews	44th St. Hotel
w Orleans (La.) Item-Tribune	James M. Thomson	Vanderbilt
	A. G. Newmyer	Vanderbilt
w Orleans Times-Picayune	Leonard K. Nicholson	Waldorf-Astoria
w York Daily Bond News	William Romkey	420 E. 149th St.
w York Commercial	L. H. White	38 Park Row
	F. R. Marvin	38 Park Row
w York Herald Tribune	Howard Davis
	Porter Caruthers
w York Daily News	John W. Barnhart
	Roy C. Holliss
w York Evening Post	Cyrus H. K. Curtis	N. Y. Eve. Post
	John C. Martin	N. Y. Eve. Post
	David E. Smiley	N. Y. Eve. Post
w York Wall Street Journal	Joseph Cashman	44 Broad St.
w York Central News of America	Melvin J. Woodworth	42 New St.
	R. M. Bonifield	42 New St.
agara Falls (N. Y.) Gazette	A. C. Deuel	Roosevelt
	N. F. Maddever	Roosevelt
rfolk (Nebr.) News	Gene Huse	Waldorf-Astoria
rfolk (Va.) Ledger-Dispatch	S. L. Slover	Waldorf-Astoria
	P. S. Huber	Astor

Name of Newspaper	Representative	New York Address
Norristown (Pa.) Times-Herald	Ralph Beaver Strassburger	60 Broadway
	Henry D. Bradley	60 Broadway
	John C. Dye	Harding
Norwalk (Conn.) Hour	Edward J. Thomas
Norwalk (O.) Reflector-Herald	R. C. Snyder	Waldorf-Astoria
	Mrs. R. C. Snyder	Waldorf-Astoria
Nyack (N. Y.) Journal	Chas. Brace	Astor
	Donald Mockler	Astor
Ogdensburg N. Y.) Republican-Journal	A. E. Sansoucy	c/o D. J. Randall or A. E. Clayden, 341 5th Ave.
Oklahoma City (Okla.) Daily Oklahoman	E. K. Gaylord	Waldorf-Astoria
Oneonta (N. Y.) Star	Harry W. Lee	Grand Hotel
Oshkosh (Wis.) Northwestern	O. J. Hardy	Martinique
Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel	W. C. Essington	St. James
Ottumwa (Ia.) Courier	James F. Powell	Waldorf-Astoria
Owensboro (Ky.) Messenger	Urey Woodson	Waldorf-Astoria
Parkersburg (W. Va.) Sentinel	A. E. Clayden	347 5th Ave.
Passaic (N. J.) Herald	E. A. Bristor	Waldorf-Astoria
Passaic (N. J.) News	R. E. Lent	Waldorf-Astoria
	G. M. Hartt	Waldorf-Astoria
Paterson (N. J.) News	Harry B. Haines
	Jules C. Levine
Paterson (N. J.) Press-Guardian	William B. Bryant	Waldorf-Astoria
Pawtucket (R. I.) Times	Charles O. Black	44th Street Hotel
	W. E. Binford	44th Street Hotel
Peoria (Ill.) Journal-Transcript	Carl P. Slane	Astor
	Merle Slane	Astor
	Frederick A. Stowe	Astor
Peoria (Ill.) Star	S. A. Oakley	Astor
Perth Amboy (N. J.) News	D. P. Olmstead
Petersburg (Va.) Progress-Index	Col. Walter E. Harris	Pennsylvania
Philadelphia Public Ledger	Cyrus H. K. Curtis	New York Evening Post
	John C. Martin	New York Evening Post
	David E. Smiley	New York Evening Post
Philadelphia Record	Rowe Stewart	Alamac
	W. H. H. Neville	Alamac
	R. S. Farley
	J. F. Finley
Phoenix Arizona Republican	Charles A. Stauffer	McAlpin
Piqua (Ohio) Call	C. F. Ridenour	Waldorf-Astoria
Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph	Charles W. Danziger	Waldorf-Astoria
Pittsburgh Gazette-Times	Urban E. Dice	Waldorf-Astoria
Pittsburgh Post & Sun	A. E. Braun	St. Regis
Pittsburgh Press	H. C. Milholland	Waldorf-Astoria
	Owen M. Phillips	Waldorf-Astoria
Pittston (Pa.) Gazette	William J. Peck	Waldorf-Astoria
	Mrs. Lottie D. Peck	Waldorf-Astoria
Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News	Charles H. Frost
	A. W. Zimmerman
	C. F. Stout
Plattsburgh (N. Y.) Press	William M. Lynch	St. James
Port Huron (Mich.) Times-Herald	E. J. Ottaway	Waldorf-Astoria
Port Jervis (N. Y.) Union-Gazette	Fred R. Salmon	Empire
Portland Oregonian	Edgar B. Piper	Waldorf-Astoria
	W. J. Hofmann	Waldorf-Astoria
Portland Oregon Journal	P. L. Jackson	Princeton Club
Portland (Ore.) Telegram	O. C. Leitner	Waldorf-Astoria
Portsmouth (N. H.) Herald	F. W. Hartford	Vanderbilt
Portsmouth (Va.) Star	Norman R. Hamilton	Empire
Pottsville (Pa.) Republican & Morning Paper	J. H. Zerbey	Waldorf-Astoria
	J. H. Zerbey, Jr.	Waldorf-Astoria
	E. L. Clifford	Waldorf-Astoria
Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Star & Enterprise	Arthur A. Parks
Providence (R. I.) Journal & Bulletin	Allison Stone	Biltmore
	Arthur L. Poorman	Claridge
Providence (R. I.) News	T. E. Niles	106 Morningside Drive
Raleigh (N. C.) Times	John A. Park	Cadillac
Reading (Pa.) Eagle	Hawley Quier	Waldorf-Astoria
	William E. Althouse	Waldorf-Astoria
Reading (Pa.) Tribune	A. E. McGavin
	H. D. Brauff
Richmond (Cal.) Independent	S. C. Theis & Co.	141 West 36th St.
Richmond (Ind.) Item	E. J. Treffinger	St. James
Richmond (Ind.) Palladium	E. H. Harris	Pennsylvania
Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat & Chronicle	Fred S. Todd	Commodore
Rochester Journal-Amercan	Charles F. McCahill	4 East 88th St.
Rochester Times-Union	Frank E. Gannett	Astor
	Roy C. Kates	Astor
Rockford (Ill.) Register-Gazette	Elliott S. Bartlett	Waldorf-Astoria
Rockford (Ill.) Morning Star	Roscoe S. Chapman	Waldorf-Astoria
	Russell Chapman	Waldorf-Astoria
Rocky Mount (N. C.) Telegram	J. L. Horne, Jr.	Cadillac
Rome (N. Y.) Sentinel	A. R. Kessinger	Waldorf-Astoria
	F. Everiss Kessinger	Waldorf-Astoria
St. Augustine (Fla.) Record	Mr. & Mrs. Herbert Felkel	Lorraine
St. Louis (Mo.) Globe-Democrat	E. Lansing Ray	Globe-Democrat Bureau
St. Louis Star	Elzey Roberts	Waldorf-Astoria
	Frank P. Glass	Waldorf-Astoria
St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times	Paul Poynter	Empire
	David B. Lindsay	Empire
	William L. Straub	Empire
San Antonio (Tex.) Express & News	Frank G. Huntress	c/o John Budd Co., 9-11 East 37th St.
San Diego (Cal.) Sun	Allied Newspapers, Inc.	52 Vanderbilt Ave.
San Jose (Cal.) Mercury Herald	I. O. Hayes	c/o H. D. LaCoste
	E. A. Hayes	c/o H. D. LaCoste
San Francisco (Cal.) Illustrated Herald	Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.	Astor and Chatham
	John W. Brodix	Astor and Chatham
	Ben Mellon	Astor and Chatham
San Francisco (Cal.) Chronicle	George T. Cameron	Ritz-Carlton
	Arthur L. Clarke	Roosevelt
Saginaw (Mich.) New Courier	A. K. Treanor	Biltmore
Salamanca (N. Y.) Republican Press	Matthew Weber	8521 114th St., Richmond Hill, L. I.
Salem (Mass.) News	Harry E. Flint	Commodore
Salem (O.) News	Louis H. Brush	Waldorf-Astoria
Salisbury (Md.) Times	Harry K. Smith	Pennsylvania
Salisbury (N. C.) Post	J. F. Hurley or J. F. Hurley, Jr.	Empire
Savannah (Ga.) News	F. G. Bell	McAlpin
Savannah Press	Pleasant A. Stovall	Waldorf-Astoria
	Burton C. Mason	Waldorf-Astoria
Schenectady (N. Y.) Gazette	A. N. Liecty	Waldorf-Astoria
Schenectady Union-Star	F. R. Champion	Martinique
Scranton (Pa.) Scrantonian	M. L. Goodman	Pennsylvania
	Richard Little	Pennsylvania
	E. Tracy Sweet	Breslin
Scranton Times	E. J. Lynett	Waldorf-Astoria
	J. E. Bradley	Waldorf-Astoria
	J. W. Flanagan	Waldorf-Astoria
	Wm. R. Lynett	Waldorf-Astoria
Seattle (Wash.) Post-Intelligencer	E. C. Griffith	Roosevelt
Seattle Times	C. B. Blethen	S. C. Beckwith Agency
Sheboygan (Wis.) Press	M. C. Watson	270 Madison Ave.
Sioux City (Ia.) Journal	W. H. Sammons	Waldorf-Astoria
Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune	John H. Kelly	Waldorf-Astoria
South Bend (Ind.) Tribune	E. A. Miller	Waldorf-Astoria
South Norwalk (Conn.) Sentinel	Leigh Danenberg	South Norwalk, Conn.
	Wendell P. Milligan	South Norwalk, Conn.
Springfield (Ill.) State Register	Geo. M. Clendenin	Astor
Springfield (Mass.) Union	M. S. Sherman	Waldorf-Astoria
	Fred Mozley	Waldorf-Astoria

NEW YORK ADDRESSES OF VISITING PUBLISHERS

Name of Newspaper	Representative	New York Address
Springfield (Mo.) Leader	H. S. Jewell	Waldorf-Astoria
Stamford (Conn.) Sentinel	Silas Van Horn	Pennsylvania
	L. D. Rowland	Pennsylvania
Staunton (Va.) News-Leader	E. W. Opie	Astor
Steubenville (O.) Herald-Star	Charles D. Simeral	Pennsylvania
Suffolk (Va.) News	C. L. Snowden
Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald	Edward H. O'Hara	Waldorf-Astoria
	George W. O'Hara	Waldorf-Astoria
Syracuse Journal	Harvey D. Burrill	Astor
	Louis D. Burrill	Astor
Syracuse Post-Standard	J. D. Barnum	Roosevelt
	R. W. Disque	Roosevelt
	W. P. Baker	Roosevelt
Tacoma (Wash.) Ledger	Frank S. Baker	Waldorf-Astoria
Tarrytown (N. Y.) News	Wallace Odell
Taunton (Mass.) Gazette	William H. Reed	St. James
Terrell (Tex.) Tribune	Fred I. Massengill	McAlpin
Terre Haute (Ind.) Star	J. E. White	Astor
Terre Haute (Ind.) Tribune	A. C. Keifer	Vanderbilt
Titusville (Pa.) Herald	E. T. Stevenson	Roosevelt
Toledo Blade	Leslie E. Neafie	Vanderbilt
Toledo News-Bee	W. K. Stewart	c/o Allied Newspapers, 52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Toledo Times	R. L. Patterson	Commodore
	John D. Dun	Commodore
Topeka (Kans.) Capital	Arthur Capper	Waldorf-Astoria
	Marco Morrow	Waldorf-Astoria
Topeka (Kan.) State Journal	Frank P. MacLennan	Waldorf-Astoria
Toronto Globe	R. K. Stocks	c/o Lorenzen & Thompson, 19 W. 44th St.
Toronto Mail & Empire	J. S. Douglas	Waldorf-Astoria
	George E. Scroggie	Waldorf-Astoria
Toronto (Ohio) Tribune	Forrest Richmond	Richmond
Troy (N. Y.) Record	D. B. Plum	Astor
Troy (N. Y.) Times	John M. Francis	Waldorf-Astoria
	R. P. Anderson	Friars Club
Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune	Richard Lloyd Jones	Players Club
	William B. Dimon	c/o Story, Brooks & Finley, Pershing Sq. Bldg.
Tulsa (Okla.) World	F. O. Larson	Waldorf-Astoria
Union Hill (N. J.) Hudson Dispatch	Thomas F. Martin
	William Rubel
	Haddon Ivins
Utica (N. Y.) Observer-Dispatch	Frank E. Gannett	Astor
	Prentiss Bailey	Astor
Utica (N. Y.) Press	William V. Jones	Astor
Vancouver (B. C.) Province	F. J. Burd	Waldorf-Astoria
Vancouver Sun	R. J. Cromie	Commodore
Warren (Ohio) Tribune-Chronicle	Mrs. Zell Hart Deming	Waldorf-Astoria
Washington (D. C.) News	W. W. Hawkins	52 Vanderbilt Ave.
Washington (Pa.) Observer & Reporter	John L. Stewart	Waldorf-Astoria
	Howard Christman	Waldorf-Astoria
Washington (D. C.) Post	Edward B. McLean
Washington Herald & Times	A. R. R. Onyun	Astor
Washington Times	G. Logan Payne	Waldorf-Astoria
Washington Star	Frank B. Noyes	Ritz-Carlton
	Fleming Newbold	Ritz-Carlton
Waterbury (Conn.) Republican & American	William J. Pape	44th Street Hotel
	E. R. Stevenson	44th Street Hotel
	I. B. Myers	44th Street Hotel
	C. F. Chapin	Yale Club
Waterloo (Ia.) Courier	Jackson McCoy	Astor
Watertown (N. Y.) Standard	A. B. Parker	44th Street Hotel
Watertown (N. Y.) Times	Charles H. Congdon	Astor
	Harold B. Johnson	Astor
Wausau (Wis.) Record-Herald	J. L. Sturtevant	Roosevelt
Waycross (Ga.) Journal-Herald	Jack Williams	Waldorf-Astoria
Waynesboro (Pa.) Record-Herald	Robert C. Gordon	Princeton Club
Westerly (R. I.) Sun	Wilfred B. Utter	Roosevelt
	Edgar P. Maxon	Roosevelt
White Plains (N. Y.) Reporter	W. Lee Tuller	White Plains, N. Y.
	Walter V. Hogan	White Plains, N. Y.
Wichita (Kans.) Beacon	Henry J. Allen	Waldorf-Astoria
Wichita (Kans.) Eagle	Marcellus M. Murdock	Astor
Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) Sunday Independent	Thomas F. Hefferman	Pennsylvania
	George P. Hefferman	Pennsylvania
	John V. Hefferman	St. James
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader	Ernest G. Smith	Astor
Williamsport (Pa.) Gazette & Telegram	H. R. Laird	Commodore
Williamsport Sun	Geo. E. Graff	Lorraine
Wilmington (N. C.) News-Dispatch	C. C. Bellamy	Cadillac
Wilmington (Dela.) Every Evening	Wm. F. Metten	Waldorf-Astoria
Wilmington News & Journal	A. W. Cummins	Astor
Wilmington Sunday Star	Horace P. Warrington	Martinique
Winnipeg (Man.) Tribune	W. McCurdy	c/o Verrvee & Conklin 300 Madison Ave.
Woodward (Okla.) Press	Pierce Munsey
Woonsccket (R. I.) Call	Buell W. Hudson	44th St. Hotel
Worcester (Mass.) Telegram-Gazette	Theodore T. Ellis	Waldof-Astoria
	W. L. Thomas	Waldof-Astoria
	R. F. Andrews	Waldof-Astoria
Xenia (O.) Republican	E. S. Myers	Empire
	John A. Chew	Empire
York (Pa.) Dispatch	H. W. Young	McAlpin
Youngstown (O.) Telegram	I. T. Watters	Biltmore
Youngstown (O.) Vindicator	W. O. Brown	c/o La Coste & Maxwell, 45 West 3rd St.
Zanesville (O.) Times Recorder & Signal	W. O. Littick	Martinique
	C. W. Gibson	Martinique

DUPLEX PRESS PLANS AIR DELIVERY OF REPAIR PARTS TO NEWSPAPERS

Three Planes Will Be in Service from Battle Creek Factory Within 30 Days to Cut Emergency Delays from Days to Hours

THE Duplex Printing Press Company will within 30 days institute airplane service from its plant at Battle Creek, Mich., for the transportation of replacement and repair parts needed in emergencies by newspapers, it was learned by EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week. No announcement has yet been made of details, but it is stated by Irving K. Stone, president of the company, that the projected service has been under consideration for more than a year that all but final and minor details were arranged a month ago, and that a bulletin would soon be sent to all users of Duplex presses, giving essential data.

"The remarkable success of the United States Air Mail Service, which has the best record of scheduled deliveries of any branch of the post office, and the regular daily use of airplanes in European commerce, convinced me some time ago that we could use such transportation for purposes where speedy delivery was the prime essential," he said.

"It will be more expensive, of course, than express or parcel post," Mr. Stone continued, "but the difference, or even the entire amount of the transportation cost is trifling compared with the loss a publisher might suffer by missing an edition or two because of a broken press part. The record of the air mail service appears to indicate that airplane transportation is just about as safe as any of the better known methods."

The Duplex Company, which is the first machinery firm in any field, newspaper or otherwise, to offer to its clientele this emergency service, is fortunately situated as to flying fields. The Army has a large equipment at Camp Custer near the city and the local Chamber of Commerce is now preparing a new field even more convenient. The latter will be available this summer.

Three standard modern planes, equipped with Curtiss motors and having a cruising radius of 300 miles, will be used for ordinary service, one plane and pilot being on call at all times for an immediate start with a shipment. Extra heavy shipments will be carried in a large plane with a capacity of 2,000 pounds dead weight. All machines have a cruising speed of about 80 miles an hour and can fly from Battle Creek to the Chicago mail field in about 90 minutes.

Connection between the company's special service and the air mail will be entirely feasible when shipments fall within the size and weight-limits prescribed by the Post Office, as most press repair parts do, Mr. Stone said. This will be of special advantage to publishers located along the air mail routes and on the Pacific Coast, and enterprising publishers not on mail routes might find it possible to have a local plane meet the postal plane at an air mail field and maintain full speed to the pressroom door. The misfortune of a press breakdown could thus be turned to an opportunity for promotional publicity for the newspaper.

No geographical limitations will be placed upon the service, Mr. Stone stated. It can be used economically by publishers whose location would require several transshipments between Battle Creek and their towns. Parts shipped by plane would cut express time by half to distant points.

Complete information as to landing fields throughout the country will be assembled by the Duplex Company, it is stated, obviating delays due to uncertainty of routing.

Stewart Heads Poor Richards

Rowe Stewart, vice-president and general manager of the Philadelphia Record, has been elected to fill the unexpired presidency of the Poor Richard Club held by the late Jarvis A. Wood. Mr. Stewart will continue in office until Monday, July 6. The regular annual election of officers will take place Monday, May 4, and the lists of nominees will remain open for names until Monday April 27.

New Promotion Stunt With Radio

Broadcasting caricatures, a promotion stunt designed to hook-up radio with newspaper circulation, was started this week by the New York Telegram and Mail, over Station WOR with Abril Lamarque, artist, in charge. The newspaper publishes a numbered chart in its editions prior to an announced date when Mr. Lamarque is to broadcast. Using the chart, and drawing from number to number under the direction of the artist, radio listeners draw the caricature.

WELCOME TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER CONVENTIONS HEADQUARTERS!

Following long custom EDITOR & PUBLISHER will maintain headquarters during the week of the Associated Press and American Newspaper Publishers' conventions at Room 116, Waldorf-Astoria, where visiting delegates will find a hearty welcome. Secretarial service will be available for those who desire it and the usual entertainment features will be provided, including a radio program.

PLAN PRINTERS' SCHOOL FOR MONTREAL

Province of Quebec and Master Printers to Join in Supporting Venture—Three Year Apprenticeship Planned

A school for printing, which is to be the joint enterprise of the government of the Province of Quebec and the Master Printers' Association of Montreal is to be opened in the latter city in September.

The school will be financed by the Government; but the printers must pay the apprentices so they will receive remuneration for time spent in school as well as in the shop. While final details have not been arranged, it is expected that the school term will last for three of the five year apprenticeship period. These three years will be given half to school work and half outside, probably a week inside, and a week outside alternately. The scheme has been approved by three unions.

Only fundamentals will be attempted until the school is on its feet. Hand composition will be stressed. Linotyping and other branches will not be taught at the beginning. Pupils will be required to have a good primary education as an entrance requirement, and will be limited in number to 40. The Montreal Technical School has been chosen for the classes.

The establishment of the school is under the direction of an advisory council consisting of Wm. Southam, W. A. Desbarats, Jos. Brosseau, A. Leblanc, Thom Robertson, A. Belanger, J. Smith, with A. Frigon, chairman.

A. P. Opens Two New Bureaus

The Associated Press has opened two new bureaus, it was announced at headquarters this week. They are: Baton Rouge, La., with T. M. Davenport in charge, and Jackson, Miss., H. C. Plummer, correspondent.

Villard Talks on the Press

Oswald Garrison Villard, formerly editor of the New York Evening Post and now editor of the Nation discussed "Does Capitalism Control the Press" at Williams College, April 17.

The Dominant 7 Day Newspaper in Buffalo

The Buffalo Times has had such a remarkable growth, both Evening and Sunday, in the past few years, that it has had but few parallels in the newspaper world.

It has a present circulation of over 100,000 Evening, and considerably over 100,000 Sunday, both representing large additions to the figures of a year ago.

The sole way to reach the majority of the solid, substantial homes in Buffalo and contiguous trading territory is through the columns of the Buffalo Times.

Which is why

in 1924 the Buffalo Times gained almost 800,000 lines of paid display advertising, while the other Buffalo papers either lost or practically stood still.

Still setting the pace, the Buffalo Evening Times for the first quarter of 1925 showed an increase of 187,068 lines of paid display advertising, against a combined loss of the three other Buffalo evening newspapers of 90,692 lines.

Such great circulation and advertising strides need commensurate mechanical equipment; consequently an order has been placed for sixteen, low constructed, high speed units from the Goss Printing Press Company, with a running speed of 144,000 32-page papers, 90,000 48-page papers, and 72,000 64-page papers per hour.

THE BUFFALO TIMES

NORMAN E. MACK, Editor and Publisher

VERREE & CONKLIN, Special Representatives

New York Chicago Detroit San Francisco Kansas City

600 TO ATTEND WEEK'S CONVENTIONS

(Concluded from Page 6)

tournament to be held April 20, at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club.

Vice-President Charles G. Dawes, as previously announced, will be guest of honor and principal speaker at the A. P. luncheon at which Frank B. Noyes, of the Washington Star, and A. P. president will preside. John McCormack, noted tenor, will sing.

Proceedings will be broadcast by stations WEAF and WJZ, New York. Hooked up with WEAF will be WWJ, the station of the Detroit News, and WOO, Philadelphia.

Special guests invited to the luncheon include: Owen D. Young; Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press Associatoin; George C. Shore, editor and manager of the International News Service; L. B. Palmer, manager of the A. N. P. A.; John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for President at the last election; and Frank L. Polk.

Requests for places at the Bureau of Advertising banquet have broken all records, according to William A. Thomson, director. One of the features of the dinner this year will be a concert by the Tufts College Musical Clubs.

Arthur G. Staples of the Lewiston (Me.) Journal will act as toastmaster, and will also have some pertinent remarks to make from the standpoint of the small city publisher.

Among the other speakers, there will be Mrs. Izetta Jewel Brown, of Kingwood, W. Va., who was one of the leading orators at the recent Democratic National Convention, Ex-Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who declined the Republican nomination for Vice-President after he had been nominated at the last convention, and Rube Goldberg, the cartoonist.

In charge of the A. N. P. A. golf tournament are R. C. Holliss, New York Daily News, chairman; Bernard Ridder, New Yorker Staats Herold, and J. F. Bresnahan, New York World, in charge of handicaps; Raymond M. Gunnison, Brooklyn Eagle, and Howard Davis, New York Herald Tribune, in charge of entertainment; and J. C. Martin, New York Evening Post, in charge of trophies.

The Weschester-Biltmore Country Club has been obtained for the day. This is America's finest country club, and full membership privileges have been granted A. N. P. A. members on this day through the courtesy of the club's officers, John McE. Bowman and M. Roy Jackson. The clubhouse and grounds, including three fine courses, will be at the disposal of A. N. P. A. players.

A special morning program has been arranged. The tournament matches will begin after lunch. Luncheon will be served to all present. Greens fees hav been abolished for this occasion. Afte the tournament a special dinner will b served. There will be a prize for ever player, and distribution of prizes will tak place at the dinner. A special prograr of entertainment has also been arrange —a unique, one-time-only, exclusiv event.

Special buses for players leave th Waldorf at 8:30 a. m. Trains leav Grand Central at 7:30, 9:10, 10:06, 10:5 a. m. and 12:03 p. m.

Members of the North America Newspaper Alliance will not hold thei usual dinner this year. Directors, how ever, will dine on April 23, and will mee afterwards at the Waldorf-Astoria. Th annual meeting of members will be hel April 24 in the Sun Parlor of the Waldor at 10:30 a. m. followed by luncheon.

The annual frolic staged by M. Koe nigsburg, president of King Feature Syndicate, Inc., has been designated "Th Cabinet Lark" this year and will be hel at the Friars Club, April 21.

Lincoln B. Palmer and Charles H. Taylor seen in the new executive office of the A. N. P. A. at 270 Madison Avenue. (EDITOR & PUBLISHER photograph.)

New executive office of Advertising Bureau, A. N. P. A., at 270 Madison Avenue. Wm. A. Thomson, director, and Thomas H. Moore, associate director, are shown. (EDITOR & PUBLISHER photograph.)

WAR ON CIVIL SERVICE SCHOOL

U. S. and National Vigilance Committe Join in Campaign

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 1 —The United States Civil Service Com mission, in co-operation with the Natior al Vigilance Committee of the Associate Advertising Clubs of the World, is er gaged in an active campaign against sc called civil service schools which deceiv the public in their advertising, or whos practices are otherwise unfair. These sc called schools claim to give instruction i preparation for examinations for th Federal civil service.

Recently, on complaint of the Civ Service Commission and the Nationa Vigilance Committee, the Federal Trad Commission issued an order to "ceas and desist" against the Civil Servic School, Inc., Washington, D. C. Th order prohibits the use of the ter "civil service" in the school title o the ground that such use gives the im pression that the school is connected wit the Government.

We'd like to meet you personally at the Convention, Mr. Publisher

THOSE of you whom we have not had the pleasure of meeting or conferring with during our 20 years dealing with Newspapers throughout the United States and Canada.

We are certain that you would be anxious to find out just what we have to offer you if you fully realized the scope of Briggs' service.

Overcoming the Saturday or Monday "WEAK" day —that's Our Business

We have solved the Saturday and Monday "WEAK" day problem for more than 70 leading newspapers by adding from 100,000 to 500,000 lines of NEW business annually without interfering with regular local advertisers. Why not let us tell you personally about our service?

Meet Us at our Waldorf-Astoria
Headquarters
We Want to Know You and We Want You to Know Us

Thomas W. Briggs Co.

Home Office: Columbian Mutual Tower, Memphis, Tennessee

Ask Dun or Bradstreet about our Responsibility Ask any Newspaper Publisher about our Service

SELL MID-WEEK ADVERTISING HARD TO BREAK FRIDAY "TRAFFIC JAM"

Pacific Coast Executive Chose Certain Days for Certain Groups of Advertisers—Exchanges Ideas with Other Papers

By E. F. CHASE

General Business Manager, California Group, Scripps-Howard Newspapers

I HAVE been reading with great interest the very useful series in EDITOR & PUBLISHER on the week-end traffic jam. This problem is being solved all the time, somewhere. It can be solved everywhere. As a result of many years of hard plugging, our issues on other days than Fridays are being used more extensively for various lines of regular advertising. Many years ago we started building up Thursdays for clothiers, Wednesdays for furniture dealers, etc., and in our California dailies, we have built up other lines for other days of the week, somewhat after this schedule:

E. F. CHASE

MONDAY — Crockery and housewares. Large theatre and movie house ads which appeared in Sunday papers. Business guide. Music houses. Department stores. Real estate.

TUESDAY — Department stores. Cloaks and suits. Jewelers. Electrical supplies. Milliners, haberdashers. Shoe stores. Markets. Credit outfitting companies. Radio. Clothiers. Beauty shops. Real estate.

WEDNESDAY — Department stores. Cloaks and suits. Double spread of neighborhood stores. Furniture stores (large volume). Drugs. Grocers. Real estate, including much home-building advertising. Clothiers.

THURSDAY — Department stores. Jewelers. Shoes. Clothing (large volume). Furniture (large volume). Cloaks and suits. Music houses. Electrical supplies. Crockery and housewares.

SATURDAY — Large theatre and movie display. Much automobile, both display and classified, also accessories. Gasoline companies. Tires. Much real estate, display and classified. Church advertising. Extra classified pages.

Of course, Friday is still our biggest day.

All this has been done by "plugging," not by penalizing.

To many publishers throughout the United States, I send our special pages, double-spreads, supplements, and tabloid advertising sections. I explain how these were sold and how sold for the days we want them. In return, we ask how other publishers have built up regular advertising on days other than Friday. We also ask for all their good specials, with selling details and suggestions. Invariably the publishers are pleased to receive our ideas and sample advertisements, and to reciprocate.

P. O. CONDITIONS BETTER

March Receipts from 50 Largest Cities Show 5.91 Per Cent Gain

WASHINGTON, April 7—Better business conditions than a year ago are indicated in the receipts of the 50 largest postoffices. They show an increase of $1,621,821, or 5.91 per cent for March over that month last year. Total receipts of these offices, announced today by the Postoffice Department, were $29,805,090, compared with $27,463,268 for March last year.

Only six of the 50 postoffices showed decreased receipts: Minneapolis, Washington, Portland, Ore.; Toledo, Providence and Fort Worth.

Jacksonville, Fla., had the largest increase with 20.64 per cent; Dayton second with 17.86, and New Orleans third with 17.84.

Of the five largest offices having receipts of more than $1,000,000, Philadelphia had the largest per cent of increase with 9.16 per cent, New York second with 8.16, Boston third with 5.32, St. Louis fourth with 4.16 and Chicago fifth with 3.60.

IOWA COLLEGE EDITORS MEET

Seventy Student Journalists Attend Des Moines Convention

Seventy Iowa college students representing various college publications, attended the annual convention of the Iowa College Press Association at Drake College, Des Moines, Ia., last week and elected James A. Worts, Jr., Grinnell College, president; Hill Laken, Drake, Des Moines, vice-president; Miss Ledice McAndally, Cornell, secretary-treasurer.

Dean Harry F. Harrington, head of the Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern University, addressing the annual banquet of the association, said that newspaper work, particularly in the editorial division, is "one of life's greatest adventures, in that it teaches the art of being human." Commercialization of college journalism he discouraged, for, he said that the maintenance of the amateur spirit is a significant factor of the college publication and it should be guarded closely.

W. E. Hall, managing editor of the Mason City Globe-Gazette, was toastmaster.

Franklin Simon Sales Up

The profit and loss report of Franklin Simon, president of Franklin Simon & Co., New York department store, for six months ended Jan. 31, sets forth the excellent showing in volume of business done and a strong financial position of the company, as well as satisfactory profits. For the two months of the new calendar year 1925, the sales have exceeded the sales of the corresponding period of last year. Those for the month of February have increased $100,000 and for the month of March $200,000.

MERCHANTS OF CUERO, TEX., ADVERTISE FOR RAIN

TEN merchants of Cuero, Tex., who believe in newspaper advertising put it to a novel use recently when they jointly purchased a full page in a local newspaper and inserted this copy in letters 2 inches high: "THIS ADVERTISEMENT IS FOR RAIN!"

Cuero and DeWitt county have experienced a drought which has been unbroken for four months. Farmers were getting panicky. The advertisement was placed to assure them the merchants were in sympathy with their plight.

Just before going to press EDITOR & PUBLISHER telegraphed to learn if the advertisement had had any effect.

"No rain but lots of cloudy weather at Cuero," was the reply.

National Advertising in the Newspapers For March Broke All Records

Proving that business conditions are sound

Here are messages and information regarding what some of the newspapers with which we are associated, did in March:

A letter from Mr. H. S. Talmadge, Publisher of the TOLEDO BLADE, included the following lines:

"You did fine work in March. It was the biggest month in the history of the paper, with the exception of one month which beat it out but by a very few columns."

A telegram from Mr. Theodore T. Ellis, President and Publisher of the WORCESTER TELEGRAM-GAZETTE:

"Congratulations on March foreign advertising. It is the biggest month of any month in the history of the TELEGRAM-GAZETTE."

The WASHINGTON POST not only had the biggest March in its history, but was only beaten by one month (October, 1920).

The ROCHESTER DEMOCRAT & CHRONICLE had the biggest March in its history and the biggest month since the record year of 1920.

Mr. J. D. Barnum, Publisher of the SYRACUSE POST STANDARD, writes:

"Congratulations on March. It is the largest March business since 1920."

The NEWARK STAR EAGLE not only had the biggest March, but there were only two other months slightly larger for all time.

The DULUTH HERALD had the largest March in its history, and within a very slight margin of the largest month in the history of the paper.

The MEMPHIS NEWS SCIMITAR in March had the largest business in the history of the paper.

The MANCHESTER UNION LEADER had an increase of about 50% over March, 1924, and it was also the largest month for any month in the history of the paper.

The LANCASTER NEW ERA not only had the largest March, but the largest month in the history of its paper.

The above information from some of our Publishers best tells the story. I am certain other Publishers have had the same experience, proving again that business is fundamentally sound and will continue to grow slowly, but surely.

Paul Block

NEW YORK CHICAGO BOSTON DETROIT

Chicago Tribune
FEATURES

Blue Ribbon
FICTION
First Run Work of First Class Authors
Blue Ribbon Serials for Sunday (one release a week)
Blue Ribbon Serials Week day (six days a week)
Blue Ribbon Short Stories—from 3,000 words down.
Well Written Tabloid Short Stories of 300-600 words

BLACK & WHITE Strips
The Gumps by Sidney Smith
Gasoline Alley by Frank King
Harold Teen by Carl Ed
Winnie Winkle by M. M. Branner
Moon Mullins by Frank Willard
Smitty by Walter Berndt
Little Orphan Annie by Harold Gray

COMICS IN COLORS
3 Chicago Tribune Comics offered in an 8-page color comic section either tabloid or full size.

THE GUMPS
By Sidney Smith

GASOLINE ALLEY
By Frank King

HAROLD TEEN
By Carl Ed

WINNIE WINKLE
By Branner

SMITTY
By Berndt

THE PIXEYS
Two color comic by William Donahey

MOON MULLINS
By Willard

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE
Daily Strip and Sunday Page
By Harold Gray

GOOP ETIQUETTE
By Gelett Burgess

W. E. HILL
PAGE OF COMICS
in Gravure or Black and White

HEROES OF THE WEEK
Half Page by Sals Bostwick

CARTOONS
John T. McCutcheon—Carey Orr—Gaar Williams

H. L. MENCKEN
Weekly Literary Letter
Roxy Radio Column

BURNS MANTLE
Weekly New York Theatre letter

WEEKLY ILLUSTRATED CHILDREN'S STORY
Raymond Kelly

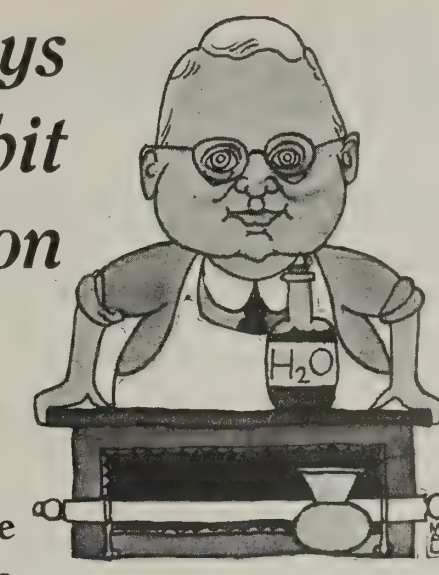
DR. EVANS
The first and best of newspaper Medical Writers

WEEKLY COMIC STRIPS
JOLLY JINGLES
By Hunter

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS
By McCullough

SENTENCE SERMONS
Roy L. Smith
Daily and Sunday

CROSS WORD PUZZLES
Daily and Sunday



DAILY TRUE LOVE STORY

Men's Fashions, Women's Fashions, Woods and Waters, Farm and Garden, Love and Beauty, Cookery, Etiquette, Home Harmonious, Line o' Type, Sports, Science and Embroidery, Club Ethics, Wake, In Motordom, Outline of Science, Character Reading, Weekly Home Page, Women's page and page of Sports.

PACIFIC & ATLANTIC
Photos
Organized by the Chicago Tribune and the New York Daily News
25 Park Place, New York

LEASED WIRE SERVICE
Foreign—National—Local Telepix

The Chicago Tribune always has an interesting exhibit at the publishers' convention

PUBLISHERS will find a pleasant welcome and an interesting exhibit at The Chicago Tribune headquarters at the A. N. P. A. convention. We shall be, as usual, in the old Waldorf bar, of fond memory, and Arthur Crawford, as master of ceremonies, will lend his genial presence to the scene.

There will be some new movies made expressly for this convention—news pictures of some of the big events covered by The Chicago Tribune during the past year—the tragedy of Sand Cave; the Notre Dame-Stanford football game; the world flyers; the dog team derby, and so on.

Another new film shows The Tribune timberlands when the spring floods carry away the winter's cutting—dynamiting jams; shooting the falls; perilous river work. It is a Fox film and probably the most realistic ever taken of timberland activities.

And one of the new advances in journalism—the reproduction of pictures by wire—will be explained with Telepix receiving and sending machines operating as part of our exhibit. This process, invented and developed by The Chicago Tribune, has never before been publicly shown.

An unusual display of poster art work shows how The Chicago Tribune advertises its features to build circulation.

Seventeen cities are now linked in the coast-to-coast chain of telegraph wires carrying Telepix. Almost every newspaper that Mr. Crawford of The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate has offered it to has decided it could not afford to be without Tele-Pix service.

A point about Chicago Tribune features to consider: They are tried out in the Chicago Tribune and The News of New York—no experimenting on others. The News has built up the largest daily circulation in America and The Tribune has the largest morning circulation in America except for The News. Both have Sunday circulations of more than a million, and only one thing in common—Chicago Tribune features.

Buy . . Leadership!

The CHICAGO TRIBUNE
Newspapers Syndicate
Tribune Square . . . . . Chicago

THE NEW YORK EVENING JOURNA

By Arth

This is written for business men whose short cut to success consists in reaching and interesting the greatest number of people in the shortest possible time.

The average daily net paid circulation of the Evening Journal in the past six months, as reported to the United States authorities and sworn to by James C. Dayton, publisher of the Evening Journal, was 649,072.

And that is equal to DOUBLE THE CIRCULATION OF ANY OTHER EVENING NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN NEW YORK CITY.

The reading family of the Evening Journal, taken home by the buyer, amounts to at least 2,000,000.

Of the Evening Journal's net paid average daily circulation of 649,072 more than 600,000 copies are concentrated in New York City's shopping area.

Out of 100 New Yorkers, buying any evening newspaper, 45 buy an EVENING JOURNAL.

And that 45 per cent of the total sales of all evening newspapers in New York contains no duplicate circulation.

A Paper Taken Home

The Evening Journal sells at three cents a copy. And while it sells more than twice as many copies as any competitor, you will look in vain for an Evening Journal left in street cars, subways or elevated railroads. It is carried home.

But you will find in street cars plenty of other newspapers, picked up to read a stock exchange quotation, or for some other special purpose, then dropped on the seat. It is easy enough to verify this statement.

The number of Evening Journals sold in New York City exceeds that of the next two evening papers combined, with a great deal of circulation to spare.

There are more Evening Journals sold in the suburbs within fifty miles of New York than ALL of the other evening newspapers in New York combined.

What is true in the immediate suburbs is true of the prosperous Westchester section. In towns receiving 25 or more copies daily the Evening Journal outsells all the New York evening and morning newspapers.

The Evening Journal has double the circulation of any New York evening newspaper to-day. It had double the circulation of any competitor ten years ago, twenty years ago, and twenty-five years ago.

It proposes to KEEP the lead and to do it by hard work and as much expenditure of money as may be necessary, regardless of cost.

Proof of the Pudding

Bearing in mind the old adage that the proof of the pudding is in the eating, the business man to whom this copy of the Evening Journal is especially sent is requested to look through the pages of this newspaper.

Its advertising columns constitute the greatest market in all New York, or anywhere in the United States.

It is the greatest selling agency, because its family of readers spend more money in a week than any other reading group in the country.

To-day's Evening Journal contains over 445 columns of paid advertising, published by more than 200 individual merchants, manufacturers and other business houses.

Of the advertisers in this issue about 150 are local retail stores.

For to-day's Evening Journal 650,000 men and women will pay $19,500, at 3 cents a copy. Its buyers take the Evening Journal home to their families, to be read by more than 2,000,000 men, women and children.

This newspaper, in addition to providing the news of the day and the features that interest, provides also THE GREAT SHOP GUIDE OF THE CITY.

Advertisements in to-day's Evening Journal include more th different announcements, offering clothing for men and boys; than 50 stores advertise women's and girls' clothing for Easte more than 25 different merchants advertise shoes for men, wome children.

The Evening Journal is Greater New York's shopping, b and SELLING encyclopedia.

A daily newspaper covering the greatest city in the world, New York Evening Journal covers Greater New York, is a sa time and money that helps to make possible the gigantic and commercial successes of this age.

If instead of publishing a full page advertisement in to Evening Journal the merchant undertook to mail it to 650,0 dresses, it would cost him $13,000 for postage stamps alone, in tion to the cost of white paper, printing, addressing and mailing. white paper is EXPENSIVE.

The paper on which this one day's edition of the Evening J is published weighs 561,800 pounds and cost $22,472. Printin day's edition necessitates the making of 547 full-page mats and heavy metal plates.

Money Counts

With a newspaper, as with war, money is a secondary thin highly important. IT COUNTS.

For instance, the ink that prints the Evening Journal costs 000 a year. The editorial payroll amounts to $1,250,000. Th chanical payroll, all union men, exceeds $2,000,000 a year. printers alone in the Evening Journal Chapel earned $766,00 year. The salaries of the men in the press room amounted to $7 The circulation department cost more than $2,000,000 a year. the business office more than $800,000.

This money is spent because the Evening Journal is deter to remain where it has been for 25 years, more than 100 per cent of any other evening newspaper, and to go farther ahead, rega of competition.

Let business men, if they can, learn what other evening papers in New York spend in the effort to give service to the bu men whose advertisements they accept and publish.

SERVICE COUNTS. The Evening Journal, with a circu double that of any New York evening competitor, and much th est daily circulation of any evening newspaper in the United S doesn't spare money or effort in rendering service.

A Loyal Newspaper

However, in newspaper work, as in war, while money portant, it occupies a decidedly second place. The Evening J leads in the evening newspaper field in the United States overw ingly, not merely because it spends all the money that it can pro spend for the benefit of its readers and its advertisers, but because it represents its readers loyally, constantly and sively.

This newspaper is edited and published for the benefit hundreds of thousands that BUY it and of the millions that RE

Hundreds of thousands of young men and women have up in and around Greater New York, knowing and reading the ning Journal from early childhood. They know, of their own k edge, and from their fathers and mothers, that this newspa POWERFUL AND SUCCESSFUL because it is loyal.

SOME FACTS FOR BUSINESS MEN

risbane

Power for Good

When such a man as R. W. DeForest, then head of the Tenement rtment, years ago, wrote to the editor of the Evening Journal for eration in law-making, he knew that he would get it, and knew he would thus secure the strongest backing in this city.

When friends of good government, watching at Albany, wrote sting against bad legislation, and when this newspaper exposed enounced it, they knew that the most powerful force for good nment in the world's greatest city had been enlisted on their side.

he Evening Journal has led and outstripped all competition for than a quarter of a century because it has worked sincerely for aders, ALWAYS, and for those that would like to exploit those s, NEVER.

HAVE It, Then TELL It

he problem of the business man is, first, to have what the people T, and, second, to let them KNOW that he has it. Any business who has what the people want can let the people of this city know it through the Evening Journal.

When Mr. Isidor Straus and his brother, Nathan, owned and man- the old and powerful firm of R. H. Macy & Co., before Isidor died and Nathan Straus retired from the firm, now owned and ed by the three sons of Isidor Straus, Nathan Straus, who had dispute with some other newspapers, said to this writer, "I n't want you to tell anybody, but if I have the Evening Journal O OTHER NEWSPAPER in New York City, I can do all the ss I want to do. The Evening Journal is ENOUGH."

hat happened some time ago, and there is probably no objection ealing the secret now.

When the panic of 1907 came, Nathan Straus said, "Don't let the bother you. You will see in your paper now the best advertis- siness you ever saw."

When he was asked why that should be, he replied, "We are go- have hard times. In hard times advertisers will stop their non- stop giving advertising here and there as a favor to little papers on't amount to anything.. They will need business, need to sell all the goods bought last Spring, and they will GO TO THE ING JOURNAL TO DO IT."

hey did go to the Evening Journal, and the year of the panic was ggest year the Evening Journal ever knew. The Evening l, panic or no panic, had power to sell goods.

Home Circulation

If in the Evening Journal you tell about the right goods, in the way, and offer the goods at the right prices, you can leave the Evening Journal readers.

One day Paul Block, who owns several newspapers out of New and once owned the Evening Mail, was talking with Bernard F. l, of Gimbel Brothers' big store. Bernard Gimbel pointed out a rowd of shoppers, as many as the space could hold, crowding certain counters. "The greatest shopping crowd I ever saw," lock.

"There is just one way to do that," said Gimbel to Block, "and to advertise in the Evening Journal. The goods we are selling crowd were advertised in the Evening Journal, and in NO R New York newspaper, morning or evening."

Business men like "home circulation." Brooklyn is the City of Let them ask Brooklyn merchants, Abraham & Straus, who, ar, purchased 932,000 lines of space in The Journal, or Freder- ser & Co., who, last year, purchased 585,000 lines of Evening advertising, or any great Brooklyn firm that takes pages at a time in the Brooklyn Edition of the Evening Journal, spending with the Evening Journal more of their advertising appropriation than with all other New York evening newspapers combined.

The Evening Journal has, in Brooklyn territory, more circulation than all the Brooklyn papers combined. Ask Major Namm, one of the young Brooklyn merchants. He told this story to the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce advertising department. He had doubled his business in a short time and attributed it largely to advertising. He advertised 500,000 lines a year in the Evening Journal. He increased his advertising lineage to 1,000,000 lines, at a total increased cost of ½ per cent of his gross. The cost of his overhead was reduced, so that the additional 500,000 lines of advertising in the Evening Journal cost him less than nothing. Last year Major Namm's firm purchased 1,263,000 lines of Evening Journal advertising.

Many newspaper men know little or nothing about business, and many very able business men know little, comparatively, about newspapers, or their real business value.

Many of them fail to realize, when they advertise, that what they want to reach is PEOPLE, and as MANY of them as possible.

The Encyclopedia Britannica carried on an advertising campaign NOT using the Evening Journal. Some foolish idea was back of THAT. Then better judgment came and the owners of the British Encyclopedia advertised in this newspaper. Later, they stated that they sold, through the Evening Journal, more copies of the encyclopedia at from $150 to $250 a set than they had sold through their advertising in the New York Times and the Chicago Evening News.

If business men knew what publishers of other newspapers know they would understand why the Evening Journal produces the results that it does produce.

The former publisher of the Globe, Mr. Samuel Strauss, a very able man, said to this writer, while the Globe was still alive, before its gentle chloroforming by Frank Munsey: "You don't know what it is to go around asking for advertising with the Evening Journal as competitor. The advertiser asks, 'Have you got as much circulation as the Evening Journal?' Then he asks, 'Have you got half as much circulation, or quarter as much circulation?' and when you have to answer no, it doesn't make the getting of business very easy."

The number of men and women that actually buy the Evening Journal in New York's shopping district exceeds the total population of entire States, such as Utah, Idaho, Arizona, New Hampshire, Vermont or Rhode Island.

If the business man could see a crowd of Evening Journal buyers numbering 650,000, if he could conceive the crowd of two million readers back of those that actually PURCHASE the newspaper, it would not be necessary to write this article.

The writer has not a penny's worth of financial interest in the earnings or in the profits of the New York Evening Journal or of any other newspaper. But he has great interest in the success and public usefulness of the Evening Journal, managed by him, as editor, for more than twenty-five years.

It is written for the enlightenment of business men, to whose energy and advertising newspaper workers owe their prosperity, rather than for the purpose of adding to Evening Journal advertising.

A glance through this newspaper will show a prosperous condition.

The 445 columns of advertising published in to-day's Evening Journal,* including the Manhattan, Bronx and Brooklyn sections, exceed by far the amount of advertising ever carried by any evening newspaper in New York, and to-day's advertising represents a cash expenditure by business men who realize the Evening Journal's value at least twice as great as was ever made in any other evening newspaper in the history of New York City journalism.

Mr. Brisbane refers to the Evening Journal of April 3rd, 1925, when it published a larger volume of display advertising than ever before appeared in any New York Evening newspaper.*

BULLARD

AT LAST! THE FIRST NARRATIVE

BY AN

AMERICAN ARMY COMMANDER IN FRANCE

General Robert Lee Bullard

Who commanded the famous First Division, then the Third Corps, and finally led the 2nd Army of the United States.

The most stirring and the most important book written since the War—not to be issued in book form until next Fall

AMERICA'S part in the war must continue to be the "biggest story" of the century. But the record has been incomplete until now.

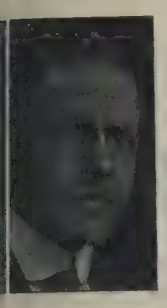
AT last, for the first time it is frankly told by an Army Commander of our line. General Bullard was one of the two Lieutenant Generals under Pershing. He has spent the past six years on what he calls his "memories" of the vital period in which unprepared America developed its vast forces to help end the war.

A ROMANCE of true history is General Bullard's narrative; a human story from a human diary, not a mere record; a prose epic of the doughboys and their leaders—the first graphic picture penned by an American general who saw the whole drama from behind the scenes.

AS a newspaper serial the memoirs are ready for early release, months in advance of book publication. It is intended to divide the story into Sunday and daily instalments continuing about one month.

D. P. SYNDICATE

Garden City, N. Y.



POSTSCRIPT:

At the time of this announcement, General Bullard's memoirs have been offered to newspapers in three cities. The serial rights have been taken by the New York Herald-Tribune, Chicago Tribune and Philadelphia Bulletin.

R. WILLIAMS JOINS OLIVER NEWSPAPERS

ner Pittsburgh Press Business Man-ger Now with Executive Staff of azette Times and Chronicle elegraph—22 Years with Press

R. Williams, until recently business ager of the Pittsburgh Press, has ac-d a position on the executive staff of the George S. Oliver newspapers, the Gazette Times and the Chronicle Telegraph, of Pittsburgh.

. R. WILLIAMS

Mr. Williams was associated for more than 22 years with Colonel O. S. Hershman, former owner of the Pittsburgh Press. He came to the Press in 1902 upon being uated from college, served as a re-er for three years, becoming city r in 1906, and being promoted to aging editor in 1908, which position emained in until 1915 when he was s business manager.

uring the World War he served on e American Newspaper Publishers' er Committee, of which Victor Law-publisher of the Chicago Daily ews was chairman. He also served as e onal Director of Pennsylvania under epulp and paper division of the War dstries board during the war.

Ir. Williams became a director of rrican Newspaper Publishers' Asso-on in 1918, was elected president of association in 1920 and was re-ed in 1921. Since 1922 he has been mber of the board of directors.

the annual convention of the Audit reau of Circulations in Chicago last Mr. Williams was elected a member ie Advisory Committee of the News-r Division, and has been energetic in avoring to have the aims and pur-s of the A. B. C. better understood in trying to promote harmony be-n the A. B. C. and its newspaper bers.

Ir. Williams organized and became ehead of the Department of Journal-m in the University of Pittsburgh in and lectured in this department until when he was obliged to discontinue use he could no longer find time for work. He was instrumental in form-g the Tri-State News Bureau, the newsgathering organization of tern Pennsylvania, West Virginia Ohio. He also was active in form-and enlarging the scope of the Pitts-h Newspaper Publishers' Associa-of which he served as president for ral years.

ILLINOIS EDITOR GETS 1,500 PAPERS TO THE GALLON

BYRON ELKINS, editor and publisher of the West Frankfort (Ill.) American, literally has ground out his daily edition for several days at the rate of "30 miles an hour," when his motive power failed him. Unable to make an emergency shift, he backed his automobile into the shop, jacked up its hind wheels, attached a belt to the press and "gave 'er the gas." He claimed that he printed 1,500 papers to a gallon. Neighboring editors from the community, who heard about the experiment, rushed over to cheer him on and witness the feat.

The Gazette Times and the Chronicle Telegraph are two of the oldest and best established newspapers in Pennsylvania. In joining the executive staff of these newspapers Mr. Williams not only takes with him a wealth of journalistic experience but the good wishes of a host of friends in Pittsburgh and throughout the country.

Mr. Williams is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the national honorary scholastic fraternity, received from Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.; also a member of Sigma Delta Chi, the national honorary journalistic fraternity. He is also a member of the Pittsburgh Athletic Club, Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, Union Club, and Pittsburgh Press Club.

Mr. Williams has just returned from an extended vacation spent in Bermuda.

Another Daily to Broadcast

The Pasadena (Cal.) Star-News will join the list of newspapers operating radio broadcasting stations early next summer when it occupies its new four-story building now nearing completion. A 1,000-watt station, to be known as KPSN, and operating on a 315.6 wave length, will be a part of the equipment of the new building and will be housed on the roof of the structure. Steel towers, rising 125 feet above the roof, will support the radio antennae. The Pasadena Chamber of Commerce took up the question of establishing a broadcasting station and appointed a committee to consider the problem. They conferred with Charles H. Prisk, editor of the Star-News, who agreed to take the full responsibility for erecting and maintaining the station.

Airplane Delivery to Scotland

The Belfast (Ulster) Telegraph is now using an airplane to deliver newspapers to Scotland. Papers printed at 5 p. m. are on sale in Scottish towns at 6, according to a recent announcement in the Telegraph.

WOOD DRY MATS

We are pleased to announce:

THAT twelve years of all-American manufacture of WOOD DRY MATS have resulted in more than 400 exclusive newspaper users.

THAT this growth has brought the selling price of the regular Wood Mat down to 12 cents each.

THAT we now have perfected the WOOD METROPOLITAN MAT, which is capable of handling the work of the largest newspaper plants in the world.

THAT since February 9th the Philadelphia Bulletin has used the Metropolitan Mat on every page—its steam tables are cold.

THAT it would be well worth your while to visit the splendid plant of the Bulletin and see the Metropolitan Mat at work. Its use means thousands of dollars saved.

WOOD FLONG CORPORATION

501 FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY

irectory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

NOW READY FOR YOUR TEST
"he Brains of the Family," by E. J. Rath rse for Authors, 33 West 42d St., New York

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.,
2044 Margaret St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Fashions

WEEKLY STYLE PHOTO SERVICE.
0 latest fashions and captions weekly.
than 100 papers use it. Write for low rate.
Service Syndicate, 353 5th Ave., N. Y.

Radio

FOR LARGE AND SMALL PAPERS
A non-technical, weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D. C.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely
The Ellis Service. Swarthmore, Pa.

By Special Permission of the Respective Managements

VISITING PUBLISHERS are CORDIALLY INVITED to Inspect

SCOTT "Straight-Unit" PRESSES

in Operation in the Pressroom of

NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

also the

New SCOTT Color Press

in Operation in Color Pressroom of

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Our representatives at the Waldorf-Astoria or at our New York Office will be pleased to make appointments to show these machines in operation.

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

THE NEW PLANT

of the

New York Evening Post

will be equipped with

SCOTT "Straight-Unit" PRESSES

WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY

Main Office and Factory: Plainfield, N. J., U. S. A.
New York Office: Brokaw Building, 1457 Broadway
Chicago Office: Monadnock Block

ESTIMATING PARADES IS GOOD TEST OF REPORTER'S ACCURACY

Absurd Errors as to Number of Marchers Often Made, Adrian Publisher Says—Gives Rules for Estimating Size of Formations

By STUART H. PERRY

Editor Adrian (Mich.) Telegram

PERHAPS there is no variety of reporting in which errors are more easily made than in stating the size of parades. Only when the estimating is done with great care, through accurate counting and time-taking by a number of observers, can a newspaper approximate a correct statement in the case of large parades.

Such painstaking efforts are sometimes prompted by the fact that the demonstration is an object of special scrutiny by the public, or a part of the public, so that an exact statement of the numbers becomes important. On the other hand, when the attitude of the public is uniformly cordial toward the paraders, and no special importance attaches to the number participating, arithmetical calculation is apt to give place to rough estimates which usually err on the side of liberality.

When it comes to the loose statements made by members of organizations and their sympathizers, the exaggeration is often great and sometimes grotesque. For example, in the case of a demonstration by an organization in Michigan last fall, a sympathetic onlooker in a published statement declared that 70,000 marched in the parade which moving 4 and 6 abreast took 3½ hours to pass. That is about as credible and consistent as saying that 200 men were seated in a room 10 feet square. If his estimate had been only one-fourth as large, it still would have had to be heavily discounted, as will later be explained and illustrated. As a matter of fact, that particular parade consisted of about 7,000 marchers, according to independent observations made by reliable local news writers.

Owing to the great diversity of parades as regards formation, composition and speed of movement, it is impossible to formulate a rule whereby an observer could make an exact estimate in every case that might arise. It is easy, however, to arrive at figures which may safely be accepted as maximum limits for parades of certain types.

As a starting point, and for a unit of comparison, let us note the fact that when infantry is moving in column of squads (four abreast) 175 men will pass a given point in one minute, or 10,500 in an hour. This assumes the soldiers to be marching in quick time—30 inch steps 120 a minute, 6,000 yards or about 3½ miles an hour. The depth of a man is assumed to be 12 inches and the rear-rank man covers his file leader at 40 inches depth.

This is a theoretical maximum, which is not usually attained in practice even in military parades. Thus the militia parade at Boston just before the war, in which 14,000 took part, moved at the rate of about 8,400 an hour, and the annual police parade in Boston, of 1,400 in column of platoons, passes at the rate of 8,400 an hour. The Police Department of Boston estimates that a strictly military parade, practically all on foot, can march at from 9,000 to 10,000 an hour; a semi-military body that has had some training at 8,000 an hour.

The Chicago police figure that trained troops in large commands cover only from 2 to 2½ miles an hour instead of the theoretical 3½. The American Legion parade in St. Paul last September passed at the rate of only 9,000 an hour, though marching 16 abreast. The Knights Templar in New Orleans, a disciplined body of 12,000 men, marching 6 abreast in compact formation with only 12 automobiles and about 50 horses, and no halts, moved at the rate of 5,500 per hour.

In civilian parades where the marchers have had little or no training, the rate of passage is less. In Boston, for example, the Elks' parade in July, 1924, consisting of 20,000 mostly marching in column of fours and taking the whole street, passed at the rate of 5,700 an hour. In the same city parades on the 17th of June and the 17th of March, numbering from 8,000 to 10,000 and made up of various organizations, pass at the rate of from 5,000 to 6,500. In mixed parades with floats or similar features, the Boston police figure that the rate seldom exceeds 5,000.

The Philadelphia police allow an average of 5,000 an hour for a civilian parade moving 16 abreast, the street being cleared of other traffic but the parade being halted 3 minutes every 15 minutes to accommodate cross traffic. In San Francisco the estimate is 9,000 to 10,000 moving in platoons of 12 in close order at a cadence of 100 to 120 steps per minute—equivalent to not more than 5,000 in column of fours.

Parades in loose formation, and including many floats, mounted men, etc., make still slower time. Thus the Memorial Day parades in Chicago do not average more than 3,300 an hour, and the Grand Army parade in Boston August 12, 1924, including 2,000 men on foot and 6,000 men in 1,100 automobiles, averaged only 3,200.

One other class of parades remains to be considered, those in which very large numbers are known to have taken part. Typical of these was the Labor Liberty Loan parade in Chicago, consisting of 153,000 marchers in mass formation, 16 files front, with 40 inches depth between ranks and only 6 paces between units. This parade passed in 4½ hours, or at the rate of 34,000 an hour. This rate of passage is consistent with the figures in the other cases cited, as it is equivalent to about 8,500 an hour if the parade had moved in column of squads.

The Preparedness Day parade in Chicago, numbering about 132,000, required about ten hours to pass a given point, or at the rate of about 13,200 an hour. In this case the formation was less compact, with the military in regular formation and 30 paces between civilian units.

At the Holy Name parade in Washington Sept. 21, 1924, it is estimated by the police that 75,000 took part. It passed in 5 hours, or at the rate of 15,000 an hour. It moved, however, in mass formation, in companies of 22 front, with military aides keeping the units constantly closed up. The chief of police of Washington estimates that had the units moved at the regular marching distance, the time of passage would have been at least 8 hours, or 9,375 an hour. In 1922 a similar parade by the same organization numbering about 30,000, moving in formation of 16 front with regular military intervals between units, passed in 4 hours, or at the rate of 7,500 an hour.

For the practical newspaper man the following conclusions may be deduced from the data above presented:

1. An ordinary civilian parade moving in column of fours will not pass at a rate much in excess of 5,000 an hour, or, say, 85 a minute. If there are floats, mounted men or marching women, the rate will be less.

2. In the greatest parades, with the most compact possible formation, the highest rate of passage per file seems to be about 2,125 an hour, equivalent to only 8,500 an hour for a column of four files; and even this record was attained in only one parade to the writer's knowledge.

3. High rates of passage can be attained only in mass formation with a very broad front, in great cities where streets are both broad and long, with expert management and perfect police co-operation. Great length of streets is necessary both to organize and to disband a very large parade.

4. In the smaller and medium-sized cities, the difficulties of handling a parade increase so greatly as to put an early and definite limit on its practicable size. For example (on the basis of the American Legion parade in St. Paul), a parade of only 15,000 marchers, even if moving 8 abreast, would make a column 7.6 miles long and would take 3 hours and 30 minutes to pass. Obviously, it would be a difficult matter to organize and handle such a parade in a city of 25,000 or 50,000 population.

5. Estimates made by casual observers, without any attempt at counting or methodical calculation, are of little value.

For the data here presented the writer is indebted in large measure to the heads of police departments in the cities referred to.

MORE VANDERBILT CHANGES

Maj. Birdsall, in Charge of Mechanical Departments, and Others Resign

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

MIAMI, Fla., April 16.—Maj. Alfred H. Birdsall, assistant to the publisher in charge of the mechanical departments of Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., has resigned, according to an announcement made here today by Ben Mellon, general manager. Maj. Birdsall was one of the oldest executives of the Vanderbilt organization in point of service.

A number of resignations from the Miami Illustrated Daily Tab were announced at the same time, including C. D. Rhodes, art director; Gus Thornrose, chief photographer; Lawrence Holmes, picture editor; Jean Holmes, special writer, and M. K. Kanaga, composing room foreman. A number of other changes were made in the staff of the Tab but no additional names were given out. The only appointment given out was of that of Charles Suydam, as chief photographer.

The Tab is vacating its auxiliary building at 57 S. W. First street and all departments are being consolidated in the main plant at 70 West Flagler street, the former home of Miami Daily News, which is being entirely rearranged.

Lester Adams succeeds Mort Donoghue, resigned, as managing editor of the San Francisco Illustrated Daily Herald, a Vanderbilt newspaper, according to an announcement made there. Donoghue has been in editorial charge of the Herald for six months. Adams has been news editor in recent months.

After a four-day visit in New Orleans this week Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., accompanied by John W. Brodix, a director in the Vanderbilt Newspapers, Inc., left for Washington where they will be joined by Ben Mellon, general manager of the Vanderbilt newspapers.

Colley Forming New Ad Clubs

Reginald Colley, associate director of the educational department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, left this week on a tour through the middle west and southwest, for the purpose of organizing new advertising clubs. His trip will end at Houston for the annual convention next month. He plans to visit Pittsburgh, Portsmouth, O., Terre Haute, Ind., St. Louis and Kansas City, among other places.

In Cincinnati National Display Advertisers are Concentrating in the Times-Star

For years practically every national advertiser using display space in more than one Cincinnati newspaper has had the Times-Star on the schedule. But with the past twenty-four months an increasing number of national advertisers have come to use the Times-Star exclusively in this field.

Some of these, of course, are new advertisers. But many have been in the Cincinnati newspapers for years—some in all four publications. With the more careful checking of circulations both with reference to what it is and to where it is they discovered that, so far as the Cincinnati market is concerned, the Times-Star alone gives complete coverage.

Undoubtedly the reactions of Cincinnati distributors and retailers are largely responsible for the concentration of Cincinnati advertising in the newspaper of concentrated Cincinnati influence.

But whatever the reason or reasons may be, the fact is there. National advertisers in increasing numbers, regardless of their industrial classifications, have discovered what local advertisers have demonstrated for the past eighteen consecutive years,—that the Times-Star is the buyers' guide to the Cincinnati market.

And what a market it is! Nearly three-quarters of a million of the most truly American people in America! Native, white, well educated, well-to-do people whose average standard of living is high and not subject to the fluctuations necessarily characteristic of communities of less diversified industrial activity.

Write for detailed market information applicable to your proposition.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

THE SKY-LINE THAT FORTY YEARS HAVE LENGTHENED

AS A TANGIBLE measure of the steadily growing popularity of Goss Presses, we point to the steadily lengthening "sky-line" of the Goss plant. Also to the expansion of this plant in width, height and equipment which has taken place with clock-like regularity in the two score years we have been privileged to serve progressive publishers.

Below is pictured the interior of our latest addition, a structure nearly five hundred feet long. The many gigantic tools you observe in operation, are, after all, but a small fraction of the modern facilities housed throughout the entire plant to enable master workmen to produce the master presses of the age—Goss Presses.

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

The Goss Printing Press Company of England, Ltd. - London

GOSS

STRAIGHT — GOSS HIGH SPEED — LINE

FREEDOM OF SPEECH AT STAKE IN TAX CASES

Sen. James A. Reed and Newton D. Baker Declare Freedom of Press Is the Right to Print What One May Lawfully Say In Arguing Income Tax Cases Before U. S. Supreme Court

By J. BART CAMPBELL

Washington Correspondent, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

"THE income tax publicity cases go much further than the freedom of the press. They involve also that freedom of speech and right of assembly for which our forefathers rebelled against the British government."

NEWTON D. BAKER

U. S. Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, made this statement to EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week.

As one of counsel for Walter S. Dickey, owner and editor, and Ralph Ellis, managing and supervising editor, respectively, of the Kansas City Post, Senator Reed filed a 93-page brief in the United States Supreme Court Monday in oposition to the Government's appeal from the decision of the lower court upholding the right of that newspaper to publish income tax returns.

Former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, as counsel for the Baltimore Post, also filed a brief Monday attacking the Government's position as stated by James M. Beck, Solicitor General, in a brief filed the previous week.

Senator Reed declared the argument advanced by Mr. Beck, in behalf of the Department of Justice, if permitted to stand, would "shake the very foundations of American liberty and freedom."

Mr. Baker directed the attention of the court to this conclusion:

"There is no sound measure of the extent of the rights of a free press except the right of free speech by a free people. On both principle and authority, citizens of the United States may speak and print with equal freedom whatever they desire to say, and may not be punished in either case, upon like canons of judgment, for an abuse of the privilege. The very suggestion that there is a distinction between freedom of speech and the freedom of the press implies a lack of freedom in one or the other."

In the brief filed in behalf of the Kansas City Post, Senator Reed, in conjunction with Maurice H. Winger and David M. Proctor, set forth, under the caption, "Liberty of the Press," this contention:

"The language of the First Amendment is, 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press . . .'

"The Government states: 'This provision clearly refers to the law prior to the adoption of the constitution and intends to fix the liberty of the press by that law. What such liberty was at the time of the adoption of the constitution, that it shall continue to be, no more, no less.'

"The authority quoted for the rule is the report of the House of Representatives on the Alien and Sedition Law. We confess to a little surprise that the opinion of the sponsors for that infamous law which the authorities never dared but once to enforce and which the people of the United States indignantly and instantly repudiated, should be quoted as an authority on constitutional liberty.

"The Government proceeds: 'Under the common law the freedom of speech and of the press was strictly circumscribed. To publish a book or paper without the consent of censors was a crime.'

"Again the Government quotes with approval: 'Freedom of speech or of the press is the right to publish what one chooses, so long as one does not violate a law.'

"And again, 'There is no authority for the conclusion that the First Amendment restricts the powers of Congress to declare criminal and provide punishment for the publication of matters which interfere with the exercise of any of its constitutional powers.'

"Boiled down then, the contention of the Government is that as to liberty of speech and of the press, we gained nothing by the Revolution, or by the enactment of the First Amendment. We stand as to those matters exactly where the British subjects of George III stood on the 4th day of July, 1776. If that contention be true, then the Revolution was a failure and the adoption of the Constitution was a solemn farce.

"We dissent entirely from that view. We submit:

"(1) That all powers not granted to the Federal Government were reserved to the States and the peoples thereof;

"(2) That the First Amendment is not a grant of power but is the negation of power."

Senator Reed told EDITOR & PUBLISHER that, in his judgment, if the Government's construction of the constitutional limitations of the "liberty of speech and of the press" were sustained, a "vital blow would be struck at the basic principles of freedom for which our forefathers fought."

Aside from the importance of this phase of the situation, Senator Reed directed attention to what he termed the "most important fact" that, as set forth in his brief in bold-face type, "if publication in a newspaper of any part of the lists be a crime, then publication by word of mouth is equally a crime."

The brief also stated:

"Publication may as well be by word of mouth, or by letter, or by telegram, as by newspaper. If the Government's contention then be correct, everybody in the world can go to the collector's office and look at the list showing the income tax of everybody else. But, if any one of them mentions the amount of tax John Doe has paid, or even the fact that John Doe is a taxpayer, the person so guilty of talking can be sent to jail. Or, if a man were to write a letter mentioning that John Doe paid an income tax, even though the amount were not stated, he would likewise be liable to be sent to jail.

"The lists might be exposed in the postoffices, as indeed they were, and become the subject of neighborhood gossip. Yet, every man who dared to disclose any fact contained in the lists would be a law breaker. Thus, liberty of speech as well as of the press would be denied, and the very purpose which animated Congress in making the lists public would be denied.

"It is claimed that the publication of the lists interferes with the Government in the collection of its taxes.

"The answer is that the tax has been collected before the lists are made. The transaction is closed.

"The argument that the printing in a newspaper of the fact that John Doe is a taxpayer, and the amount of the tax he has paid, will interfere with the collection of his future taxes, seems to us utterly chimerical.

"It presumes that the taxpayer of one year will be the taxpayer of the next—that he will be frightened by the newspaper publication; that he will therefore be willing to falsify his future return; that the Government will not detect his falsehood and bring him to book—all these various presumptions, piled one on top of the other, are to be indulged, because a newspaper has printed that which the Government has already published and opened to the inspection of the world.

"This patent absurdity the Government must justify, or its case falls."

Senator Reed also emphasized the point that publication of lists of taxes paid does not mean publication of tax returns, necessarily, nor the throwing open to the public gaze of the private business or financial affairs of individuals, singly or collectively.

The Senator's brief stated:

"The Government vigorously argues that the names and addresses of the taxpayers and the amount of tax paid, as shown upon the published lists, 'must be taken from the returns' and 'are part of the return,' and hence, that their publication is prohibited by Section 3167.

"It is true that when the taxpayer makes a return, if correctly filled out, it necessarily contains his name and address. And it would be quite natural for the Commissioner (of Internal Revenue) in making up the lists to go to the returns for the lists of names. But, if he did not go elsewhere, his list of those who actually paid taxes would be far from accurate: First, because many persons who make return may never pay any taxes; second, because many persons are compelled to pay taxes who have never made a return . . .

"Bear in mind that the law does not require that the lists shall contain the name of the taxpayer and the amount of the taxes he admits he should thereafter pay, but requires that the lists shall show the amount of taxes actually paid."

One argument advanced by Mr. Baker in the brief of the Baltimore Post is that the "freedom of the press guaranteed by the First Amendment to the Constitution consists of the right of the press freely to print whatever any one may lawfully say to every one." undertaking wherein men have given of themselves so freely, regardless of corresponding compensation. Mr. Stone has often truly said that there is nothing in business life to compare with the esprit de corps of the body of membership and staff of Associated Press. Serving Associated Press is not without its satisfactions. Self-respect is an underlying element in the administration of our affairs and is an enviable working condition. To write for Associated Press is to know that the truth, and that only, is wanted. An Associated Press man knows that he is not expected to search waste baskets for his reports. He knows that disgraceful conduct by him would be a disgraceful reflection upon the whole membership. The broad view, the right way, the decent course, the fair method, chart his path. The Associated Press could not be great were these principles to be relaxed or any compromise made with its established code of honor, and men respond with the finest talents to this idealism. Violations of the rules of honor are here regarded as treachery.

Frank B. Noyes Interview 25 Years President of A. P.

(Concluded from page 7)

"What can a man possibly say in recognition of that sort of service by those who have contributed to Associated Press during my term of 25 years as its President?

"I have known many men during their terms of service as members of the Board of Directors of this association. They have come from every section of this country, young men and old, of varying degrees of talent, arrived at the honorable post in journalism through strangely contrasting vicissitudes, but one element has characterized them all, without exception: As members of the controlling administration of this organization they have been actuated by the finest ideals in journalism, the rights and the duties of the membership as a whole have been paramount to any single interest, the purity of the service has been of infinitely greater importance than any object however urgent it might be to an individual. Personal preferences, prejudices, politics, religion, outside affiliations and loyalties have all been left at the door of the board room. And these men have come to the Board by the democratic process of election by members. To us all the Associated Press has been a cause based on principled objectives. Personal considerations are subordinate.

"Who can measure the degree of sacrifice that men make in such undertakings? Mr. Lawson volunteered his all at the start. The world knows what Mr. Stone has given out of his fine mind and wonderfully resilient body. I bespeak the same credit for unnumbered men who have come and gone, or still serve, working untiringly and with splendid fidelity under a blanket of complete press anonymity.

"For my own part, whatever may have been the effort and time required, I can only say that the honor of the office, together with rich indulgence of associations which have filled to overflowing the cup of happy personal experience, have a thousand times compensated."

Hazel Deyo Batchelor's New Love Problem Serial

"THIN ICE"

Treats of the Perils of a Pleasure-Loving Working Girl Alone in a Big City.

For Terms and Samples Wire

LEDGER SYNDICATE

Philadelphia, Pa.

First in the First Market

The net paid average circulation of The New York Times, daily and Sunday, reported to the Post Office Department for the six months ended March 31, 1925, was 387,934. The average daily circulation is 350,000 copies and the sale of the Sunday edition 600,000.

The average daily and Sunday sale of The New York Times, as well as the sale of the daily edition, are greater than any other New York morning newspaper of standard size and more than 100,000 copies in excess of the average daily and Sunday circulation of the New York morning newspaper usually compared with The Times as to quality of circulation.

The New York Times is strictly a newspaper for the intelligent and thoughtful.

With "All the News That's Fit to Print," without comics, without puzzles, it is unequalled in the completeness and the quality of its news. To read The New York Times is a liberal education.

In 1924 The New York Times published 26,283,924 agate lines of advertising, 2,182,698 lines more than in 1923 and an excess over the second New York newspaper of 9,425,570 lines.

In three months of 1925 The Times published 6,705,262 agate lines of advertising, 353,670 lines more than in the corresponding months of last year and an excess over the next New York newspaper of 2,624,164 lines.

	1924 Agate Lines	3 MONTHS OF 1925 Agate Lines
The New York Times	26,283,924	6,705,262
Second New York Newspaper	16,858,354	4,081,098
Third New York Newspaper	14,906,698	3,798,382
Fourth New York Newspaper	13,306,960	3,609,510

The advertising columns of The Times, safeguarded by a careful censorship, are informative, clean and trustworthy.

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

By Henry Edward Warner

TWO STORIES

The King was dead; a kingdom hung
In balance—for a moment swung
Beneath the sky, above the tide,
Beside the road where traitors ride.
Then from the throats of thousands rose
A shout; . . . now with a martial swing
The soldiers march! . . . The boulevards
Echo the cry: "Long live the King!"

"Run o' th' sheet," the Make-up said;
"Eight-column scream! . . . The King is dead!"

A child was born; . . . and who shall say
What came to Earth that fated day?
What histories dreamed in that small frame,
Another pawn in Destiny's game!
Draw close the curtains! . . . Hush the halls!
Kiss tenderly the curtained eyes
Where smiling sleeps the Mother Queen,
Where by her side a Monarch lies!

Around their flag the patriots sing:
"The King is dead! Long live the King!"

O Presses roar! . . . Come, lightning flash!
Click matrices! . . . What ho! give way!
Cry from the throne and from the crib:
"Another King is born today!"

EDITOR TELLS READERS THAT A FANCY DOG STORY WAS FAKED

W. F. MUSE, editor of the Mason City (Iowa) Daily Globe-Gazette, does not propose that the readers of his newspaper shall be imposed upon by fake news stories, even if they are of that trivial "human interest" brand that made Winsted, Conn., famous.

The following self-explanatory editorial recently appeared in the Globe Gazette:

"Not long ago there appeared in the columns of the Globe-Gazette a story about a former soldier and a dog. The dog, so the story went, had saved the soldier's life in France and the soldier back home in Michigan, showed up one day in time to keep a dog-killer from ending the dog's life.

"Here was an almost perfect story. Dog stories always are good. It had an uncommon element of human interest too with the little war touches woven into it for good measure. It was the type of news item that sometimes leads to that classic old standby: 'Truth is stranger than fiction.'

"There was one little shortcoming, however, that may somewhat detract from the item for those who have the old-fashioned idea that news ought first of all to be true. This story wasn't 'stranger than fiction,' it was fiction. An imaginative young reporter at Evanston, Ill., hatched it up and the Chicago Herald-Examiner printed it. Aside from the fact that there is a student at Northwestern university named Horace Love, who was the hero of the dog yarn, the story was entirely without foundation.

"The Globe-Gazette lists itself with that part of the reading public which holds to the opinion that the highest missiin of the journalist is to tell the truth. Upon discovering that the dog story was an outright lie, an investigation was begun by this paper to fix the blame for the falsification.

"A dozen letters to the Associated Press, Chicago; the head of the school of journalism at Northwestern university; the director of publicity at Northwestern and one or two other parties have resulted in the meager information that an unnamed irresponsible reporter of the Hearst organization concocted the story.

"Journalism has advanced conspicuously from the days of the newspapers which were used as personal organs for personal opinions. But the advance is going to be halted unless such a sin as that committed by the Evanston reporter is run down and the sinner made to pay for his transgression.

"Rank lies such as that in the Horace Love pipedream are not met up with every day. The more common fault of the modern news story is exaggeration. Many stories are based on fact but are inaccurate as to details. The reporter is prone to draw on his imagination for sobs or laughs when neither exists in fact. The reporter often atributes fire to an "unknown origin" or to "defective wiring" without making investigation. Too much is taken for granted; the imagination in many cases is working where the eyes and legs ought to be.

"The result of the whole trend can be only one thing—a diminishing degree of confidence in the newspaper. If newspaper men and women are wise they will recognize the evil of Sunday supplment half-truths, exaggerations and outright lies and rule them out. There is plenty of truth that has never yet been written. Fiction should be kept in the fiction department.

"Truth in itself must become more and more the objective of the news writer. Today the consideration is too much whether what is written will be accepted by the reader as the truth, the reporter wonders how much he can 'doctor' his story without being detected.

"One encouraging feature in connection with the Horace Love dog tale is that the repudiation has been given as much prominence as the lie itself. There isn't a complete counteraction of the evil effect, however. In the opinion of this paper, the writer of the story ought to be sought out and forever barred from practicing journalism. And there ought to be a penalty, somewhat less drastic, of course, for flights of the imagination in items which have substantial bases. The function of the newspaper is to tell of things as they actually happen; fiction is something else."

Can You Find a Better Method

for

Attracting Readers ¶ Pleasing Readers ¶ Making Them Eagerly Await Next Week's Article than

Big Names ¶ Arresting Ideas ¶ Eye Luring Illustrations?

ALL THIS YOU GET IN THE ILLUSTRATED
PRE-EMINENT ARTICLE SERVICE

Just consider the contributors:

Samuel Hopkins Adams
Gertrude Atherton
Bruce Barton
Arnold Bennett
Royal Brown
Dorothy Canfield
Lucian Cary
Richard Washburn Child
Irvin S. Cobb
Edna Ferber
F. Scott Fitzgerald
Zona Gale
W. L. George
Beatrice Grimshaw
Rupert Hughes
Inez Haynes Irwin
Will Irwin
Mary Johnston
Sophie Kerr
Fanny Heaslip Lea
Samuel Merwin
Alice Duer Miller
Mrs. Gouverneur Morris
E. Phillips Oppenheim
Mary Roberts Rinehart
Rafael Sabatini
Arthur Stringer
Booth Tarkington
Arthur Train
Louis Joseph Vance
Albert Edward Wiggam
Jesse Lynch Williams
Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

Metropolitan Newspaper Service

MAXIMILIAN ELSER, JR., General Manager

150 Nassau Street New York City

Room 146 at the Convention

The Cleveland Press has the Largest Daily Circulation in Ohio

The figures used here are from the sworn Federal statements of average daily circulation for six months, ended March 31, 1925.

During the six months ended March 31st, the average daily circulation of The Cleveland Press was —a GAIN of 5325 copies over the Federal statement issued April 1, 1924, and a GAIN of 6549 copies over the statement issued just six months ago.

201,364

165,824 of this was

City Circulation!

—a GAIN of 8,315 copies over the Federal statement of April 1, 1924; and a GAIN of 8,600 copies over the statement issued six months ago.

The Press again has the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in Ohio.

It was the only large Cleveland daily newspaper to show a gain over its previous Federal circulation statement.

Its total circulation is 37,522 MORE than that of The News, which LOST from its October statement.

It has 1,982 MORE CITY circulation ---circulation WITHIN GREATER CLEVELAND---than the News has TOTAL CIRCULATION!

Its total circulation is 10,194 greater than that of the daily Plain Dealer; which LOST 14,399 from its October statement.

Any merchant or manufacturer selling a worth-while service or product may address this great audience of Press readers with the confidence that, in so doing, he is getting the most possible out of his advertising dollar.

The Press

First in Cleveland

A Scripps-Howard Newspaper

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, Inc.,
52 Vanderbilt Ave., New York

Chicago
San Francisco

Cleveland
Cincinnati

Circulation Built On T

"It is Scripps-Howard theory that r public service organizations take on hun the foundation stone of their character a urged to visualize their papers as upstan possessing a sense of humor, a sense of p play. They are urged ever to decry cyn that a smile has an asset value even in the

Scripps-Howard Circulation G

The Pittsburgh Press
The Youngstown Telegram
The Akron Times-Press
The Birmingham Post
The Denver Express
The Baltimore Post (a tabloid)
The Indianapolis Times
The Kentucky Post
The Columbus Citizen
The Oklahoma News
The Knoxville News
The Fort Worth Press

SCRIPPS-HOWA

Represented in the national adverti
New York Chicago Cleveland Sa

Rock Of Reader Faith

ers more nearly than any other form of ibutes and characteristics. Sincerity is ling in the community. Our editors are d-blooded citizens of their communities, ion, a sense of decency and a love of fair ncourage tolerance and never to forget a fight."

—Roy W. Howard, in Collier's Weekly, January 24, 1925.

—Each Paper Shows a Gain!

The Cleveland Press
The Cincinnati Post
The San Francisco Daily News
The San Diego Sun
The Evansville Press
The Washington Daily News (a tabloid)
The Terre Haute Post
The Albuquerque State Tribune
The Toledo News-Bee
The Memphis Press
The El Paso Post
The Houston Press

NEWSPAPERS

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
Los Angeles Seattle Cincinnati

Circulation Concentrated in Houston

Net paid circulation of The Houston Press for the six month's period ending April 1, 1925, was 28,435—a gain of 1,414.

Net paid circulation for March, 1925, was—30,424

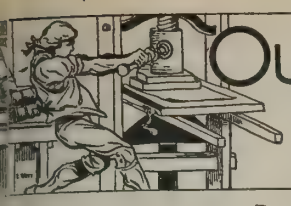
The Press offers circulation concentrated in city and suburbs at only 8c a line, the lowest rate of any Houston paper. Houston is the largest city in South Texas, an important seaport and one of the richest cities in the country per capita as shown by number of income tax returns.

The Press, because of its large, concentrated city circulation, leads all other Houston papers in food and grocery advertising, six days against seven, and carries more drug store advertising than all other Houston papers combined.

To Publishers, Agencies, Advertising Clubs: Your advertisement in The Press during the forthcoming convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World will reach hundreds of national advertisers, agency executives and other eminent delegates.

The Houston Press



A SCRIPPS-HOWARD NEWSPAPER

MEMBER OF THE A. B. C.

REPRESENTED IN THE NATIONAL ADVERTISING FIELD BY

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.

NEW YORK CHICAGO CLEVELAND SAN FRANCISCO
LOS ANGELES CINCINNATI SEATTLE

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

the current of The Washington Newspapers—published by the School Journalism at University of Washing-n—are five articles worth clipping and ig for reference. They are "Free Cir-tion That is Half Free" by Thomas Dobbs, editor the Snohomish County ibune; "Pollyana News" by Ray W. on, managing editor the Seattle Star; urch Publicity" by Rev. E. B. Lock-, pastor Patton M. E. Church; "Tie-Between Window Displays and wspaper Advertising" by W. H. ertson, general manager the Yakima ublic; and "Auction Sale Advertis-" by A. S. Hillyer, editor the Sunny-Sun.

* * *

P. PUTNAM'S SONS announce publication of a new edition of "The ger News Letters" edited by Victor Klarwill and translated from the Ger-n by Pauline de Chary. The book was iewed somewhat in detail when the lt edition was imported from England.

* * *

HE advertising department of the Saturday Evening Post has collected ether and published in pamphlet form eries of articles prepared by the edi-s of that weekly for a bulletin which sent to the representatives of adver-ing and circulation departments of The rtis Publishing Company. It is one of finest advertising booklets that has ne to my desk.

Among topics discussed are "Truth as Business Asset," "The Hokum of In-rational Articles," "Much Advertising t no Ballyhoo for the Post"—these and er articles make the booklet valuable all interested in advertising from the eiving end.

* * *

RVIN S. COBB has created a news-paper character that, in some respects, ll rank with Judge Priest. He is the lding character in Cobb's latest book, lias Ben Alibi" (Geo. H. Doran Com-ny). The blurb on the jacket describes s novel as "The Inside Story of the eatest Genius New York Ever Knew." en cynical oldtimers for once agree th words on a book jacket.

The story opens when Ben Ali Crisp ts out a "Fight Extra" when he ran e Daily Pioneer at Bridger's Gap. He d so well that he got a bid to come to ew York where he had free rein for s talents.

The remarkable things that Ben did ile at his desk in Park Row are given the volume by a master of literary aftsmanship. To tell them might spoil e story for members of the working ess—something I do not wish to do.

"Alias Ben Alibi" is more than a cork-g newspaper novel. Between its covers bb gives closeups of metropolitan jour-lism at white heat. From time to time have commented about some of the aterial in the volume because much of previously appeared in the pages of earst's International-Cosmopolitan Mag-ine. But such comment, I am sure, will mply make the newspaper man want the ok even more. The original title se-cted for this volume was "Extra! xtra!" Personally, I am sorry any ange was made.

* * *

FROM the Chicago Tribune comes the pamphlet entitled "What's All the hootin' For?" Its preface says:

In this discussion we shall attempt to give a cture of the lineage situation in Chicago from l angles, explaining the "tricks of the trade" y which statistical support is worked out for e conflicting claims of competitors.

The following quotation will indicate ot only the subject matter but also the ode of treatment followed in the book-et:

Advertising is a unique commodity. Cynics call it "blue sky." It is intangible. It is bought on faith.

And nothing about advertising is more difficult to understand than the variations in value among advertising media. Circulations vary not only in volume but also in responsiveness. Volume is easily measured and is reflected in rates. Responsiveness is more difficult to gauge.

Only the actual experiences of advertisers throw light on responsiveness. Results secured by advertisers prove the wealth or poverty of readers of a publication, their confidence in its advertising columns, and the nature of appeals to which they most readily respond. But advertisers seldom report the results they secure to the publications they use.

Copies of this booklet may doubtless be obtained upon application to the Advertising Department, the Tribune, Chicago.

* * *

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT, dramatic critic of the New York Sun and lecturer on dramatic criticism at New York University, is the author of "The Story of Irving Berlin" (G. P. Putnam's Sons). In its pages Mr. Woollcott traces the story of Mr. Berlin from the time when the latter was a newsboy on the streets of New York up to the time that fame came as a writer of popular song. The volume is an excellent example of good reporting because of the inclusion of many stories possessing great human interest. Some of these anecdotes are well worth reprinting as fillers on feature pages.

Those who cover the theater for the press will find "The Story of Irving Berlin" a handy book of reference. If more critics followed the mode of treatment given in the volume theatrical news in American newspapers would be livelier and more entertaining.

* * *

SIR SIDNEY LEE, who was for a time Director of the Course in Journalism at the University of London, has completed the first volume of his biography of "King Edward VII" (The Macmillan Co.)—a volume that belongs in the reference department of every large newspaper library.

INJUNCTION AGAINST DAILY

Missouri Paper Restrained by Court from Printing Prescription List

A permanent injunction restraining the Jefferson City (Mo.) from publishing the names of persons for whom whiskey prescriptions are issued was handed down Monday by the Cole county, Missouri, circuit court. The injunction was granted on application of local physicians who contended the publication was in violation of the prohibition act and interfered with their medical practice. The newspaper is published by Heber Nations.

Publication of the whiskey prescription names in February included those of several legislators.

The injunction was opposed by Roy Rucker, prosecuting attorney of Pettis county and Prosecuting Attorney Haley of Cole county. They said they would appeal to supreme court.

Travel Agency Gives Up Cook Name

R. C. Cooper, president of Cooks Tours, Inc., issued a statement April 10, to the effect the name "Cook," had been discontinued when Thomas Cook & Son made objection on the ground it was likely to cause confusion.

R. E. Shannon, District Chairman, Ill

Ralph E. Shannon, of the Washington (Ia.) Evening Journal, and chairman of District 9, of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, has suffered a nervous breakdown and is ill at his home in Washington.

SERVICE

as visualized by

BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

1893 - 1925

Thirty-one years plus

On the Pacific Coast we operate our own offices — devoted exclusively to our own interests—by our own associates.

LOS ANGELES, 401 VanNuys Building: Arthur A. Hinkley in charge.

SAN FRANCISCO, 58 Sutter Street: Judson H. Carter in charge.

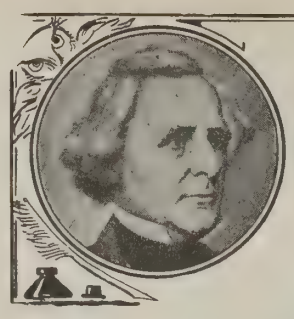
These are men of experience, training and judgment.

CHICAGO, 900 Mallers Building: John T. Fitzgerald, Vice-President, in charge.

NEW YORK, 2 West 45th Street, has a complete staff ample to carry out our ideas and ideals of

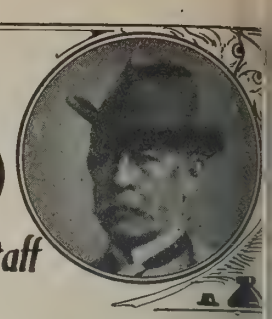
SERVICE

There is much to the business of newspaper representation — many constructive and helpful needs which when properly applied make for more wholesome and better conditions generally and give proper stability to any given newspaper.



We have been at it since 1893—always up to the times and progressing.

It is always a pleasure to discuss the subject with publishers who may be interested.



BENJAMIN & KENTNOR CO.

Harry D. Reynolds
President

NEW YORK CHICAGO LOS ANGELES SAN FRANCISCO

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN—41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER—ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

Journalists Convivial Habits

The moderate use of wines and liquors was almost universal in the eighties, and newspaper men were no exception to the rule.

At Hudnut's drug store the members of the Herald staff were always welcomed to the inner office, stocked with rare old wines and liquors, while at the corner of Broadway and Fulton street in the cellar was Sandy Spencer's popular "Live and Let Live" saloon, whose steamed clams and cold beef were justly famous. Around the corner in Fulton street was John Brosnan's celebrated liquor store, where were arrayed huge casks of the choicest port, sherry, whiskey and brandy, "drawn from the wood, pure and delirious." Mr. Brosnan, probably, had more newspaper men for customers than any other liquor dealer in town.

Then there was the splendid bar in the Astor House, dispensing 25c. drinks; the old International Hotel in Park Row, with whiskey at ten cents a glass, and in Park Place was Stewart's palatial saloon with costly paintings hung on the walls, and where the writer recalls that Mr. Reick and the Herald's staff filed in in solemn procession to drink the final farewell to the old building on Saturday, August 19th, 1893, when as a body they rode up to the new Palace in Herald Square.

A dozen other popular drinking places could be mentioned, including of course the rusty old saloon at the corner of Theatre Alley and Ann street, whose strong, old musty ale proved a gentle soporific for many a weary journalist.

Oscar Hammerstein as Manager of the Manhattan Opera House wrote a letter to the Herald, which was published on January 24, 1907, complaining that the Herald "gushed" over the Metropolitan Opera House operas, while it treated his productions as belonging to an inferior class.

"The way you are treating me," said he, "is worse than condemnation. You don't want to praise, because you are afraid of some powerful influence in connection with the Metropolitan Opera House. I do not propose to play the 'good boy' any longer. The Herald can get along without me, and for what I am doing, I can get along without the Herald."

Mr. Bennett had the letter headed as follows:

"THE HERALD IS SO SORRY IT CANNOT PLEASE EVERYBODY—NO MATTER IF HE BE HAMMERSTEIN, EINSTEIN, BLINDSTEIN, GUSHSTEIN, OR JAWSTEIN."

Bennett had cabled "JEWSTEIN," but the members of the Executive Committee in a nervous flurry, after consulting the business manager, ventured on their own responsibility to change it to "JAWSTEIN," in an effort to prevent an affront to the paper's Hebrew patrons. Later they cabled to Bennett that the change in spelling was due to an unfortunate typographical error. It was the joke of the office for weeks.

At that time the dramatic department was controlled by Tom White, familiarly known as the Herald's Pooh Bah, and undoubtedly he was responsible for the meagre reports of Hammerstein's operas.

Mr. Hammerstein never forgave Bennett for the insult, and in 1913, thought he had a chance for revenge. He had engaged several operatic stars in Paris, but financial difficulties arose, and Mr. Bennett ordered a lengthy article written on the subject. Hammerstein's agent in Paris got wind of it and cabled the tip to his employer. Hammerstein was infuriated; he for many reasons did not want the news published in New York, and sent a hot message to the editor of the Herald, saying in part:

"I have all my eye teeth cut, and have a dentist's certificate to that effect. I warn the Herald, that if it prints that story from Paris, I will sue for criminal libel."

Mr. Bennett in response to this threat had the despatch double leaded and placed in the first column of the cable page, under sensational head lines. Hammerstein rushed down town and securing a warrant had one of the Herald's editors arrested. But to his dismay the case was "laughed out of court," and a few days later Mr. Bennett vigorously denounced the angry impressario's foolish action and clearly defined the Herald's position as a great, independent newspaper, saying:

"Mr. Hammerstein cannot coerce the Herald by threatening or by commencing an action for libel or by withdrawing his advertising patronage. Nor can any other individual or association of individuals.

"A newspaper that will submit to such intimidation had better cease publishing.

"Mr. Hammerstein can withdraw his advertising if he sees fit, but the Herald will continue to print the news without fear or favor, and will do so with as much reliability as more than ordinary care can provide. It will endeavor to keep that reputation which was referred to in the U. S. Senate a few days ago, when Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska spoke of the 'New York Herald as probably the most accurate paper in the United States.'"

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

Herald Men's High Salaries—Bennett Takes the Public Into His Confidence—Prominent Herald Men Recalled

MR. BENNETT in 1893 in an editorial denounced the methods of Reuter's News Agency, which had cabled an absurd report that because he had removed his name from the editorial page, he was about to turn the Herald property into a joint stock company with a capital of $2,000,000.

Mr. Bennett threatened to sue for libel, unless a retraction was made, saying:

"About two months ago, Reuter's Agency had the run of the Herald office. Their agent had access to all our telegrams not only from all over the United States, but also from Canada, South America, etc. But its news service was so skeletonized that the Herald had to withdraw the privilege, and Mr. Bennett cabled the Herald's news at his own expense to the London papers, on condition of their publishing it with credit and for no pecuniary compensation. This perhaps is one of the reasons for Reuter's libel.

"The Herald today is at the height of its prosperity, and any Syndicate having for its sole object the making of money could easily earn six per cent on $20,000,000, by cutting off special cabling, reducing the extraordinary salaries which some members of the staff receive; cutting down some of the $15,000 and $10,000 salaries, and curtailing many of the $5,000 salaries, besides numerous other economies, supposing the Herald to be simply a corporation like a railroad or factory.

"The present proprietor has in view the formation of co-operative society one for the sole benefit of the members of the Herald staff, including all departmenes. This co-operative society may be formed whenever he thinks proper.

"The founder of the Herald disposed of it a few years before his death for one dollar to its present proprietor, and in order to avoid any post mortem intererence under the guise of a proceeding for the legal construction of a will the proprietor of the Herald proposes to follow the example of its founder and direct the disposition of the Herald without outside intervention. He believes that in perpetuating the property in his way he can build a lasting and living monument to its founder, James Gordon Bennett, the elder.

"* * * The names of Messrs. Reick and Henderson were placed at the head of the editorial page, because the proprietor reserves the privilege of selecting his own executives, and desires credit to be given where due."

In conclusion Mr. Bennett proudly boasted that he had made $6,000,000 in 1892!

After the Herald establishment had been removed to the Palace in Herald Square, the old building at Broadway and Ann street was like a "white elephant" on Mr. Bennett's hands. Nobody seemed to be able to pay the price he demanded; so he advertised for plans to be submitted for the erection of a lofty office building on the site.

Finally, in January, 1895, Mr. H. O. Havemeyer paid $1,000,000 for the property, $750,000 of the amount being left on bond and mortgage. Thus Mr. Bennett realized half a million dollars profit on his father's wise investment. On the site Mr. Havemeyer erected the skyscraper known as the St. Paul Building.

(To Be Continued Next Week)

When business is slack, as it is with newspaper advertising during the summer months, then is the time when a publisher might well investigate those propositions that show possibilities of proving valuable when the busy season starts again.

We hold subscribers on "good service"— not contracts

The Advertising CHECKING BUREAU Inc.

538 So. Clark St. CHICAGO — 15-19 East 26th St. NEW YORK

HIGH Reserve Modern FINE
Benefit Detailed Stimulate Strong Effects 38 Modern LIKING Master
Harmony ALL these big faces are now available on the Ludlow to make newspapers that are Ludlow-equipped more attractive and their advertising space worth more to the advertiser. Beauty Demanding During the past two years the variety of Ludlow matrix faces has been greatly increased. Their quality speaks for itself. Black Methods Ludlow–equipping your composing room will add snap and sparkle to your whole paper—as the result of the beautiful bright display lines (up to and including 60-point bold) cast new on slugs for every issue. Direct
Taste HONOR
Ludlow Typograph Co.
Contains 2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago Reduced
Atlanta, 41 Marietta Street Boston, 261 Franklin Street
Program San Francisco, 5 Third Street New York, 63 Park Row Events Method Speculation
Special Brooks Promise IMPORTANCE
Handle Peanut Printer CONSTRUCTION Future Mortar Finally RECOMMENDS

Every letter and character in this advertisement, from the 6 point up to the 10 line figures, including the borders, was cast on the Ludlow.

FINDS GLAMOUR ON BUSINESS SIDE OF DAILY

Miss Harriet M. Dewey, 81, for 46 Years With Chicago Daily News as Bookkeeper and Cashier, Stil Keenly Interested in Her Job—Joined Paper in 1879

By LUCILE BRIAN GILMORE

ALTHOUGH there are many possessed of the notion that all the glamour and romance of a newspaper establishment is limited to the confines of the city room and the editorial departments, yet in the prosaic cashier's office of the Chicago Daily News can be found a story of newspaper glory and achievement sufficient to make the "boys" upstairs stand around and idly sharpen their pencils. And what is more, this unique story is the story of a woman.

It is the recital of a sprightly, likable woman, who though apparently confined to the paymaster's cage and announced to the world only by an ordinary sign with the legend "Cashier", has found a lifetime of fascination and pleasure in her end of newspaper work.

She is Miss Harriet M. Dewey, cashier of the Chicago Daily News, who recently celebrated her eighty-first birthday and her forty-sixth year of service with the paper. Miss Dewey was 81 years old on March 2, and that day was the occasion of a glorious ovation to her. Though she was visiting some relatives in Wisconsin on that particualr day, when she returned to her office she found her desk heaped with flowers.

Though she had been away, her friends had not forgotten. With the flowers there were many greeting cards and messages of congratulation from her multitude of friends in Chicago and through out the country—messages from people who at one time received from her a mere week's wages, but those names now command headline attention. The messages came by mail and by telegraph, and many personally, especially from her associates in the offices of the Daily News.

Since her seventieth birthday, March 2 has been the date of similar activity. It was then that a number of Miss Dewey's friends and fellow workers learned of her seventieth anniversary and surprised her with a dinner and party in her honor in the advertising rooms of the newspaper.

Perhaps few people in the business world can boast, were they so inclined, of so long a record of continuous service. Undoubtedly, few people remain active in so responsible a position at so distinguished an age. Miss Dewey has had a remarkable career of unbroken and successful application to a single enterprise, the administration of the financial department of a great newspaper.

The history of Miss Dewey's department is almost a history of the Daily News itself, and is certainly representative of several chapters in the voluminous history of newspaper making and progress and in the history of newspaper men. Through the years she has seen many famous newspaper names and faces walk past her office down the long narrow corridor of the News business office.

Miss Dewey became bookkeeeper of the Daily News in 1879. This was three years after its founding, and at that time, a bookkeeper and an assistant sufficed to handle the modest receipts and disbursements of the paper.

As the Daily News grew and prospered with the growth of Chicago, there was a similar expansion in the personnel of Miss Dewey's department and a similar rise in its importance. Still under her able direction, it controls all receipts and disbursements, including the payroll division.

"Aside from the change in mechanical methods, what is the difference now in the 'personality' of the business shop?" Miss Dewey was asked.

"It is a little regrettable," she replied, "but it seems that with greater mechanical changes in the business office of the newspaper, the people in the office have lost a bit of the intimate personality they used to have.

"Years ago there was not such a 'hurry up' attitude prevailing, because methods were more leisurely. There was time for a cordiality and friendly interest in former days that is not so apparent with the speedy service necessary today. A man or a woman who used to come into the office then, was 'waited on' just as he or she used to be in the village grocery.

Many famous men and women have received Chicago Daily News checks signed by Harriet M. Dewey during her 46 years in the cashier's "cage."

"But in these days, it requires more than a bookkeeper and an assistant to handle the departments.

"Newspapers have undergone remarkable progress in their accounting and cost finding methods. Years ago, though we had quite a bit of detail, our organization was simple in the real sense. We had books for advertising and general accounts, and I believe one person was almost able to handle these. The system today though certainly more intensive and greater, and even more involved, may be regarded as simple also, because of the high point of organization which it has attained, and the degree of efficiency."

Through the payroll, Miss Dewey has been in intimate contact with everybody who has worked for the Daily News since her connection with the paper. Many famous men and women have spoken a sincere "Thank you" to Miss Dewey as they received their pay checks from her.

She reminisces delightfully about such famous characters as Eugene Field, John McCutcheon, George Ade, Ray Stannard Baker, and many other celebrities. Though she has been a friend of these people so well known, Miss Dewey is modestly reticent when speaking about them and herself.

"Gene Field called me his 'Cousin Hattie,'" Miss Dewey recalls with a smile. "And whenever he wanted to get his money in advance, he had a plaintive way of drawling, 'Where's my Cousin Hattie?'"

"Did Eugene Field call for 'Cousin Hattie' often on that account?" she was asked.

Miss Dewey laughed lightly.

"Well," she answered, apparently meditative, "I'll say it was not infrequently."

During last summer while on her vacation, Miss Dewey visited Ray Stannard Baker at his home in Amherst, Mass. Mr. Baker is the inaugurator of the "Wide Awake" or children's department of the Daily News, which has become famous. During her visit, many pleasant memories of their former associatio were renewed.

Miss Dewey by her seeming untirin ambition and eternal cheerfulness ha evoked wondering comment on innume able occasions by her associates.

"How do you manage to keep so happ and so healthy?" questioned the inte viewer.

"Simple enough," she replied without moment's hesitancy. "I have alway worked hard and kept cheerful. 'Wor and be happy' is a maxim I have foun invincible.

"One reason why I have been able t do this is because of the exceptionall happy condition under which I hav worked. Mr. Lawson is mainly respon sible for these. He has that rare person ality which inspires loyalty and respect i his employes.

"They feel that the Daily News i 'home.' And so it is in every sense tha a business institution may be. Mr. Law son is interested in the welfare of all hi employes, and sympathetic with thei problems."

Miss Dewey began her business caree on the old Chicago Post in 1869. Thi was two years before the great Chicag fire, which bears a vivid impression in th memory of Miss Dewey. At that tim Miss Dewey was boarding in a thre story residence on the corner of Wabas avenue and Monroe street on either sid of which is now being erected the new Palmer House.

The Chicago Post later absorbed th Mail, Miss Dewey recalls, and becam the Chicago Post and Mail. Olive Willard, brother of Frances E. Willard was the publisher, and after his deat in 1878, it was decided to discontinue th paper.

One of Victor Lawson's pleasantrie is that he "took over from the Post an Mail, its subscription lists, the Associate Press membership, and later, Mis Dewey."

"In those days," Miss Dewey says "women in business were an experiment It was not long, however, until the proved their worth."

"I find business inspiring," she declares "and I am sure it is for most wome workers. They like it and are fully a capable in most lines as men. In man classes of work they excel. Most of th employes in my department are women including the responsible heads—and wouldn't trade any of them for men.

"I believe that women in business ar good for business, and that business i good for them," she concluded.

Her own business career is proof tha a woman can distinguish herself in wor that taxes masculine abilities of the high est order, and her personal charm as wel as her achievements is an inspiration t all members of her sex.

Frank P. Blair
of
BLAIR & AUSTIN
Will be registered at The Waldorf-Astoria, April 20 to 24
Publishers attending the convention desiring information regarding a READER SALESMANSHIP CLUB
Should get in touch with Mr. Blair
BLAIR & AUSTIN
Permanent Address:
1504 Centre Avenue, Reading, Pa.

Where Certified Dry Mats Are Made—West Groton, Mass.

WET MAT PRINTING WITH DRY MAT FACILITY!

In commenting on the clean printing and solid blacks obtained with our cold process dry mats, users* say that CERTIFIEDS are more like wet mats than any other dry mats they have ever used.

As a matter of fact, CERTIFIED DRY MATS are ready-made wet mats. We have aimed to reproduce the old-established wet mat in an integral, homogeneous form without any of the wet mat disadvantages and with all the advantages of the dry mat cold process of stereotyping. That we have succeeded is best borne out by what our customers say.

CERTIFIEDS are the ONLY dry matswhich are not heavily calendered in order to present a smooth face. Our mats are supplied either lightly calendered for newspaper work or may be had entirely uncalendered for syndicate or job purposes. The smooth, glass-like surface of our mats is inherent to our exclusive manufacturing processes.

That is why CERTIFIED DRY MATS are so readily conditioned; that is why they are molded with a minimum of wear and tear on the form as well as on the roller and still give deep, even, sharp impressions. And that is why the printed pages are so clean and blacks so solid.

Those using CERTIFIED DRY MATS are getting wet mat printing results with dry mat economy and humaneness. They are saving themselves invaluable time and money and have improved working conditions in their foundries.

Roll them and you'll know them! Compare the printed pages and you'll appreciate that the trade-mark "CERTIFIED," when applied to dry mats, is synonymous with dependable results in your stereotyping department.

Let us demonstrate our statements by sending you some samples without any charge or obligation on your part. Just let us know what equipment you employ so that we may furnish you with the CERTIFIED DRY MAT best suited to your needs.

Wet Mat Users { Let us tell you what Certified Dry Mats can accomplish for you—there is no obligation on your part. }

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION

340 Madison Avenue New York, N. Y.

"Made in the U. S. A."

*Names on request.

FOUR NEWSPAPERS ATTACK CRIME NEWS

Remarkable Experiments Conducted in Middle West, South and on Pacific Coast in Which Crime Banned From Front Page, Limited to Special Page Columns or Suppressed Entirely

FOUR remarkable editorial experiments with "crimeless" newspapers, or newspapers in which accounts of criminal acts were modified or segregated, marked as notable in journalistic annals the week just ended.

Responding to the popular academic discussion of crime in the news as an evil social influence editors in two Middle West cities, one in the South and one in California announced that for limited periods they would either suppress or segregate so-called police reports and thereby ascertain the sentiment of readers in approval or disapproval. Each experiment was an independent and wholly voluntary act upon the part of an editor who had come to the conclusion that popular criticism of newspapers on account of their crime reports deserved recognition. It became apparent that a wave of such experimentation would sweep the country.

The four newspapers which decided to stage a public performance were: Des Moines (Ia.) Register, morning newspaper, published by Gardner Cowles and John Cowles, with Harvey Ingham as editor; the Decatur (Ill.) Review, evening, edited by Jerry Donahue; the Fayetteville, (N. C.) Observer, evening, published by Charles R. Wilson and edited by G. C. Myrover, and the Bakersfield, (Cal.) Echo, morning, published by G. M. Swindell, with Bert Lowry, editor.

Results of the Bakersfield experiment had not been learned when EDITOR & PUBLISHER went to press.

Des Moines Register and Bakersfield Echo ruled all crime news from their first pages for a limited period, Fayetteville Observer announced that it would publish no crime news for 15 days and Decatur Review segregated and labelled crime in the most remarkable and novel manner. The idea here was to plainly mark crime news as if with a red light, so that the reader might pass it by if he desired to avoid unpleasant contact with the rough side of life's events. Crime which as only alleged in the news accounts, was nevertheless placed under the title "Crime."

The Des Moines Experiment

W. W. Waymack, managing editor of the Des Moines Register and Tribune-News, commenting upon the Register's crime news experiment in an interview for EDITOR & PUBLISHER, said:

"About the first of April, the Des Moines Federation of Women's clubs, or its representatives, passed a resolution asking local newspapers to segregate crime news and get it off Page 1. Taking the ground that a little open mindedness wouldn't do any harm, the Register surprised clubwomen and everybody else by adopting the policy for a test period of five days, beginning April 6.

"During that period crime news was treated like sports news—it was assembled inside, news items and illustrations both, with the reservation that any 'exceptional' crime news story would be given 'exceptional' handling. If big enough for Page 1, on Page 1 it would go.

"The public reaction was quick and decided. Ministers, clubwomen, judges, other public officials, teachers, some civic organizations, some church congregations, a few 'common subscribers,' even, poured out their approval in letters, telegrams, phone calls, resolutions. Perhaps part of this reaction must be discounted as coming from 'professional' critics. Perhaps it represents merely the feeling of a minority which happens to be articulate—very—while the majority is dumb. Anyhow, it became quite apparent that a considerable part of the public, and a part which intellectually and otherwise has a good deal to do with leadership, has a really deep and conscientious feeling that newspapers have been handling crime news in an anti-social way.

"So, while the Register couldn't quite 'see' the argument of so many that by putting crime news on an inside page that page could safely be torn out before the children got to it; while in fact the Register suspected that this would make crime news all the more delectable and important in children's minds—despite this and what appeared like other fallacies, the Register concluded that the demand for crime news so much Page 1 emphasis was at least general and serious enough to warrant further experiment.

"The experimental segregation of crime news therefore is being continued by the Register for at least another week, for several weeks probably, and perhaps—just perhaps—for a much longer time.

"One of the incidental things the Register had in mind to accomplish, and which it feels it has some reason to think is being accomplished, was to demonstrate that in proportion to the total of news columage the space ordinarily given to crime news was really not great, that for the most part the crime news printed is neither very thrilling nor very seductive, and that some at least of the news matter that the careless reader has classified as crime news and that he has been maddest about is not crime news at all."

The Decatur Plan

During the week starting Monda April 6, and ending with Sunday, Ap 12, the Decatur Daily Review expe mented with the segregation of its Ass ciated Press crime news. The account the trial as told in the Review by Te graph Editor Frank Weir, follows:

"It was decided in advance that cri news was to embrace all murders, frau thefts, bombings and deeds of like cha acter, with their subsequent 'follow u from day to day. The dictionary defi tion of crime—'A violation of the la an offense against public welfare punis able by prosecution.'

"The telegraph editor was instructed handle the copy in the usual manner a use what he had been accustomed to in branches.

"The Review did not attempt to hide crime news. The experiment was ma merely to show the readers what a sma part lurid news and accounts of cri really played in its every day makeup.

"For the sake of comparison a cou was kept of all wire news stories. The were divided—political, both domestic a foreign, disasters and accidents, industri and economical, religious and a colum devoted to that class of news almost i possible to classify, general or miscella eous. This classification, by far t greater, contained stories not identifi with the other named sorts.

"During the week 531 separate items news stories were used, as received A. P. wire. Of this number but 61 11.3 per cent was crime. This shou mean that 89.7 per cent of the telegra items used had nothing in them obje tionable to the class of reader who h deplored the tendency toward yello journalism.

(Continued on page 54)

The Des Moines Register. CITY FINAL

The Newspaper Iowa Depends Upon

VOL. 76, NO. 297 DES MOINES, IOWA, TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 14, 1925.—SIXTEEN PAGES PRICE [illegible] 3 CENTS

BIG LEAGUES TO OPEN TODAY

Jenney Asks $5,000 for Police Radio

250,000 FANS EXPECTED AT FIRST GAMES

Fair and Cooler Weather Forecast for 1925 Opening

FORD MAKES HIS DEBUT AS AIRLINE HEAD

Detroit Firm's First Plane Goes to Chicago and Return

ANOTHER IMPENDING ECLIPSE

AFFAIR OF THE WORLD BASE BALL

All Metal Plane

CITY COUNCIL BEGINS STUDY OF '25 BUDGET

Men Will Be Masters of World for Another 100 Years, Says Woman Leader

Scientists Puzzle Over Sparrows With Red Flannel Heads

Harriet Upton Declares Women Far From Equality.

Biggest News Contest Off to Fast Start

Parents and School Heads Are Enthusiastic.

DING HOLDING HIS OWN NOW

Sits Up in Bed for Fourth Successive Day.

News Classified By Pages

START RECOUNT OF VOTES HERE

Brookhart, Stock Aids Watch Senate Envoy.

MUSICAL COMEDY WILL BE GIVEN AT NORTH HIGH SCHOOL

Auto Club May Ask Repeal of Stop Law

Mrs. King Fined for Parking Near Theater

Retail Merchants Open Members Drive

Mayor Garver Breaks His Christmas Chair

Coupons Club Gives Annual Dinner Fete

Illinois Paper Quits Segregation of Crime

Idaho Irrigators Lose Suit in Court

Declares Ice Water Good for Bitters

North Carolina Paper Prints No Crime News

Des Moines Girl Wooed by Mail Weds in Southland

Pastor to Talk on Religious Advertising

The Weather Today

Alley Dogs Take Spotlight From Capital's Bluebloods

J. Chapman's Leg Broken in Fall

New Gas Tax to Cost Average Autoist $10

Haugen's Condition Shows Improvement

No crime news on page one—the only reference being in the box index to page 5, where all "crime" was grouped.

WEATHER TODAY

The Fayetteville Observer

"North Carolina's Oldest Newspaper—Established 1817"

FULL SERVICE

VOL. CVIII—NO. 321. 8 Pages Today. FAYETTEVILLE, N. C., MONDAY, APRIL 13, 1925 8 Pages Today PRICE: FIVE CENTS

FRENCH EMERGENCY NOW ACUTE

JAPAN TO UNIFY HER AIR FORCES AS DID BRITAIN

Orient Nation Increases Strength From 500 to 600 Modern Planes

NEW CORPS STARTED

Ten Fighting Battalions One Feature of Latest Defense Program

ENGLAND STUDIED

Japanese are Opposed to United States Methods

MAYORALTY RACE GETS ADDED LIFE IN NEW CANDIDATE

Campaign Is Now Five Cornered with Announcement of Kirkpatrick

STATEMENTS ISSUED

Three in Race Tell How They View Situation a Week Before Primary

VOTE NEXT MONDAY

CHURCHES OF CITY IN MEMORABLE SERVICES

MR. NEW EXPLAINS NEW RATE CHANGE IN POSTAL CLASS

Effective on Wednesday Private Mailing Cards Must Carry Two Cents

OTHER INCREASES

Tariff on Fourth Class Matter Differs Along With Registered Mail

TO CURE DEFICIT

GIVES RATES

PRESIDENT CALLS FINANCE OFFICER TO HEAD MINISTRY FOR DAY TO PASS MEASURE

Drastic Step Is Recommended When Factional Leaders Suggest Politics Be Laid Aside in Order That Finance Matter May Be Disposed of

MUST HAVE MONEY FOR THE PATROL

PRINCE CHARLES OPENING WILL BE BRILLIANT AFFAIR FOR CITY

Banquet and Dance Will Feature Long-Awaited Event Which Will Take Place on Wednesday Night

POWER OF OUSTER IS BEFORE COURT

Interest Is Attached to Test Case of Deposed Oregon Postmaster

EPISCOPAL CHURCH TRIES NEW PLANS

Summer Schools Treating on Rural Religious Problems to Be Held

VIEWS OF CRIMELESS NEWSPAPER ARE EXPRESSED BY THREE LOCAL LEADERS

Interview Turns Interesting Light on Observer Experiment as Crime Rejection Is Begun

NAVY PLANS FLIGHT TO HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

Date for Trip and Officers Not Named

DINING ROOM OPENED MASS MEET SERIES ENDS

WHITE HOUSE HOLDS EASTER EGG FESTIVAL

DEFICIT IS CUT DOWN

Governor McLean Issues Financial Statement

TAX EXEMPTS OUSTED

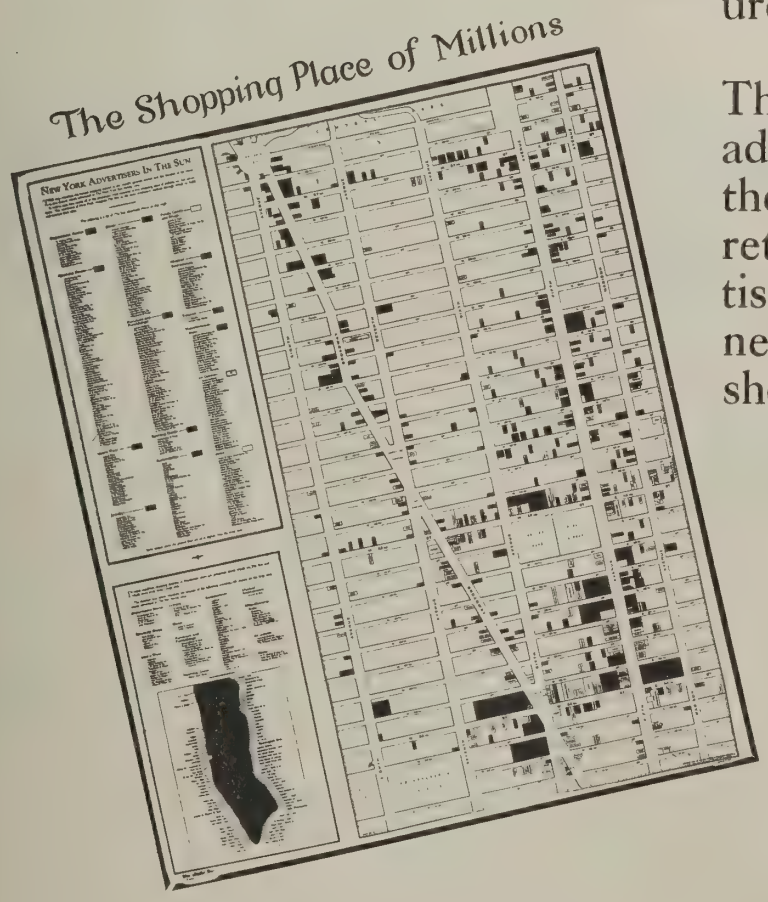
FORD'S NEW AIR LINE MAKES FIRST FLIGHT

LATE NEWS FLASHES

DIES FROM STARVATION

TARIFF IS INCREASED

SNOW COVERS NEW ENGLAND



PLANE REACHES FORD PLANT

FAMOUS FIGURES ELOPE

Not one line of crime news in this paper for two weeks, editor promises.

The Shopping Place of Millions

A UNIQUE map visualizing the location of most of the prominent retail stores in the busiest shopping districts in New York—districts that include such famous business arteries as Fifth Ave., Broadway, Madison Ave., 42nd St., 34th St. and 14th St.

Printed in twelve colors—one for each of the twelve kinds of stores. When unfolded the map measures 34 x 44 inches.

The stores shown are those that advertise in The Sun. Because of the wide use of The Sun by the retailers of New York, the advertisers shown on the map include nearly all of the well-known shops in New York.

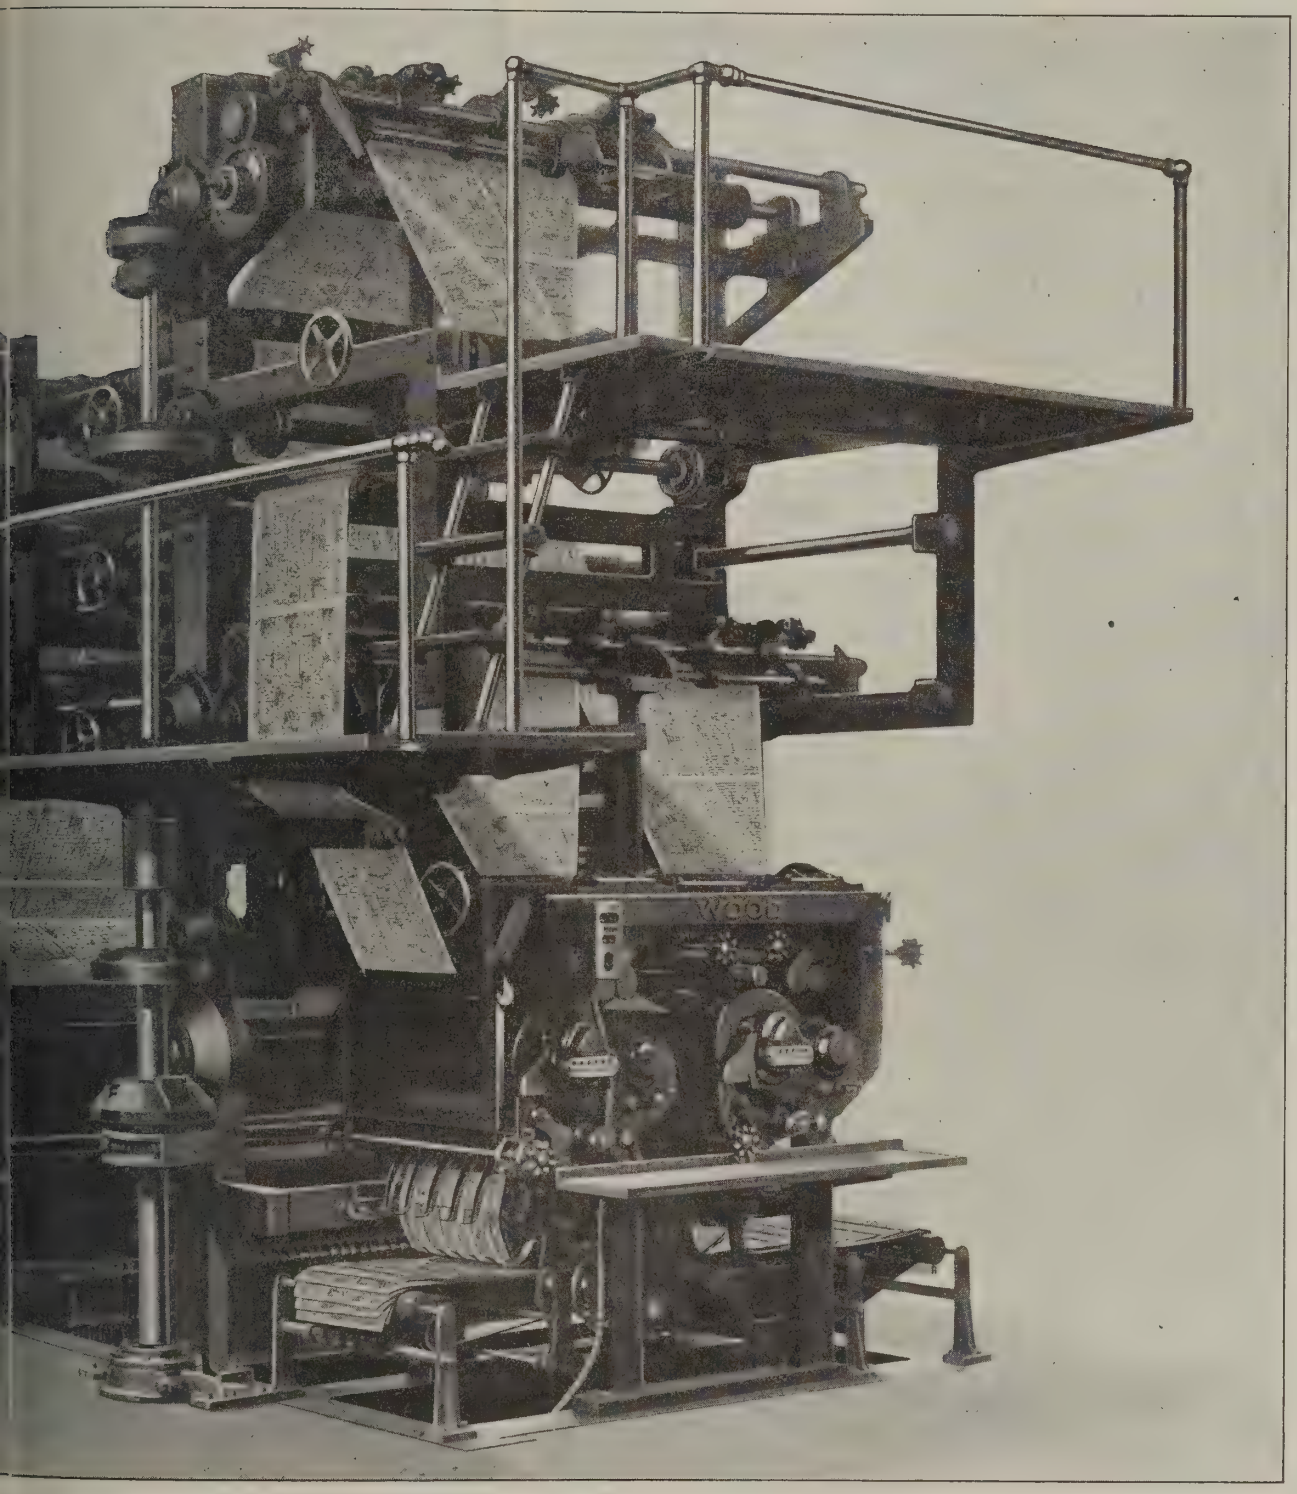
"The Shopping Place of Millions" will prove of interest to advertising executives, sales managers and advertising agency men.

It will be sent to executives who request it on office stationery.

The Sun

280 BROADWAY NEW YORK

The Wood News



Built especially f

This is a 12-roll unit-type machine having four double folders, each fitted at the rate of 72,000 products per hour per delivery. It is all-steel, unbreakabl

WOOD NEWSPAPER
501 Fifth A per Printing Press

iladelphia Inquirer" ormers. Its normal running speed is 600 cylinder revolutions a minute, which is al gears throughout, and its every bearing is a ball bearing. Weight 916,000 lbs.

NERY CORPORATION
York City

EDITORIAL

CONVENTION WEEK

NEXT week New York will again greet organized American journalism. The event of interest in the annual meeting of the Associated Press will be the celebration of Frank Brett Noyes' 25th consecutive year as its President, an achievement without parallel in the affairs of the daily press in this country. In other columns of EDITOR & PUBLISHER Mr. Noyes describes Associated Press idealism and with undisguised sentiment pays tribute to the officers and host of anonymous reporters and editors the world over who have served this cause for a quarter of a century with the zeal of cathedral builders.

Frank B. Noyes has long been a rare genius in his place at the head of Associated Press. The true spirit of that organization is of his blood and bone. He was one of the little group of publishers who conceived it to be a public duty to establish in America a press association of sound mutual character. The principles which animated that group more than a quarter of a century ago are controlling in the mind of Mr. Noyes today. The Associated Press will next week indicate appreciation of the inestimable contribution that Mr. Noyes has made to that organization.

The second convention of the week will be the 39th annual gathering of the membership of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and the eleventh meeting of the Bureau of Advertising of that organization. In the wake of a year of great activity are many problems to be solved by the membership and the reports of committees will be unusually important.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER congratulates the association on its progress and makes bold to suggest, as an advancement in its constructive labors in behalf of daily journalism, a department to deal scientifically with mechanical and material problems incident to the huge manufacturing business that the city daily has become. There should be some national bureau of standards to guide newspaper executives in planning offices and in making purchases. Such information, being a contribution to journalism in general, should be made easily accessible to the entire newspaper fraternity. Nothing that A. N. P. A. can do for its membership but is of benefit to journalism in general, and this organization will be supported as an institution according to its general usefulness.

During next week there will be numerous business and social gatherings in the metropolis of newspaper men representing every phase of press activity. These events are the backbone of the structure of a nationally organized press. From such interchange of experience and such unanimity of purpose the industry grows in power and usefulness.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER again greets in fraternal spirit the visiting delegates and offers its facilities to make the week's visit both profitable and pleasant.

The act of Sinclair's press agent in sending out mats and stories predicting the defeat of the Government's case in the Cheyenne trial was not so much contempt of court as it was contemptuous of the intelligence of the editors of this country.

ONE LOVING COPY

WHEN Lord Curzon's illness began to intensify and his doctors were compelled to write grave statements in press bulletins, a remarkable action was taken by the Daily Graphic, of London. Lord Curzon insisted upon seeing this tabloid newspaper daily, continuing an affectionate regard he had long held for that paper. Fearing the truth concerning his physical condition, as stated in the bulletins of the attending physicians, might meet his eye and cause him to relax his fight for recovery, The Daily Graphic printed, at the request of the doctors, a special issue of one copy only, containing a "bulletin" which, while recognizing the seriousness of the illness, was worded to give comfort and reassurance to the patient. This copy was carried to the sick room and was ready for Lord Curzon's perusal later in the day, but he did not live to see it.

"I like a newspaper which recognizes that, even beyond accuracy, the truth requires the proper emphasis"—penetrating view of Marion L. Burton, late president University of Michigan.

He that followeth after righteousness and mercy findeth life, righteousness, and honour. —Proverbs 21; 21.

SAVE THE TREE

AMERICAN Forest Week, April 27 to May 3! Put this date on your calendar for the exercise of your best editorial talents in arousing the sentiment of the people in behalf of the American tree!

It is not often that EDITOR & PUBLISHER conceives it to be its function to urge editors to follow any public policy, but we unhesitatingly champion the cause of this special week, officially designated for national observance by President Coolidge.

The greatest single material benefactor of civilization is in peril. If you do not love the tree for itself, you have but to look about you to realize the extent of its contribution to your comfort, well-being, progress. It was when man emerged from the mud hut and began to fashion wood for the comforts of life that civilization got under way.

Whatever the tree may mean to society in general, it counts for something very special to those who live by the printed word. There is no substitute in the world for pulp for paper. Man may discover a substance to supplant it, but such genius is yet to be found. For sheer self-preservation, aside from a thousand other public reasons, editors and publishers should arouse public sentiment during American Forest Week, and every other week, in behalf of our neglected forests.

President Coolidge has told the story of the peril as well as it has ever been written. In his proclamation he says:

"We have too freely spent the rich and magnificent gift that Nature bestowed on us. In our eagerness to use that gift we have stripped our forests; we have permitted fire to lay waste and devour them; we have all too often destroyed the young growth and the seed from which new forests might spring. And though we already feel the first grip of timber shortage, we have barely begun to save and restore.

"We have passed the pioneer stage and are no longer excusable for continuing this unwise dissipation of a great resource. To the Nation it means the lack of an elemental necessity and the waste of keeping idle or only partly productive nearly one-fourth of our soil. To our forest-using industries it means unstable investments, the depletion of forest capital, the d banding of established enterprises, and the decli of one of our most important industrial groups.

"Our forests ought to be put to work and kept work. I do not minimize the obstacles that have to met, nor the difficulty of changing old ideas and pra tices. We must all put our hands to this comm task. It is not enough that the Federal, State, a local governments take the lead. There must be change in our national attitude. Our industries, o land-owners, our farmers, all our citizens, must lea to treat our forests as crops, to be used, but also be renewed. We must learn to tend our woodlan as carefully as we tend our farms.

"Let us apply to this creative task the boundle energy and skill we have so long spent in harvesti the free gifts of Nature. The forests of the futu must be started today. Our children are depende on our course. We are bound by a solemn obligati from which no evasion and no subterfuge will relie us. Unless we fulfill our sacred responsibility unborn generations, unless we use with gratitude a with restraint the generous and kindly gifts of Divi Providence, we shall prove ourselves unworthy guar ians of a heritage we hold in trust."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER hopes that the daily press w indelibly stamp this sentiment into the minds a hearts of the American people during the we April 27 to May 3.

It must now be apparent even to the State Department that the way to give the widest publicity to the theories of government of a visiting European politician is to keep him gagged for a few weeks and then permit him to cross the border to tolerant Canada.

JARVIS A. WOOD

ADVERTISING and those who devote their li to it lose a valued friend through the passing Jarvis A. Wood, the aged but very compet senior partner of N. W. Ayer & Son and presid of the Poor Richard Club. His classic definition advertising should be suitably engraved in his memor "Causing to know, causing to remember and causi to do." That is the story in a nutshell.

A remarkable outpouring of men who had kno or been associated with Mr. Wood attended his fune and with the members of his family paid tribute his exemplary life, always kindly and earnest a never more graceful than last year when he led Philadelphia delegation to the world advertising c vention at London.

Personal character is not developed by shrinking from the actual facts of life, however ugly, and crimeless newspapers serve merely to distort and weaken public intelligence.

HONOR IN EDITING

THE desperado Gerald Chapman, convicted murder at Hartford, Conn., had long and v commendably concealed his family connecti and had particularly shielded from contamination his infamy a brother who is a highly respected citi of New York and in the employ of that city.

In the investigation made by the State authori prosecuting the murder charge a clue was turned to Chapman's antecedents and a reporter for N York World ran out the story after two or three d of hard work. He reported to his city editor all the facts concerning Chapman's youth and the na and connections of his brother and a sister. As whole country had taken interest in the criminal might have been considered spot news of considera value.

The editorial management of the World decided t no good would come from the publication of family names. The brother lived with his wife five children in a pleasant suburb and enjoyed esteem of his neighbors. Publication of the iden of these people would merely inflict upon them wh undeserved ignominy, and the World suppressed names. The New York American got the same formation and suppressed it for the same reason.

Here is evidence of progress.

April 18, 1925 Volume 57, No. 47

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Building.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
London: The Advertising World represents EDITOR & PUBLISHER for the British Isles, 14 King Street, Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 34 rue Thiers, Boulogne-sur-Seine (Seine).
Tokio: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50.

PERSONALS

COL. R. R. McCORMICK, co-editor of the Chicago Tribune was scheduled to address the graduates, former students and present students of the Pulitzer School of Journalism April 17, under the auspices of the Alumni Association of the School of Journalism.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., publisher of tabloid newspapers in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Miami, Fla., is making an automobile trip from the Pacific coast to New York to see his parents off for Europe. Following his New York visit he will go to Florida on a business trip.

Walter C. Johnson, vice-president and general manager of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) News has been nominated for president of the Chattanooga Rotary Club. He is also secretary-treasurer of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Fred W. Elven, editor of the Cincinnati Free Press, and Mrs. Elven, sailed from New York this week on a visit to the Continent.

Clarence W. Barron, editor and publisher of the Wall Street Journal, is recovering in a Battle Creek, Mich., sanitarium following a serious illness.

James A. Eaton, publisher of the Canandaigua (N. Y.) Daily Messenger, has been elected president of the Canandaigua Chamber of Commerce.

Robert N. Blakeslee, former publisher of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Post, has been chosen vice-president of the Hudson Belting Company of Worcester, Mass.

Milton Garges, superintendent of traffic of the Associated Press, returned to New York, April 10, from a 10-day business trip through Iowa, Minnesota, and Illinois.

W. M. Hamblin, editor and publisher of the Marcus (Ia.) News, is visiting in Southern California.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

COL. WILLIAM F. HENRY, business manager of the Duluth (Minn.) Herald with Mrs. Henry are on their way to the British Isles and the Continent for a two months trip. Employes of the paper gave a farewell dinner to Col. Henry and presented him with a traveling bag.

J. H. Kuntz formerly with the Lancaster (Pa.) Intelligence & News Journal has joined the staff of the Altoona (Pa.) Tribune as circulation manager.

Brigham F. Grant, general manager of the Salt Lake City Deseret News, has been made a member of the new State Racing Commission.

Ray K. Winans, formerly on the Springfield (Mass.) Union, city staff, is now promotion manager in charge of contests and editorial promotion work.

Earle Lancaster, formerly in the advertising agency business in Springfield, Mass., has joined the advertising department of the Springfield (Mass.) Union.

Frederick J. Cook, of New Haven, Conn., has joined the advertising department of the Springfield (Mass.) Union.

James T. Briscoe formerly manager of the Hagerstown (Md.) Daily Mail is ill at his home at Hagerstown. Mr. Briscoe retired after the sale of the Mail to the Herald Publishing Company.

Robert E. Delaplaine, manager of the Frederick (Md.) News-Post has returned to his home after spending the winter in Florida.

Charles J. Lambe, for nine years advertising manager of the Greensboro (N. C.) Daily News has resigned and now is in the insurance business.

Robert W. Dietrich, secretary of the Cincinnati Candy Manufacturers' Association has joined the Cincinnati Post staff as a contact man.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

HAL O'FLAHERTY, former Des Moines, Ia., newspaper man, for the last three years London correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, is expected to return to the United States for a visit in June. He will be accompanied by Mrs. O'Flaherty, and their two children.

Fred J. Marshall, news editor of the Logan (Utah) Journal, and a member of the staff for 28 years, has resigned to enter other work. James C. Allen of Logan has been appointed to succeed him.

Ray S. Coll of the sports department of the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times has resigned and accompanied by his wife and child sailed recently from New York on the steamer President Van Buren for Honolulu to join the staff of the Honolulu Advertiser of which his father Ray S. Coll is managing editor.

J. Albert Hawken, editor of the Hagerstown (Md.) Daily Mail, has returned to his desk after an absence due to illness.

Herbert R. Galt, managing editor of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, underwent an operation last week.

S. E. Moyer has been transferred from the copy desk of the St. Paul Dispatch to the art department.

Charles Fox has been made assistant day telegraph editor of the Buffalo Evening News. W. A. Carpenter has succeeded Fox as night editor of the News.

W. S. Adams has joined the staff of the Charlotte (N. C.) News as a reporter.

W. P. Ezzell has resigned as editor of the Leaksville (N. C.) News.

Miss Ruth E. Pine, society editor of the Trenton Times, motored to Washington, D. C., last week for a short vacation.

G. Stuart Berrill, formerly of the Buffalo Evening Post, has been appointed jury commissioner of the United States district court of Western New York.

Miss Agnes Hall, society editor of the Buffalo Evening Post, is in Europe on six months' tour. Her duties are being performed by Miss Anne Couschiane, formerly of the Buffalo Times.

James E. Goggin, former city hall reporter on the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News, has joined the staff of the Boston American. Frank A. Barnard, formerly city hall and labor reporter on the Brockton (Mass.) Times, has succeeded Goggin.

Charles G. Frost, attached to the city staff of the Lynn (Mass.) Daily Item, last week received a commission as captain in the United States Officers Reserve Corps.

Hubert Roussel, fiction writer of Houston, has re-entered newspaper work on the staff of the San Antonio Evening News.

John M. Oglesby, former city editor of the Concord (N. C.) Daily Tribune, has been appointed judge of the North Carolina Superior court by Governor A. W. McLean.

Austin J. Scannell has taken charge of the Merrimack Valley edition of the Boston American, with headquarters at the Lowell office, in the absence of the editor of the edition, Arthur J. Quinn, who was married recently and is on his honeymoon.

George Harris, who has been in Chicago on leave from the assistant city editorship of the San Antonio Express, has resigned. He is succeeded by Jack Hazel.

George Boothby, former newspaper reporter on the staff of the New York Herald and the New York World, was this week named receiver of Le Restaurant Sorbonne, New York.

Charles W. Duke, Sunday editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, and Mrs. Duke, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Susan Virginia, Sunday, April 5. This is their third child.

Joseph G. Davis, golf editor for the Chicago Tribune for 25 years and one of the men responsible for popularizing the game in the west, has resigned. Morrow Krum will succeed him.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

EDWARD E. LEAKE, editor of the Woodland Daily Democrat, celebrated his 75th birthday this week by letting a contract for the erection of a handsome new building for his afternoon daily newspaper. It is to be completed July 15. On that day Editor Leake will celebrate the 55th anniversary of his entry into the newspaper business.

EDWARD E. LEAKE

Although Mr. Leake has been at the helm of an interior paper all of his lifetime, he has won political recognition. For nine years he was United States Appraiser of the Port of San Francisco, serving throughout the entire Wilson Administration and continuing over for an extra year under the Harding regime. He has also held various State political offices.

Editor Leake's newspaper apprenticeship was served on the San Francisco Examiner. He later worked on the San Francisco Chronicle and the Vallejo Chronicle. His first newspaper property was the Dixon Tribune, a weekly. He sold that business 35 years ago, after buying the Wodland Daily Democrat. He has conducted the Democrat ever since.

The architecture of his new building is Spanish. It will be distinctive and quite unlike the ordinary appearance of a newspaper building. It will be a two-story structure.

J. Kenneth Bolles, of Hartford, Conn., publicity manager of the American Radio Relay League for the past two years, has resigned to become editorial promotion manager for the Baltimore (Md.) Sun. William C. Murray, formerly copy reader on the Hartford Times, succeeds Mr. Bolles.

Joseph Pierson, cable editor of the Chicago Tribune, has been assigned to special work in South America. He was among the reporters who met the World World Flyers in Labrador.

John S. Piper, news editor of the Des Moines Register has resigned, effective April 23. Mr. Piper will drive through to the Pacific Coast, where he will join the San Francisco Daily News. His successor on the Register has not been named.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

LEWIS M. NACHMAN from classified staff, Chicago Daily News, to classified manager, Springfield (Mo.) Republican.

C. L. Barnard from San Antonio Evening News staff to Denver Post.

Thomas B. Wheeler, from copy reader, Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News, to copy desk, Boston American.

Frank Schmans, from Chicago Herald Examiner, to St. Paul Dispatch copy desk.

Ashby Lovelace, from telegraph desk, Buffalo Evening News, to copy desk, New York Sun.

Don J. Kirkley, from United Press bureau, Dallas, to staff, San Antonio Evening News.

Donald Cameron, from city staff, Springfield (Mass.) Republican, to staff, New Bedford (Mass.) Standard.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

C. H. FULLER has been promoted from correspondent for the Associated Press at Montgomery, Ala., to Arkansas state mail editor with headquarters at Little Rock. He is replaced at Montgomery by Turner Jordan.

Pat Irey, Buffalo operator for the Consolidated Press, is seriously ill. Irving M. Sherry of the Baltimore office is subbing for him.

Robert L. Gilbert, formerly sporting editor of the Morristown (N. J.) Jerseyman, is now with the Associated Press at the New Haven office.

William F. Carter, Associated Press operator at Hagerstown, Md., on the Morning Herald wire, has been transferred to Wheeling, W. Va., as vacation relief man.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

RED DEER (ALTA.) NEWS, has been sold by J. A. Carswell to H. G. Scott. The News was established in 1905, by G. A. Love and was bought by Mr. Carswell in 1906.

Louis F. Jordan will assume control of the Waynesboro (Va.) Valley Virginian on July 1.

Benjamin Hoover has sold the Long Beach (Cal.) Argus, a weekly, to W. C. Whitthorne, who will act as editor. Bertha E. Hostutler is the business manager of the paper under the new ownership.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

BOSTON HERALD, 32-page Easter Church music edition, April 11.

Winnipeg Manitoba Free Press, 12-page Fashion Supplement, April 4.

Burlington (Ia.) Gazette, 14-page edition on opening of Royal Cloak Company's new store.

MARRIED

MISS ESTHER ANNENBERG, daughter of M. L. Annenberg, general circulation director of the Hearst newspapers and magazines on April 12, to Lee Simon of Chicago, at the Great Neck home of the Annenbergs.

Jack Gibson, reporter on the New Orleans Times-Picayune, to Miss Margaret Norton.

WITH THE SPECIALS

INGRAHAM-POWERS, INC., publishers', representatives, New York and Chicago, have been appointed to represent nationally the recently merged Oswego (N. Y.) Palladium-Times.

Thomas F. Clark Company, Inc., publishers' representatives, have been appointed to represent the Tiffin (O.) Daily Tribune.

John M. Branham Company, publishers' representative, has moved to larger quarters in the London Guarantee & Accident Building, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENTS

BROOKLYN TIMES has purchased six additional Intertypes bringing the total number in the plant to 26.

Anaheim (Cal.) Plain Dealer has installed one of the Pacific Telegraph & Telephone Company's type bar printing telegraph machines.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

D. O. FLEMING was elected president of the Ann Arbor, Mich., Typographical Union, No. 154, at the annual election last week. Harry L. French was elected vice-president.

SCHOOLS

C. D. KEEN, Marianna, Fla., has been named the best all-round advertising student in the senior class of the School of Commerce, Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, Ga., and awarded the Alpha Delta Sigma key, which is given on the basis of scholarship, personality, and the application of advertising, journalistic and merchandising ideas in school activities. He is business manager of the Yellow Jacket, the Tech comic monthly.

Annual Gridiron Banquet of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity. University of Michigan chapter, was held last week at the Michigan Union, Ann Arbor. Lee A. White, of the Detroit News, warned the editors and reporters that compression of news would be a necessity within a few years, owing to the depletion of forests, and stated as his belief that soon one of the prime qualifications of a news writer will be his ability to condense his stories.

Edward McKernon, superintendent of the Eastern division of the Associated Press, was principal speaker at the three-day session of members of Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic society, in convention at Syracuse University last week. Other speakers on the program were: Dr. John W. Baker, editor of the Syracuse Post Standard; Dr. John W. Howe, editor of the Syracuse Herald; Chancellor Charles W. Flint of Syracue University.

Thirty students of journalism from Rockford, Ill., under the auspices of the Rockford (Ill.) Star, visited Chicago last week to learn sources of news and methods of news gathering. The group visited newspaper establishments and spent several hours in Chicago courtrooms.

Robert B. Newcomb of Cleveland, O., a Junior in the Department of Journalism at Syracuse University, has been awarded the annual $200 prize scholarship offered each year by the Syracuse (N. Y.) Journal. The competition was for the best news story, feature story, and dramatic criticism submitted during a period of two weeks.

ASSOCIATIONS

CHICAGO WOMEN'S ADVERTISING CLUB held an On-To-Houston rally at a recent dinner meeting at which a list of 18 members of the Club who will attend the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World meet in Houston, May 9-14 was read. It was voted to send the Club president, Miss Laura Alta Johnson and defray her expenses. Pencils and favors were furnished for the dinner by the Women's Advertising Club of Houston.

Advertising Club of Los Angeles, under the direction of Hollis Wade, will send a delegation of 100 members to the Houston convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, May 9 to 14.

Texas Editorial Association has accepted the invitation of Brownsville to hold its next convention in that city, Dec. 3, 4 and 5. This association is composed of old-timers in the newspaper business.

Oklahoma City Advertising Club has elected James Andrews, advertising manager of the McEwen-Halliburton department store, president for the coming year.

Lynn (Mass.) Press Club held its annual Frolic and Ball at the Ocean House, Swampscott, April 10.

Advertising Club of Jackson, Mich., has become affiliated with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. J. C. Watts, Smith-Winchester Company, is president, and Robert Coe, secretary-treasurer.

Advertising Club of Des Moines will vote next Tuesday upon the matter of opening membership to women of the city.

LIBEL AWARD AFFIRMED

Being Drafted for War Service Not Unpatriotic Court Holds

Any publication charging a veteran of the World War with being unpatriotic and with shirking his duty by failing to enlist until the draft law brought him into the service, is libelous, says a decision of the Oklahoma supreme court.

The opinion was in a case involving $2,500 damages awarded to Andrew C. Martz, owner and publisher of the Okeene (Okla.) Record against George F. and T. J. Lewis, publishers of the Okeene Leader. The damage award was affirmed.

A published article in the Leader stated that Martz was a member of the American Legion "by act of compulsory military service only."

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Chambers Joins Peck Agency—MacManus, Inc., Opens Branch in Cincinnati—Philadelphia Firm Expands

STANLEY H. CHAMBERS, formerly secretary of the Dave Bloch Company, advertising agency, is now associated with the Peck Advertising Agency, Inc., New York, directing several accounts.

The Peck agency is now placing a newspaper campaign for "7-11", confection manufactured by D. Auerbach & Sons, New York. Eastern dailies are being used.

McManus, Inc., of Detroit, has opened a branch office in Cincinnati, located in the Traction Building, 5th and Walnut streets. R. S. Heaton is in charge. This agency maintains other branch offices in Cleveland, New York, and Toledo. The Cincinnati office primarily will extend direct service to the Crosby Radio Corporation of that city, according to Arden Yinkey, vice-president of the McManus organization.

Due to increased business, the Barnes & Fehling Company has taken larger quarters at 1600 Walnut street, Philadelphia. They were previously located at 1530 Chestnut street.

Frank F. Lamorelle, formerly with the copy staff of the Cramer Krasselt Company, Milwaukee, has joined Nelson Chesman & Co., Cleveland advertising agency, as head of the copy staff.

The Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company moved to new headquarters April 15 at 1 Madison avenue, New York.

Alfred Biggs, Walter P. Mount and C. Curtiss Main have joined the staff of the Philip Kobbe Company, Inc., 45 W. 45th street, New York. L. Wester, associated with the company for five years, has been made assistant treasurer.

Norman A. Markwell has joined Hommann, Tarcher & Cornell, Inc., New York advertising agency, as an account executive. Mr. Markwell, who has been in the advertising agency business for several years, was formerly advertising manager of the American Molasses Company and the Nulmoline Company.

John A. Aborn has left the staff of the Manchester (N. H.) Union, and is now on the staff of the Frank G. Morris Company, New York advertising agency.

Roy Simmons, secretary of the Salt Lake City Advertising Club and a member of the staff of Stevens and Wallis, Inc., Salt Lake advertising agents, has been appointed public relations man for the Utah Gas and Coke Co., Salt Lake City.

The Veteran Advertising Agency, Inc., of Seattle has announced the opening of an office in Portland, Ore., with Mac M. Wilkins, vice-president of the company in charge.

Norman S. H. Catts, managing director of Catts-Patterson Company Limited, advertising agency of Sydney, Australia, left Sydney March 12 on a visit to the United States. He will make Chicago his headquarters. His agency recently distributed a booklet "Australian Advertising," giving statistics regarding that continent.

William Hay has been appointed art director of the Brennan-Eley Company, Chicago.

Thomas E. Carnahan, formerly with the H. W. Kastor & Sons Company and the Arnold Joerns Company, has been made advertising manager of the Zenith Radio Company.

Howard V. Kennington, with the Chicago Herald & Examiner for the past ten years, is now production manager of the Albert Frank & Co.

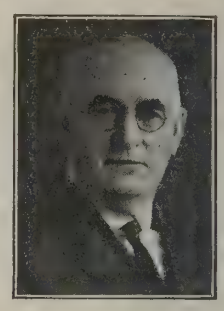
The Dudley Davis Advertising Agency has been formed in Memphis with H. D. Davis as president. Offices of the concern are in the Cotton Exchange building. Mr. Davis for many years has been associated with Memphis agencies. The firm at present is handling among its accounts that of the Maury Cole Company, (Canova Coffee), and a portion of the U. S. Bedding Company (Sterling Springs.)

H. L. Emslie, formerly with Thomas M. Bowers Advertising Agency, has joined the staff of the Conover-Mooney Company.

Otto R. Stadelman has become space buyer and office manager for the Maurice J. Needham Company, Chicago. He was formerly with David C. Thomas Company.

Claude N. Palmer, formerly with Williams & Cunnyngham, Inc., has joined the staff of Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, Chicago.

Miss Florence White, formerly with the Radford Publications, has become associated with the Lakeport Advertising Agency, Chicago.



W. R. Evans, formerly of Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, Chicago, and advertising manager of Princess Pat, Ltd., has become advertising manager of the Royal Tailors.

In some families thrift consists in worrying about what became of last month's money.—Anderson Herald.

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

Michigan Press Looks Forward t Successful Year Under Hubbell

DAVID E. HUBBELL, elected pr dent of the Michigan Press Asso tion at its recent annual meeting was b in Lexingt Mich., in 18 and received education in schools of t village. As a he was interes in the mechan side of newspa work and star to learn the b ness on the C well (Mic Jeffersonian, paper he publishes.

DAVID E. HUBBELL

He entered editorial fi when he purchased the Marlette Lea in 1889 and very soon developed journal into one of the leaders of county. Some 15 years ago he sold Leader and purchased the Jeffersonian this tmie removed to Croswell, and since been at its head. His election president of the association was an ho conferred upon him for many years consistent work in this and similar ganizations.

As president he hopes to make this of the most successful years of the ganization, and the enthusiasm evider at the recent meeting is an assura that his hopes will be realized. One the duties that will fall to the presi and executive committee will be the lection of a full time field man, s $3,000 having been pledged at the mee to help defray this expense.

"The Michigan Press Association i fine shape, thank you," is Mr. Hubb message to the craft.

Kansas City
JOURNAL-POST

Nearly a million readers a day—in the Heart of America

CIRCULATION

Journal (Morn.)	Post (Eve.)	Journal-Post (Sunday)
151,647	160,928	177,046

Publisher's statement, March 31, 1925.

RATES

Morning, .21; Eve., .26; Sunday, .30; Gravure, .70. Reductions on contract space.

VERREE & CONKLIN

NEW YORK CHICAGO KANSAS CITY DETROIT SAN FRANCISCO

KEEPING THE LINOTYPE USER AHEAD OF THE PROCESSION

Be Sure to See the Linotype Exhibit

in the

East Room of the Waldorf

During the A.P. and A.N.P.A. Conventions

April 20 to 24

As Usual, the Latest Developments in Modern Composing-Room Methods
Will be Shown There

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

Mergenthaler Linotype Company

Brooklyn, New York

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Agencies in the Principal Cities of the World

ORIGINATORS : : DEVELOPERS : : IMPROVERS

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Some New Comic Characters Start Cutting Capers—"Ma" Ferguson Writes About Her Job—Count Karolyi and His "Gag"

THREE new comic characters are prepared to cut capers through the columns of the nation's press.

"Ella Cinders" will make her bow June 1; "Good Scout Tommy" has already started his antics; while "Scoop, the Cub Reporter," will stage a revival under the direction of Frank Hopkins' pen.

Syndicates handling the three are respectively the Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York, the New York World Syndicate and the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate.

"'Ella Cinders' derives her name from and is based on Cinderella," Max Elser, Jr., president of Metropolitan declared, explaining his new strip offering.

"The 'Cinderella motif' is generally accepted in fiction, in the movies and in the legitimate drama as the most popular of all themes.

"This new strip of the Metropolitan was planned last summer, by its originator, "Bill" Conselman, formerly of the editorial staff of the Los Angeles Times. The drawing is the work of Charlie Plumb, who was formerly on the Los Angeles Times. The introductory strips were drawn last year."

Edward McCullough, who draws "Good Scout Tommy", is also creator of "Embarrassing Moments" for the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate, and produces a weekly comic strip called "Folks in Our Town" for the Publishers Autocaster Service, Inc.

Frank Hopkins and his "Scoop, the Cub Reporter," were once big favorites among newspaper readers. Mr. Hopkins is now living at Camden, S. C.

John Held, Jr., who draws "O! Margy!" for the United Features Syndicate, New York, will sail from New York April 18 on the liner Orbita to spend several months at Gibraltar and Morocco.

F. B. Knapp, manager of the New York World Syndicate is issuing invitations to a reception which his syndicate is giving editors and publishers to meet Houdini, the Magician, from four to six o'clock next Thursday at room number 123 at the Waldorf. Houdini conducts the Red Magic section for the New York World Syndicate.

Dorothy Campbell Hurd, American National Woman Golf Champion, is now writing a series of weekly golf articles for the United Features Syndicate, New York.

Mrs. M. A. Ferguson, Governor of Texas, has written a series of seven by-line articles for newspapers, which is being handled by the Capital Syndicate, Austin, Tex.

The Cosmos Newspaper Service, New York, is one of two syndicates which, along with a score or more newspaper reporters, came to the rescue of Count Karolyi, when leaving this country for Canada, he found himself no longer under a pledge of silence. The other was the North American Newspaper Alliance, which obtained a signed article by the Count written in Montreal the day he arrived there. Cosmos signed a contract with the ex-President of Hungary for a series of 20 daily newspaper articles, and four Sunday installments, telling of his fight for freedom. The same syndicate is also arranging for a series to be written later by Countess Karolyi.

A special interpretative telegraphic news service written by Dr. Edwin E. Slosson, director of Science Service, was furnished by Science Service to many of the larger newspapers during the American Chemical Society meeting at Baltimore last week. This is the big meeting of chemists during the year and this special wire service supplemented the regular daily news service of Science Service. Watson Davis, managing editor, and Dr. Frank Thone and James Stokley of the Science Service staff also attended the meeting.

"Broken Off" is the title of the latest Ruby M. Ayres serial being offered newspapers by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, New York. McClure has signed a contract with Miss Ayers for the second serial rights on all her stories for five years.

Lillian Eichler, author of a book of etiquette, has prepared a new feature for the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate to run under the caption "To the Manner Born," in two column illustration, with brief text. The author answers questions on etiquette submitted by newspaper readers.

Aileen Riggin, Olympic swimming champion, is writing a sports column for women for the Post Syndicate, New York, under the caption, "The Modern Diana."

FLASHES

Another thing an experienced newspaper man can do is to make a correction sound like an entirely new item.—Columbus Ohio State Journal.

A Mitchell County dealer went out to a country church to demonstrate a new radio and couldn't get hold of a thing but dance music.—Jewell (Kan.) Republican.

Cynics are the ultra-civilized, who quite propertly no longer have faith in civilization.—Baltimore Sun.

A new mausoleum in a Pennsylvania cemetery has been condemned by the building inspector because it hasn't any fire escapes.—New York American.

An optimist is a man who hopes he gets run over by a doctor's auto.—Columbia Record.

Usually the scare head implies that the reader is a bonehead.—Cleveland Times.

A petrified human footprint four feet long has been discovered in South Africa. Ha! The remains of one of those fellows who dangle their hoofs across street car aisles.—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journal.

A young man who will marry a woman of fifty declares he "would rather be an old girl's darling than a young girl's slave." Equal rights.—New York World

A path of glory leads but to a bool of memoirs.—Pittsburgh Sun.

Your true American is never awe except by a millionaire and a head waiter —Nashville Tennessean.

The Pullman Company rises up in out raged indignity and declares that it lose a half-million towels each year. Oh, th robbers!—Waterloo Tribune.

In the old days the difference betwee a nobody and a somebody was in th blood. Now it's in the bank.—Dubuqu Times-Journal.

One thing that follows the swallo in some instances is a funeral.—Nash ville Tennessean.

As to spring weather, there are noth ing but Fundamentalists.—F. P. A. in th New York World.

It's a queer civilization that can kee dirt off the streets and can't keep it o the magazine stands.—Baltimore Sun.

"To loosen a fruit-jar cap, soak it. That is the orthodox method of makin the taxpayer loosen, also.—Springfiel State-Register.

France seems to heed not the rumbl of a distant dun.—Wall Street Journal.

To make it perfectly fair, how'd it d to let Mellon and Cou-ens make out eac other's tax returns?—Dallas News.

CHURCH ADVERTISING URGED

Minister Declares Every Church Should Have an Ad Budget

Every church, regardless of denomination and creed, should have an advertising budget and should use a good sized space every Saturday and Sunday, Rev. P. H. Martin of Davenpoort, told Des Moines ministers who met Tuesday with the Des Moines Advertising Club.

The Rev. Mr. Martin said individual church advertising is good, but it would be more effective for the churches to have advertising and publicity committees to handle advertising. He suggested that under the co-operative plan it would be possible to carry page advertisements in daily papers on Saturday and Sunday.

The minister declared that one church in Detroit which advertised consistently for one year expended $2,000 and in return received $10,000 more in contributions than the previous year, when no advertising was carried. The church also secured a large number of new members.

"There is one phase of church advertising that must not be overlooked," the Rev. Mr. Martin said, "When a merchant advertises certain goods he must have the goods to back up his copy. Advertising will do the church no good if we don't deliver the goods at our stand in the pulpit."

Graham Stewart, director of advertising of the Peoples Popular Monthly of Des Moines, was named chairman of the Advertising Club church committee. The Ministerial Association will appoint a committee and it is the intention to work out a church advertising scheme for use in Des Moines.

Darling Convalescing

Cartoonist Jay Darling's illness has entered the convalescent stage it was announced Thursday. After a consultation of physicians a statement was issued in which they expressed themselves as satisfied as to the progress he has made. Mr. Darling is now able to sit up a few minutes daily.

"Bugs" Baer Is Married

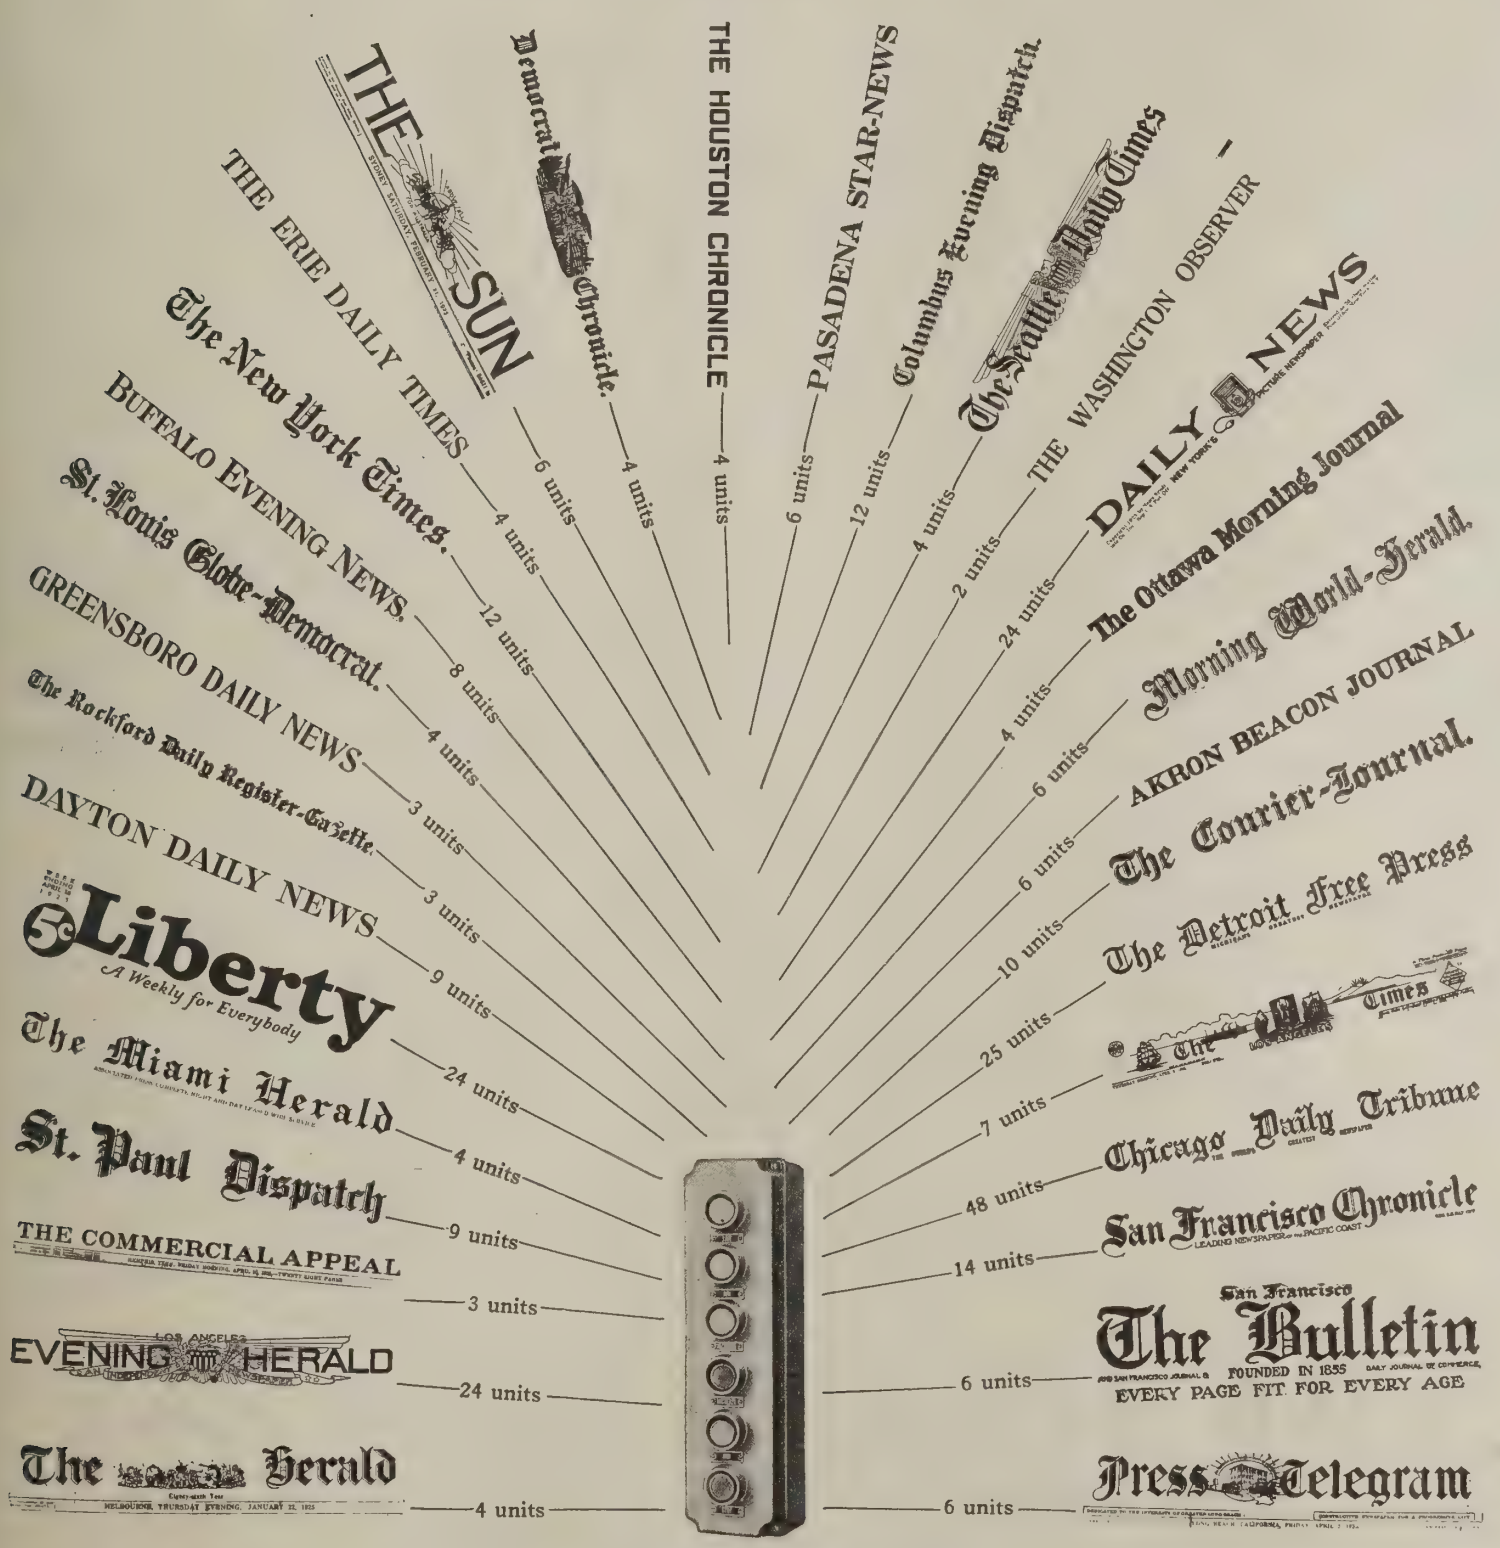
Arthur ("Bugs") Baer, humorist for the Hearst newspapers, was married to Miss Marjorie Cassidy of Brooklyn, N. Y., at the Cathedral of the Holy Name in Chicago, April 14. The couple left immediately for the Pacific Coast, from where, it is said, they will start on a two-year tour of the world.

Church Advertising Is Growing

The idea of using display space to urge church attendance is developing over the country. Year by year the Church Advertising Department has held meetings in connection with the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. The program for the Houston convention is being organized.

Advertising of this sort not only helps the newspaper but uplifts the community, just as does the better health advertising of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company or the public library advertising done in various communities.

Copy and plans of the way other papers have cooperated in church advertising can be obtained from advertising headquarters by addressing the Church Advertising Department, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, 383 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.



CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A.A.C.W.
383 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.
DR. C. F. REISNER, President

CLINE SYSTEM FOR UNIT TYPE PRESSES

FULL AUTOMATIC CONTROL SAFE :: RELIABLE

PAPER ROLL STANDS
REELS WITH AUTOMATIC TENSION

CLINE SYSTEM
CLINE ELECTRIC MANUFACTURING COMPANY CHICAGO
QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE

The Boss of the Press

CLINE ELECTRIC MFG. CO.

CLINE-WESTINGHOUSE PRINTING EQUIPMENT

NEW YORK CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO

ENWRIGHT QUITS N. Y. NEWSPAPER FIELD

Boston nad Lynn Publisher Sells Evening Bulletin to Syndicate of New York Residents—Says Paper Will Be Cotinued

Frederick W. Enwright, president and treasurer of the New York Evening Bulletin, announced this week he had sold his entire holdings in that newspaper to retire from the New York field and devote his entire time to his Lynn and Boston, Mass., dailies.

He declined to make known the names of the new owners, and efforts on the part of EDITOR & PUBLISHER to ascertain them before going to press were unavailing.

At the Bulletin office a reporter for EDITOR & PUBLISHER was told the new owners were "not at all anxious for publicity." They were, he was informed, not experienced publishers. The present editorial and business executives would continue in charge of publishing the paper, Frank Carroll, who declared himself to be speaking for the business manager said.

The editorial page masthead of the Bulletin under the new ownership carried the names of Mr. Carroll and Arthur C. Flynn as directors.

Mr. Enwright issued a short statement announcing the sale, but did not name the interests acquiring his stock. He said the syndicate would continue to publish the Bulletin daily as a Democratic newspaper, continuing the policy set down when Mr. Enwright first started publication ten months ago.

Mr. Enwright said he understood the price of the newspaper might be reduced in the daily issues. The present price is three cents. Pending reorganization by the new owners Arthur C. Flynn will continue as business manager, and it is understood, many of the other employees will be retained.

Mr. Enwright's statement said his sale had consisted of the transfer of 14,500 shares of common stock.

The Bulletin was organized in June, 1924. Mr. Enwright said in his statement announcing the sale that the Bulletin has a daily circulation of 42,000 and 101,000 on Sunday.

EMPHASIS ON CRIME SEEN AS DEFECT

But Newspapers Are Improving Daily, H. V. Kaltenborn of Brooklyn Eagle Declares at Cooper Union Lecture

The salient defect in the present day newspaper is the emphasis placed on crime, according to H. V. Kaltenborn, associate editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, who lectured April 14 on the subject: "The Press—Prophet or Profiteer," at Cooper Union, New York.

The interest of the public in crime stories is the chief reason for the amount of publicity given them, he said.

"The time will come when the demarcation line between papers which emphasize crime news and those that do not will be clearly defined," he declared.

"The press has always been abused and properly so," he continued. "Almost all criticism of the press is justified by certain types of newspapers. Papers have changed greatly in recent years. Because of the many improvements in mechanical equipment, a paper now represents the mingling and collaboration of thousands of different minds and no one man or policy predominates. The old-time editor who read everything and gave a personal touch to the paper no longer exists.

"The only papers that ever amount to anything are those that pay their own way," he said. "A paper must be definitely a big business enterprise or it will surely fail. An endowed paper caters to the beliefs and prejudices of the interests of those who finance it and so shuts off a large class of subscribers necessary to its successful operation."

WEEK'S AD TIPS

Biow Company, 9 East 40th street, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for C. Partos, "Partola," New York.

Chambers Agency, Inc., 339 Carondelet street, New Orleans. Putting on a campaign in Middlewest and Western papers for the Biloxi Canners, Biloxi, Miss.

Critchfield & Company, Brooks Building, Chicago. Now handling account of the Combination Products Company, furniture, Chicago.

Crosby Chicago, 29 Quincy street, Chicago. Newspapers in the southwest receiving contracts on the Northern Hemlock and Hardwood Association, Oshkosh, Wis.

Dunlap-Ward Advertising Company, Keith Building, Cleveland. Renewing some newspaper contracts for the Chandler Motor Car Company, Cleveland.

Erickson Company, 381 4th avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for the Indian Refining Company, gasoline, Lawrenceville, Ill., and New York City.

Erwin, Wasey & Company, 844 Rush street, Chicago. A general list of newspapers receiving copy on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, Chicago.

Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company, 1 Madison avenue, New York. Reported will place orders with newspapers for the American Cigar Company, "El Roi Tan" cigar, New York.

Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company, 1110 Grand avenue, Kansas City, Mo. Newspapers in the southwest receiving copy on the Cook Paint & Varnish Company, Kansas City, Mo.

Charles H. Fuller Company, 629 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Newspapers generally are receiving page schedules for April insertion on Dr. Coffee, Davenport, Iowa.

Gardiner-Mace Company, 9 East 40th street, New York. Now handling account of the Sweets Company of America, "Tootsie Candy Rolls," New York.

Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, 450 4th avenue, New York. Has secured the accounts of the Fitch Publishing Company, New York, and the Ocean-O Products Company, Newark, N. J.

Groesbeck, Hearn & Hindle, 350 Madison avenue, New York. Again placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Roig & Langsdorf, Inc., "Girard Cigars," Philadelphia.

Hazard Advertising Corporation, 7 East 42nd street, New York. Has secured account of Toch Bros., Inc., "R. I. W.," Paints and varnishes, New York.

Hower Advertising Agency Company, U. S. National Bank Building, Denver. Has secure the accounts of the H. A. Marx Grocery Com pany, "Red Dot" canned goods, Denver an Williams Chocolate Products Company, Denve

Charles W. Hoyt Company, 116 West 32n street, New York. Placing orders with news papers in various sections for the Internation Development Company, "Alumo" skates an shoes, Malden, Mass.

J. Roland Kay Company, 163 East Er street, Chicago. A general list of newspape in the middle west receiving orders on Mart & Martin, Chicago.

Klau-Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen, 4 Sycamore street, Milwaukee. Has secured th account of the Pere Marquette Line Steame of Milwaukee.

Kling-Gibson Advertising Company, 310 Sou Michigan avenue, Chicago. Additional cop on the Williams Oil-O-Matic Heater Compan Bloomington, Ill., is expected late in April.

Lord & Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenu Chicago. Newspapers in a scattered territo receiving contracts on the All Year Club Southern California, Los Angeles.

Mace Advertising Company, Lehmann Bld Peoria, Ill. Copy will start in May on t Gem City Business College, Peoria, to a sm list of newspapers already prepared.

Mitchell-Faust Advertising Company, South Dearborn street, Chicago. A gener list of newspapers receiving copy on t Nu-Del Laboratories, Chicago.

Morse International Agency, 449 4th avenu New York. Placing orders with newspape in selected sections for Enoch Morgan's So Company, "Sapolio," New York. Has secur the accounts of Henry C. Miner, Inc., "Car Rouge," New York, and the Chloro Chemi Corporation, "Firma Chloro," Mount Verno N. Y.

Potts-Turnbull Company, 6 North Michig avenue, Chicago. A list of newspapers about ten towns is being used on the All B. Wrisley Company (Olivilo), Chicago. O one piece of copy is scheduled on this l and no more is contemplated for the prese Frank Presbrey Company, 247 Park avenu New York. Placing account of the Natio Park Bank, New York.

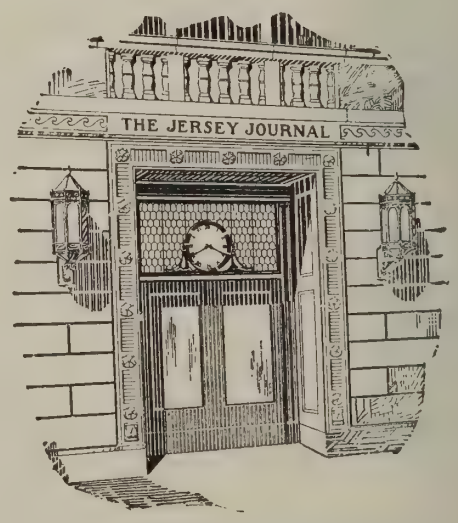
William H. Rankin Company, 342 Madis avenue, New York. Reported will shortly pl orders with newspapers for the American T bacco Company, "Pall Mall" cigarettes, N York.



Carl Reimers Company, Gotham Natio Bank Building, New York. Has secured account of the Dexter Rubber Manufacturi Company, Goshen, New York, manufactur of tire flaps.

Sheck Advertising Agency, 9 Clinton stre Newark, N. J. Making contracts with so Pennsylvania newspapers for Burdan Br Ice Cream Company, Pottstown, Pa.

Members of the A. N. P. A.

in New York for the Annual Convention are cordially invited to inspect the new home of

THE JERSEY JOURNAL

JOURNAL SQUARE, JERSEY CITY

HOW TO GET THERE: Take the Hudson Tubes at 33d St. and 6th Ave. (one block west of the Waldorf) to Journal Square Station, Jersey City — A 20 Minute Trip

48 newspapers have become clients of the United Press and the United News since January 1, 1925—a period of unsurpassed growth and expansion.

FOUR PAPERS ATTACK CRIME NEWS

(Continued from page 42)

"If the total news space inches of the Daily Review for the week should be considered this total of slightly more than ten per cent crime news would dwindle to a minute figure.

"The Review always attempts to include on its front page only items of news value. A story with a criminal or sensational trend must have either the stamp of 'big news' or carry some Decatur angle to win a place.

"The remainder of the classifications and the number of items and the per cent of the whole for the week follows:

"Divorce items—two during the entire week. This was .037 per cent of the total.

"Suicides—none.

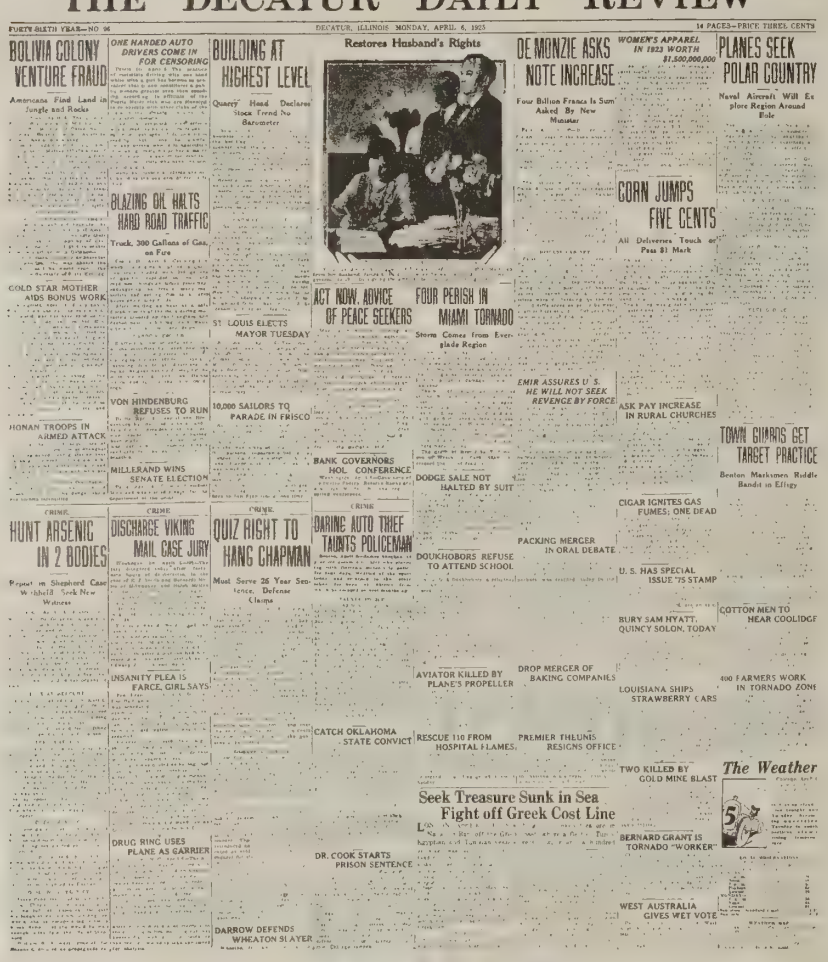
"Scandals—The Donahey case in Ohio, the Stillman case and the Culp case in Ohio, furnished the three items during the week. This was .056 per cent.

"Disasters and accidents—20 during the week or 3.76 per cent.

"Political—The elections of the week swelled the figures above the average. Domestic politics took 50 items. Foreign had 36, per cents 9.61 and 6.7 respectively.

"General (unclassified)—A total of 182 appeared in this column. A total of 34.2 per cent.

"Economic and Industrial—This classification did not include market page stories. A total of 56 items were used. This was 10.5 per cent.



"Religion—Twenty-six items were devoted to religion. This was 3.76 per cent."

Fayetteville's Method

Will E. Hayes, editor of the Fayetteville Observer told EDITOR & PUBLISHER how crime news was banned by his paper.

"Believing that the North American newspapers more and more are approaching the stage of development wherein they must recognize that the publication of crime news, with all its lurid details, is not a deterrent to crime but rather is suggestive of ways and means by which others may commit certain crimes and get away with them, the Fayetteville Observer decided upon the policy of abolishing crime news for a period of 15 days beginning on Monday, April 13," he stated.

"In the first place this is to be a test of public sentiment. It will give the readers an opportunity to read an afternoon daily newspaper for two weeks in which they will find only the highest type of constructive and informative news on the progress of the State, national, and world along lines of a distinctive higher plane than that of criminal procedure.

THE DECATUR DAILY REVIEW

FORTY-SIXTH YEAR—NO 96 DECATUR, ILLINOIS MONDAY, APRIL 6, 1925 14 PAGES—PRICE THREE CENTS

BOLIVIA COLONY VENTURE FRAUD

Americans Find Land in Jungle and Rocks

ONE HANDED AUTO DRIVERS COME IN FOR CENSORING

BUILDING AT HIGHEST LEVEL

Quarry Head Declares Stock Trend No Barometer

Restores Husband's Rights

DE MONZIE ASKS NOTE INCREASE

Four Billion Francs Is Sum Asked By New Minister

WOMEN'S APPAREL IN 1923 WORTH $1,500,000,000

PLANES SEEK POLAR COUNTRY

Naval Aircraft Will Explore Region Around Pole

BLAZING OIL HALTS HARD ROAD TRAFFIC

Truck, 300 Gallons of Gas, on Fire

CORN JUMPS FIVE CENTS

All Deliveries Touch or Pass $1 Mark

GOLD STAR MOTHER AIDS BONUS WORK

ACT NOW, ADVICE OF PEACE SEEKERS

FOUR PERISH IN MIAMI TORNADO

Storm Comes from Everglade Region

ST. LOUIS ELECTS MAYOR TUESDAY

EMIR ASSURES U. S. HE WILL NOT SEEK REVENGE BY FORCE

VON HINDENBURG REFUSES TO RUN

10,000 SAILORS TO PARADE IN FRISCO

ASK PAY INCREASE IN RURAL CHURCHES

HONAN TROOPS IN ARMED ATTACK

TOWN GUARDS GET TARGET PRACTICE

Benton Marksmen Riddle Bandit in Effigy

MILLERAND WINS SENATE ELECTION

BANK GOVERNORS HOL CONFERENCE

DODGE SALE NOT HALTED BY SUIT

CIGAR IGNITES GAS FUMES; ONE DEAD

CRIME

HUNT ARSENIC IN 2 BODIES

Report in Shepherd Case Withheld York New Witness

CRIME

DISCHARGE VIKING MAIL CASE JURY

CRIME

QUIZ RIGHT TO HANG CHAPMAN

Must Serve 26 Year Sentence, Defense Claims

CRIME

DARING AUTO THIEF TAUNTS POLICEMAN

PACKING MERGER IN ORAL DEBATE

DOUKHOBORS REFUSE TO ATTEND SCHOOL

U. S. HAS SPECIAL ISSUE 75 STAMP

BURY SAM HYATT, QUINCY SOLON, TODAY

COTTON MEN TO HEAR COOLIDGE

INSANITY PLEA IS FARCE, GIRL SAYS

AVIATOR KILLED BY PLANE'S PROPELLER

DROP MERGER OF BAKING COMPANIES

LOUISIANA SHIPS STRAWBERRY CARS

400 FARMERS WORK IN TORNADO ZONE

CATCH OKLAHOMA STATE CONVICT

RESCUE 110 FROM HOSPITAL FLAMES

PREMIER THEUNIS RESIGNS OFFICE

TWO KILLED BY GOLD MINE BLAST

The Weather

Seek Treasure Sunk in Sea Fight off Greek Cost Line

DRUG RING USES PLANE AS CARRIER

DR. COOK STARTS PRISON SENTENCE

BERNARD GRANT IS TORNADO "WORKER"

WEST AUSTRALIA GIVES WET VOTE

DARROW DEFENDS WHEATON SLAYER

News of sin banished to lower left-hand corner and unmistakably labelled.

"In its front page announcement of this policy, the Observer stated that it will, in taking out the crime news, 'virtually replace evil with good in its columns.' The Observer further stated that whether this policy will be continued at the expiration of the test will depend entirely upon the feeling of the reading public towards it.

"The Observer, having won recognition in North Carolina as a journal of the highest type, has from time to time, purposely omitted crime news for a day without saying anything about it. To all appearance there has been no unfavorable reaction. The 15-day test, however, will serve to give a continuity which cannot fail to be noticed, and the Observer's readers, being average readers such as will be found in the towns and cities the country over, will be watched and will be given an opportunity to express themselves either for or against the permanent abolition of crime stories. We expect that whatever our readers decide, their decision can be taken as sort of a barometer on the feelings which would be apparent in any other city which might try the same experiment.

"We believe that, with the publication of other activities than crime, our readers will be benefited thereby morally and mentally. We believe that crime with its lurid details, printed in the daily press, and played before the imaginations of the younger generations, may serve to implant a wrong mode of thinking in the minds of some and we feel that if, through one crime story, in one year, we have helped some misguided consciousness to scheme for the perpetration of some crime of like nature with the thought that he can escape justice and the consequences, we have done more harm to society at large than we could do good to the great majority who might be said to profit by reading of the crime and the punishment of that crime through the process of the law.

"We believe that the publication of the famous Loeb-Leopold case, for instance, with all its sidelights and so-called human interest treatment, together with its final results, has benefitted no one, but on the other hand has opened the avenue for further crimes of like nautre, provided the persons with such crime in mind feel they could get away with murder as easily as did these two youths.

"We feel that the Needleman case, in which a man in this State was horribly mutilated by a mob, is conducive to no good by publication. It is horribly filthy and a disgrace to North Carolina. A newspaper is supposed to print the news and many critics may say that by refusing to print crime, newspapers are lulling their readers into the belief that there is only good in the world and that there is no evil.

"We believe that good is the natural state of man and evil is unnatural. We feel it is our duty to our readers and the world at large to try, through our columns to preserve that which is natural and uplifting and to stamp out that which is evil and base, and while this line of reasoning may seem drastic today, we are firmly convinced that no good ever was accomplished by parading the misdeeds of a misguided and unfortunate criminal before the minds of his fellowmen. It cannot be denied that many a criminal has been tried by the press and many a juryman, no matter how honest he has felt at heart, has been subconsciously influenced one way or another through what newspapers have printed."

Young Woman Buys Oklahoma Paper

Miss Sarah Halliburton of Neosho, Mo., has purchased the Newkirk (Okla.) News-Journal from Erwin C. Conger and assumed control of the property April 15. Miss Halliburton, who was formerly news editor of the New Journal, has been connected with newspapers in Pawhuska, Okla., Neosho and Independence, Mo., since her graduation from the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

Griswold Joins Herald-Examiner

Walter J. Griswold who for the past five years has been Western representative of the American Weekly with headquarters in Chicago, has resigned to take the position of manager of the national advertising department on the Chicago Herald-Examiner.

Daily's Plant Razed by Fire

The plant of the Sedalia (Mo.) Independent, an evening newspaper, was totally destroyed by fire with a loss estimated at $50,000, the morning of April 3. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

ADDRESS WANTED
Miss Justine Mansfield

Flashlights of Famous People

Probably Joe Mitchell Chapple knows personally more famous people than any other man in the world.—The London Daily Mail, Paris Edition

JOE MITCHELL CHAPPLE

Waldorf-Astoria "The Attic" New York City

GUS AND GUSSIE
A new comic strip by Jack Lait
Already a big hit

TELL IT TO ELSIE
A distinctive, habit-forming "pal" feature

THE TRUTH
by ELINOR GLYN
Fearless articles on love and marriage. Three a week

BACK IN PRISON—WHY?
By Donald Lowrie
whose first story put on 25,000 for a San Francisco newspaper

DUMB DORA
Sensational new comic-strip success by Chic Young

"BUGS" BAER
A new laugh-column by America's best known slang-humorist

WANDA'S WONDERLAND
Delightful fairy stories with juvenile cross-word puzzles

JOHNNY FARRELL GOLF ARTICLES
A great sport page feature by America's champion medal player

TRAGEDIES OF GENIUS
Twenty-four interest-building stories by George T. Hargreaves.

New Circulation Winners for 1925

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.

M. KOENIGSBERG, President

241 West 58th Street — New York City

Full details concerning any or all of these features will be supplied at once upon request.

ANTI-GAMBLING BILL PASSED IN MICHIGAN

Publication of Betting Information, Racing Odds and Contests of Any Sort Outlawed—Governor Expected to Sign

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LANSING, Mich, April 15.—Publication of betting information, racing forms and odds on contests of any sort will again be outlawed in Michigan within the next few days as soon as Governor Alex. J. Groesbeck signs the Bahorski anti-gambling bill which was passed today by the lower house without a dissenting vote.

The measure, which was the subject for a hot newspaper fight in 1923, when it was enacted in slightly different form, also was given the unanimous approval of the senate. Due to the fact that the supreme court threw out the old act on a technicality in the procedure of its passage, thereby reopening the state to many forms of gambling not covered in earlier statutes, an emergency was declared to exist and the present bill was given immediate effect.

The bill, while as drastic as its predecessor in those points affecting newspapers, even prohibiting quotation of betting odds after sporting events have occurred, is somewhat more lenient in its application to "frequenters" of gambling places and excludes entirely from its penalties persons on the premises able to prove themselves mere "innocent bystanders." Under the old act all persons found on the premises were subject to the full penalties of the law. These changes, it is believed, will make convictions easier under the new act and will render its constitutionality less liable to attack.

Some members of the house had expressed opposition to the Bahorski bill and it was believed that a few negative votes would be registered. The opposition however, evidently decided that its stand was hopeless. The only opponents are said to have considered some of the provisions uselessly drastic and they particularly objected to such phraseology as that used in the opening section which prohibits the payment of money or any valuable thing "contingent upon the result of any race, contest, or game or upon the happening of any event not known the parties to be certain." It is claimed that strict interpretation of this section would outlaw the writing of all forms of insurance but life.

In view of the fact that the supreme court did not rule on the merits of the act in the earlier decision it is believed that it will be taken before that body again for review.

The act not only applies to Michigan papers but to all publications entering the state. It is considered possible that a more serious effort will be taken this time to enforce this provision on out-of-state papers.

"R. H. L." MARRIES CONTRIB.

"Line-O-Type" Conductor Surprises Chicago Tribune Staff

Richard Henry Little, known more familiarly as R. H. L., and "Uncle Dick," conductor of the "Line o' Type or Two" column of the Chicago Tribune, was married recently to Miss Helen Melton, for more than two years one of his contributors and more lately associated with him in the compilation of the "line" book.

Without a word of his marital plans to any of his Tribune associates, "Dick" Little announced a vacation trip to Mexico. The simultaneous disappearance of Miss Melton, known as "Helen Henna" to the "Line," aroused suspicion, and the secret was divulged and the bridal couple finally located in Davenport, Ia.

Little, who is 56 years old, came to the Tribune in 1895, and has been a war correspondent of distinction. In 1922 he was made editor of the "Line," succeeding Bert Leston Taylor, its founder, on his death.

GANG THREATENS EDITOR

Berwyn, Ill., Man Forced to Flee in Election Row

Declaring that threats of death after he had been kidnapped shortly before last Monday has caused him to flee, Robert St. John, editor of the Berwyn (Ill.) Tribune, returned to his home Thursday and explained he had hidden with relatives in Joliet, fearing for his life.

St. John's kidnappers are alleged to have been a gang, opposing the political policy of his paper, who sought to prevent a special edition on election eve. His brother, Robert W. St. John, editor of the Cicero (Ill.) Tribune, with similar political tendencies, was attacked and beaten by gangsters the same day of the kidnapping.

STUDENTS ASSIGNED TO PAPERS

Seven Medill School Pupils to Work During Vacation

Supplementing their regular class work, seven students of the Medill school of Journalism were assignd to serve on newspapers during the May vacation to gain practical experience.

The students and the newspapers to which they were sent are: Miss Bess Pond and Miss Alice Smith, Springfield (Ill.) State Register; George C. Sippel, La Salle (Ill.) Tribune; Moses Jordan, Chicago Defender; Henry J. Wineberg, Chicago Journal; Miss Ruby Gerhardt, Aurora (Ill.) Beacon-News; Miss Alice L. Kling, Evanston (Ill.) News-Index.

News Men Acquire S. F. Argonaut

The Argonaut, San Francisco weekly, founded in 1877 has been acquired by Joshua Shandeling, Edward A. Morphy, Morton Todd and William Raymond, San Francisco newspaper men. Samuel Clover, editor of the Los Angeles Saturday Night has been publisher of the Argonaut.

CHINESE NEWSPAP IMPROVING FAST

Developing News Enterprise and ern Methods Says William Turn Far East Manager of Reuters Inc.

News of the newspaper field i Far East was told this week by W Turner, Far East Manager of Re Ltd., who stopped in New York for days en route for London where h spend a six months' leave.

Chinese newspapers are fast devel in the field of news enterprise, acc to Mr. Turner, although they are behind their Japanese contemporar this regard. The latter, he said, are abreast of the times in publishing ods and in news treatment are the of newspapers anywhere.

Conditions remain unsettled in following the recent civil war, and ness generally is hoping for a peri comparative peace, he declared. ever, the activities of the Tu Chens itary leaders, constantly disappoint hope.

"At the present time Reuters i livering about 1,000 words of fo news a day to newspapers in the East, of which more than one-thi American news," Mr. Turner said.

"Shanghai, because of its extr poor atmospheric conditions, has not fited much by the press use of radi developments in this line are expec the near future."

At the time of the Japanese earth in 1923 Mr. Turner was at Port A He proceeded at once to Tokio, ar there on an American destroyer a days after the disaster in time to covering the story.

The Reuters manager, whose quarters are in Shanghai, has spen past five years in the Far East.

He sailed for London April 18.

EASTERN STATES PAPER SALES CORPORATION

1050 GRAND CENTRAL TERMINAL NEW YORK CITY

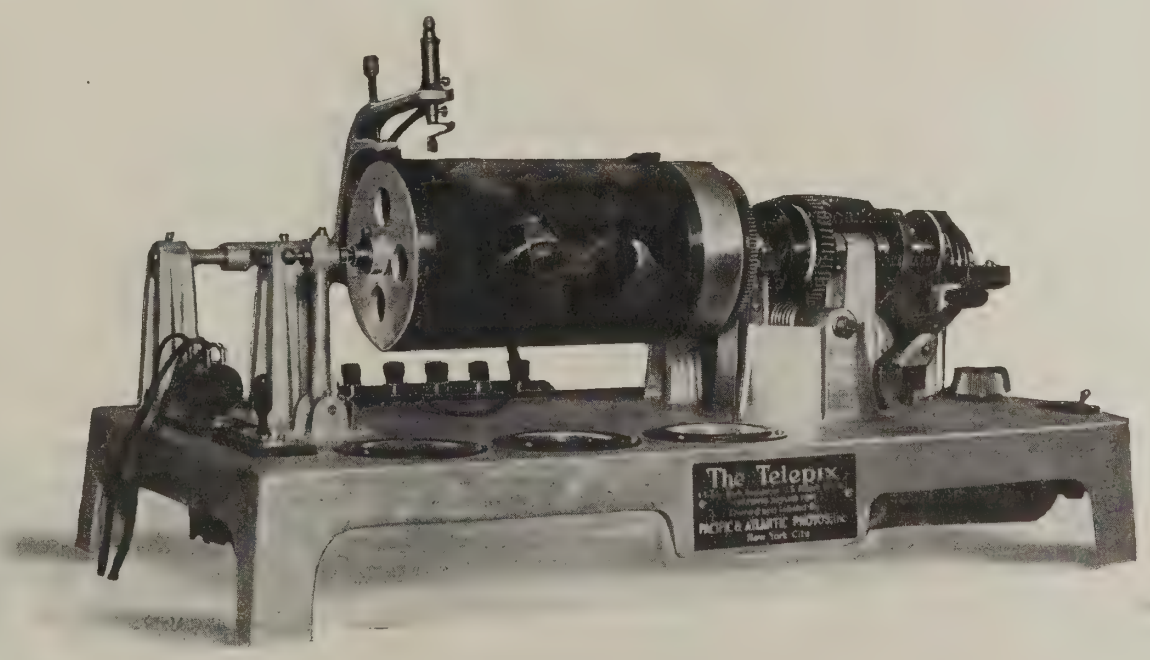
Telephone Vanderbilt 2365

Exclusive Sales Representative for

OSWEGATCHIE PAPER COMPANY

NATURAL DAM, N. Y.

Manufacturers of Newsprint and Groundwood Magazine Grades



TELEPIX from Chicago, April 7, 1925—Dr. William D. McNulty, coroner's physician of Chicago, making germ tests for McClintock case. Unretouched picture, as received.

Present TELEPIX Clients

The News, New York
The Chicago Tribune
Philadelphia Ledger
Boston Post
Pittsburgh Post
St. Louis Globe Democrat
Detroit Free Press
Dallas News
Kansas City Star
Birmingham News
Atlanta Constitution
Denver Post
Los Angeles Times
San Francisco Bulletin
Portland Journal
Seattle Times
and other installations now pending

THE most important exhibit at the Convention will be TELEPIX—which makes possible the practical, usable, every day transmission of pictures by wire! Fool-proof, positive, proven and past the experimental stage, Telepix is a working system of picture transmission, costing from one-third to one-fourth as much as any other system. Sixteen large metropolitan papers are now using Telepix, getting daily sendings of P&A pictures, first and best among all news pictures. SEE TELEPIX at work in P&A Convention headquarters, in the Men's Lounge at the Waldorf Astoria!

PACIFIC & ATLANTIC PHOTOS, INC.

CHICAGO - BOSTON - SEATTLE
PHILADELPHIA - WASHINGTON
LOS ANGELES - SAN FRANCISCO
LONDON - PARIS - BERLIN

Convention Headquarters
MEN'S LOUNGE—WALDORF ASTORIA
Home Office: 25 Park Place, New York

PRESS HORIZON UNCLOUDED AS PUBLISHERS ME

Press Progress During Year Has Been Even and Steady With Labor Quiescent and Newsprint Conditions Satisfactory—Radio, Newsprint and A. B. C. Discussions Loom Largest on Convention Program

WHAT'S going to take the place of the cross-word puzzle as the leader in "Newspaper Features of 1925"?

What is the public reaction to newspapers which have experimented with dropping crime news from Page One?

These apparently ephemeral questions are the ones that are agitating newspaper publishers and editors now, as the Waldorf-Astoria corridors fill with convention crowds. They are questions that concern the daily intimate contact of the press with the people who make its prosperity possible. They are the questions of the minute and it is likely that a good many of the 600 newspaper men who will be here next week will leave New York with workable answers. They will find them in the little conversations at the rear of the meeting hall and in strolls among the exhibits in the corridors—phases of convention activity which, while not on the program, are highly important aspects of the week's work.

In annual meetings assembled, too, the publishers will face an agenda of many and momentous topics, some of them unsolved problems of many years seniority, arising from events of the past year.

Newsprint and radio appear to be the two major subjects of the week, with the latter receiving attention from both A. P. and A. N. P. A. gatherings.

Associated Press members will precede their annual meeting with a half-day session on Monday, principally for the purpose of discussing the broadcasting of news which threatened to become acute in connection with the reporting of the 1924 national election returns. Not a great many newspapers added radio broadcasting to their undertakings during 1924, but many of those which already had stations exploited them more vigorously. A number of these publishers believed, and their opinion is generally echoed by the craft, that the distribution of important news by radio was a function to be performed by the newspaper and not by the department store, the motor manufacturer, or the radio dealer. As the Associated Press has held fast to the proposition that its by-laws prohibit members from making their news available to non-members, its report was automatically excluded from the radio news budgets, and broadcasting publishers bought service elsewhere.

Several publishers were summoned before the Associated Press directorate for questioning as to whether they had broadcast parts of the report received from the A. P. or of the news gathered by their staff, which, by A. P. rules, is the property of the organization. No decision has yet been rendered by the directors, and it is probable that the annual meeting will act to eliminate the apparent difference between the fundamental A. P. rule of property in news and the practice of a number of its important members.

The prevailing feeling among publishers is that radio manufacturers and dealers and others with no responsibility for public information should not be allowed by default to obtain a foothold in the business of communicating important spot news.

Radio added another link to its chain of commercial utility this past year when the transmission of pictures across the ocean was accomplished. This has not been devolped to so great a degree as has the sending of pictures by telegraph over the wires of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company. Several illustra- have appeared in newspapers after transmission by this process and the results were highly satisfactory. Service is still limited to three large cities and the cost does not yet permit the daily use of telegraphed pictures with the same ease as characterizes wired news, but the facilities are now available for annihilating time and space in another department of newspaper production. Advertising copy has been transmitted satisfactorily from Chicago to New York, and further development of this character can be expected. Publishers expect the cost to drop as the new service demonstrates its various uses.

Cable department in new Associated Press headquarters. (EDITOR & PUBLISHER photograph.)

Application of radio to regular news service transmission in this country made little visible progress throughout the year, but there has been tremendous activity in several news service laboratories and several successful experimental demonstrations. Announcement made last week that W. R. Hearst and the Schenck theatrical interests intended to erect four high-power stations across the country has not been amplified.

Newsprint returns to the center of the A. N. P. A. stage, as a result of the Treasury Department's recent proposal that standard newsprint be redefined for tariff purposes. A full exposition of this matter appears in another column.

Discussions of paper on the convention floor will probably touch upon the Canadian propaganda for limitation on the use of Canadian resources to make newsprint for United States consumption. Canadians a few months ago were enthusiastic in their arguments for stringent regulation of woodpulp and pulpwood exports and for a definite limitation on the annual timber cut, but the support of the Canadian pulpwood interests was not won and no action appears to be imminent. The A. N. P. A. and newspaper publishers on this side of the border as a general rule remained silent.

So far this year, large consumers of newsprint have been living within their contracted paper supplies, and, as the volume of advertising is little, if any, above that of last year, there is no prospect of a rush to the spot market. Under these conditions, publishers believe that contract prices of paper will remain as they are, with a slight possibility of a small downward revision.

Reforestation has received the study of an A. N. P. A. committee during the year and its report will detail the work undertaken to conserve present timber supplies and to furnish new forests. The committee participated in the forestry conference held in Washington last November and its report will no doubt deal largely with the conclusions and recommendations of that body as they apply to the press.

When the postal committee, headed by Jerome D. Barnum, Syracuse Post-Standard, reports, it is safe to forecast that every seat will be filled. A. N. P. A. strategy, worked out at the 1923 convention, proved its soundness during the last session of Congress, when the rates on second class mail recommended by the post office, as a means of paying increased salaries to postal workers, were discarded by Congress and a schedule less onerous upon the newspapers was adopted as a temporary measure. The committee's history of what has been done will no doubt be accompanied by its recommendations for proceedure when Congress begins revision the present act next December.

Closely related to the postal ra ter is that of railway rates on new shipped as baggage and by expre vances in these tariffs have been by some of the Eastern and Mid-roads and express companies, now held in abeyance pending conferences with the A. N. P. mittee.

Labor affairs have been quiesce the last convention, with very f ruptions of publication by strik trend of wages continues upwar renewals of contracts at prevaili fairly usual, and reductions in sc tremely rare.

Certain clauses now insisted t
the typographical union have me ance from newspaper publishers t out the country, but as a gener they have been incorporated in t tracts. The A. N. P. A. may rec some new course of action with re them.

All of these last three phases a ters which vitally concern the press associations, representati which and those of several press associations will meet nex to form plans for closer integrat exchange of information. Wh
A. N. P. A. is not officially a these deliberations, it is possib some form of co-operation on m tivities will be worked out betw great national organization and t graphical groups, as well as betw latter themselves.

It is not known whether the A Society of Newspaper Editor carry out the recommendation of mittee on ethical standards last that the Society's "Canons of Jour be submitted to the A. N. P. A. approval. While no vote was t the Society, many editors prese cated that they favored such

Throughout the program, there no element which could divide th

(Continued on Page 60)

Billings (Montana) Gaz display advertising enabled New York Life Insur

Agent Greusel of Billings to c a new world's policy recor
March—A remarkable tribut the sterling worth of Gazette a tising.

Satisfactory results are as every Gazette space buyer-out this inviting Northwe field; there is none better.
Gazette absolutely dominates ern Montana and Northern W ing.

Prudden, King, & Prudden,
York, Chicago, Los Angeles
Seattle; Fred L. Hall, San cisco, are our representatives

The Billings (Montana) Gaz

Elias Tobenkin

known to newspaper men from coast to coast as "Tobey" has written one of the big novels of recent years. Don't fail to read

GOD OF MIGHT

$2.00 at all booksellers or from

MINTON, BALCH & COMPANY
17 East 45th Street, New York

THE PASSAIC DAILY NEWS

Leads in Classified, Local and Foreign Advertising in one of New Jersey's Fastest Growing Cities

TRADING POPULATION
167,395

NEW JERSEY NEWSPAPERS, IN National Advertising Representati
(New Jersey Newspapers Exclusive
New York Chicago Philadelphia

A Publicity Director who, in the past few years, has supervised the expenditure of many millions of dollars in advertising (largely in newspapers because of the character of his business), says in a recent letter:

"The A. B. C. is without the slightest question the most important factor in the whole advertising world today. It has saved the advertiser literally millions of dollars. It has developed into the one great stabilizing business-like activity in a field that is still characterized by too much guessing and too little definite knowledge. Its influence is wider than any of us imagine. The Bureau has lifted advertising from a more or less discredited activity to a high and honorable plane. These are large claims, but they are justified. I believe that with the passing of years the enormous importance of the Bureau will come to be more and more recognized by the entire business world of the United States and Canada."

The A. B. C. members of the A. N. P. A. who will assemble in New York City next week are urged to heartily encourage any constructive measures which may enhance and extend the confidence of national as well as local advertisers in advertising through A. B. C. mediums.

NEWSPAPER HORIZON CLEAR AS PUBLISHERS MEET

(Concluded from page 58)

P. A. into factions. Harmony reigns, as it has for many years past. President S. E. Thomason, business manager of the Chicago Tribune, will remain in office for at least another year, it is indicated, and no candidates have yet come forward to succeed any of the other retiring officers and directors.

As stated above, advertising volume is running on an even keel, the business outlook is good, and these conditions conduce to stability in relations between publishers and advertising agencies. As the A. N. P. A. is not concerned in the Federal Trade Commission's complaint against the agencies' association and two bodies of newspaper publishers with reference to the agency commission practice, it is probable that the report of the agency committee will be purely routine—a recital of its acts of 1924.

The one topic which is likely to produce heartfelt expressions of opinion is not one of the regular old stand-bys, but it is almost certain to be brought before the convention. That is what is regarded by many publishers as the ever-increasing tendency of the Audit Bureau of Circulations to increase its "police powers" over their methods of obtaining and holding readers. The recent difference of opinion in New York as to the right of the A. B. C. auditors under the by-laws to investigate any accounts which appeared to them to have a circulation ramification was settled amicably at the scene of action, but there are not a few traces of resentment among publishers toward the strict constructionists of the Audit Bureau. A committee was authorized by the A. N. P. A. convention two years ago to look into the matter of forming under A. N. P. A. auspices a circulation audit organization, and this committee was last year instructed to continue its work. What it will recommend is not known, but there is every prospect that the New York controversy and the old fight of publishers for reduction of newspaper dues to the A. B. C., with other minor complaints will be thoroughly ventilated.

The Associated Press meeting, it is thought likely, will end the confusion over broadcasting of news. Only three applications for membership are now scheduled to come before the annual meeting, and none of them is expected to arouse such a contest as marked last year's voting on the Rochester Times-Union and Baltimore Evening Sun applications. The meeting will also consider the appointment of a successor to Frederick Roy Martin, recently resigned as general manager, and it is stated that his name will be announced following the meeting of the new board of directors on Wednesday morning. Frank B. Noyes, as narrated on another page, will be fittingly honored for his quarter century as president.

Gen. Charles G. Dawes, Vice-President of the United States, will address the annual luncheon on April 21.

That event, judged by the Vice-President's oratorical record, ought to be the most spirited event of the week.

BRITISH AD IN U. S.

S. A. Barry & Co., Ltd., Tailoring House, Buying Newspaper Space

Copy in typical British style is appearing in newspapers in this country for S. A. Barry & Co., Ltd., of London, a tailoring house. It is handled by Pools' Advertising Service, London.

The advertisement carries the following statement:

"Our first appeal to American citizens resulted in so overwhelming a response that we were compelled to suspend out advertising in order to successfully cope with the work. Today we are thoroughly equipped for extra business, and every order will be faithfully dispatched within seven to ten days from the date of receiving same."

BUSY SCENE AT NEW ASSOCIATED PRESS HEADQUARTERS

View of Associated Press city department at new headquarters, 383 Madison Avenue. (EDITOR & PUBLISHER photograp

PRINTING RACING NEWS IN DAILIES SCORED

Periodical Attacks Newspapers for Aid in "Prostitution of 'Sport of Kings'"—Predicts Slow Clean-Up

An attack on newspapers which support race-horse gambling and encouragement to a growing list of dailies which do not aid in this "prostitution of 'the sport of kings,'" is contained in a recent issue of the Manufacturers Record.

"Horse-race gambling is sheer, unqualified robbery," the periodical declares.

"In short, horse-race gambling is a lottery, in which the odds are stacked against the 'player,' and even in states in which it is legalized it is a crime against God and man.

"Next to the national and state governments, many newspapers undoubtedly are the greatest supporters of this vicious gambling. Columns are devoted to details of the 'probable winners,' of the anticipated 'odds' against the horses at various tracks, of the 'past performances' of the horses entered, of the running of the races and of the 'prices' paid by the winners, either in the forbidden, straight-out betting system or the mutuel machines, or both.

"Such papers aver that their readers 'want' this 'news' and would turn to other papers if it were omitted. Such papers may be said to sell their honor and independence, to sell the trust reposed in them by their readers, for the miserable little pennies this information brings in from the gamblers among their clientele.

"To the honor of the newspaper profession and business, however, many papers prefer the course of decency and right and decline to print betting odds; many others refuse in other ways to help the horse-race gamblers fleece the amateurs and 'suckers.' In a pamphlet entitled 'Crimes and Tragedies of the Race Tracks,' published by the International Reform Federation, Washington, D. C., the nation's capital, is given a list of over 166 morning newspapers which do not print 'the odds,' and scores which in other ways decline to help the race gamblers. Also are named over 100 'tip' or 'dope' sheets, sold to the racing 'boobs' at prices ranging from 10 cents to $10—'about 12,000 news-stands in New York city sell a variety of these tip sheets and only Michigan prohibits these obvious frauds,' says the pamphlet.

"Through the black clouds of horse-race gambling which hang heavy over several states breaks a gleam of sunshine in a list of newspapers which do not cater to the gamblers, either professional or amateur, or contribute to the degradation of their Commonwealths by aiding, abetting, or encouraging the gamblers to continue this prostitution of 'the sport of kings.' One by one otherwise decent newspapers are falling into line, and in time it is possible that even the United States Government may become true to itself and to the people by prohibiting the use of the mails to horse-race gamblers, as it does to lotteries, to 'fake' financial promoters and other frauds."

WRITES MAYA OPERA

Press Congress Member Author of Book for "Quiche Vinac"

Virgilio R. Beteta, founder of the Geographical and Historical Society of Gautemala and for many years connected with the Press Congress of the World, is the author of the book of the Maya opera "Quiche Vinac" given for the first time recently in Gautemala and Salvador.

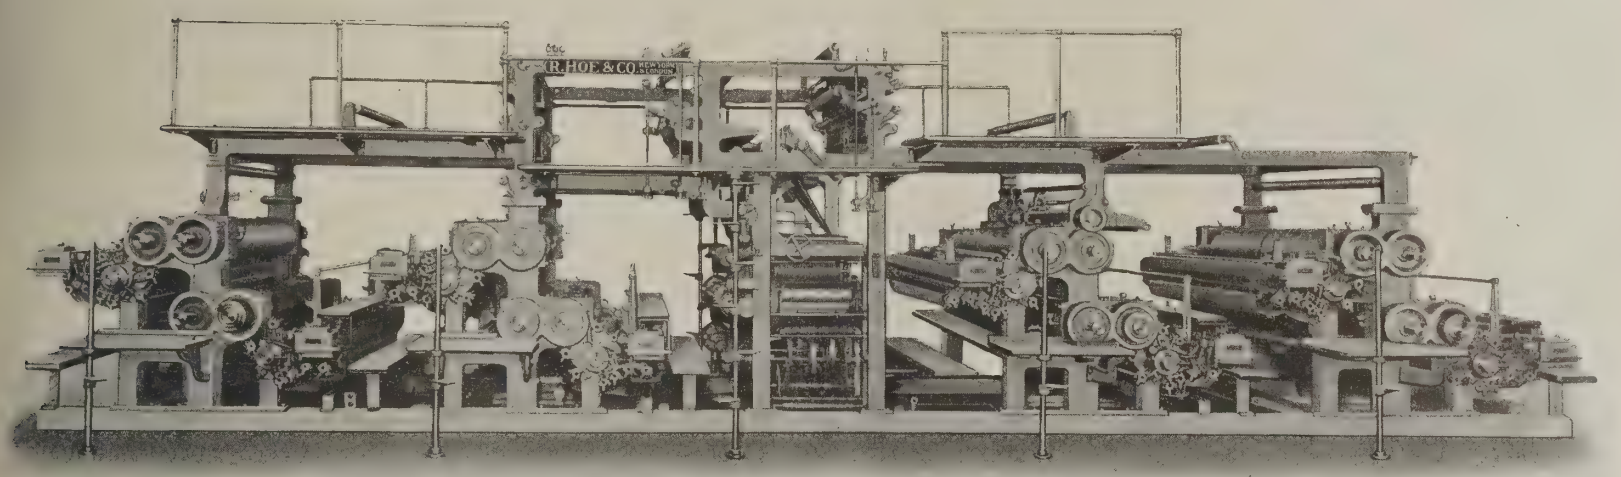
The music, written by Prof. Je Castillo, is said to have caught the p primitive tonal effects of Maya melo

There are, according to a recent co 70 independent nations in the world to The most independent, as we view it the national association of hotel clerk Buffalo Express.

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE
of the
INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION

Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department.

Address the Secretary-Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Star Building, Peoria, Ill.



EVENING HERALD
Los Angeles, Calif.
Gained 3,749 Daily Average Circulati
Sworn Government Statement, Six Mont
Ending March 31, 1924, 173,549 Daily. S
Months, Ending March 31, 1925, 177,2
Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circu tion, 3,749.
IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETEL
REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New Yo
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg.,
North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., S
Francisco, Calif.

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION
An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.
S. P. WESTON
Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation
120 West 42d Street. New Y

It covers an ideal test market used by
National Advertisers
TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES
KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

EVERYWHERE AROUND THE WORLD WHERE SPEED AND ECONOMY COUNT HOE MACHINERY HOLDS THE RECORDS

Fifty per cent. less Paper Wastage than with any other Press is the experience of a prominent Newspaper Office with a H O E "Superspeed" Press, and the saving which this means in Paper Bills alone is one that no Progressive Publisher can afford to ignore.

HOE "SUPERSPEED" OCTUPLE PRESS

The Speediest, Most Efficient, and Most Dependable Newspaper Press Made

Equipped with the Hoe Patented Automatic Pump System of Ink Distribution, Solid Steel Plate and Impression Cylinders with Roller Bearings, Independent Vertical Shaft Drive for each Unit, Steel and Fabroil Gears, Extra Heavy Frames and other special features. Actual running speed capacity 80,000 Newspapers of 16 Pages an hour with other products in proportion.

New Production Records, being made continually on Hoe "Superspeed," Heavy-Design and Standard Pattern Unit-Type Presses, prove conclusively that the Hoe Improved Unit types of construction, although more costly to manufacture, are a better investment in the end. Publishers considering new equipment are urged to investigate thoroughly the greater output, versatility and economy of Hoe Presses, before giving undue attention to machines of cheaper design.

Meet us in the State Apartment at the Waldorf

R. HOE & CO., Inc.

504-520 GRAND STREET, NEW YORK CITY

7 South Dearborn Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

Also at
DUNELLEN, N. J. and LONDON, ENGLAND

7 Water Street
BOSTON, MASS.

SIGNPOSTS TO NEW YORK PLAYS WORTH SEEING

Critic Finds Twenty on Broadway from Which Publishers May Choose Their Evening Entertainm During Conventions Without Seeing a District Attorney

By JOHN ANDERSON

Dramatic Critic, New York Evening Post

SOMEHOW, through the efforts of the District Attorney and Mr. Golden, the impression has got around that there are only thirteen plays in New York and none of them fit to see.

Now it is impossible to say how many plays there are in New York. Nobody ever knows for certain, since they come and go with the swift persistence of an insurance agent, but it is safe to say that there are more than thirteen, and that many of them are worth seeing.

Nor is this said in any spirit of levity. The assurance that they are worth seeing is given with full realization of what it means.

It means that you have to kneel in silent prayer before some box office altar for several days until you can get near enough to the window for the high priest inside to say, with great disdain, that the agencies have all the tickets.

It means that you will have to telegraph home for twice the money you expected to spend in New York, haul a large part of it to some speculator, and wear out the knees of another pair of pants begging him to take it.

Naturally, nobody wants to spend a large part of even a long life in doing that without some understanding of why they do it. When you walk a mile for a cigarette, or run four blocks for a piece of gum you have an idea of what you want. You have an idea that you are going to get it when you've taken all that trouble. But you'd better think twice before so much as crossing the street for a play.

For, in addition to the usual risks of being run down by the taxi driver assigned to kill pedestrians in that territory, or being shot for a bootlegger by a cop because he never saw you before, there is the grievious risk of getting a bad play.

This does not mean the sort of bad play the District Attorney means. It is not to hint that you will stagger from your seat at the final curtain a leering and ribald rake, and go out and be wicked for the rest of your life.

No doubt a man strong willed enough to be a newspaper man, and go right on being a newspaper man, when so many weak souls are merely journalists, wouldn't be hurt morally. But he would be sadly hurt financially, and, worst of all, he would have committed the heinous offense of wasting time.

So the object of this piece, as far as it has any, is to stick up a sign post among the Broadway dramas, and direct strangers to this or that entertainment, helping them make discreet selections. Joe Leblang has built up a fine business out of people who don't.

It is easier to recommend a number of plays than to pick one. An actress asked this reporter the other day what play of the season he had enjoyed most. It took only a moment's thought to say "The Wild Duck," though stirring about in what passes locally for a mind, were memories of many things, of brilliant scenes and great acting, crying out for recognition.

But Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" has meat to it. It is drama with bone and sinews, stuff that you can think about and live with. And, in addition to all that, it has laughter, and penetrating wit, and a performance whose superior you will not find though you search the playhouses of town.

Alongside it should be put "Candida," for Shaw's play, revived by the same organization, the Actors' Theatre, is one of the big things of the year. Reviewers shot each other down in the street over the playing of Richard Bird as Marchbanks, but none of them shot Mr. Bird, for which omission this particular sector sends up two or more assorted cheers.

There is sure-fire entertainment in all of the Theatre Guild offerings, except "Processional," though it should be stated, lest this is taken for the opinion of a plebescite, that it is only my own. I hated "Processional," being irked to the point of public utterance at the invitation of the Guild and provoked the author to send an autographed volume to "my severest critic."

But you'll find much amusement in the subtle comedy of "The Guardsman," with Lynn Fontanne and her husband, Alfred Lunt, and there is poignant stuff and some brilliant acting by Pauline Lord in "They Knew What They Wanted." At this writing "Ceasar and Cleopatra" was not available for review, but any drama lover should go to the new Guild Theatre, which houses it, as on a pilgrimage, if for no other reason, in recognition of what the Guild has done for the American theatre.

In "The Firebrand" there is much beauty for the eye in the settings and costumes of medieval Florence, but there is more beauty still in the adroit spoofing of the swaggering heroes of the Renaissance, and, in particular, that lying murderous, rascally genius Cellini, who stabbed his contemporaries with a knife, and posterity with the brilliance of his art.

In "Old English" you have the sheer magic of an actor making something out of very little, for you have the masterly achievement of George Arliss making an absorbing tale out of a weakly piece by Mr. Galsworthy. But that single performance makes it a thing not to be missed.

New York has a rowdy play called "Is Zat So?" which it has taken to its heart, and another, "The Fall Guy," which ought to be made compulsory, especially for off-islanders, as they call strangers in Nantucket. It shows the New Yorker in his habitat, the tough, resilient hard guy stuff that underlies the mere fronts which casual visitors see along Broadway, and in the beaten path of tourists. It shows metropolitan humanity of the tenements with a humor and pathos which matches theirs and it catches, too, the twist of speech and the pace of life as it is lived on the Sidewalks of New York.

For those who love good, old-fashioned melodrama with bad men and lovely ladies, fine heroes and the bang-bang of illicit pistols there is "The Dove." It is a flashing tale of Mexico, of hot kisses and tamales, of guitars strumming in sensuous moonlight, and palm trees doing their stuff. There are two fine performances by Holbrook Blinn and Judith Anderson, and a flawless company, with the whole thing, from top to bottom, bathed in that softly luminous theatrical art of which Belasco is the chief exponent.

Other plays in town may be viewed with less ecstacy and yet provide fine entertainment. There is, for instance, "Silence," "Mrs. Partridge Presents," "White Collars," "Quarantine," and "Pigs."

This list, of course, has three glaring omissions, persceptible to anyone, so that it's perfectly safe to leave them off, but just to make safety perfectly safe they might as well be mentioned—"What Price Glory," "The Show-Off," and a fairly unknown piece which has been in town only three years, I believe, "Abie's Irish Rose."

This leaves out the musical shows altogether, and naturally they aren't going to be left. There is no method, at the moment, of indicating which theatre in town contains the largest acreage of bare skin, or the fewest yards of costumery.

But if you are questioning refreshment for the eye with a tune here and there for the ear, you may pick wisely from the following, blindfold, and not go far wrong: "The Follies," "The Student Prince," "Lady, Be Good," "Rose Marie," and "The Music Box."

There are more than twenty shows on this list, and the convention may not be long enough for you to see them all. In that case, you'd better become a Democratic delegate, for some of them are said to be here yet.

GUIDE FOR THEATREGOERS

ABIE'S IRISH ROSE, Republic—W. 42nd St.
AREN'T WE ALL? Globe—Broadway & 46th St.
BACK SLAPPER, THE, Hudson—W. 44th Street.
BLUE PETER, THE, Fifty-second Street—W. of Broadway.
CANDIDA, Ambassador—W. 49th St.
CAPE SMOKE, Martin Beck—W. 45th at 8th Ave.
CÆSAR AND CLEOPATRA, Guild—52nd St. W. of Broadway.
COMPLEX, THE, Princess.
DANCING MOTHERS, Maxine Elliott's—39th St. E. of Broadway
DESIRE UNDER THE ELMS, Earl Carroll—7th Ave. & 50th St.
DOVE, THE, Empire—Broadway & 40th St.
DUNCE BOY, THE, Daly's—A week play about a weak-minded youth.
FALL GUY, THE, Eltinge—W. 42nd St.
FIREBRAND, THE, Morosco—W. 45th St.
FOUR FLUSHER, THE, Apollo—W. 45th St.
GUARDSMAN, THE, Booth—W. 45th St.
HAREM, THE, Belasco—W. 44th Street.
HELL'S BELLS, Cohan—Broadway & 43rd Street.
IS ZAT SO? Forty-sixth Street—W. of Broadway.
KNIFE IN THE WALL, THE, Frolic—W. 42nd St.
LADIES OF THE EVENING, Lyceum—W. 45th Street.
LOVE FOR LOVE, Greenwich Village—7th Ave. & 4th St.
MISMATES, Times Square—W. 42nd St.
MRS. PARTRIDGE PRESENTS, Belmont—48th St. E. of Broadway.
MY SON, Bayes—A play about mother love and other things.
NIGHT HAWK, THE, Bijou—45th St. W. of Broadway.
OLD ENGLISH, Ritz—48th St. W. of Broadway.
PALACE THEATRE—Clara Kimball Young heads vaudeville bill.
PIGS, Little—W. 44th St.
PROCESSIONAL, Garrick—65 W. 35th St.
QUARANTINE, Henry Miller—W. 43rd St.
RAT, THE, Colonial—62nd St. & Broadway.
RUINT, Provincetown—133 Macdougal.
SHOW-OFF, Playhouse—48th St. E. of Bway.
SILENCE, National—41st St. W. of Bway.
STARLIGHT, Wallack's—Doris Keane, pretending she is Bernhardt and making a poor job.
TAPS, Broadhurst—44th St. W. of Broadway.
THEY KNEW WHAT THEY WANTED, Klaw—W. 45th St.
WHAT PRICE GLORY, Plymouth—45th St. W. of Broadway.
WHITE CARGO, Thirty-ninth Street—39th St.
WHITE COLLARS, Cort—
WILD BIRDS, Cherry Lane—
WILD DUCK, THE, Forty-eight Stree St.

Musical Plays

ARTISTS AND MODELS, Casino—Br at 39th St.
BRINGING UP FATHER, Lyric.
CHINA ROSE, Knickerbocker—Broad 38th St.
LADY, BE GOOD, Liberty—W. 42nd
LEGEND OF THE DANCE and SC AND LATER, Neighborhood—Fine mimes.
LOUIE, THE 14TH, Cosmopolitan—C Circle, at 59th Street.
LOVE SONG, THE, Century—62nd & Park West.
MIKADO, THE, Shubert—44th St. Broadway.
MUSIC BOX REVUE, Music Box—V Street.
MY GIRL, Vanderbilt—48th St. & Br
MERCENARY MARY, Longacre—W.
PRINCESS IDA, Shubert—44th St. Broadway.
PUZZLES OF 1925, Fulton—W. 46th
ROSE MARIE, Imperial—45th St. Broadway.
SKY HIGH, Winter Garden.
STUDENT PRINCE, THE, Jolson—5 & 7th Ave.
TELL ME MORE, Gaiety—Broadway St.
TOPSY AND EVA, Sam H. Harris—W St.
ZIEGFELD FOLLIES, New Amsterd 42nd St.

MOST of the far-sighted publishers who were quick to recognize the economies of the Associated Press in its infancy have again shown their alertness by obtaining the exclusive rights in their respective cities to the Consolidated Press—the first service designed to avoid duplication and to furnish instead a distinct supplement to "spot" news reports.

The Consolidated Press Assn.

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

N. Y. Times Breaks Traditio

The New York Times broke lo tablished custom this week by givi lines to its baseball writers.

Daily Adds Page of Picture

The New York World has added page of sports pictures to its dai ture list.

Meredith Re-elected by A. A.

E. T. Meredith, publisher of S ful Farming, was re-elected a men the board of directors of the Ass Advertising Clubs of the World, senting the sustaining members.

FIRST IN OHI

4,923,701 LINES

JANUARY 1st to MARCH 31st, 192

The Dispatch published durin the first three months approxi mately 54% of all Columbu newspaper advertising and 785,6 lines more than all other Colum bus newspapers combined.

In 1924 it exceeded the ne largest Ohio newspaper b 2,500,909 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City	54,851
Suburban	28,024
Country	22,944
GRAND TOTAL	105,819

LARGEST IN CENTRAL OHI

Columbus Dispat

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

In New Orleans It's

THE MORNING TRIBU

(Published week-day mornin

THE NEW ORLEANS IT

(Published week-day afternoo

THE ITEM TRIBUNE

(Published Sunday morning

Sold to National Advertisers combination rate 15c a week-days and 18c a line days.

MONEY SAVED MEANS MONEY TO SPEND

NEW ENGLAND HAS 40% OF THE NATION'S SAVINGS DEPOSITS

People who save have money to invest, and to invest one must have money! New England is and has been proven to be the best field for advertising good investments and properties.

It must also be remembered that these six New England States lead the country in the proportion of its population that is classed as urban population—79.2% live in cities. Here you will find a freer spending of money.

The significance of the supremacy of New England savings deposits and the concentration of purchasing power makes this a market to which National Manufacturers should advertise, through this list of daily newspapers.

"Pin" this list where you can lay your finger on it the minute you start to lay out your next campaign.

USE
NEW ENGLAND DAILY NEWSPAPERS

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Attleboro Sun	(E)	5,628	.0275	.0175
*Boston Globe	(M&E)	274,892	.50	.50
*Boston Globe	(S)	322,030	.55	.55
††Boston Transcript	(E)	38,201	.20	.20
*Boston Post	(M)	371,124	.60	.60
*Boston Post	(S)	351,527	.55	.55
Fall River Herald	(E)	15,972	.05	.05
Fitchburg Sentinel	(E)	11,702	.055	.045
*Haverhill Gazette	(E)	15,400	.065	.05
††Lynn Item	(E)	16,640	.06	.045
†††Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader	(M&E)	21,270	.06	.06
*New Bedford Standard Mercury	(M&E)	33,883	.10	.10
*New Bedford Sunday Standard	(S)	26,944	.10	.10
*North Adams Transcript	(E)	9,491	.04	.035
Salem News	(E)	21,325	.08	.07
Taunton Gazette	(E)	8,895	.045	.03
Worcester Telegram-Gazette	(M&E)	91,177	.26	.23
Worcester Sunday Telegram	(S)	51,784	.19	.16

MAINE—Population, 768,014

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Augusta Kennebec Journal	(M)	11,264	.05	.05
†Bangor Daily Commercial	(E)	14,750	.055	.05
Portland Express	(E)	29,548	.10	.07
Portland Telegram (Sunday Edition Express)	(S)	28,977	.10	.07

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Concord Monitor-Patriot	(E)	5,258	.0375	.025
†Keene Sentinel	(E)	3,609	.03	.034
Manchester Union Leader	(M&E)	29,692	.13	.10

RHODE ISLAND—Population, 604,397

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
††Newport Daily News	(E)	6,273	.0336	.0296
††Pawtucket Times	(E)	26,921	.07	.07
††Providence Bulletin	(E)	66,674	.17	(B).23
††Providence Journal	(M)	35,668	.10	(B).23
††Providence Journal	(S)	63,549	.15	.15
Providence News	(E)	27,006	.07	.07
††Providence Tribune	(E)	23,211	.10	.09
*Westerly Sun	(E&S)	4,618	.025	.025
Woonsocket Call	(E)	14,075	.05	.05

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Barre Times	(E)	7,121	.03	.015
††Bennington Banner	(E)	3,104	.0125	.0125
Burlington Free Press	(M)	13,157	.05	.05
Rutland Herald	(M)	10,878	.04	.04
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record	(E)	4,024	.0214	.015

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Bridgeport Post-Telegram	(E&M)	45,795	.15	.15
*Bridgeport Post	(S)	20,017	.10	.10
*Hartford Courant	(M)	37,649	.08	.08
Hartford Courant	(S)	50,247	.11	.11
††Hartford Times	(E)	49,566	.12	.12
Meriden Record	(M)	7,506	.045	.03
Middletown Press	(E)	8,239	.0325	.025
††New Haven Register	(E&S)	43,196	.12	.11
New London Day	(E)	11,761	.06	.045
††Norwich Bulletin	(M)	12,592	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour	(E)	5,842	.04	.04
†South Norwalk Sentinel	(E)	4,415	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate	(E)	9,774	.05	.04
Waterbury Republican American	(M&E)	23,467	.08	.08
Waterbury Republican	(S)	15,073	.08	.08

A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1924.
†††Government Statement, April 1, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1925.
(B) Combination rate Daily Journal and Eve. Bulletin.

BRIDGING THE SUMMER DEPRESSION GAP

R. V. Titus, Advertising Director, Brooklyn Eagle, Compiles List of Business Building Suggestions; Space Sellers—Attacks "Week-End Traffic Jam"

By PHLLIP SCHUYLER

SUMMER depression—business always dries up, rots, and falls off during June, July and August.

The big department store owner is opposed to the newspaper. He cannot be reasoned out of his opposition.

The owner of that small store really ought to be buying space; but he cannot be taught.

The week-end traffic jam in newspaper advertising crowds business into a few days, when it should be spread evenly over the week.

I have found the optimist who fails to be depressed over such storm signals—Robert V. Titus, new advertising director of the Brooklyn Eagle.

Into an informal conversation with the writer this week, Mr. Titus crammed a dictionary of tips on how to build business against odds. Mr. Titus easily answers the question: "Why is an advertising man?"

"Because," is the reply, "his is a vital, glowing, interesting and well paid business."

An attacker of conventions, boob notions, and outworn beliefs is Mr. Titus. He played a successful Don Quixotic role this week and smashed down bugaboo windmills with surprising ease. It was fun being his Sancho Panza.

"There need be no summer depression as far as newspaper advertising lineage is concerned," was his opening thrust.

The windmill in this case took the form of a lineage chart, with an upward jump, reaching a peak in May, then slumping to a hollow gap during the summer months, before swooping upwards in the fall. Titus offered suggestions on how to bridge that gap.

"The most striking thing, the most assuring thing about advertising," he began, "is its responsiveness to constant selling pressure.

"So often summer depression, so-called, is accepted as an expected phenomenon. Yet there is no need in many cases for such acceptance.

"Try this—it's old, but not too frequently done—begin this month building summer business. Give vacations to solicitors in the spring and fall, and keep them working during the summer months.

"Solicitors, keeping after business throughout the summer, will find the store owner sweltering among his shoe boxes or bathing suit bargains. No other solicitor will be coming near him.

"Now is the time to bring into play the most necessary thing in space selling—the constructive notion.

"If you have a creative idea, no matter how poor it is, you will be better equipped than the man who calls on an advertiser merely to boost or gloat over his medium

"It is not smartness that counts in space selling. It is ideas. A creative idea insures an advertising solicitor a welcome, wherever he goes.

"As much time should be spent in thought as in talk and door-bell ringing. Before calling on a sales manager, store owner, or bank official, the solicitor should try to put himself in the place of the advertiser, consider his problems, have some constructive suggestion to make in regard to his copy.

"He is trying to interest a bank, for instance. The bank is decorated with excellent Doric columns.

"'See,' he may tell the man inside in charge of advertising, 'a good drawing of you bank front, showing those fine pillars, would make your copy breathe substantiality, would accentuate the reliability of your message.'

"Suppose the advertising policy of a big department store is opposed to your newspaper. It isn't the big guns, the owner, or the advertising manager, who should be attacked. The selling pressure should be brought to bear upon the different department heads. Sell the store in chunks on the necessity of using your medium.

ROBERT V. TITUS

"Very few realize how important to the big store policy, the individual buyers and department managers are. They may have nothing to do with that policy directly. But they are working on some bonus arrangement, their thoughts are on sales increases and commissions, on looking for a raise in salary.

"In the case of the small store owner, talk to him in a small way, and talk last about your paper, your selfish interest. You may have an idea for dressing up his window. Offer it to him. Perhaps you might interest him in building up a list for direct-by-mail advertising. By degrees you will be making him friendly to you and your paper.

"You notice he has two clerks, working probably on a salary of $35 a week. Ask him, then, if he can afford to carry another clerk on his payroll at the same wage, whose duty would be to work on the outside, calling on people's homes, and telling them the bargains available inside the shop.

"'Well,' the store owner may remark, 'I might be able to afford that.'

"'Let's fix up a small piece of copy then for the newspaper, to run one day a week,' is the reply. 'It will cost you the wage of a clerk, and will tell the story of your store to thousands.'

"Don't scare him. Don't try to sell him more than he will be able to pay for easily. If he has any trouble in paying for the space sold him, he will damn advertising heartily, and it will be hard to teach him all over again. Befriend him gradually and you will have a permanent friend.

"It is poor policy, I think, to try to drag small store owners into group advertising stunts. The time spent selling such space, could be better spent in concentration upon two or three of the most progressive in efforts to make them permanent space buyers."

Mr. Titus' next tilt was with the "week-end traffic jam" windmill.

"The talk that Saturday is the best selling day is an age-old tradition, a relic of the Pilgrims, poor roads, Saturday pay day and Saturday baths. The Saturday shopping custom has outlived all the factors that brought it about. This is not a day of horses, bad roads, long hours and small towns.

"But because such a convention rules the minds of so many people today, the average store builds up from cobwebs over the door on Mondays to regular Subway traffic jams on the last day of the week.

"Advertising could sway this custom, if the advertiser could be taught to spread his space over the week. Every one per cent of business pushed into the early part of the week is so much velvet for the advertiser, who now is losing friends by the Saturday crowd with concomitant bad service, disruption of courtesy policies, poor change making, and crush.

"One of the best ways of controverting the peak load idea is to study the payrolls of a city. Nine times out of ten, you will find paydays are split up over the week, with hardly six per cent difference between one day and another.

"Banks and the local food people form a wonderful example of a group which could better their business practice if they placed their advertising emphasis on other days than Friday or Saturday. And national advertisers could get much more attention value for their money, if they stayed away from days of heavy local advertising"

At one thing, Mr. Titus was depressed —the manner in which newspa vertise themselves.

"Like Billy Sunday," he declar text seems to be Don't do as as I say.'

"In consequence, they issue sort of advertising copy in e interest space-buyers. They outt the financial men. Space is used papers for egotistical blasts ab advertising domination and c coverage.

"The same space might be much better advantage, in telli the personalities of newspape human qualities. One of the mo things you could tell an advertis answer to the question: 'Why n paper has become an institutio town.'"

Mr. Titus came to newspap from the ranks of advertisers. ing graduation from the Univ Chicago in 1911, he joined the ad department of Marshall Field & Chicago. For two years he wr and for five managed various me departments throughout the store

When the World War bega listed as a private. He was mus a first lieutenant.

Then he entered newspaper the advertising staff of the Los Examiner, remaining there t as local advertising manager und Swasey, to whom he feels he ow he has ever learned about adverti Hearst next brought him to the American and Journal, from was transferred to the New Yo ican and put in charge of the Ha Bronx section. He was appoint tising director of the Eagle th and assumed his duties April 6.

NEW YORK STATE

Westchester County's

Fastest Growing Cities

Mount Vernon and
New Rochelle and
The Vicinity Towns

Are Covered Completely by

THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon

THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)

Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVI

The World

MORNING EDITION

The World and the Ev ning World have a com bined circulation daily, 750,000 for $1.20 per aga line gross, subject to co tract discounts. These tw papers are read b more jobbers, departme and chain store buyers, an by more retailers; off more circulation per doll and a more concentrate circulation; a reader and dealer influence more loca ized than any other mor ing and evening combinatio

The World

Pulitzer Building, New Yo
Mallers Bldg. General Motor
Chicago Detroi

San Francis Chronicl

PAYING circulati determines the lo cal choice of an adv tising medium. In S Francisco and Nor ern California it is recognized fact The Chronicle follo ing has the buyi power.

National Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cres
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chic
225 Fifth Ave., New York

LIES RAISED HUGE JM TO AID FRANCE

$2,000,000 Collected for War asted Areas by Newspapers 56 Cities, Committee Report Shows ummarized statement of the work American Committee for Deva- France, Inc., covering the period April 1, 1918 to March 31, 1924, that of the $4,341,391.09 raised by mmittee, nearly $2,000,000 of that t was raised through the efforts y newspapers in 56 cities.

newspapers, in co-operation with committees held Good Will Elec- each 10c contribution to the fund ig the donor to one vote for a lelegate, the winner to be sent to by the committee as a good will try.

following table shows the cities h delegates were elected, the news- which conducted the elections and nount raised in each instance:

wspaper	Amount Raised
ork Sun and Globe	$606,124.95
News	150,310.00
Herald	93,374.56
n Daily Eagle	90,040.00
ati Enquirer	72,067.46
polis News	65,525.43
Daily News	63,196.00
lphia Bulletin	53,722.00
Bee	48,933.87
re News	48,773.55
Blade	45,405.67
Rapids Press	43,557.99
gh Chronicle-Telegraph	34,757.80
Journal	33,333.54
is Globe-Democrat	30,024.21
polis Tribune	28,485.40
ield Union	24,751.95
nd News-Leader	24,001.70
lle Herald	23,000.00
kee Sentinel	22,369.58
aven Journal-Courier	18,082.00
d News	17,750.00
le Tennessean-American	16,500.00
Evening Herald	15,856.20
nd News	14,198.62
rleans Item	12,936.50
ter Telegram & Gazette	12,705.60
Auspices Buffalo Express, ier, Evening News, Evening s, Commercial, Enquirer and ram	12,553.00
nton Press	12,516.66
nsport Gazette & Bulletin	11,515.80
Times-Herald	11,396.70
City Journal	10,708.00
ancisco Bulletin	10,424.00
ver Globe	10,350.44
Post	10,000.00
n Press-Guardian	9,238.00
City Press-Union	9,128.98
Star Eagle	8,599.43
Star	8,125.07
end News-Times	8,082.00
d Times	8,036.00
ayne Journal-Gazette	6,873.70
a Evening News	6,682.90
gton Evening Journal	6,544.28
Beacon	6,468.64
Star-Gazette	6,265.40
tady Union Star	5,931.25
imes	5,212.40
burg Telegraph	4,675.70
Tribune	3,467.60
ort Times	3,365.90
in, Wisconsin State Journal	2,611.20

CLEARY RESIGNS

ger Business Survey Dept., Chi- Tribune Joins Studebaker Corp.

es E. Cleary, manager of the busi- urvey department of the Chicago ne for the past eight years, has re- to join the Studebaker Corporation uth Bend, Ind. Mr. Cleary is suc- by George Morris, editor of The the Tribune's house paper, who will ver his work on May 1.

Cleary, a University of Illinois ite, became associated with the ne in 1908 as a reporter. He d the business survey department in and has been credited with the kable development of that depart-

TUDENTS PROTEST VETO

Texas Journalism Classes Resent Closing of Department

TIN, Tex., April 16.—A protest by ts in the University of Texas alism Department, which is to be in June as a result of Governor Miriam A. Ferguson's veto of all salaries for the school, was filed with the University board of regents at its meeting this week. The regents decided to wait until the next meeting May 19, to go into the matter. But there is little hope held out the school can now be saved.

James E. Ferguson, husband of Governor Ferguson, has intimated there will be a special session of the Texas legislature next January, when the University summer school can be provided for before closing in 1926, but the journalism department will have closed a year.

The protest was in the form of a petition urging that the regents take steps if possible to save the journalism school.

HAAS NAMED QUILL EDITOR

American Boy Staff Man Joins Sigma Delta Chi Publication

Mark L. Haas of the editorial staff of The American Boy, Detroit, has been appointed editor of The Quill, official publication of Sigma Delta Chi, by national officers of the professional journalistic fraternity. Mr. Haas assumes charge of the magazine at once. He succeeds Chester W. Cleveland of Chicago, resigned.

Mr. Haas recently left the managing editorship of the Fullerton (Cal.) Tribune to join the American Boy. He was graduated from the University of Washington School of Journalism at Seattle in the class of 1920.

Mr. Haas's first issue of The Quill, published six times a year, will appear in May. Sigma Delta Chi now has 39 chapters, more than 4,000 members on newspapers and magazines and in colleges and universities throughout the country.

WHEN A BRICK IS A BRICK

National Vigilance Committee Defines Just What It Is

The contention of architects, builders, and building material experts that any kind of a solid building unit of a certain size is entitled to be called a brick is upheld in a bulletin just issued by the National Vigilance Committee of the Advertising Clubs of the World.

Referring to attempts made to associate the term "brick" with the specific material, the bulletin stated: "Reactions obtained show that the word when used alone is not sufficiently definite in that it is understood by many persons to refer to more than one kind of solid building unit of an approximate size—2¼x3¾x8."

After further investigation of the various materials in manufacturing methods, the Committee recommends that to avoid any confusion and in the interest of clarity all advertisers of brick, whether of clay, concrete, sand, lime or other material, state in their advertising matter, the material content of the products.

Tennessee forbids teaching evolution. How about practising it?—Dallas News.

The most successful of all newspaper consolidations.

THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Tribune

Transatlantic Thoughts

"Nothing is more calculated to improve international relations than better acquaintance and more intimate understanding between the peoples of different countries."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE
to the Order of Scottish Clans, July 5, 1924

"But in these days international friendship is not based upon official friendship alone. To be fruitful and enduring, it needs the sanction of popular sympathy. The individuals who constitute the democracies of the English-speaking countries must learn to understand each other as in private life real friends understand each other—laughing sometimes at each other, sometimes holding different views, but always cordial and feeling the uniting influence of good-fellowship—if they are ever to see their ideals adequately translated into practice in international affairs."

HONORABLE RAMSAY MACDONALD
Former Prime Minister of Great Britain
—American Newspaper Publishers' Association, April 24, 1924

"America taught Great Britain her greatest lesson one hundred and fifty years ago—how to manage her colonies. . . . Important as was Columbus' discovery, there is no more important discovery today than the discovery of England by Americans and the discovery of America by Englishmen. . . . In the future the sea must be a highway and not a separator."

HONORABLE STANLEY BALDWIN
Prime Minister of Great Britain at Walter Hines Page Memorial, Westminster, Nov. 11, 1924

For over eight decades Cunard Ships have been among the strongest links between America and Europe and have figured prominently in the annals of important missions crossing the seas.

During 1924 Cunard and Associated Lines carried 203,343 passengers to and from Europe, the largest number carried by any line or group of lines on the Atlantic.

CUNARD and ANCHOR Lines

25 Broadway, New York or Branches and Agencies

ADVERTISING PROFESSION MOURNS J. A. WOOD

Two Funeral Services Held for Senior Member of N. W. Ayer & Son, Who Died in Philadelphia April 9—Served 37 Years With Agency and Was Internationally Known in Business and Advertising Circles

TWO funeral services were held for Jarvis A. Wood, senior member of the firm of N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia, president of the Poor Richard Club, and one of the most widely known advertising men in the world, who died late Thursday, April 9, at his home in Wayne, a suburb of Philadelphia.

The regular services were held Monday afternoon in the North Baptist Church, Camden, in which city Mr. Wood formerly lived for a number of years, but an unusual tribute was paid the dearly loved man by the arrangement of what the organizers termed a "neighborhood service," which was held Sunday afternoon at the Central Baptist Church, Wayne, in which suburb Mr. Wood had made his home for some time.

He was senior deacon and chairman of the board of deacons in the Wayne church and for many years led the men's Bible class. His body lay in state from 3:30 until 4 o'clock Easter Sunday and hundreds of persons viewed it, after which a special service of an hour's duration was held by the Rev. Roy E. Whittemore, pastor of the church. Members of the Poor Richard Club attended.

The club attended in a body Monday when the address was made by the Rev. Edward C. Pollard, of Crozier Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa., assisted by the Rev. James Dalton Morrison.

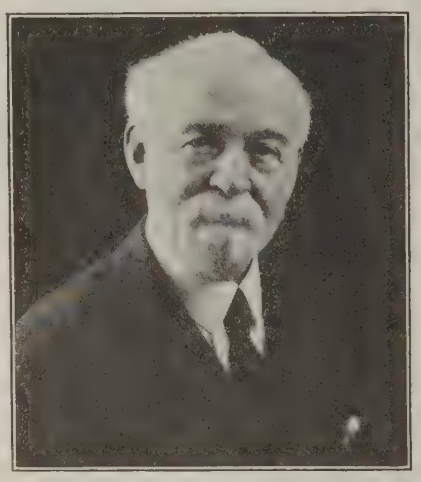
Mr. Wood was taken ill Palm Sunday, but the day before had been at his desk as usual. Pneumonia developed. Associates said that he had been working hard for years and never had been known to spare himself, consequently he had little reserve force. Another associate said that when Mr. Ayer passed away Mr. Wood said he would be the next to go and none could rid his mind of that idea.

It has been said of Mr. Wood that he had the widest acquaintance of any man in America. He numbered among his friends and acquaintances ministers of the gospel, publishers, advertising and newspaper men, politicians, church workers and business men.

He was born February 12, 1854, at Oyster Bay and would jestingly say that he ought to be a great man since one President of the United States had made his (Mr. Wood's) birthday famous by selecting it as his own and another President had made his birthplace famous by selecting it for his home.

At the age of 14, the boy Jarvis entered a provision store in New York, where he remained for eight years. Then he was drawn to Philadelphia by the Centennial Exposition. He liked the city so much that he decided to remain and obtained employment with the C. W. Nichols Company, a chair and box manufacturing concern.

On April 1, 1888, he joined the staff of N. W. Ayer & Son, advertising agency, 308 Chestnut street, and a few months short of his tenth anniversary with the firm was made a partner.



From then on he rose until he became virtually an international figure in the world of advertising.

Two outstanding beliefs characterized all Mr. Wood's advertising life. He believed in truth and in the power of the slogan. He also fathered the beautiful in advertisements.

At all times he insisted on absolute honesty in all the advertisements prepared by the organization of which he became head. Nothing that could be construed as being in any way misleading was permitted. He was largely responsible for the coining of the slogan "Truth in Advertising," which for years has been the watchword of advertising men.

His definition of advertising is considered a classic: "Advertising is the causing to know, the causing to remember, the causing to do."

It is difficult to say just what Mr. Wood inaugurated because of his innate modesty and his reluctance to take credit for anything, and also because he was so close to Mr. Ayer and his son that the innovations they inaugurated and which later were adopted all over the advertising world, came about at conferences, with the suggestions coming from one or the other to be at once eagerly discussed and amplified and enlarged and worked out by all three. Yet it is widely known that Mr. Wood was one of the foremost men to bring advertising to its present commanding position. At the time of his entrance to the Ayer organization, advertising was a poor thing compared with what it is now. The advertisements were small, there was a great desire, on the part of many, to obtain purchasers at any cost, even that of misrepresentation, and there was no attempt to make an appeal to the eye.

The late Jarvis A. Wood

The Messrs. Ayer and Wood were pioneers in the field of illustrated advertising first using mere pictures of the goods advertised and later the excellent drawings and illustrations such as we are familiar with in connection with automobiles, cameras, hosiery, etc.

It was due to Mr. Ayer's suggestion and Mr. Wood's hearty co-operation that the present system of the advertising agency was built up. Prior to this inauguration, the advertiser dealt direct with the newspapers and magazines and charges and service varied so that the advertiser never knew what to expect. The Ayer agency, with Mr. Wood and Mr. Ayer working valiantly to bring it about, began to build up a system whereby the advertiser went to the agency, talked over his requirements, then left it to the organization which prepared pictures and script and made arrangements with the newspapers and magazines. In connection with this work, Messrs. Ayer & Wood built up a wonderful statistical department from which data concerning any advertisible product in any part of the world could be given the client. Mr. Wood also made up the first directory of mediums of advertising, including in his volume newspapers and magazines down to the most obscure trade journal.

Mr. Wood was the first head of the publicity department of the Ayer agency. He was active in the growth of the big campaigns that are planned in their entirety sometimes to extend over a period of many years.

Because of being drawn to Philadelphia by the Centennial Exposition, Mr. Wood was a staunch supporter of the Sesquicentennial. He claimed that the 150th anniversary of American independence would be of value to the city, because it would attract enterprising young people who would decide to remain.

At the last annual election of the Poor Richard Club, Mr. Wood was chosen president, and shortly after his installation as chief officer headed the Philadelphia delegation to the convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World held in London last summer.

Once abroad, a veritable ovation was given Mr. Wood everywhere he went. Receptions and banquets were given in his honor and his visit with the club and his subsequent tour were in the nature of a triumphant procession. It was his first trip abroad and it seemed that none could do enough for him. He was one of the guests of honor at a garden party arranged by the King and Queen of England and given in the grounds surrounding the palace, and, later, after the close of the convention, the President of France had him as guest in his home.

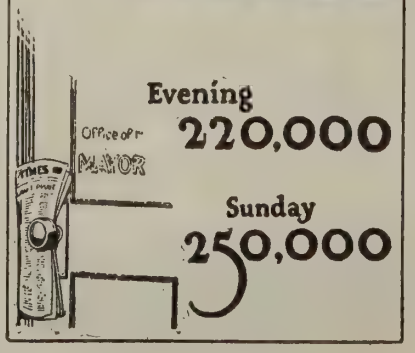
Under his administration the Poor Richard Club's membership drive was inaugurated which has resulted in the mark set being in sight, although the time for the close of the drive has not arrived.

He looked after the club's charities in person and started a fund for the poor. Annually he headed the Christmas dinner movement of the club.

To Mr. Wood and Bartley J. Doyle is due the credit of establishing the School for Advertising and Journalism that is part of the Poor Richard Club, and the first commencement of which was held recently. Mr. Wood was keenly interested in young people and in seeing that they had a proper foundation for their careers. And it was due to this interest in youth of the day that the school became a reality.

It was also under his administration that the club's new home was purchased and the work of remodeling began. Only a week before being taken ill, Mr. Wood, using the same mallet that was used in starting alterations in the old headquarters on Camac street, many years ago, knocked down a partition, thus formally beginning alterations in the new house.

At the last annual banquet of the Poor Richard Club, one of the greatest in the history of the organization, Mr. Wood was presiding officer, and made a stirring speech on the beauty of service and Americanism.



The banquet was broadcast and many radio fans enjoyed "Papa" Wood's efforts to keep his unruly children quiet during the speeches. Many a listener-in will recall his quiet, pleading voice saying, "List-en, now list-en, people, list-en! We want to hear this speech. Please, list-en!" The dear old patriarch said it so often that the minute he began with his drawl "List-en," everyone shouted with mirth and made the tumult worse.

For the last 14 years Mr. Wood sent all his friends and business associates, everyone he knew, in fact, all over the country, a Christmas greeting he prepared himself. He scorned the printed greeting card as being insufficient to express up friendship and prepared a booklet embodying a message of cheer, humor, shrewd philosophy and a resume of what he had been doing in the year that had elapsed since the last message. These were always sent by special delivery because of that Mr. Wood gave his messenger let the same name. They were sent out by the hundreds and were eagerly awaited in homes and offices. The message annually showed his natural optimism, his great kindness and love of fun.

In all his stress of work he never seemed to become embittered, nor had his character been warped by the selfish, sordid side of business.

He believed in work and was against men retiring when years pressed heavily upon them. He celebrated his last birthday by working at his desk as on other days. When interviewed on his 70th birthday he said he expected to keep on working. "T. F.," the advertising man's motto, "Copy that is to run until recalled or forbid." He attributed his long life of activity to his quiet life and his interest in his hobbies, which included the welfare of the young people and his "Special Delivery." He never went in for athletics, even in his youth, and had never been interested in golf, but he kept himself in trim by walking. He scorned to ride a car from his home to Wayne station and walked twice daily.

Beaumont and 20-mile area
Population over 150,0
Ranks in importance to the o four large Texas markets. S managers cannot cover T with only four papers.
The BEAUMON ENTERPRIS
AND
The BEAUMON JOURNA
cover the Fifth Market in Texas the Third Market in Louisiana.
"Ask Beckwith—He Know

Detroit Times

Evening 220,000
Sunday 250,000

THE First thought f those who advert to Texans is usua

The Dallas Morni News
—the pape
Prosperity Zo

CHILDREN GUESTS ON DAILY'S TOUR

urgh Chronicle Telegraph's Bird use Club Winners Spend Four Days in Washington—J. M. Aylward in Charge

Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph, veral days ending Saturday, April ntertained 40 boys and girls and l teachers in Washington. The sters were prize winners in the icle Telegraph Bird House Club, ganization sponsored by the news- and which has grown from a few d when founded to approximately this year.

boys of the club build bird houses mpetition, while the girls make s or aprons. This year almost oxes were submitted to the judges many garments were turned in. boxes and articles were placed on ion in Pittsburgh where they were by the judges and thousands of s of the city and surrounding terri- From this exhibition the 20 best uses and the 20 best garments were and those making them were de- the winners.

children, properly chaperoned, brought to Washington by the per and entertained for four days, rty returning to Pittsburgh Satur- idnight on specially chartered Pull- ars. This was the third visit made National Capitol by as many dif- parties. Two years ago the bird were presented to President Hard- be placed in the White House ls. Last year they were given to chitect of the capitol, while this hey were given to Walter Reed l, where more than 1,000 former men are under treatment.

bird house carried a specially plate which read, "To Our Service t Walter Reed Hospital From the House Club of the Pittsburgh icle Telegraph.

J. D. Glennan, commander of the tion, with many of his aides and of nurses and service men received rty, conducted them through the tion and provided a bounteous at the end of the festivities.

ing their stay in the capitol the icle Telegraph party were received esident Coolidge, visited the army avy aviation fields where those in gave exhibition flights, toured the building from pit to dome, went unt Vernon and Arlington national ry and wound up their stay by entertained by the newspaper at Washington's leading theatres.

ing their time in Washington the icle Telegraph chartered large obiles and carried their guests over tally all of the city.

Bird House Club has the endorse- tof the Pittsburgh school officials any educators of the city take an part in the organization. Joseph lward, circulation manager of the icle Telegraph, who is head of the was in charge of the party in ngton and directed the week's ers, Pioneer Paper Man, Dead

dard Covell Rogers, 86, one of the paper manufacturers of the Con- t Valley, died in Springfield, April 13. He was a director in merican Paper and Pulp Associa- and a former president of the an Papermakers' Association.

Mrs. Sydney Smith Dies

Sydney Smith, wife of the creator "Andy Gump" comic strip, died ly in her Lake Geneva (Wis.) April 11.

klahoma Paper Chartered ate charter has been granted the (Okla.) News-Democrat, with capital. Julian I. Copeland, Burris nn and Rex H. Moore, all of , are the incorporators.

Obituary

DAVID T. MONTIETH, 43, former managing editor of the Port Huron (Mich.) Times-Herald, died suddenly while sitting in his office, April 11. He has been in the insurance and real estate business for some time past.

WILLIAM A. CROW, 75, for a half century a printer on newspapers in various parts of the United States, died a few days ago at Pomeroy, O.

ISSAC B. HARRINGTON, Boston news agent died at his home in Newton, Mass., recently.

MRS. SARAH JACKSON FARR, 83, who for 43 years kept open house for newsboys at her home in Minneapolis, died April 7. She was founder and hostess of the Farr Newsboys' Club.

IRVING C. HARGRAVES, for more than 50 years employed on the Providence (R. I.) Journal and Evening Bulletin as proof reader, compositor and correspondent, died at his home in Lakewood, R. I., on April 11.

CHARLES W. LAMB, advertising counsel for the Milwaukee Electric Railway nad Light Company, and former newspaper man, died April 9. Mr. Lamb was the founder of the Menasha (Wis.) Record and had been a member of the editorial staffs of the Milwaukee Journal, Sentinel, Daily News and Free Press.

JOHN G. OSTRANDER, 54, president of the Ostrander-Seymour Company, Chicago, electrotypers, stereotypers and photo engravers, died at his home in Chicago on April 13.

Wisconsin Editor Dies at 91

Dudley S. Crandall, believed to be the oldest editor in the United States, died April 11 from the effects of a fall at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., in his 91st year. Son of a Lockport, N. Y., printer, he was born Sept. 17, 1824. He picked up telegraphy when it was a novelty and worked at the key in Illinois and Iowa but went back to his first love, newspaper work, at Champaign, Ill.

He was successively the editor of the Chicago Union Park Banner, the Menominee (Mich.) Herald and the Sturgeon Bay Advocate.

Kent Shaffer Dies in Los Angeles

Kent Shaffer, 39, son of John C. Shaffer, Chicago, Ill., newspaper publisher, died April 5, at his home in Los Angeles, after an illness of about five weeks. Until about three years ago when he came to Los Angeles from Denver, he was associated with his father, who publishes a string of papers including the Chicago Post, Indianapolis Star, Muncie (Ind.) Star, Terre Haute (Ind.) Star, Denver (Col.) Rocky Mountain News and Denver Times.

Veteran Iowa News Man Dies

Maj. Frank E. Lyman, Jr., one of the best known newspaper men in Iowa, died April 13 at his home in Des Moines after an illness extending over a period of two years. Major Lyman started his newspaper career with the Iowa State Register 35 years ago. Later he went to the Des Moines News, where he eventually became managing editor. When the World War opened Mr. Lyman was with the Des Moines Register. He resigned his position when appointed to take charge of the draft in the office of the adjutant general of Iowa, with a rank of major.

Fred Allen, Ink Salesman, Dies

Fred Allen, 60, since 1909 salesman for the J. M. Huber, Inc., manufacturers of printers' inks, died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., April 10.

Palmyra (N. Y.) Courier Incorporated

The Palmyra (N. Y.) Courier Company has been incorporated to publish the Palmyra Courier, a weekly, the incorporation being for $10,000.

YES

There's a word to work with during this year of 1925.

Yes-newspapers are going ahead—and they'll keep going. No-newspapers are standing pat—and standing still.

It's our privilege to serve nearly a hundred and fifty of this country's yes-newspapers in the successful promotion of their classified advertising.

We are using yes-methods—the best in campaigns, illustrated promotion copy, counsel and all-round service.

We ought to be working with you

The Basil L. Smith System, Inc.

International Classified Advertising Counsellors

Packard Building Philadelphia

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Advertising Town Proceedings

To Editor & Publisher: On the editorial page of Editor & Publisher for April 4 under the heading "Wrong Principle" you have a comment on the Michigan proposal that the proceedings of village councils should be published in the local newspapers as advertising.

I think this editorial is based on a lack of understanding of the functions of the average village council and of its tendency to get by with many little transactions concerning people in the city without due publicity thereof.

This contention that such council proceedings is news of value to the community and as such should be published by the newspaper as good journalism, would apply to a very small part of the council proceedings in the average village. For instance: the bills allowed and paid by the council for small services or supplies furnished the city is not news that would interest even one per cent of the newspaper's subscribers, and yet as publicity of the council's actions in spending the money of the community every coal dealer would be interested in noting the amount paid to another dealer for coal used or ordered by the city. The same is true with other things of that kind which the newspaper would not display under a news head and probably would not print at all without pay for doing it.

In Iowa a condensed report of council proceedings is required and that condensed report briefly summarizes the general activities of the council with a complete report of the schedule of bills allowed.

The newspaper on its own volition would not publish all this matter regularly because it might lack general news interest, but where published by the city, the very fact that it is to be published has a wonderful influence toward careful and honest transactions concerning the public funds. In the latter respect alone it is economy for cities and towns to publish summaries of their council proceedings and from such summaries the newspaper can extract that which is of real general news value and enlarge on it as required.

Viewing it in this light, I would not think that you are correct in stating that requiring publication of council proceedings is "wrong principle."

G. L. Caswell,
Managing Director,
Iowa Press Association.

U. S. Complaint Misinterpreted

To Editor & Publisher:—In your issue of March 20, 1925, we have noticed the article under the heading of "Engraving Company Cited." We regret to inform you that your notice is entirely a misconception of the Federal Trade Commission's complaint, and that it is a false statement of facts.

The Federal Trade Commission does not cite the Non-Plate Engraving Company for attempting to sell its products as engraving.

The Federal Trade Commission does cite the Non-Plate Engraving Company, Inc., for stating Engraved Effects produced without copperplates or steel dies, and for using the name Non-Plate Engraving Company, Inc. Their contention is that the use of the word engraving might possibly mislead the public into believing that the work was engraving, but not that the Non-Plate Engraving Company, Inc., has represented its products as engraving, for we quite distinctly state in all places, that our effects are produced without copperplates or steel dies.

We trust that you will see fit to correct this in the next issue of your publication, as necessarily any adverse criticism is decidedly detrimental to any company. The contention of the Non-Plate Engraving Company, Inc., that they produce an effect similar to that of engraving, without copperplates or steel dies, I believe that you will concede to be correct.

Non-Plate Engraving Company, Inc.
R. O. H. Hill, President.

"Crime and the Newspapers"

To Editor & Publisher: In the name of the Prophet, bunk! I'm referring to an article in the New York World of March 23d which contains what I assume to be correct quotations from a speech made by your Dr. James Melvin Lee before the Young People's Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church on "Crime and the Newspapers." And I'm writing, too, as a former newspaper man of more than 25 years' experience, most of it on metropolitan newspapers.

I've no quarrel with the eminent Doctor, either in a Pickwickian, or a sterner sense, if he elects to essay the role of a modern journalistic Dr. Pangloss in proclaiming this to be the best of all possible newspaper worlds. That is between him and his God. But when I find myself confronted with his dictum that "newspapers may need reform but newspaper readers need it still more," I gag and heave at him, kindly, but firmly. His case demands chastisement.

Not that I am not constrained to go along with him thus far: That the bulk of the big daily newspapers today feed the public the high red meat of crime news because that is what a majority of the reading public unquestionably want, and because crime news makes circulation and because circulation is what makes the wheels of the newspaper business go 'round. Isn't that in itself, though, a sad indictment of the spiritual forces, or lack of them, perhaps, which motivate latter-day journalism?

But Dr. Lee's statement is an out-and-out admission that in recognizing the existence of this avid appetite for crime news, he also recognizes that the papers yield to it and profit by it by catering to it, deliberately. I am no soft-hearted altruist, but I refuse to subscribe to the doctrine inferentially and defensively enunciated by Dr. Lee which is: on account of the existence of this appetite, the newspapers, therefore, are forced into the position of being reluctantly compelled to state it because it does exist and not because their editors would not vastly prefer to omit crime news. In other words, that there is no way out of it, that an inexorable necessity lies upon the editors to meet this demand merely because it does exist. He might as well argue affirmatively the wisdom and righteousness of a parent permitting his offspring to swig down a draught of carbolic acid from a pretty red bottle, solely because the pretty red bottle excites the admiration of the child and he cries for its possession.

If by some drastic legal, or moral force, all newspapers and kindred mediums might be inhibited from printing more than the bare facts of crimes—terse statements that John Doe had slain Mary Roe with an axe and was arrested for said infraction of the law—it would be found that within a year the gross circulation of all the newspapers put together would not be appreciably diminished. Editors, if they and their papers were worth their salt, would seek and find other and less pernicious means of interesting and holding their readers.

When anyone tells me that newspapers cannot make ends meet financially without pandering to the public's zest for crime news, I invite his especial attention to the Christian Science Monitor. I am not a Scientist and I do not read the Monitor, and I lick my chops with as much gusto as the average unregenerate Babbitt over a good juicy murder, or scandal story, but you know and I know that there isn't a big newspaper in the country that couldn't do what the Monitor does and keep on paying its way. But they don't want to. That's the trouble. I'll wager that every honest newspaper man, whose opinion is worth a whoop, will agree with me, if he'll own up and come clean.

Neither to my keen regret do I find it possible to mingle my paeans with those of Dr. Lee in his laudation of those editors who, as he told the young people of the Park Avenue Baptist church strain at news gnats in their virtuously desperate endeavors not to print things that are calculated to damage the reputations of men, or women. This is the Ossa of bunk piled on the Pelion of blather. And mighty cheap bunk and blather, too, with all respect to the good Doctor.

The actual and lamentable fact is that the average editor who sits in judgment upon news in the offices of the metropolitan newspapers are notoriously merciless and incorrigible in this respect. If by rare circumstances a story, the printing of which might brutally and irretrievably injure the repute, or the feelings of either a man, or a woman, is killed, it is not killed because of this consideration. Not in a million miles. If such a story never gets into print it is, in nine cases out of ten, for one, two or all of three reasons: fear of a libel suit, the exceptional social, financial, political, or official position held by the target of the story or for that the person whom the story concerns has sufficient pull with the owner, the editor, or one of the big advertisers to keep it out. And, in the very exceptional cases wherein neither of these three reasons, possibly barring the first, operates and the paper lets the story run, the paper will seize every opportunity of beating the tom-tom and vociferously directing attention to the remarkable fact that this particular newspaper is wholly, absolutely, completely and teetotally independent of man, God, or the devil in its selection of the news matter which goes into its columns. Which is more bunk. But I don't think they get away with it, at that. Current mistrust of the news independence of the newspapers of the country is too firmly rooted among the people to be removed by this sort of a red herring drawn across the trail.

The reputations of scores of women and men, of high, low and middling degree daily are attacked—usually well within the libel line—by newspapers, coldly, deliberately brutally, cynically, with a complete and contemptuous disdain for the facts, or, when it comes down to it, for the actual news value of the story. I'll prove it, in at least one typical instance. Readers of the New York newspapers cannot so soon have forgotten the recent outrageous and criminal publicity given an unfortunate man of irreproachable life and standing, a resident of Westchester county, who was accused by a swarm of disgruntled busy-bodies, relatives and so-called friends of his wife, of poisoning the wife, in order that he might inherit her considerable fortune. The man, who was not even placed under arrest, was tried and convicted of the crime in the columns of the New York press. The only conclusion which the intelligent reader could possibly draw from these stories was that the man was an ice-blooded deliberate wife-murderer. He was completely absolved. Did one of these fair-minded editors who Dr. Lee eulogizes have the grace, or the decency to print an apology to their victim. There wasn't one!

In a large percentage of these and similar cases the victim has no redress. Usually the news writers and the editors are cunning enough to keep away from direct and provable libel. Unless the victim has means of making his complaints heard, listened to and respected in the office of the offending newspaper, the original defamatory story stands, without correction, or retraction.

I know of only one great newspaper which makes a practice of affording even an approximately fair show to a person who has been injured in reputation, or personal feelings, or who deems himself so, by the publication of an incorrect, or a distorted news item. This is the New York World. All praise to it. The general rule seems to me—and I am speaking in full knowledge of what I am talking about, through experience inside and outside of newspaper offices—to treat legitimate complaints and grievances of this nature with indifference, defiance and incivility.

Even when it is clearly demonstrated to an editor, or his representative that a libelous publication has been made, he usually will bluster, bluff, wiggle and squirm to the limit to avoid printing a retraction or an explanation or even a statement from the injured person. When he does do this, he is forced into it. He doesn't do it voluntarily, as a matter of fairness, or decency. Not infrequently the editor will carry his bull-headedness to the degree of actually forcing the victim into a libel suit. Of this I have two recent cases in mind, one a personal experience, the other that of a friend.

A New York newspaper—the Times, if you wish to know—in a news article printed statements which I am advised by my attorney are libelous. I called at the office of the newspaper, in a wholly amicable spirit, and solely for the purpose of obtaining information concerning the source of the article, to enable me to fix the responsibility where it belonged. My attitude was that the paper had been imposed upon, as it was. All this I carefully explained to the editor with whom I talked and showed him most clearly where the article had wronged and libeled me. The editor's attitude was one of indifference, skepticism, vagueness. All information bearing upon the mechanical processes by which the libel was transmitted to the paper and got into print was premptorily refused. Did the paper print a retraction, after the editor had been told of the libel? It did not.

In the case of my friend a libel even more gross, damaging and inexcusable was printed. He complained to the editor who was shown, beyond any question of doubt that not only was the publication criminally unfair and incorrect, but also that it had been published upon information given it by a reporter who had not the slightest pains to verify his report, who was, in addition, a former convict. The editor declined to retract. My friend was forced to sue. He will win his suit. In the meantime, the paper, in its stubborn pretence to justify in court a wholly unjust publication, has spent in fees to lawyers and detectives probably $10,000 in vain attempt to "get something on" my friend to assist in putting up a successful defense against him.

Hence, when I read of Dr. Lee rhapsodizing over the struggles of editors to keep from defaming reputations, I am compelled to wrinkle my nose in derision and remark: "Bla..." also strikes me, somehow, that the whole newspaper business these days is suspiciously on the defensive. There be guilty consciences a-ween, in editorial offices and counting rooms.

Robert H. Mur...

Cartoons and Success

To Editor & Publisher: Being interested in the discussion that you seem to have stirred up with an editorial some time ago on "Keeping the Cartoon," I have looked up a few issues in your edition of February 28, this year, which you give the list of lineage leaders for last year. The things I find are startling to those who think the local cartoon is dying. If Mr. Marcus is still cartooning for the New York Times the first five newspapers in point of advertising lineage last year all had cartoonists. Of the next five three of them have cartoonist and the same percentage holds to the third five. The fourth five support cartoonists and the next group of five have but one cartoonist. In other words, the first 15 leading advertising lineage newspapers all have cartoonists but four. . . . Of the 15 are "Keeping the Cartoon." In the next ten, the percentage is 3 to 7 against cartoon. The nearer the top we get the thicker are the cartoonists. And it can be argued that it is only the leaders that afford cartoonists because a great many of the country's most famous cartoonists are on newspapers that have no chance as to get up near the top in a list of lineage leaders. Mr. Babson could probably explain in a way that would make an argument that would sound good to the cartooning fraternity but not being a Babson I will quit and let the facts speak for themselves. They say something.

A Small Town Cartoo...

FORESHADOWED EVENTS

April 25—Georgia Press Assn., co... vention ta Savannah, Ga., w... trip to New York, April 28.
April 25-May 2—League of Ame... can Pen Women, Inc., annu... authors' congress, Washingto... D. C.
April 26-May 2—National Bo... Week.
May 1—National Child Health D...
May 4-9—16th annual Journali... Week, University of Missou... Columbia, Mo.
May 6-7-8—Association of Natio... Advertisers, spring conventi... Chicago.
May 8-9—Oklahoma Press As... annual spring convention, ... Sulphur, Okla.
May 9-14—Associated Advertisi... Clubs of the World, 21st annu... convention, Houston, Tex.
May 14-16—Arkansas Press As... summer meeting, El Dora... Ark.
May 21-27—Inland Daily Pr... Assn., special cnovention, W... Baden, Ind.

The Business Men

of your community will value the authentic statements of

ROGER W. BABSON

on the business and financial situation, above any other single piece of news that you can print.

Supplied weekly through the Publishers Financial Bureau—Babson Park, Mass...

"The Largest Statistical Community in America"

ADE PAPER WRITERS A SOURCE FOR BUSINESS PAGE COPY

ipped to Handle Business Subjects They Can Write Accu- ately on Local Conditions, Writer Believes, Supplanting Work of Staff Reporters

By WARNER BATES

W many newspaper publishers ho cater to the business element eir community are obtaining a while local service of editorial ial with business interest? So a survey of scores of newspapers umber of larger cities reveals, few lhers are taking advantage of this unity for increasing circulation and g a hold on a definite class of read- at will result in increased adver- patronage.

ting stock market reports, together ews service or syndicate summaries day in the stock market or out- ng business developments in New Chicago or one or two other met- tan centers, grain reports, produce s, syndicate paragraph reports of nds or other important develop- in the larger corporations, local and bond exchange reports and oc- al publicity stories put out by local ns covers the contents of the busi- s pages of most newspapers, the y over. In the volume and variety is class of news carried, the dis- with which it is handled and its ac- , many newspapers outside the politan centers are doing notable and achieving results.

addition to the factors mentioned make up the average business page, newspapers print daily editorial ent by their business editors, which onsiderably to the sprightliness of ge and give a desirable local flavor terest. But beyond this, the aver- ewspaper's coverage of local busi- s meagre and spasmodic, for a few can afford to employ staff men of ent ability for handling business s only.

writer of local business articles l be well grounded in the funda- ls of business methods in general, gement, office technique, production, casing, transportation, advertising, g, wholesaling, retailing, store man- nt, display work and many other ts that are of interest to business Such a writer would command out of propodtion with the value service to the average newspaper, e amount of such material that can d is limited. In fact, writers with per understanding of all the sub- enumerated would be hard to find r the newspaper to employ a staff cialists in various phases of business be out of the question.

ne publishers find it possible to ob- sufficient supply of material of this rom local writers for business and al magazines, paying them space r so much per article for acceptable ial, and therein is the tip that it is rpose of this article to give. Most of 100,000 and up have men who their entire time to writing for magazines or class publications. with considerable experience along ne become more or less specialists ious phases of business. At least, re better equipped to handle busi- tories than the average staff writer. handling the business or technical s a difficult proposition. Accuracy, knowledge of the subject in hand understanding of business funda- ls, combined with the faculty of g interesting copy that can be un- od by many classes of readers are the requirements for this profes- . When such a story occasionally to the lot of the usual staff man, s far more used to writing about rs, divorces, court proceedings, s, sob stuff, ball games, prize fights, riangles, shows, books, moving pic- actors and actresses, scandals and e hundred and one divisions into news of the day divides itself, he usually makes mistakes that are obvious to the most casual observer with a knowledge of the subject in hand, and one or two slips of this kind tend to discredit the whole article and perhaps the newspaper in the mind of the business reader.

Writing for business and technical publications, being free lance work, is more or less precarious, no matter how successful the writer, and consequently many such writers would welcome an opportunity to earn a little side money at home, payment for which can be obtained any time after publication by calling at the newspaper's counting room. Also it happens that most such writers can give a local newspaper a worthwhile service of this kind, using for the large part their by product material.

Publication of a business story locally rarely detracts in any way from its value to a national business or technical magazine, provided that the two stories are written along different lines. In fact, the process that the writer is advocating is occasionally reversed and more than one good trade magazine story has been built up out of material previously printed in a local paper. It is easy to make the two stories essentially different because the newspaper wants the emphasis on the local facts, while the national magazine wants its subject matter of a more general application. But there is a distinct advantage to the writer in being able to make two distinct sales from his notes.

From the newspaper angle, there is interest for a considerable portion of its readers in stories such as the following: important changes in advertising, selling or other plans of a local industry or other business, especially when a more or less full description of these will have a tendency to give other business men ideas applicable to their own businesses; stories based on trends and developments of certain retail trades, in wholesaling or in manufacturing; stories that have to do with the fundamenals of advertising and salesmanship, with the practice, the technique and the principles of these twin subjects and of the training of salesmen; autobiographical stories of conspicuous local successes in the business or industrial world; historial sketches of local businesses that have made a worthwhile success, etc., etc. The possibilities of such a service are many.

Newspaper publishers will find a surprising amount of reader interest in such subjects if properly handled and presented. For instance, consider the people who would be interested in an article having to do with advertising, especially with a local slant. The heads of almost any business, manufacturer, wholesaler, broker, manufacturer's representative, retailer, realtor, banker, butcher, baker and candlestick maker are interested in this vital twentieth century subject. All he employes of a business house who have any contact with advertising or executive management are interested; then there are the advertising agency men and independent advertising writers of the city to figure in.

As for selling, the possibilities of reader interest in any article on salesmanship are almost infinite when one considers the thousands and thousands of any city's population who are in one way or another interested in selling. So with other subjects that might be mentioned.

Of course, not all the subjects that a trade or technical magazine writer might cover would have sufficient interest for newspaper publication, but if handled by a newspaper editor who knows just how much of this kind of material and exactly what kind he wants to add interest and value to his business news pages, such a free lance connection by the newspaper with one or more class magazine writers of the city will prove profitable.

IOWA

PROGRESSIVE CITIES

The cities of Iowa owe their wealth and growth indirectly to their proximity to fertile farm lands.

There are eighteen cities in Iowa with populations of 10,000 inhabitants or more. They are thriving, modern, progressive cities all symbolizing the great and limitless possibilities that await the "up and going" advertisers in the Middle West.

The industrial development, during the last decade, of what was primarily an agricultural state, has done much toward the financial and commercial advancement of her cities.

PRODUCTIVE FARMS

More than 213,000 productive farms dot this state of 55,586 sq. miles of land surface thereby placing it in the front from the standpoint of agricultural wealth. The soil of the state is very rich and easily tilled—a fact which has raised the farms to the highest points of efficiency and productiveness.

Of Iowa's 213,439 farms, 121,439 are operated by owners and 2,487 by managers. Fifty-one per cent of the farms of the state are of areas varying from 100 to 499 acres in size.

More than 85 per cent of the farm land of Iowa is improved and under a high state of cultivation.

PROFITABLE ADVERTISING is afforded you through this list of daily newspapers which thoroughly cover the state.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
*Burlington Gazette .....(E)	10,164	.045
Cedar Rapids Gazette .....(E)	21,300	.07
Davenport Democrat & Leader...(E)	14,811	.06
Davenport Democrat & Leader...(S)	17,626	.06
††Davenport Times .....(E)	25,031	.07
*Iowa City Press-Citizen.....(E)	6,387	.035
*Mason City Globe Gazette.....(E)	12,622	.04
*Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,762	.035
*Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	12,852	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier .....(E)	17,071	.06

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1925.
A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1925.

CHICAGO LEASE FORCES TENANT TO ADVERTISE

Unusual Contract Signed in Chicago Whereby Store Agrees to Spend $50,000 Yearly in Newspapers

A lease requiring the lessee to start advertising in Chicago newspapers at a schedule of $50,000 yearly, and increasing at the rate of 5 per cent of gross sales, is the unusual feature of the rental agreement signed whereby Joseph Hilton, Inc., New York haberdasher and men's clothier, becomes a tenant in the Republic building, South State and Adams streets, Chicago.

Pointing out that the matter of rental is largely a partnership affair between lanlord and tenant, Col. Gordon Strong, of Gordon Strong & Co., managers of the Republic building, called attention to the interesting particulars of the Hilton lease, a percentage agreement.

"A percentage rental," Col. Strong said, "depends upon gross sales. But gross sales, depend, among other things, on advertising. Accordingly, to be sure of a maximum of percentage rental we should insure a full allotment of advertising. A lease carrying a percentage rental is not a complete lease unless it carries a definite agreement on advertising.

"Again, a percentage rental depends on gross sales. But gross sales depend on the dollar's worth of merchandise. The more the merchant gives by way of value, the more the public will purchase. Accordingly, the mercahnt must not only use newspaper space—he must have a message to fill the space—a message to the customer's pocketbook.

"A lease carrying a percentage rental is not a complete lease unless it carries a definite agreement on the dollar's worth of merchandise.

"All these matters are included in starting advertising at a $50,000 a year rate. He agrees to increase this according to gross sales made, at a rate of 5 per cent on such sales. The Chicago papers and the Chicago public can expect to see this advertising in full effect in a month or so."

UNUSUAL REPORTER "PAIRS"

Two Man and Wife Teams on Chicago Tribune Staff

The editorial staff of the Chicago Tribune boasts two unusual reporting combinations, if they can be referred to as such, in two married couples. They are Genevieve Forbes Herrick, and John Herrick, two of the most capable assignment reporters on the Tribune staff, who frequently write parallel stories on the same "yarn." Mrs. Herrick is a graduate of Northwestern University, and has received a master's degree from the University of Chicago. Mr. Herrick has received honors from Yale and Harvard.

The other couple is Caroline Sanborn Krum and Morrow Krum. Mrs. Krum writes a daily society story, while Morrow Krum has recently been made golf editor. Previously, he was a general assignment man.

Lockard Heads Printing Company

Ray Lockard, head of the Periodical Publishers Service bureau, and president of the Des Moines Advertising Club, is head of a new printing company, the Plymouth Press, Inc. Other officers are B. F. Spry of the Des Moines Duplicating Company, vice-president, and C. A. Lockard, secretary-treasurer.

Colorado Houston Delegates Picked

Eight delegates from Denver, Col., two from Pueblo and one from Boulder will represent the state at the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America at Houston, May 9 to 14, it has been announced.

PAWHUSKA DAILIES MERGE

Journal, Morning, Absorbs Capital, Evening and Takes Latter's Field

The Pawhuska (Okla.) Daily Journal, morning publication, has taken over the equipment, stock and circulation of the Pawhuska Daily Capital, afternoon publication, the combination having been effected April 5.

J. A. Knight and E. L. Gay, business manager and managing editor respectively of the Daily Journal, will head the new paper which will be known as the Daily Capital Journal and will be published each afternoon except Saturday, and Sunday morning.

56 ENTRIES IN A. N. P. A. GOLF TOURNAMENT

First Annual Meet to Be Held on Westchester-Biltmore Links April 20—Trophies to Be Awarded

Fifty-six newspaper publishers and executives have signed up for the first annual golf tournament of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association to be held April 20, all day, at the Westchester-Biltmore Country Club, Rye, N. Y.

Others are expected to take part in the play.

Trophies will be awarded winners. Entrants, however, are limited to members of the association only.

"The purpose of the tournament," L. B. Palmer, association manager explained," is to allow members to get together by themselves in an informal way, before the actual convention begins April 22."

Among the golf players will be:

J. B. Woodward, Chicago News; Harry S. Talmadge, Toledo Blade; S. E. Thomason, Chicago Tribune; Rowe Stewart, Philadelphia Record; R. L. Smith, Charleston Gazette; W. H. Sammons, Sioux City Journal; Elzey Roberts, St. Louis Star; Wm. H. Reed, Taunton Gazette; R. C. Patterson, Toledo Times.

J. D. Dun, Toledo Times; Paul Patterson, Baltimore Sun; Joseph A. Blondell, Baltimore Sun; G. J. Palmer, Houston Chronicle; Charles D. Osborn, Auburn Citizen; Wallace Odell, Tarrytown News; L. K. Nicholson, New Orleans Times-Picayune; Leslie Neafie, Toledo Blade; William F. Metten, Wilmington Every Evening.

John C. Martin, Philadelphia Public Ledger; R. L. McKenney, Macon (Ga.) News; A. N. Liecty, Schenectady Gazette; F. E. Messenger, Rome Sentinel; Elisha Hanson, Washington, D. C.; George E. Graff, Williamsport Sun; Frank P. Glass, St. Louis Star; J. F. Fitzpatrick; Walter Dear, Jersey City Journal.

Elmer E. Clark, Little Rock Democrat; F. W. Bush, Athens (O.) Messenger; L. B. Palmer; J. W. Barnhart, New York Daily News; R. C. Holliss, Chicago Tribune; Victor F. Ridder, New York Staats-Herold; Bernard H. Ridder, New York Staats-Herold; C. C. Marquis, Blomington Pantagraph; Davis Merwin.

Adlai Stevenson, Blomington Bulletin; W. G. Chandler, Cleveland Press; H. C. Milholland, Pittsburgh Press; Prentiss Bailey, Utica Observer-Dispatch; A. B. Chivers, New York Daily Mirror; Joel H. Bixby, Muskogee Phoenix; Charles D. Osborne, Auburn Citizen; Arthur D. Hecox, Albany Knickerbocker Press & News; W. E. Buckingham.

Hilton U. Brown, Indianapolis News; J. D. Barnum, Syracuse Post-Standard E. K. Gaylord, Oklahoma City Oklahoman; Chas. R. Long, Chester Times; T. R. Williams, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times; Roy W. Howard, Scripps-Howard Newspapers; J. F. Bresnahan, New York World; R. C. Hoiles, Lorain Times-Herald.

Elmer E. Stoll, Pittsburgh Newspaper Publishers Association; Urban E. Dice, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times; W. W. Hawkins, Scripps-Howard Newspapers.

WOMEN'S VIEWPOINT ON ADVERTISING TOLD

Congresswoman and Actress Discuss Copy Before San Francisco Ad Club—Value of Pictures Stressed

The woman's viewpoint on advertising was explained to the San Francisco Advertising Club at a recent luncheon by Congresswoman Florence Prag Kahn, of the 4th California district and Miss Helen Menken, star of "Seventh Heaven."

"While I am an inveterate newspaper reader, I never read the ads, and so knowing nothing of the effect of advertisements on the readers, I decided to make a 'scientific survey' of my friends," Mrs. Kahn said. "Going to luncheon one day at the Woman's Athletic Club, and while waiting for my hostess, I was joined by another one of the guests; I asked, 'What do you think of advertising?' She answered, 'Perfectly wonderful. My husband has been getting the most remarkable results.' 'Where?' She answered, 'From an ad run in the Saturday Evening Post.' But she acknowledged that she personally seldom read an ad.

"A second friend joined us, and I asked, 'What do you think of advertising?' She said, 'What do you mean?' Knowing her so well, I asked, 'What do you consider the psychological effect of an advertisement upon a reader?' She answered, 'Vicious! It induces many women to spend more money than they have any right to.'

"Just then our hostess rushed in breathlessly, and I said to her, 'What do you think of advertising?' She answered, 'Rotten, disgusted! I have just come from an advertised sale of Midinette dresses, and not one of them comes up to the specifications of the ad.'

"The next person I accosted answered, 'We rich never read the ads.' I immediately visualized my wealthy friend shopping in the basement.

"But the one great fact that I realized from this survey was that pictures count. I gathered that the illustrations attract and then lead to the reading of the ads. One of my friends assured me that the pictures in the advertisements—especially in the fashion magazines—keep her informed regarding the 'new things.' So I want to emphasize that thought 'Your story in pictures leaves nothing untold.'

"I made two other discoveries. One was that all my life the ads had been unconsciously registering with me. That the constant reiteration of spring, spring, spring, certainly called my attention to the fact that my winter clothes were shabby. The other was that one of the most extensive retailers did little or no advertising. I mean the five and ten cent stores. And I realize too the difference in salesmanship. They say to the customer 'There it is,' and you say to the customer, 'Here it is.'"

Miss Menken pointed out the disadvantages to be suffered from untruthful advertising.

DURING 1924
The Plain Dealer
published
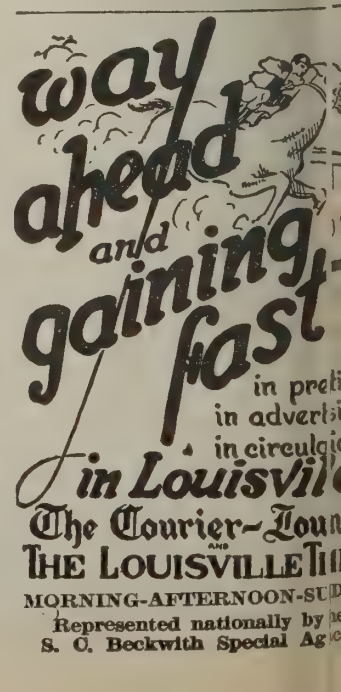
51% of ALL the National lineage appearing in
ALL Cleveland Newspapers
The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it.
J. B. Woodward 110 E. 42d St. New York
Woodward & Kelly Security Bldg. Chicago

"I had a press agent at one time who thought it would be a good stunt to have I went about every place carrying a bowl of goldfish," she said. "Of course, that was not true and it acted as a boomerang. One critic wrote to me, 'poor little Miss Menken, she weeps enough at every performance to fill the bowl for her goldfish.' Stories that actresses take milk baths and such things do them very little good because any thinking person knows that is not true. Let us have more truth in advertising and publicity."

SON JOINS FATHER'S FIRM

D. J. Randall, Jr., Now With D. J. Randall Company

The D. J. Randall Company, New York, special newspaper representative, have announced that D. J. Randall, Jr., has been taken into the organization.



D. J. Randall

After leaving school in Virginia in 1920, young Randall joined the firm of White, Weld & Co., brokers as a Wall street runner. Within a short time he was made head of the department. Later he became a trader in unlisted securities for the firm.

The D. J. Randall Company was formed in 1912 by D. J. Randall, who for a number of years prior to that was Eastern manager of the old McRae League of Newspapers.

A Security Market
with complete newspaper financial service.
Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, progressive, carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.
The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.
A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1924, *124,468 net paid.
Cover the Buffalo Market with
BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
*Present average circulation 125,000
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

in prestige in advertising in circulation
The Courier-Journal
AND
THE LOUISVILLE TIMES
MORNING-AFTERNOON-SUNDAY
Represented nationally by
S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

NEWSPAPER MAKERS AT WORK

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

James M. Thomson: "Publishers pay too little attention to the heart-beats of their properties—editors and reporters."

C. of individuality is the curse of tl newspaper business today, in the ic of James M. Thomson, publisher ne*New Orleans Item* and the Morn-Tribune.

"this curse," he explained in an vw this week, "is due to the de-ul: present tendency of overlooking pnting of news, in order to give ence to features.

"call some time ago we were hold-a editorial staff conference on the , nd asked for suggestions as to v could interest readers. T resulting suggestions all con-ed features, and enough ideas were e to fill two newspapers our size. ll some one remarked ironically i might be well to segregate one pi of the newspaper and make a r of the news,—a remark that, of s was mightily appreciated by the d telegraph editors.

"one incident, I believe, describes y ell a tendency in newspaper mak-: has gone altogether too far.

"h root of the trouble is that too tention is being paid by owners pblishers of newspapers generally to vitable heart-beat of their proper-mean the reporters and editors. odevelop good reporters and prop-cnpensate them has been made sec-: to the stress laid on other phases vpaper publishing.

"i class mechanical superintendents, rting men, circulation men and e-getters are being fattened and ped by many publishers, who seem a forgotten that after all a news-should have some news to run e the ads—that their newspapers dhave individuality and character c own.

"H only way to get this individuality jy continually increasing sums for sn the editorial department."

r. Thomson has spent 25 years as sr, but he has not forgotten that ta ed as a reporter. Now, in ad-n his morning and evening news-she publishes The Modern Farmer T*e Woman's Home Review.*

"h he started the Tribune last year, re many people were surprised. no any preliminary announcements, ny daily suddenly appeared one ir. It was just before a heated city c campaign, and, of course, the in-b whisper went the rounds. s just a political move," gossips t.

This, however, was emphatically denied this week by Mr. Thomson.

"I have been in politics 25 years," he laughed. "I certainly know better than to put up money for a political organ.

"No, the Tribune was started absolutely as a commercial venture. Few realize, how much real manufacturing economy is possible through running a plant to its full capacity. And another reason was the peculiar situation of our city, New Orleans.

"There is a feature of newspaper publication in isolated cities that is not entirely understood. New Orleans is very different from the average city of 400,000. The entire population is crowded into a comparatively small territory. There are few outlying districts available for expansion. We wanted to give a well rounded twenty-four-hour news service to our public, and, since we couldn't possibly give it all in one newspaper, we started the Tribune. The Tribune serves New Orleans and the immediate suburbs, while the Item and the Sunday Tribune-Item while continuing their hold in the city could also be pushed into the outlying sections. We have increased our circulation accordingly."

Mr. Thomson is proud of his new newspaper venture.

"We wanted to make the Tribune a complete review of the news, a real *news*paper. While we stress local news, we also take complete reports of the United News, United Press, and Consolidated Press.

"Look," he said, and spread a recent copy of the paper on the table before him. "See, we only run one comic feature. With this exception, and the editorial page, the paper is devoted to news. Not that I deprecate features entirely. We use them in plenty on the Item, and certainly they have their appeal.

"But since the Tribune started we have only run four pictures on the front page. We take pride in this front page. Every story on it is complete. There is no break-over to inside pages.

"We have been astounded at how the masses have responded to a newspaper devoted to news. It has more than met our expectations in both circulation and the response of local advertisers."

Mr. Thomson's interest in editing and publishing dates back to college days. When he was at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore in 1896, he started the Johns Hopkins News Letter. After being graduated, he started to enter law, but within a few months he went to Washington, where he became a reporter on the Washington Post.

Three years later he went to Norfolk and purchased the Norfolk Dispatch, which he published for seven years. Then he went to New Orleans, where he has now been a publisher for 18 years.

Chivers on N. Y. Mirror

A. B. Chivers, after two years and a half as general manager of the Atlanta (Ga.) Georgian, has been transferred to the New York Mirror. Prior to his Atlanta connection with Mr. Hearst, Mr. Chivers was for several years business manager of the New York Globe.

Publishers Aid Florida Ad Men

The Florida State Press Association is assisting the advertising clubs of Florida in their efforts to obtain the 1926 convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs for St. Petersburgh.

We Print
COMICS
and
MAGAZINE SECTIONS

High Quality
COLOR WORK

Let Us Quote On Your Next Contract

Missouri Agricultural Publishing Co.
J. E. NICHOLSON, Mgr.
2206 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Norwegian Newsprint

Prompt shipments Inquiries solicited

NORWEGIAN PAPER MILLS AGENCY, INC.
33 West 42nd Street New York City
Telephone Penn. 7443

Reprint from

THE OAKLAND POST-ENQUIRER

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA

MARCH 25, 1925

A NEWSPAPER which talks about such an amazing and diverse number of things every day should be allowed to talk about itself at least once in a while, especially if it has something worth talking about. This newspaper thinks it has something worth talking about; something of interest not only to itself, but to the community it serves.

In the first place there's the matter of circulation. The circulation of this newspaper has passed the 40,000 mark, and most of that is solid HOME circulation—the kind that counts the most.

In three years, from a very small original circulation, THE POST-ENQUIRER has grown to the point where it has a daily circulation of more than 40,000. And this is just the beginning.

Also, there is another fact about THE POST-ENQUIRER which deserves the attention of the community. There are six daily newspapers publishing six issues a week in Oakland and San Francisco. Last month THE POST-ENQUIRER led the field in total advertising. The nearest competitor, a San Francisco evening paper, was more than 25,000 agate lines behind THE POST-ENQUIRER at the end of the month.

Growing as the community grows, and faster if possible, circulating ideas and thinking always of the community's interests, THE POST-ENQUIRER will continue to be a wide-awake, vigorous newspaper in a young man's town.

Serving Oakland and the Great East Bay Cities

—the fastest growing and most important industrial center on the Pacific Coast.

One-half Million Population

TEAPOT DOME HANDOUT SENT TO EDITORS

Anonymous Mat and Sugared Story "Predicts" Sinclair Victory—Propaganda Exposed by Cleveland Press

Reproduced on this page is a piece of publicity which was sent to daily newspapers throughout the United States within the past two weeks by anonymous "public relations experts," obviously working in the interest of the defendants in the trial instituted by the Government of the United States to break the Harry Sinclair lease of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve.

The three-column art lay-out, showing the judge, the court house and the Sinclair lawyers smilingly engaged in a street conversation, was distributed in matrix form. The head-line and the story were also matted and gratuitiously distributed to newspapers.

Who paid for this expensive publicity job is not known, but the envelope containing the mat and a proof sheet was labelled: "From Western Newspaper Union, 210 South Desplaines Street, Chicago, Ill."

Both in the headline and in the story a Sinclair "victory" was predicted, although the matter was before the court. Whether or not this would constitute "constructive contempt" is not known, but there is no news of any attention being paid to the matter by Judge T. Blake Kennedy, who presides over the trial.

Nor is it known how many newspapers published the propaganda, or if any such newspaper could possibly be shown to have been an influence in the case.

There is record of one newspaper that not only did not use the press agent's propaganda but, on the contrary, exposed it in the editorial columns. This paper was the Cleveland Press. Its editorial follows:

"A beautiful example of how press agent machinery is operating in connection with the Teapot Dome case appears in a 'ready print' being received by editors throughout the country.

"A picture—with matrix—for publication purposes—showing the Federal Building at Cheyenne, Sinclair counsel, and Judge T. Blake Kennedy, accompanies the article.

"Bearing all the typographical appearance of a regular newspaper article, this piece of writing, sent unsolicited, paints Harry Sinclair in glowing colors, the action of A. B. Fall as entirely justified, says the prosecution has been unconvincing, and 'that the government has made out an entirely weak case,' * * * *

"This sort of handout is nothing new to American newspaper editors. They are used to having somebody try to get something by the news desk, and into the paper. 'Propaganda' has become a profession in these latter days, the hired press agent waxes fat.

"There is a difference, however, between receiving and printing.

"And rare indeed is the editor who is fooled by the handout."

E. C. Johnston, manager of the New York office of the Western Newspaper Union, when requested for information regarding the press agent material, denied any knowledge of its being handled by the organization he represents.

"As you understand," he said, "we act like any other mat manufacturer, and prepare considerable material from time to time for interested parties, which we send out to a list of newspapers furnished by them.

"It is our practice, however, to indicate the source of any material offered for publication, either by a letter accompanying it or on the proof.

"No one has enough money to pay for the insertion of propaganda in any service we furnish newspaper publishers, which is paid for by the publishers."

It will soon be time to start liking winter better than summer.—Sandusky Register.

SINCLAIR VICTORY PREDICTED IN TRIAL OF TEAPOT DOME OIL CAS

Federal building at Cheyenne, Wyo., scene of the Teapot Dome oil trial. Left to right—John W. Lacey, Martin L. Littleton and George P. Hoover of Sinclair counsel, discussing the case. Inset—Judge T. Blake Kennedy of the United States District court, who is presiding at the trial.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—With the evidence of the government completed in the trial here to break the Sinclair lease of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve, it is the consensus of opinion of lawyers and laymen who have followed the hearing in the United States District court that the government has made out an extremely weak case. Predictions are that Judge T. Blake Kennedy's decision will sustain the validity of the Sinclair contract.

Uncolored by the hysteria of rumors and suspicions incident to the investigation of the Teapot Dome affair before the senatorial committee last year, the issue has simmered down to the question whether President Harding had the right under a law admittedly ambiguous to transfer the leasing of the Teapot Dome field from the Navy department to the Department of the Interior. As President Harding acted in good faith and under the authority of law as construed by his legal advisers, his executive order unquestionably warranted Secretary of the Interior A. B. Fall in leasing the oil field to Sinclair. The court evidence proved conclusively that Fall did not make the lease secretly but after thrashing out the contract with Secretary of the Navy Denby and officials and lawyers of both Navy and Interior departments.

Politics and an inflamed public sentiment have had nothing to do with the court trial. Evidence of conspiracy has been unconvincing. Judge Kennedy, reputed eminently fair, will render his decision o on the law and the evidence.

Sinclair is a business man. seems fatuous to suppose that would have invested millions i fraudulent contract, the validity which might be questioned which might be canceled at time. That would not have b good business nor the logical cou of a good business man.

Former Senator Atlee Pomer of Ohio and Owen J. Roberts Philadelphia have conducted government's case in court. Sinclair defense has been in hands of Martin L. Littleton of N York, John W. Lacey of Cheyen George P. Hoover of Washing and a battery of other high-pri lawyers.

The above, both cuts and type, is printed from a stereotype plate made from a matrix anonymously sent to a newspaper editor who mailed it to EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

GOOD HUMOR VITAL IN ADS

Also Truth and Timeliness, Says Rogers Peet Advertising Manager

Truth, timeliness and good humor are the three essentials on which the advertising of the Rogers-Peet stores of New York is founded, according to A. C. M. Azoy, Jr., advertising manager of the company, who gave an informal talk before the publicity Club of Springfield, Mass., Tuesday, April 14. Advertisements of "rotten raincoats" and "ugly suits," followed by an explanation that the goods have been so reduced in prices that "they're not so bad after all," have proved successful business getters, he said.

Mr. Azoy said that the company's style of cartoon display advertising was started in that form by a stray English artist whose name cannot be found in any records.

Cleveland Times in New Home

The Cleveland Times on Friday and Saturday of this week formally opened its new home at Payne avenue and East 22nd street by holding open house.

Detroit Weekly Increases (p

The Saturday Night Press, company publishing the Detroit Night, has filed notice of an in capitalization with the secretary The boost, understood to be in of a stock dividend, is from $1 $150,000.

Dramatic Critic Travels

Quinn Martin, dramatic crit New York World, and Mrs. M New York this week to spen weeks traveling abroad.

ILICITY MAN TELLS ON TO "WIN" EDITORS

Own With Them, Explain "Injus-s" of Editorial Attacks and T-y'll "Make Amends," Stand-ard Oil Man Says

-ge M. Cook, director of the De-nt of Public Relations of the d-d Oil Company of Indiana, ad-s the Medill School of Journalism, -ago, on Thursday of this week, youth under instruction there for n journalism what the difference -een a press agent and a public -s expert and declaring that the -as developed "into a distinct pro-"

Cook went over the ground very -hly, making it plain however -e accomplishments of the past by -n of his profession are not to be -ed with the great things that lay -them to do. He told of the stu-o- advances that industry has made, -ving old methods, and asserted -e new slogan was "the public be -."

-peaker said: "Although, six years -l stock-holders of the Standard Oil -ny (Indiana) were 4,500 in num-d one individual owned 30 per -f the stock, today 50,000 American -l are shareholders, of whom 15,000 -ployes and accordingly partners. -n unjustifiable attack upon a cor-ti- now not only hurts the manage-, ut hundreds of thousands of good -r who are stockholders."

-aid that he did not deal with the -hrough business office executives, -lough editorial departments.

-ing the past couple of years", said -peaker, "there have been perhaps -dozen or more editorials printed -newspapers about our company -h thought were unjust and unfair. -e instances the author of the edi-l was either partially advised or not -e at all about the situation. In -ne of these instances I called upon -itor, sat down with him in his -nd went over the situation en-ng to show him where he did us -nstice that was harmful to the -ment, to the employes and stock-r. In each case, I was successful -rincing the editor that he was in -ng, and he was anxious to make -amends. I think every editor said -had been properly advised in the -ace he would never have written -orial."

Cook then furnished to his audi-me illustrations of the work of the -h of the new public relations pro-n including the following:

-ew years ago there was an im-rt bill pending in one of the large -ees of the United States Senate, -ng for the regulation of one of the -industries in the country. Hear-re ordered by the Senate com-e and the industry decided natural-f course, to oppose this bill because -ined many radical innovations.

"I suggested to the industry that the hearings should be fully reported. Having had some experience in Washington as a newspaper man, I knew how impossible it was for correspondents to cover every news source in Washington, as there are many times, dozens and dozens of hearings going on at the same time. I said to the people I represented, that I wanted to have those hearings covered as a big newspaper would do it—if some one testified that the industry was crooked, and the men were dishonest, we should say so in our story. It always had been the custom in Washington at previous hearings, when some publicity man was on the job, for him to tell only his client's side of the question. But I took the position that a partisan, colored story would get nowhere and that we might as well attempt nothing unless we told the whole story. This was agreed to. I employed two Washington newspaper men to help me and told them to forget that they were being paid by the industry, but as far as possible to write a fair and impartial story. Naturally, of course, they were not to neglect or overlook anything favorable to our side, but to be fair, and not to make it a partisan thing.

"So we started in on that basis, and there was always one of those reporters present while the hearing was going on. About 11 a. m. we wrote a story covering what had happened so far that day. This was neatly mimeographed and distributed by messenger to every newspaper and correspondent in Washington. At the end of the day, a comprehensive story was written covering the whole day's proceedings, and copies of it were made and sent, in the same way, to the newspaper men in Washington. This sort of thing was unprecedented and so unusual that many of the correspondents could not understand it and asked me about it. It was not long until all of the newspapers, with the exception of one press association, withdrew their representatives from the hearing and left the matter entirely in our hands. In other words, it was only a short time until we had the confidence of the correspondents, and they realized we were not trying to put something over. One government official was kind enough to say that it was the best job he had ever heard of and called it "The 1920 model of Publicity." Now, I take the position that while I was trying to help my clients as much as I could, yet I know I was of great help to the newspaper men. All they or any honest newspaper man cares about, are the facts, and he cares little where he gets them, if he has confidence in the man who gives them to him. I think that experience there changed the whole attitude of business organizations that had any business in Washington and needed publicity in connection with it. We didn't write partisan stuff, we didn't try to be propagandists. I maintain that was constructive publicity."

HOUGHTON IS DINNER GUEST

Ivy L. Lee Is Host to Ambassador and Publishers

Alanson B. Houghton, American Ambassador to Great Britain, was the principal guest at a dinner given by Ivy L. Lee at the Metropolitan Club April 9.

Other guests were Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times; Frank A. Munsey, publisher of the Sun; Ogden Reid, editor of the Herald-Tribune; Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor of the World; Cyrus H. K. Curtis, president of the Curtis Publishing Company; Dr. John H. Finley and Rollo Ogden, of the Times; Arthur Brisbane, editor of the Evening Journal; Ernest H. Abbott, editor of the Outlook; Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press Association; Herbert Croly, of the New Republic; W. P. Hamilton, of the Wall Street Journal; Herbert S. Houston, of Our World; James G. McDonald, of the Foreign Policy Association; Frank O'Brien, of the Sun; Arthur W. Page, of World's Work; Daniel T. Pierce, Dr. Albert Shaw, of the Review of Reviews, David E. Smiley, of the Evening Post.

LOUISIANA

is so situated geographically that her publishers must rely upon European mills for their principal sources of supply of NEWSPRINT PAPER.

Before placing their contracts it is of course essential that these publishers carefully scrutinize the various propositions submitted to them so as to buy the best paper obtainable at the lowest obtainable price.

We, therefore, consider it significant that we are today supplying because of our various contracts in NEW ORLEANS, SHREVEPORT, BATON ROUGE and LAKE CHARLES, MORE THAN SEVENTY-FIVE PERCENT OF THE TOTAL AMOUNT OF NEWSPRINT PAPER CONSUMED IN THAT STATE.

If you are now purchasing or considering purchasing foreign newsprint paper it would prove, we are sure, to our mutual advantage for you to communicate with us.

WM. HARTMANN & CO., INC.

342 Madison Avenue New York City

s Angeles Times

he only great morning ewspaper in the Pacific outhwest whose owner-ip, control, direction d whole interests are in e territory which it serves.

Vorld Leader in Advertising r Three Consecutive Years

Why Keep On Paying This Tax?

Everybody expects to pay some taxes, but why impose unnecessary taxes on yourself?

Do you realize that every time you drive your car on an unpaved highway you are actually taxing yourself one to four cents a mile?

This is the cost of increased repair, tire and gasoline bills.

Highway research has definitely established these facts.

Each year you tax yourself in this way a good many dollars.

Instead of spending this money for increased transportation costs, why not invest it in Concrete Highways and pay yourself some dividends?

Concrete Roads and Streets pay for themselves in the saving they effect on the cost of motoring.

Their maintenance cost is so low that this saving alone returns good dividends on the investment, year after year.

You are imposing an unnecessary tax on yourself from which you get no return, by failing to work for more Concrete Highways.

Not in a long time have general conditions been so favorable for carrying on such public works as permanent highway building.

Your highway authorities are ready to carry on their share of this great public work. But they must have your support.

Tell them you are ready to invest in more Concrete Highways, now.

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION

111 W. Washington St.
CHICAGO

A National Organization to Improve and Extend the Uses of Concrete

OFFICES IN 29 CITIES

URGES USE OF MINERALS TO SAVE FORESTS

Substitution of Mineral Products for Wood in Industry Asked by Director of U. S. Geological Su —See Hope in Increased Use of Clay Products and Steel

Excerpts from an Interview with Dr. GOERGE OTIS SMITH, Director, U. S. Geological Survey

By G. G. WHEAT

CONSERVATION is largely a matter of time values and the contrast between the temporary use of a forest product and the long-term use of a mineral product cannot be put too strongly.

Our forests have been the great reservoir for the building materials that enabled our civilization and development to race across the continent and helped us to become the nation that we are today. From the forests we have drawn, in the 60 years since woodpulp paper was first produced, the materials that have made us the greatest nation of printers, publishers, and readers that the world has ever known. The utilization of our forests has been so large a factor, and so many times has it been almost the controlling factor in our onward progress, that it would take a far search to find a well-informed man who would say that progress should have been halted in order to keep the trees.

In common with all citizens I feel a real interest in all these matters which so vitally affect the standards of our living, and, in addition to this, I have nearly a lifetime of work dealing directly with the utilization of our resources in fuels, metals, and minerals, the resources which supply the larger volume of our fuel and power, all of our metals, and our principal engineering and structural materials.

A period of expansion and development of our mineral resources began in 1880. There has been marked increase in production and use of mechanical power from coal and oil, a like increase in production of several principal metals, but even more striking is the increase in the utilization of our minerals for engineering and building purposes. This period has brought changes in the relative demands upon our forests and mineral use has given relief to the forest in many ways.

President Coolidge, addressing the forestry conference in Washington last November, said that it had been called in the hope that it would "lead to such care in the manufacture and use of our forest products that we could greatly lessen the severity of the prolonged timber shortage, of which we are entering the first stage." The President further said that we are being forced to adopt a drastic program of forest thrift.

As I came from that meeting of the conference, I was depressed at the slowness of our national awakening to the great need for forests and forests upon forests, but I was cheered by one other great aspect in the whole matter of our raw material supplies. The increase in the development and use of our mineral resources makes a remarkable story—a story of how drains on the forests have been reduced and the road by which increased reductions of these drains may be expected to come.

In the war year of 1914 the Geological Survey made studies of our producing strength in the minerals, chiefly metals, covering the statistical record since 1880. During that period of 33 years, the per capita consumption of coal had increased from less than a ton and a half to nearly six tons—an increase of 357 per cent. Similarly, the production of iron ore had increased 357 per cent; petroleum 391 per cent; copper, 1,200 per cent; cement, 2,087 per cent. Gold and silver increased only 22 and 23 per cent, respectively, while with lead the increase was 125 per cent and zinc 638 per cent.

The two leading grains, corn and wheat, show no such record. Both about kept pace with the growth of population, corn production being slightly more than doubled, wheat not quite doubled in this third of a century, so that per capita production shows only a small per cent of increase.

In textiles, cotton had increased 130 per cent or slightly faster than the population, while wool had failed to keep pace with the population. Sugar alone showed a large increase, both in domestic production and consumption, the per capita increase being 394 per cent.

Lumber had passed the peak of its total annual production in the years 1906 to 1909 and was already showing a sharp decline. The available supplies of timber, upon which the lumber output depends, requires many decades to produce, and, as President Coolidge told the conference, we have not yet acquired the sense of timber as a crop, to be expanded or reduced, as our needs require.

The materials whose use has served to reduce the relative drain on the forests, are, on the other hand, illimitable. The word applies without qualification to such supplies as clay and shale for all burned clay products; to the clays, shales and limestones, for the production of all cements and limes; to all the large variety of building stones, including slate; to the supplies of sands, gravels, and stone, suitable for the aggregates in making concrete. It is practically unthinkable that the economic limit of production of any or all of these materials can ever be reached, because of a sometime-coming shortage of raw materials. We will never become short of them.

The matter of prices cannot be passed over lightly, although brief comment will be enough. All the improvement of old and development of new manufacturing processes and entirely new industries that has accompanied this great advance in utilization of minerals, accompanied by a rapid steady rise in production to meet rapidly growing demands, has brought about relatively large reductions in the unit cost. This is a mere matter of record. The fortunate fact of the wide distribution of raw materials, especially of the non-metal minerals, permits the development of producing plants throughout the consuming territory. This again tends to hold transportation costs down to the minimum for a very large proportion of the tonnage can be delivered by truck from the producing plant directly to the place of use. It is a noteworthy fact, in this connection, that all these many mineral products are being used to serve as barriers to fire. None of them can burn or oxidize again. They are already fully oxidized by nature or by man's manufacturing processes.

On every side the eye is met with visible evidence of how these minerals are now serving us in places and for uses that had formerly to be supplied by the forest. One might well begin at the coal mine where works are designed to serve only until the coal at that place had been mined out. Formerly all buildings, mine engineering works, props, and retaining walls demanded wood throughout. Now one may see many uses of concrete above ground. Inside the mine, concrete forms the walls of shaft and drift, also many of the columns and posts for roof support, for which wood was formerly the only available practicable material.

On the railway right-of-way, solid arch bridges of concrete, or steel resting on concrete piers and abutments, prevail everywhere. Highway bridges show the same story. A few short years ago these uses demanded the strongest timbers. Wooden fences by the roadside have given way before wire mesh, fastened to concrete posts. Poles for street service and lighting are now commonly of iron or concrete. Piling and underpinning for foundations are now made of concrete.

Rolling stock is now practically all steel, and practically the only remaining drain by the railroads upon the forest is for the wooden cross-ties. Many agencies are making tests to perfect ties of other materials, progress is being made with their use in city streets, and it seems to me that it requires a little vision to forsee the day when the use of large amounts of timber by the railroads will be as much out of date as is now the use of wood to fire the locomotives. The cordwood available in our forests, as estimated by the Forest Service, would last less than five years if it all were converted into the equivalent of locomotive coal, and even if all the standing timber of lumber value should be added to use and used for locomotive fuel, it would replace coal for less than eight years more.

Secretary Hoover has said that there is a great difference between the production of goods to be used and goods to be used up, and I shall be holding true to that principle when I contrast the building which houses the Geological Survey with the frame structures in Washington which are monuments to the acute demands for housing Government war activities. They are even now falling down over the heads of the unfortunate occupants. They are also, it was stated at the forestry conference, decaying up from the ground. They are a nightmare to the fire department 24 hours of the day. The Department of the Interior building, on the other hand, is so permanent that it will give service for centuries, so far as destruction of its materials by fire, water, or air, or decay from fungi or bacteria are concerned. It represents a permanent increase in our wealth. The structures that we build should, and can be produced to be used and not to be used up. These buildings, wisely produced, will serve to take care of us and our lives and our labor's product, the most of our families, instead of forcing us to take constant care of them to prevent fire and decay and to give them constant care in correction and repairs. The timber we put into our houses has a life measured by decades, but the stone and brick of our Colonial houses have watched the centuries pass.

From these and a hundred other facts which cannot be cited in this brief summary, the conclusion can safely be drawn that the mineral building materials have been filling the need for building materials at a rapidly increasing rate. Aside from other considerations, such as permanency, fire safety, and general utility, it should be a source of gratitude that our need for structural materials h met by our mineral resources a this need can be so met in the fu

For the United States is now and studying conditions of timber so straitened that the situation called an emergency. We are t more than half our total pulpwoo is now being met by importation pulpwood, and paper; and that th been a steady decrease in the tot ber output since 1906, this in the a steadily and rapidly increasing program.

The situation, as regards timb plies, was clearly set forth by P Coolidge when he said: "E roughly, we have left about 745,0 000 cubic feet of timber. From annual drain is about 25,000,000,0 feet. This total drain is most si when we reflect that, toward o it, we have an annual timber gr only 6,000,000,000 cubic feet. our young forests, where this g taking place, cutting has alrea stripped growth. We must face uation that at this rate, we are from timber exhaustion.

"To bridge this fatal gap betw and growth, we have never tak cient action. In fact, our wealth growth timber has made us pror nore the gap and leave our less f descendants to struggle with it. cannot escape the penalties of tional neglect. They are alread ning to be felt. Since 1870 lumb have risen much more rapidly is another of the nationall mous accounts which has r nized the fact that the Was ton, D. C., territory cann adequately covered without

La Palina Cig
The Washington Times
The futility of the "one buy" argument is nowhere illustrated than in the exper of its national advertisers.
PAYNE, BURNS & S
New York City—Boston
G. LOGAN PAYNE
Chicago - Detroit - St. Louis - L

394 Columns increase in Paid Advertising in March, 1925, over March, 1924, indicates a newspaper with Public Confidence.
Norristown Times Herald
National Representative
PAUL BLOCK, Inc.
New York Chicago Detroit Boston

Pittsburg Press
"Giant of the Newspaper World"
A Scripps-Howard Newspa Represented by ALLIED NEWSPAP INC.

of other commodities. Per capita l consumption of sawed lumber, in 1906 had reached 525 board feet, ropped to 285, and, in some of stern states to 160 board feet. We ying a yearly freight bill of $250,- 0 which could better be used for ng timber than for transporting it."
U. S. Geological Survey some ago made investigations of the fire d wastes of structural materials in nited States—for the primary pur-f guiding the government in its own building expenditures—and when eat contrast was noted between the losses by fire to government build-and the immense losses reported the country as a whole, a further was made here and abroad.
orts from consular offices in other ries showed: no frame buildings allowed in the cities, and few else-
; personal responsibility for the and spead of fire, and, although e departments and equipments were ously inadequate, judged by Amer-tandards, the fire losses of Europe relatively small.
stigations in the United States
d: first, that our annual fire tax lly double the actual reported fire or the cost of public and private rotection, maintenance of depart-excessive water works, etc., was a dollar for dollar with the actual fire loss; second, that were we on e a basis of construction practice sponsibility for fires as prevails in e, our total fire tax could be re-by just four-fifths. In other we lose just five times as much would if we had European stand-
f safety established here.
results also indicated that the fire-ng buildings would be constructed e expense in the future than in the nd that the difference in relative f fireproof and inflammable buildould soon cease to be an encournt to flimsy construction. These rs, made in 1910, stand good today.
, with the minerals doing their share in building homes and busiructures the work will not have to one thirty or fifty years from now, e drain on the forests can be limthose industries to which wood is ime essential. Paper manufacture, it takes only a very small propor-
f the nation's annual timber cut, that share, with less proportionate into products whose manufactured is not surpassed by that of any wood-using industry. This subject es all of the deep thought that per publishers and paper manu-rs have given it in recent years that they can give it in future.

Attach Plant for Libel Award

ity sheriffs have served an attach-ton the plant of the Marshfield
Coos Bay Times for $1,500
d A. K. Peck in a libel suit against mes. The deputies kept possession plant until the editor, M. C.
ey, executed a bond for $4,000.
laction was based on a charge in ution with the Ku Klux Klan.

LEAGUE URGES DELAY IN RADIO MEET

Committee Suggests Washington Conference be Postponed Until 1927 to Revise 1912 Code and Discuss Radiotelegraphy

The Committee on Radio Telegraphy of the League of Nations, which ended its conference in Geneva April 15, suggested that the Washington Conference on Radio Telegraphy to revise the convention of 1912 scheduled for this fall, be postponed until 1927.

At this conference a group representing press associations of the world hope to devise means to protect the broadcasting of news, making wider use of wireless by newspapers possible.

A radio telegraphic conference, the Committee points out, could profit from the results of the Telegraphic Union Conference which the French Government has convoked for next Autumn, and could consider questions which are not in the Washington agenda, such as radio telephony.

The International Radio-telegraph Convention, signed at London July 5, 1912, by delegates representing the United States and other powers provided that the convention might at any time be modified by the high contracting parties by common consent and that conferences of plenipotentiaries to modify the convention and adopt regulations should take place from time to time, each coference being empowdered to fix the time and place of the next meeting. At the London conference the United States invited the signatory governments to hold the next conference in Washington, which invitation was unanimously accepted and 1917 was fixed as the date. Owing to the war the conference was postponed.

During the Peace Conference at Paris a protocol was signed by representatives of the principal allied and associated powers providing that as soon as possible arrangements should be made for the convoking of an international congress to consider all international aspects of communication by land telegraphs, cables, or wireless telegraphy, and to make recommendations with a view to providing the entire world with adequate facilities of that nature on a fair and equitable basis. A preliminary conference of representatives of Great Britain, France, Japan, and the United States was held at Washington, October 8, 1920, which proposed that the International Telegraph Convention and Regulations and the International Radiotelegraph Convention and Regulations should be consolidated into a single convention with a single set of regulations. It was decided later that by the French Government that it would proceed to hold the conference of the parties to the International Telegraph Convention in Paris during the coming summer. It is understood this conference probably will not be held until September.

The American Government, therefore, has proceeded with the original plan to hold a conference of the parties to the International Radiotelegraph Convention in Washington. It was planned to hold it in September but the date perhaps will be later in view of the holding of the international telegraph convention in Paris in that month.

The London radiotelegraph convention dealt only with communications between ship and shore stations.

A telegraph convention was signed at St. Petersburgh in 1875. That was revised at a conference held at Lisbon in 1908 when it was decided to hold the next conference in Paris in 1915. This was postponed because of the war and is to be held by France this year. The United States is not a party to the telegraph convention.

New Radio Magazine Published

The Radiograph, a weekly publication issued for radio enthusiasts, made its first appearance April 11. It is published by Don Short at 81 Nassau street, New York.

Opportunity of a Life Time!!

Having purchased the entire plant of the Press Publishing Company of Newark, N. J., we own and offer the press described below, for immediate delivery:

HOE QUAD WEB NEWSPAPER PRESS—suitable for 16 or 32 pages, with color attachment; 23 9/16" cut-off; with full electrical equipment and stereotyping accessories.

This press is only ten years old, and can be inspected at any time. Suitable for a regular newspaper or tabloid and especially for color section work.

We also have other Newspaper presses which we can offer at very reasonable prices. Also all kinds of newspaper plant equipment. Call in and see our full line of rebuilt machinery and supplies.

"Everything from a Pin to a Press"

THOMAS W. HALL CO., Inc.
512 West 41st Street New York
Phone: Chickering 2307

Detroit

Fourth Largest
City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

Imperial

THE Imperial Plus Metal Plan is well liked in the State of Michigan. We draw that conclusion from the fact that publishers of many of Michigan's leading Dailies are depending upon the reliability of the Plus Plan. Then in addition to these individual dailies the Plus Plan is mighty pleased to serve the Booth Family.

The Booth Newspapers comprised of the following splendid papers, Grand Rapids Press, Flint Daily Journal, Saginaw News Courier, Kalamazoo Gazette, Jackson Citizen Patriot, Bay City Times Tribune, Muskegon Chronicle and the Ann Arbor Times, have made certain of efficient type metal through the selection of the Plus Plan.

Serving Family Groups of newspapers is becoming a regular feature with the Plus Plan. In addition to the Booth Newspapers, there's the Scripps-Howard Newspapers, the Star League of Indiana, and the James M. Cox Group.

There are just two reasons why the Plus Plan is popular with these groups. First, it intelligently keeps Type Metal FIT at all times. Second, it adds years of working life to your metal.

Yours for the Asking

A request on your letterhead brings a copy of this Plus Plan to your desk. Shall we send it?

Imperial METAL

Linotype—Monotype—Intertype
Stereotype
Elrod—Ludlow—Linograph—Thompson

Imperial Type Metal Co.

Philadelphia—Cleveland—New York—Chicago

McCLURE AGAIN HEADS ILLINOIS AD CLUBS

Passage of Statute Prohibiting Fraudulent Advertising Urged Upon Legislators at Group Meeting in Springfield

First steps toward the successful passage of the Printer's Ink Statute, prohibiting fraudulent advertising, in Illinois met with a responsive reception when a special committee of the Illinois Advertising Clubs, holding its first convention in Springfield, appeared in the state house before the judiciary committee of the house of representatives in behalf of the measure, Wednesday, April 8.

The fight against fraudulent advertising has been maintained by the Illinois Clubs since the inception of the organization several months ago, and the first convention was purposely located in Springfield to emphasize to the legislature the need in the state for such a measure already a law in 26 states.

In the opening address to the convention, President W. Frank McClure expressed the need for such legislation in Illinois, and told the members Illinois was the second state to organize its ad clubs in a statewide fashion.

William P. Green, present from New York as a member of the National Vigilance Committee, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and Roscoe Herget, manager—counsel of the Better Business Bureau of Peoria, spoke to the delegates of the war against fake promoters, crooked merchandisers, and fraudulent advertisers.

Homer J. Buckley, chairman of the advertising council of the Chicago Association of Commerce, gave an address on "Plugging the Leaks in Business," and pointed out that business is lost by merchandising organizations. Clifford J. Ireland director of trade and commerce welcomed the delegates officially for the state of Illinois, while J. Emil Smith, commissioner of finance, greeted the men and women for the city.

Other speakers were Lou Holland, Kansas City, president of the A. A. C. W., who told of "Recent Developments in Organized Advertising," Judge E. Allan Frost, general counsel Poster Advertising Association, spoke on "Background," Mrs. Bernice Blackwood, president Women's Advertising Clubs of the World, told of "Women's Contributions to Organized Advertising," and Charles C. Younggreen, Milwaukee, district president, spoke on "The Work of the Advertising Clubs in This District."

Officers of the club were all re-elected. W. Frank McClure was chosen to retain the presidency, C. C. Blair, Peoria, vice-president; Miss Minerva Augur, Chicago, secretary, and Charles J. Schettz, Joliet, treasurer. The organization voted to hold its 1926 convention in Peoria.

The delegates were entertained at a banquet and dinner dance at the Elks Club in the evening, and during the afternoon an auto tour of the city was made.

TO STUDY CONSUMER DEMAND

Stanley Resor Announces Meeting for Purpose Next Month

Stanley Resor, president of the J. Walter Thompson Company, and chairman of the committee on market analysis, advertising, and advertising mediums, appointed following the National Distribution Conference in Washington last January, announced this week his committee would meet in New York the latter part of May.

The committee was organized at a private meeting held in New York early this month. Its purpose is to co-ordinate market analyses, which are now made by private enterprises to determine the consumer demand or purchasing power for various commodities among the different classes of population in different sections of the United States, to the end that duplication of these efforts may be avoided and that the net results may be increased.

Members of the committee include:

E. T. Meredith, former secretary of Agriculture, Mededith Publications, Des-Moines, Ia.; Lew O. Jones, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. Daniel Starch, American Association of Advertising Agencies; Stanley Resor, J. Walter Thompson Co.; Elmer L. Cline, Continental Baking Corporation; A. Heath Onthank, Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.; Malcolm Muir, McGraw-Hill Co.; George S. Fowler, Colgate & Co.; Theodore Whitmarsh, chairman of steering committee.

P. L. Thomson, Western Electric Co.; C. C. Carlin, Curtis Publishing Co., Philadelphia; J. W. Hayes, Crowell Publishing Co.; John H. Fahy, Boston; A. U. Chaney, American Cranberry Exchange; Mr. Swazey, Fuller & Smith, Cleveland, O., and Mr. Johnson, General Outdoor Advertising Co.

Other mambers of the committee are: G. W. Parsons, Chicago Tribune; Homer J. Buckley, Franklin Press, Detroit; William H. Johns, George Batten, Inc.; L. E. Holland, Holland Engraving Co.; H. K. McCann, H. K. McCann Co., and Mr. Groom, of J. Walter Thompson Co.

PREDICT BIG BOOM IN RADIO ADVERTISING

Announcement of Improved Sets June 1 to Boost Newspaper Lineage, Is Belief—Present District Let-Up Causes Comment

Announcement will be made June 1 of new and improved radio parts and sets with resulting increased use of newspaper advertising space by radio manufacturers, Editor & Publisher learned this week from a reliable source.

The distinct falling off in radio advertising since Christmas has caused considerable comment in newspaper circles. This week a sudden further drop was recorded throughout the country according to reports.

Overproduction is the reason assigned to this advertising let-up by authorities close to the radio industry in New York. Others declare it to be due to the tendency towards consumer demand for complete sets instead of separate parts.

Commenting on the situation, E. L. Bragdon, radio editor of the New York Sun said:

"Since January 1st radio sales have been decreasing slightly. Radio interest on the other hand has not suffered. It would appear that radio manufacturers with few exceptions expended their sales energy on the hoped-for holiday trade and failed to take advantage of the natural upward trend of business from inventory time to the present.

"The radio buying public right now are bargain hunters. Whenever a merchandizing concern offers a nationally advertised product at a bargain price whatever the amount involved the full allottment is taken up in rapid fire time.

"This is the first year that radio has not shown a distinct advance in sales between January 15th and April 1st. It seems in retrospect as if many manufacturers relied too much on the momentum of their holiday advertising."

Sun-Herald Reunion Planned

A reunion of present and former employes of the New York Sun and the old New York Herald is being planned for Thursday evening, April 30 when The Sun Club composed of employes of the Sun, holds its spring dance in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Pennsylvania, Einar O. Petersen, president of the club has announced.

Girl Edits Kentucky Weekly

Adelaide Hazeltine, 22, a graduate of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, Class of 1924, has been named editor of the Harlan (Ky.) American, succeeding George Roebuck, resigned. The American is a tabloid publication.

N. Y. CIRCULATION MEN TO MEET NEXT WEEK

"Brass Tacks" Program Scheduled for Semi-Annual State Convention at Albany, N. Y., April 21-22

The spring convention of the New York State Circulation Managers' Association will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, April 21-22 at the Ten Eyck Hotel, Albany, N. Y.

A "brass tacks" program of talks and general discussions upon vital circulation problems has been arranged. The first address of the meeting will be made Tuesday morning by Glenn S. England of the Johnstown Leader-Republican whose topic will be, "Is Newspaper Circulation to be Recognized as a Business Commodity?" Following Mr. England A. A. Cockerill of the Utica Press, R. D. M. Decker, Rochester Democrat and Chronicle and James J. Allardyce, Albany Knickerbocker Press will speak.

Tuesday afternoon the value of street car vending boxes, personal work with newsboys, transportation of newspapers by bus, street car or baggage, will be discussed respectively by D. W. Tanner of the Utica Observer Dispatch, A. Miner, Syracuse Post-Standa W. C. Hixson, of the same pape R. Arn will speak on "The Bes of Increasing circulation at the dealers" and Edward S. Dobson Brooklyn Times will tell how h lished and maintained a carrier service on a metropolitan newsp

"Are newspapers to blame for creasing crime by publishing s destructive articles?" is a topic slated for general discussion f the talks noted above.

On Wednesday morning the the Audit Bureau of Circulations discussed by George S. Erb, Jr. Buffalo News under the subject " Audit Bureau of Circulations Rai culation Standards, or Helped E Undesirable Circulation Practice Robert Weir of the Syracuse will speak on the benefits deriv membership in the I. C. M. A. lowing him C. H. Congdon of the town Times will talk on "Wha Will the New Postal Law Have Subscriptions?

A general discussion will close vention.

Frank H. Roberts of the R Times-Union is president of th ciation.

Wilke's METALS
THE HIGHEST STANDARD

Type Metal Insuranc

The Evidence

"Wilke's" Type Metal Insurance Plan is yo guarantee against deterioration of your Linoty Monotype and Stereotype Metals. It has receiv the endorsement of many newspaper publishers, w recognize its protective features and economi advantages, among them being the following:

The Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegra
The Milwaukee Journal
The Minneapolis Evening Tribune
The St. Paul Dispatch
The Chicago Daily Journal
The Pittsburgh Gazette Times

We will be pleased to furnish full information c cerning this policy on which we pay the premiu and you collect the dividends. Write us.

METALS REFINING COMPAN
HAMMOND, INDIANA
Warehouses in All Principal Cities

WHEN YOU THINK OF METAL THINK OF "WILK

MPIRE STATE SCHOOL OF PRINTING OFFERS TEN SCHOLARSHIPS

Valued at $200 Each, for New York State Residents and Four, Worth $100 Each, for Nearby Territory, Available, Soon

TH the beginning of its fourth year, ne Empire State School of Print- thaca, N. Y., which has already introduced several new ideas into the problem of training printers, has anounced a competitive scholarship plan which will go into effect at once. The plan, as explained by Ross W. Kellogg, director of the school, in a letter to members of the New York State Publishers' Association, the lhers' Association of New York nd the American Newspaper Pub- ' Association who are supporting hool, has several novel features.

d W. KELLOGG

"primary object," states Mr. Kel- g, "is to bring to our school a care- elected group of students who, by r bility and earnestness, will help to e the standard of scholarship. We e that the competition for the scho- hs, six with a cash value of $200 nd four with a cash value of $100 will result in keen competition.

e committee on education of the York State Publishers' Association has charge of the school has for etime considered the advisability of d fund. Several worthy students already been assisted when it be- evident that they could not com- heir courses without more funds. olicy will be continued as far as nds at the disposal of the commit- l permit.

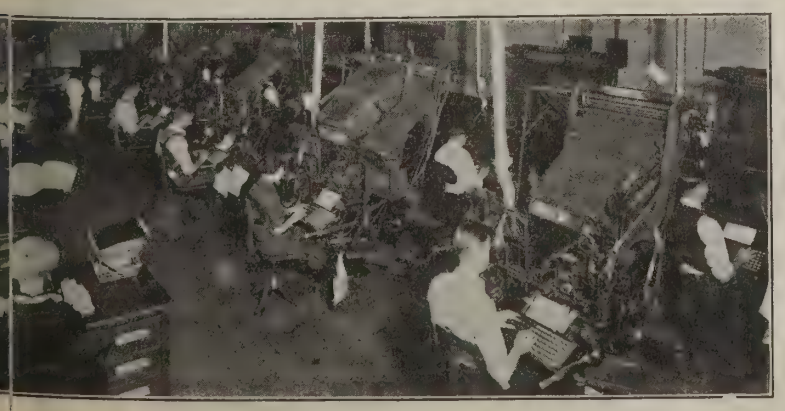
the ten scholarships, six will be sidents of New York State and or residents of other states. The York State scholarships will carry ition, $180; entrance fee of $10 and ition fee of $10 each, a total value 0.

mpetition for the scholarships will districts. The first examination held May 9 in Buffalo for candi- in Western New York. In July a examination will be held in Syra- followed by others at two-month in- , in Mount Vernon, Rochester, Al- nd Binghamton. Counties conven- situated around the city where the nation will be held will comprise ction of the state from which can- s will be eligible.

e scholarships will each be named nor of some newspaper publisher used) whose work still lives in the aper he founded or built up in the rt. A referendum of members of ew York State Publishers in each rt will be taken to decide upon the f the scholarships.

ung men and young women over 18 years of age and under 28 years who have successfully completed at least two years of approved high school work and who can furnish satisfactory references will be eligible to compete for the scholarships. The New York State Department of Education which has expressed much interest in the work of the Empire State School of Printing, has been invited to co-operate in giving publicity to the plan and in preparing and conducting the examinations.

"The four additional scholarships valued at $100 as payment on tuition, will be open one each to residents of New England, New Jersey-Pennsylvania, Ohio-Indiana, Canada. Examinations for these scholarships will be in the nature of essays, the aim of which will be to ascertain primarily the candidate's knowledge of English. The scholarships will be available in June, December, February and April."



The Empire State School of Printing, which started operation on May 1, 1922, with six Model 1 linotypes loaned by the Mergenthaler Company, and a hand composition department, has doubled its equipment. The most recent addition consisted of six Model 5 linotypes loaned by the Mergenthaler Linotype Company to replace the Model 1's, one of which has been retained for instruction in mechanism. The school has purchased from the Mergenthaler Company one Model 8 and a new single keyboard Model 14.

The Intertype Corporation has loaned the school a Model B intertype and the school has purchased a Model C 2sm. The floor space of the school has been more than doubled and the hand composition and platen press departments doubled in the three years of its operation.

Starting out with a capacity of 24 students or 48 graduates from the complete six months' course annually, the capacity has now been increased to 40 students or 80 graduates per year. The school has furnished training to 132 students, of which number 105 are classed as graduates. The difference is represented by the young men now in school or by those who did not complete the full course.

"The esprit de corps noted by EDITOR & PUBLISHER at the school in March, 1923, still continues," says Director Kellogg. "Graduates are members of a fast-growing fraternity. The proximity of Cornell University makes it an easy matter to put some of the college spirit into our work. Our graduates look upon the school as their alma mater. By personal visits and by mail they are in frequent touch with the school. The graduates who have been out a year or two frequently lend a helping hand to the more recent graduates and best of all their recommendations are responsible for about half of the enrollment we obtain each month.

"The members of the New York State Publishers' Association have done a unique thing in founding, equipping and supporting the Empire State School of Printing. They have raised by quarterly assessments on the basis of $5 per journeyman printer employed by them, the sum of $65,000, and placed it at the disposal of their committee on education composed of John W. Baker, Ithaca Journal-News; chairman; Jerome D. Barnum, Syracuse Post Standard; Ralph E. Bennett, Binghamton Press; William O. Dapping, Auburn Citizen, and John F. Rolfe, Corning Leader. Members of the Publishers' Association of New York City have contributed nearly $5,000 to the cause and more than $4,000 has been received from the printing trades school fund of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association."

rn machinery and equipment has been installed throughout the plant of the Empire State School of Printing, a view of which appears above

Sun Alumni to Celebrate

The Sun Alumni Association, composed of men who were members of the New York Sun staff up to the time Chester S. Lord retired in 1913, will hold a reunion dinner and celebration at the New York Advertising Club, April 28.

State House Writers Honor Grant

The press room of the state capitol, Austin, Tex., last week gave a farewell banquet for W. C. Grant, Associated Press correspondent, upon his being promoted to the Dallas office. John C. Leissler has succeeded Grant at Austin.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

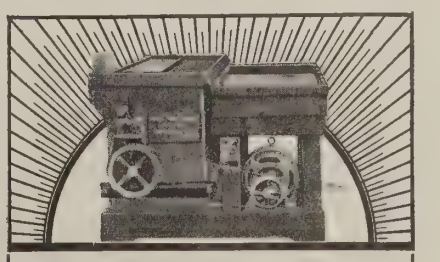
For Sale.
25 H. P. 220 Volt Variable speed D. C. Motor with six push button Stations together with Cutler-Hammer Wall Panel. Suitable for driving three deck press. Complete and in wonderful condition. Roy C. Goodwin, Geneva, N. Y.

Two Newspaper Plants
complete, installed anywhere, or sold in lots, 16-page Hoe (fine press for tabloid) 32-page Duplex, steel cabinets, Ludlow equipment, large quantity new type, Models 5, 8, 14 linotypes, A. B. C., Intertypes. Complete Job Plant, 2-revolution Miller Feeder, 4 jobbers, power cutter, punch, perforator, for $5,000, good terms. Daily newspaper plant, with building, city of 65,000, $40,000, good terms. Peckham Machinery Co., 1328 Broadway (at 34th) New York City.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

For Sale.
Two Deck, Two Plate wide Goss, Sixteen page press. In A-1 condition; complete with all stereotyping equipment. Ready for delivery. Roy C. Goodwin, Geneva, N. Y.

We can increase your business—you want it increased.



You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS
DUPLEX PRESSES
"OUR CUSTOMERS WRITE OUR ADS"
DUPLEX TUBULAR
"The Duplex Tubular in our plant has made the publishing business in Wooster a real pleasure."
Wooster, Ohio, Daily Record
Duplex Printing Press Co.
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

MODERNIZE
your COMPOSING ROOM
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMENT
Made in both wood and steel.
Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.
For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
417 South Dearborn St.
Chicago Ill.

THE APPROPRIATE ETCHING DEVICE FOR THE NEWS PAPER
NEW PRICES:
"MIGNON" .....$ 625
"SIRIUS" .....$ 890
"DIAMOND" $1025
AXEL HOLMSTROM
ETCHING MACHINE CO.
328 Chestnut St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

3c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under the classification of "Situations Wanted."
18c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.
6c per word per insertion, cash with order, for advertisements under any other classification.
36c per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bottom of advertisement.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Advertising Manager
with eleven years' successful experience on leading dailies, desires a permanent connection as an advertising or business executive. I am a man with broad vision and high standards, with ability to produce and hold the confidence of both publisher and public. Age 32, married. College education. Address Box C-900, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Manager.
A thoroughly experienced newspaper executive will be available about May 15th. Eighteen years' experience in cities up to a million population. I want to connect with some publisher who is convinced that he is not getting the maximum lineage in local, classified and national advertising and is looking for the right man to put it over. Second or third paper preferred. I have an enviable record for results. Desire a permanent connection where my ability will be recognized. Am young and aggressive. Write for full particulars. Address Box C-928, Editor & Publisher.

All-round Newspaperman.
Can you use a man who writes, draws cartoons, speaks French and can work a press wire in an emergency. C-901, Editor & Publisher.

Assistant Business Manager.
If you are looking for such a party to relieve you of some of your burdens, give me a chance to talk with you. I believe I can convince you I would be a valuable help in your organization. My experience began in a country office where I "learned the trade." Am particularly strong on circulation matters. Recommendations from several of the best-known publishers in the country. Good reasons for severing present connections. Box C-917, Editor & Publisher.

Business Executive.
and for past several years Business Manager of medium size Eastern paper, contemplates making change. Unquestionable record as to ability and character and particularly strong in increase of business and production at minimum cost. Experience covers Morning, Evening, Metropolitan and Provincial fields. No situation too difficult, but will consider only proposition combining permanency with something more than a job. Will meet you at the A. N. P. A. meeting if you wish. Box No. C-849, are Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
Now assistant on large leading daily, wants position as classified manager. Prefer paper that requires building up. Best of references. Box C-924, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Manager.
One who is capable of producing real results. Details of past performances will convince you. Presently employed, but am desirous of a permanent position in a larger field where ability and hard work will be rewarded by success. For further information address Box No. C-925, Editor & Publisher.

YOUR CLASSIFIED AD

in

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

is read by the man you want to reach

Situations Wanted

Classified Manager.
Successful record on Daily of 18,000. Young. Experienced in a system that builds and holds volume and reader interest. Can prove ability. Let me send a copy of my classified page. Must be permanent. Fair salary and commission bases desired. Box C-919, Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager.
Young man, 28, married, with six years' experience as classified manager on southern daily of 15,000 circulation desires connections with larger paper in the South or South West where there are larger opportunities, either as manager or assistant to Classified manager. Can furnish the very best of references. Address C-913, care Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager
with a successful record on one of the leading classified mediums in the country. Will furnish reference that will show a gain of over a million lines, a change in the classification system that saved time in composing room an increase of 4 cents per line. Creating new classification and ideas that benefit the advertiser and newspaper, economical system of covering territories. Good reason for leaving. Prefer paper that is second in field but one that has as good a circulation. Box C-926, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Now Circulation Manager in town of 200,000 wishes to make change. Has had experience on both morning and evening daily and Sunday. Can furnish the very best of reference. C-879, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Now employed; desires change higher climate. Can secure business and revenue. Connections include some leading papers of South. Can give best of references and bond. Prefer paper with 15,000 to 40,000 circulation. C-920, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager.
Available for position in some large city by May 15—or preferably June 15. Many years' experience on morning, evening and Sunday papers. Familiar with every feature of circulation work. Unqualified recommendations. Excellent reasons for change decided upon. Will meet any interested publisher at A. N. P. A. meeting. Box C-916, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager Seeks Change.
Efficient, energetic, tactful, enthusiastic working circulation manager, 30 years of age; 15 years' working experience in every angle of circulation work from carrier boy to circulation manager on papers of 5,000 to 27,000 circulation seeks change for reason has reached top in present field. Have added 4,000 daily and 7,000 Sunday in present connection during past two years and have increased cash revenue 40 per cent with the advantage of having an excellent newspaper to sell. Expense of department up only 3 per cent. Best of references from all past employers. Salary $60 and commission; more if I earn it. Ask and pledge confidence. Thoroughly understand promotion, administration, A. B. C. requirements, routine, delivery, mail room and distribution from actual working experience. C-922, Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer,
highly identified, now with large, nationally known publishers, desires change. Strong foundation of news and executive experience. Effective paragrapher. Address C-907, Editor & Publisher.

Mechanical Engineer for Publisher.
Will assume entire responsibility for mechanical operations, labor and production of large publishing organization. Young, practical, technical and all-around executive; member Typographical Union. Now with largest newspaper corporation in America, but desire connection where initiative, ability, reliabilty, energy, loyalty, honesty and Merits mean something to employer. C-886, care Editor & Publisher.

Executive Editor.
The executive editor of an important daily in a northern city desires to locate, at any time now or before next autumn, in the Atlantic States anywhere from Pennsylvania South. Chiefs of three nationally known newspapers, one of them a former A. N. P. A. director, and the proprietor with whom he is now associated, will say that he is an exceedingly resourceful and capable Managing Editor. Of 18 years in journalism he has spent 12 in executive positions. Within three years his paper has taken from a bright ably edited and wealthy rival the position of leadership it had always previously held. The A. B. C. report will verify the claim. Present salary $6,000. New York conference if desired and at most any time. Box C-929, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Metropolitan Editorial Writer
Wants to make acquaintance of publisher preparing for reorganization. I have unusual record of responsibility in proportion to age in work that has developed me each year. Now ready for permanent connection. Prepared to take charge of editorial page, assist in development of news and features, relieve an overburdened editor and publisher. Will go anywhere; first consideration, good home city for small family; second, opportunity to prosper with paper in proportion to services. Before changing from present employment want time to study paper, city and prospects, and to put my record, work and suggestions under scrutiny. I am looking for a lifework, not for a job. Address C-898, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaperman,
25, American, healthy, experienced all branches reporting, desk work. Wants position on staff of paper preferably in East. At present telegraph editor. $40 to start. Box C-921, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Promotion Man wants to hear of opening for Business or Advertising Manager or both. Advertiser a man of proven ability, now employed. Calibre of opportunity, business and business personnel of more importance than location. Address C-918, Editor & Publisher.

Proofreader.
Five years of experience in editorial, job and advertising matter seeks position. Has done editorial and news writing on country weekly. Can also edit copy. Twenty-seven years old. College education and commercial training. Box C-927, Editor & Publisher.

Publisher or Business Manager,
43. Capable of assuming entire responsibility of daily paper ten thousand or more circulation. Successful record but no capital. C-881, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter.
I don't know anything about advertising, circulation, job printing or running a column, but I am a good reporter. Single, 25. Seek position near New York. C-915, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter.
Young man, 30, nine years' experience, desires position as reporter on constructive daily; salary $40. Might also do some editing. One year Rochester Herald, court reporter; two years Plattsburgh Press, reporter-editor; Poughkeepsie Eagle-News, eight months; also worked on Detroit Free-Press and Schenectady Gazette. Can report immediately. Lester S. McWilliams, 58 Linden avenue, Middletown, N. Y.

Special Correspondent.
Am now open for a connection with a first class newspaper as special news correspondent in New York. Have had special training in this work and can furnish the best of references. Want to work for a newspaper that demands conscientious and above the average service. Box C-923, care Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

Pub'lishing Positions.
Display and Classified Solicitors; Desk Man, $40; Retoucher, $100; Mechanical Production Foreman, $150; Advertising Manager, furniture experience, $150. Other Vacancies. Write for contract. Publishers' Placement Service, 401-403 Seitz Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y.

Society Editress.
Wanted: Competent newspaper woman to build up society page and handle similar work. Progressive Western New York State afternoon daily; city 24,000. State experience, religion, salary. C-914, Editor & Publisher.

Opportunity for middle aged New York newspaper man whose ambition is to have a chicken farm with meal ticket on the side. All replies confidential. C-930, Editor & Publisher.

S. C. Dobbs on Savage Arms Board

S. C. Dobbs, of Atlanta, Ga., former president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, has been elected a director of the Savage Arms Corporation and the Kelvinator Corporation.

Tokio Plans Printers' Exhibit

An International Printers' Exhibit will be held in Tokio, Japan, during April, 1926, under the auspices of the Japan Typothetæ, that organization has announced. K. Ohashi, president, is leaving Japan this month to visit printers in the United States and Europe in behalf of the Exhibit.

Because of interests loc elsewhere which require his attention, owner of d newspaper (evening) Ohio city of 16,000 is wil to sell property. Price terms favorable. Busi shows profits and of splendid opportunity for velopment.

Palmer, Dewitt & Pal
Newspaper Properties,
350 Madison Ave. New

Successful Performan
This firm has a record of a 15 years of successful performan the difficult work of PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATIO SALE AND APPRAISAL of newspaper and magazine prop throughout the U. S.
HARWELL & CANN
Times Bldg. New Y

WE CONNECT THE WIRES
AGRICULTURAL WRITE AND EDITOR seeks posi tion with newspaper, farm jour nal or house organ. Know farming, livestock and poultry well up in cooperative market ing; expert in organization an publicity. Possesses writing executive and promotive ability backed by Iowa college degre and a dozen years in two re sponsible positions. Would ad the prestige of authority to you farm pages. Our No. 1039.
FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MA

TIRE COMPANY SOLD

Buffalo Firm Plans Larger Adv Campaign

J. H. Kelly and F. V. Springe purchased a controlling interest Hewitt Rubber Company, Buffalo, f H. H. Hewitt estate. Mr. Kelly, v been vice-president of the concer 1917, will become president and manager, and Mr. Springer will b ciated with him in the manageme ing general supervision of sales.

E. J. Clare, formerly advertisin ager of the Wire Wheel Corpora America, was recently employed as tising manager of the Hewitt Co and the advertising, which has her been supervised by the sales depa will from now on be operated as rate department.

Plans have already been comple expansion of the business under t ownership. A program of natio vertising on Hewitt Tires, and p on some others of the company's ucts, will be worked out at once, c officials stated.

R. Hoe & Co. to Exhibit New

R. Hoe & Co., Inc., will exhibit design heavy-duty matrix roller Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New Yor week, during the convention American Newspaper Publishers' ciation. The matrix roller will be in operation to show publishers th city and strength of this new desig

EWYN WOULD BAR IST NIGHT CRITICS

ter Returning from London nlifies Attack He Made There n Play Reviewers—Favors Retiring Them matic critics aren't newspaper men. lus, tired and bored with the round r nights, they cease to function as s of the drama and begin exploiting s ves at the expense of others.

e were the indictments of New newspaper dramatic critics issued ek by Edgar Selwyn, theatrical r, in an interview upon his return e York from London, where he had e the attack on the critics in state- given London newspapers.

is remarks, as reported by the New Times, follow:

y aren't newspaper men. The per men give us an even break, t critics don't. New York has no c critics. They are all reviewers. ey all mentally review a play be- ey ever go to the theatre. They llous, they get tired, they get d

Di you say callous or careless?" someone who heard Mr. Selwyn in- ay.

'e can say both," he asserted. ood play will survive despite all ics can say," continued Mr. Sel- "But a play and a young play- which need only a little encou- nt to make a start can be damned critics.

time that someone told the truth the dramatic critics. They control id of dramatic criticism in New ecause they have acquired title to ire dramatic page of the newspa- They will let nothing appear on ages which is contrary to what emselves think.

y don't stop when they condemn a e first night. They continue the in the following Sunday's paper y don't quit hammering until they e their destruction. Under such nering there are few shows that rvive. 'Abie's Irish Rose' is a instance of a play that did sur-

Course, a play benefits largely from lto-mouth advertising by those who een it. Five years ago I had a 'The Mirage.' The critics all d it. Next morning when I went o the theatre my brother was at the ice and he was very disconsolate. d: 'They've wrecked the show.' at night the house was sold out. expected 400 and we had 2,000."

r Selwyn said if he had his way he 't invite critics to see his shows e end of a week's run. He ex- that he couldn't afford to take course, while other producers e their houses to critics on first t. He was asked if he believed the ers would ever try to reach an eent to bar critics on first nights. d:

producers can't agree on any- g.

ouldn't ask the critics to review a the first night for another rea- e explained. "It's a commercial o The first night is the only night ch we always are sure we can sell house. As it is now we have to way about 190 free tickets to the ers on first nights."

r Selwyn was asked if, in view of ticism of the critics, he felt they ut looking for what was wrong e than what was commendable in ma. His reply was:

if they went out to find what was with a play, they could be really lpful. They could show us how ect faults and to improve plays. ve no constructive critics in New oday.

ink it would be a splendid idea to some of the critics. They should ed on pensions, and George Jean h should be employed to lecture nce daily on dramatic criticism."

r Selwyn said he singled out Mr. because he was the pioneer in the modern metropolitan dramatic criticism. "All the critics have adopted his pose," he added.

Mr. Selwyn said the only reason that indecent plays were produced today was that the new playwrights and producers were encouraged by the laudation given by the critics to "a certain class of smutty drama." The novices not only tried to imitate indecent drama, but tried to go it one better, according to Mr. Selwyn.

The producer declared there were no more good dramatic critics for the same reason that there were no more good stage directors. All had been attracted to other fields by more money. Mr. Selwyn proposed a remedy for what he described as decadent dramatic criticism, saying that what was needed was "new blood."

"New York has plenty of reviewers, but no critics. The reviewers would not be bad if they did not place themselves first of all. They see everything from their own personal angle. They write everything with the personal pronoun, 'I.'"

LONG ISLAND EDITORS MEET

Elect Fifty New Members at Luncheon Meeting in N. Y. Times Office

Fifty new members were accepted by the Long Island Press Association, at a luncheon meeting held April 13, in the New York Times Annex.

Taps were sounded for Harry Kates, of the Jamaica Herald, and James A. Canfield, of the Patchogue Advance, who died during the year.

At luncheon the guests, numbering about 100, were greeted by Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the Times, and speeches were made by Rollo Ogden, editor-in-chief; Dr. John H. Finley, associate editor; Louis Wiley, business manager; President McCarthy of the Long Island Press Association; Mrs. Mabel Merritt, treasurer, and David Murray and George Schubel, former presidents, and F. D. Waterman.

In welcoming members of the association Mr. Ochs told them what is necessary for the making of a successful newspaper.

"You see here how this great newspaper is 'made-up' and what goes into its making," he said. "I hope you have learned that what is necessary to publish a great newspaper is to get together the men and women who are competent to make it, house them in a good establishment, try to make them happy and contented, and have them united in one specific thing, and that in this case is to publish a first class newspaper."

The officers of the association are William McCarthy, president; Mrs. Adeline M. Huntington, first vice-president; Mark M. Marlow, second vice-president; Alfred J. Ball, third vice-president; Mrs. Merritt, treasurer, and Morris Friedman of Rockville Centre, secretary.

TO VISIT N. Y. TIMES PLANT

New Jersey Press Association Accepts Invitation for May 5

The Executive Committee of the New Jersey Press Association, meeting on April 13, in Newark, decided to accept on behalf of the members, an invitation of Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, to visit the Times plant on Tuesday evening, May 5. Preceding the visit to the plant, the Association will hold a dinner at which Mr. Wiley and other executives of the Times will be guests. A committee consisting of R. E. Lent, Passaic Daily News, president of the Association, and W. B. Bryant, Paterson Press Guardian, an ex-president, will arrange the details of the dinner.

The annual meeting and outing of the Association will be held this year from June 26 to 29, place to be determined later.

If only the brakes would get tight when the driver does.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Insure your National Campaign, by Distribution In these cities And using the listed Newspapers for your Advertising

Co-operation all "along the way" from dealers to hustling local advertising managers moves the goods from store shelves to kitchen doors.

In no state has co-operation between newspapers and national advertisers been developed to a greater degree than in Indiana.

Those who appreciate this fact should, therefore, get in touch with these papers where it really pays to promote products of merit.

USE INDIANA NEWSPAPERS FOR INDIANA TRADE

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican	3,618	.03
††Connersville News-Examiner	4,805	.025
††Decatur Democrat (E)	3,194	.025
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette (M)	32,662	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette (S)	34,487	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel (E)	42,860	.10
Gary Evening Post-Tribune (E)	14,772	.055
††Hammond Times (E)	15,610	.07
Huntington Press (M&S)	3,655	.025
Indianapolis News (E)	133,880	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier (M) 7,915 (E) 13,302	21,217	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus (E)	6,432	.025
††Shelbyville Democrat	3,968	.02
South Bend News-Times (M) 9,803 (E) 14,225	24,028	.06
South Bend News-Times (S)	22,275	.06
††South Bend Tribune (S) 19,388 (E)	21,031	.06
Terre Haute Tribune (E&S)	23,710	.06

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1925.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

THIS is the season when builders and those who supply building materials need the assistance of newspaper advertising. Some newspapers have developed excellent and permanent departments for this class of business on classified pages. A first-class letter to builders and supply men should bring in the nucleus of a department of this sort.

AN Ohio daily paper has sold to members of a large club the idea of discontinuing their club publication, and buying paid advertising space once a week in the daily for club news and announcements.—H. H. H., Cleveland.

As President Coolidge has endorsed the movement for a nationwide observance of May First as Children's Day, some good advertising copy may be obtained in advance of this date for children's frocks, millinery, outdoor recreation articles, and other material, that may be sold in preparation for this event.—C. M. L.

Zippy publicity may be given a want-ad solicitation campaign and business results obtained by following the Danville (Ill.) Commercial News' Want-Ad Week Contest, now in progress. Page lay-outs were used to introduce the five members of the want ad staff, their pictures used, and on the want-ad page itself from day to day appeared the leader for the day. The city directory was divided into five parts and letters assigned each member of the staff. These key letters were alternated during the contest and the day's layout indicated who was calling any particular group that day. It brought results.—J. L.

Under the head, "Remember Way Back When—" one advertiser runs a bit of old time history (local) and then ties up with his paint and wall paper he has for sale. It is one of the best ads in the paper and most people read it regularly and it gets results.—Donald O. Ross, Washington (Ia.) Democrat.

In former years small dailies and weekly papers printed obituaries free. The demand for space and the presentation of large numbers of obituaries forced the publishers to start charging for publication of such submitted articles. Many people resent this not knowing the attitude that the publisher was forced to take. At Logansport the leading undertaker of the city was sold on the idea of taking out regular advertising space and printing within it the obituaries. This he did as an added service to people he served. It was well appreciated by the relatives and proved profitable to both the undertaker and the paper.—Lewis Hyman.

An enterprising newspaper advertising salesman accompanied a furniture retailer on a trip to several furniture factories and succeeded in selling several quarter-page ads for the dealer paid for by the manufacturers. The same plan could be used in other lines.—H. H. H., Cleveland.

More candy is being consumed in your city than ever before. Why is this the case? The excellence of the candy made by the local manufacturers has much to do with it. Run a page of ads with a heading emphasizing this thought and get the local candy manufacturers and dealers to come in on this with ads.—Frank H. Williams.

Fishing will soon be the big outdoor sport. Why not run a series of articles on the subject along with tips to the best pools, etc., and in conjunction with this advertisements from supply houses.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston, Mass.

HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

"IS your dog a good investment?" ask your readers. Some will tell you there are no rats in the neighborhood with "Jack" around. Another watches for the mail man. Still, others will tell you of the tricks their dogs will do. Many good stories can be developed. One newspaper tried it out for a month and was swamped with material, running from three to seven short stories each day.—Abe Smith, Marietta, O.

A very good little daily feature, which can be obtained without very much effort, is to have a reporter look over the hotel registers and select the name of the man registered who is farthest from home. This makes a nice box feature and often leads to a good interview.—W. C. Stouffer, Roanoke, Va.

Did you ever run an "Honest Person" contest? Offer a few prizes for the most honest person in your community, the prizes to be awarded to candidates nominated by letters from friends and others telling why they believe their candidate should receive the award. You'll get a lot of letters and it will create a lot of fun and discussion, all of which is a good advertisement and means more readers.—B. A. T.

Do you know what is beneath the streets of your city? There are miles and miles of big and little sewer pipes, water mains and telephone and power cables. There are walled in spaces big as an average room at many of the intersections where the cable systems are joined. There is a growing movement in the larger cities to place more wires under the streets and do away with the unsightly poles and network of wires above the streets and alleys. A feature on this would be interesting to many.—T. H. Barrett, Dallas, Tex.

Protecting the interests of its readers, the Washington (D. C.) Post points out in its classified help wanted columns under "Agents and Solicitors" as follows:

Notice—The Washington Post desires to call the readers attention to the fact that the majority of amounts quoted in ads in this classification are possible commissions only and not salaries.—C. M. L.

Everybody is interested in inventors, probably because of the fortunes made by some. There are surely some men in your community who get patents on their inventions. Why not follow the records of the patent office for local names and get interviews with the inventors? If your paper has a Washington correspondent, he could send in the weekly record of patents issued to residents in your state or the circulation area of your newspaper.—Herbert M. Hofford, Providence, R. I.

The Salt Lake City (Utah) Tribune recently got three excellent human interest features by having reporters interview a traffic cop, a street railroad man, and a bellboy at a local hotel. The interviews made three separate stories of the first class and were run on different days.—Fred L. W. Bennett, Salt Lake City.

The Boston Post printed a new idea in cross-word puzzles recently. The puzzle is made up entirely of pictures of prominent Boston men and women, so arranged that it will read vertically and horiontally. A key giving the vocations, etc., of the people pictured accompanied the puzzle. This idea is sure to create big interest in the larger cities and educate the public in who their prominent men and women really are.—C. E. Pellissier, Boston.

How does your town rank in feminine pulchritude? Make a quick survey and hear the lively comments that follow. Let a reporter stand on a busy corner at noon hour and count the number of young ladies that pass him in a given space of time. Let him classify them—beautiful, attractive, pretty, wholesome, fair and homely. V writes should make interesting Emmett E. Kelleher, London Advertiser.

The Birmingham (Ala.) News ens up its state page and creat good will by publishing daily a and a sketch of an Alabama under the standing caption, "Ho Alabama Mayors." Mats of t used go to the morgue and t features accomplished a triple brightening up the state page, the friendship of the mayors a followers, and building up morgue.—G. L. S.

Spring is here. Seed time—and fancy notions AND POETS; a smil morous story around the poet a make a request for poetry. You swamped, perhaps, with contr some of which may be worth Prizes might be offered.—P. N.

GASOLINE PRICES

Are they fixed by the Stan Oil Company?

Or are they fixed by co tition and supply and dema

The facts and figures, by w you may reach your own clusion, are set forth in deta our report on this difficult complex question.

Our report mailed April 11 gi clear picture of "The French Fin Problem," the factors contributi the downfall of the Herriot mi and the situation confronting the Cabinet.

EDITORIAL RESEAR REPORTS

1425 G Street Washington,

A New
RUBY M. AYRES SERIAL
"Broken Off"

Furnished in Daily Instalments with Synopsis

RELEASED BEGINNIN MAY 18

Write for Sample Instalments

The McClure Newspaper Synd
373 Fourth Avenue, New York

WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
World Building, New York

ATTENTION PUBLISHERS

C. B. HOLLISTER can be reached at the Ambassador Hotel, New York City, until further notice. Newspapers confronted with circulation problems and desiring large immediate paid-in-advance circulation gains are invited to communicate. In position to conduct one more big campaign before July 1st.

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-719 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

SERVICE
THE CHARLES PARTLOWE COMPANY
America's Largest Circulation Building Organization
-RESULTS COUNT-
6th Floor OCCIDENTAL BLD.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

ASSOCIATED EDITO SERVICE

DAILY

Layon McDuffer—Comic by Payn
Quillen's Paragraphs.
"Aunt Het," by Quillen.
"Willie Willis," by Quillen.
Mothers and Their Children.
Golf as Champions Play It.
Color Cut-Outs.
Al Demaree's Sport Cartoons.
Word of Comfort.

WEEKLY

Boys' and Girls' Page.
Economists' Forum.
Auto Sense—Williamson.

SEMI-WEEKLY

Barrie Payne on Golf (Humor).
Individuality of Dress.

ASSOCIATED EDITORS,
440 S. Dearborn St., C

A Leader in Mineral and Industrial Production

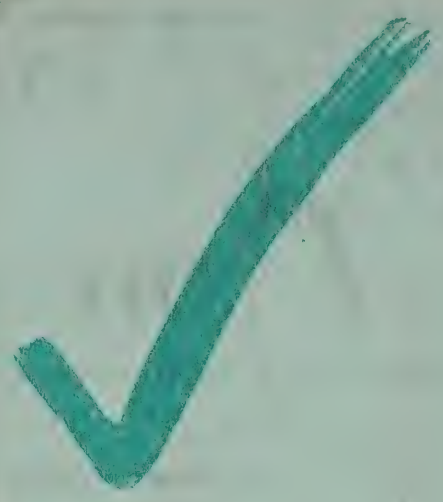
Pennsylvania is one of the richest storehouses of natural wealth in the world. It leads all States in the following annual mineral production:

Cement	Pig Iron
Anthracite Coal	Natural Gas
Bituminous Coal	Clay and Clay Products
Coke	Zinc and Lead Pigments
Ferro Alloys	Lime
Slate	Sand and Gravel

From the industrial viewpoint Pennsylvania has the largest plants for the manufacture of the following:

Locomotives	Teeth	Ship Building
Linoleum	Hosiery	Pipe Organs
Umbrellas	Safes	Coke By-Products
Wrought Iron Pipes	Matches	Zinc

No other territory of like size contains natural wealth that compares in value with that found within the boundaries of Pennsylvania.



Pennsylvania is a producer of wealth, both individual and collective, and is more fertile as an advertising field than ever before. Pennsylvania should receive first thought when a national advertising and marketing campaign is under consideration.

The accompanying list of Daily Newspapers in Pennsylvania goes into the homes of the people who do the buying of nationally advertised commodities

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call	(M)	29,545	.10	.10
Allentown Call	(S)	19,382	.10	.10
††Beaver Falls Tribune	(E)	6,033	.03	.03
†Bloomsburg Press	(M)	7,189	.029	.029
Chester Times	(E)	16,576	.055	.055
††Coatesville Record	(E)	6,650	.035	.03
*Connellsville Courier	(E)	6,212	.02	.02
*Easton Express	(E)	22,416	.07	.07
*Erie Times	(E)	26,258	.08	.08
*Harrisburg Telegraph	(E)	40,487	.095	.095
††Hazleton Plain Speaker	(E)	19,689	.07	.06
††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel	(M)
*Mount Carmel Item	(E)	4,409	.025	.021
*Oil City Derrick	(M)	6,375	.035	.035
Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper	(E&M)	16,109	.08	.07

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Scranton Times	(E)	41,414	.12	.11
*Sharon Herald	(E)	6,568	.0285	.0285
†Stroudsburg Record (E) Press	(M)	8,078	.045	.045
*Sunbury Daily Item	(E)	4,564	.025	.021
*Warren Times-Mirror	(E&M)	7,579	.036	.036
Washington Observer and Reporter	(M&E)	17,181	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News	(E)	11,252	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader	(E)	24,374	.08	.06
*Williamsport Sun	(E)	19,766	.07	.07
††York Dispatch	(E)	19,139	.05	.05

*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
†Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924
A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 30, 1925.

Checking Results!

Day in and day out the Telegram-Mail publishes four or five solid pages of classified advertisements. Unlike certain types of display advertisements, these classified advertisements are subject to a direct check on their result-production.

The fact that tens of thousands of people here in New York continue to advertise in the classified columns of the Telegram-Mail is proof that results are produced. Such substantial and gratifying results in fact that the Telegram-Mail publishes more than four times the volume of classified advertising in all the other Manhattan evening papers combined.

It is an old newspaper adage that the paper with the classified is the paper with trained advertising readers. The Telegram-Mail is pleased when advertisers directly check the results of a given advertisement for they promptly become regular users of advertising space.

The New York Telegram and EVENING MAIL

Publication Office: 73 Dey Street

Eastern Representative
DAN A. CARROLL,
110 East 42nd Street,
New York City.

Western Representative
J. E. LUTZ,
Tower Building,
Chicago, Ill.

JOURNALISM LIBRARY

THIS ISSUE:—PULITZER PRIZE AWARDS

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Newspaper Advocate 1925

SUITE 1115 WORLD BUILDING, NEW YORK

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued Every Saturday.

Vol. 57. No. 49 NEW YORK, MAY 2, 1925 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign 10c Per Copy

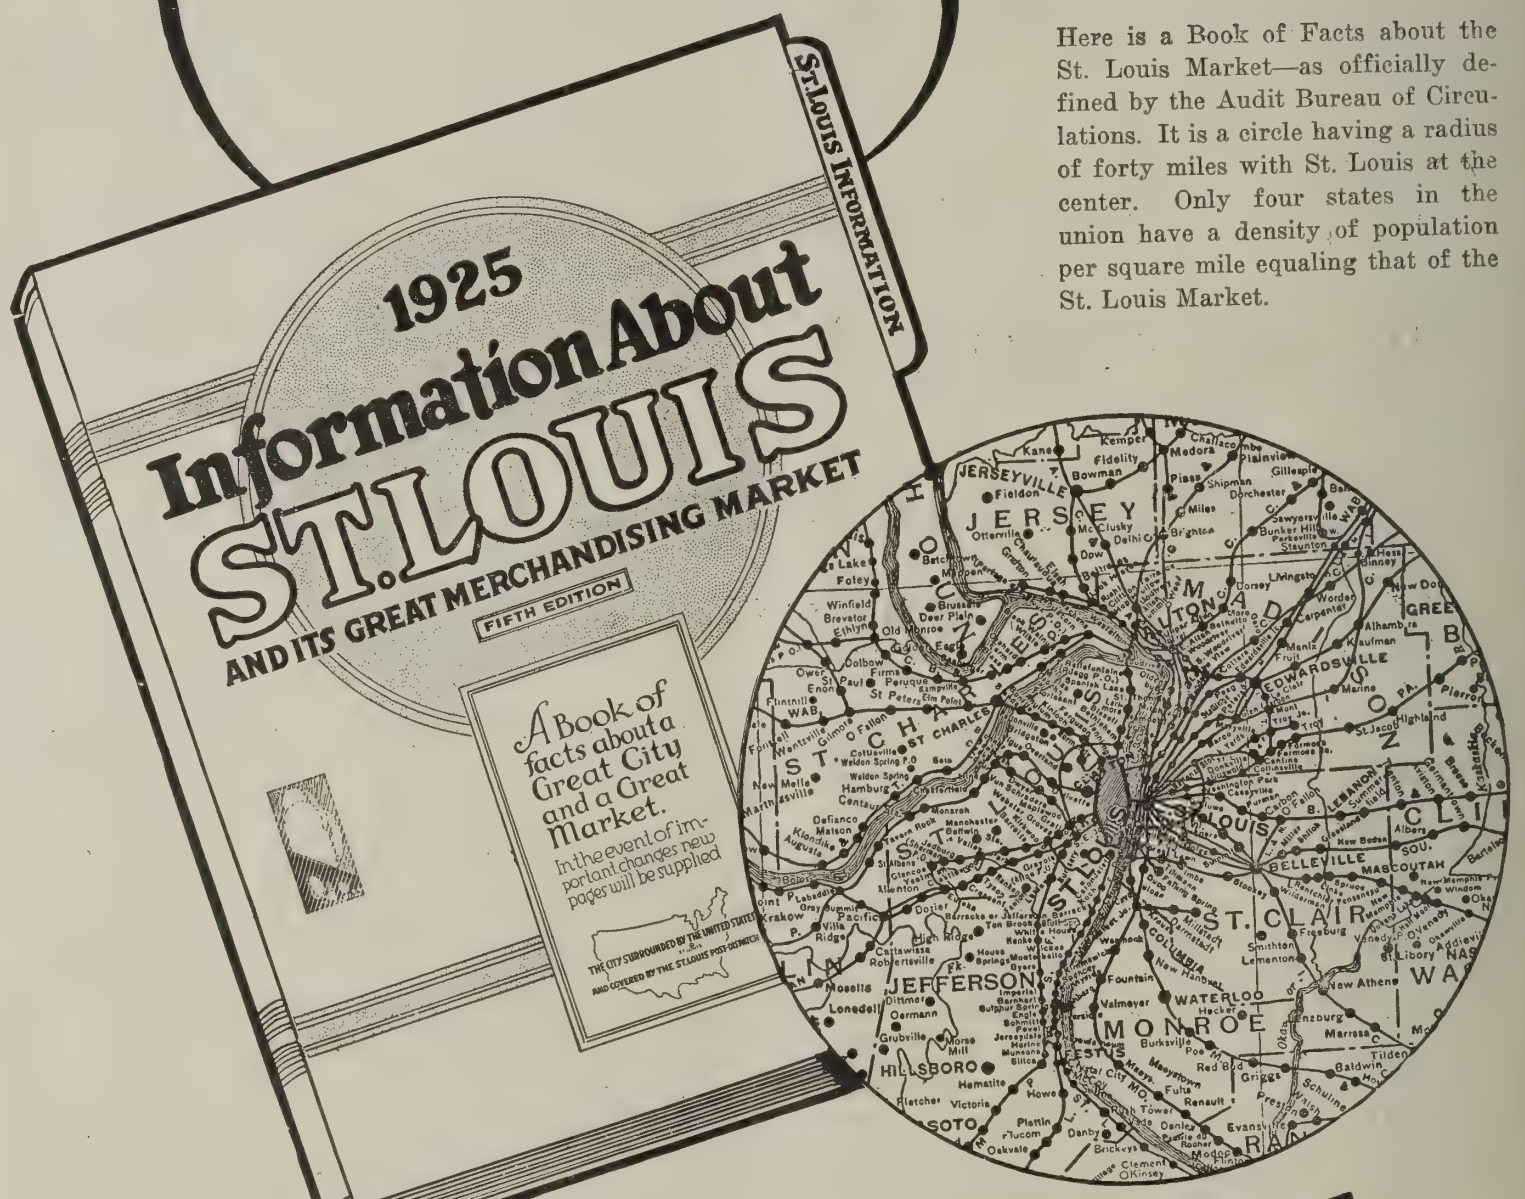
"That Dry, New England Voice"—
Do you recognize it?

President Coolidge is talking—
WMAQ broadcasting

Important national broadcasting includes WMAQ as the Chicago station for the service.

WMAQ is a popular station—an efficient station—and it has "class."

The Chicago Daily News was the first newspaper in Chicago to own and operate its own radio broadcasting station—and this is but one feature of the comprehensive radio service it renders its public.



The comprehensive, authoritative and entertaining radio pages of The Daily News every day—and its Saturday Radio Section—go to a daily average circulation of 400,000—approximately 1,200,000 daily readers—and build radio interest in most of the financially competent households of Chicago and its suburbs.

The fact that The Daily News carries far more display advertising than does any other Chicago daily newspaper proves it to be the most productive medium in Chicago for the sale of legitimate merchandise—and it is logically the most effective medium for the sale of radio products.

The Chicago Daily News

FIRST IN CHICAGO

A Comprehensive Book about a Profitable Market

Here is a Book of Facts about the St. Louis Market—as officially defined by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. It is a circle having a radius of forty miles with St. Louis at the center. Only four states in the union have a density of population per square mile equaling that of the St. Louis Market.

A Responsive Buying Power of 1,246,000 People

In addition to St. Louis, which is the largest city west of the Mississippi River, and East St. Louis, which is the third largest city in Illinois, this area contains 13 cities of over 5,000 population,

14 cities of 2,500 to 5,000 population,
30 towns of 1,000 to 2,500 population,
129 villages, industrial and rural communities.

In the St. Louis territory there is sold one copy of the Post-Dispatch—Daily or Sunday—for approximately every six people—men, women and children—a circulation almost equal to the total number of families.

No other newspaper in America in a city of over 500,000 population—with one exception—the News, in Detroit—covers its city and suburbs as completely as the Post-Dispatch covers the St. Louis market.

it is FREE to Sales or Advertising Executives

Ask for a copy on your letterhead and it will be sent postpaid without obligation of any kind.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

FIRST IN ST. LOUIS

EASTERN ADVERTISING OFFICE: World Building, New York
DETROIT OFFICE: General Motors Building
SAN FRANCISCO OFFICE: 564 Market St. LOS ANGELES OFFICE: Title Insurance Bldg.
WESTERN ADVERTISING OFFICE: Tribune Tower, Chicago
KANSAS CITY OFFICE: Coca Cola Building
SEATTLE OFFICE: Securities Bldg.

"Steady, there—s-t-e-a-d-y!"

¶ The Sunpapers are way up on the list—whenever a national "line-up" is printed.

¶ But that's been going on for a good long while.

¶ Sudden gains disappear as suddenly as they arrive.

¶ A good store grows big. A good newspaper grows big.

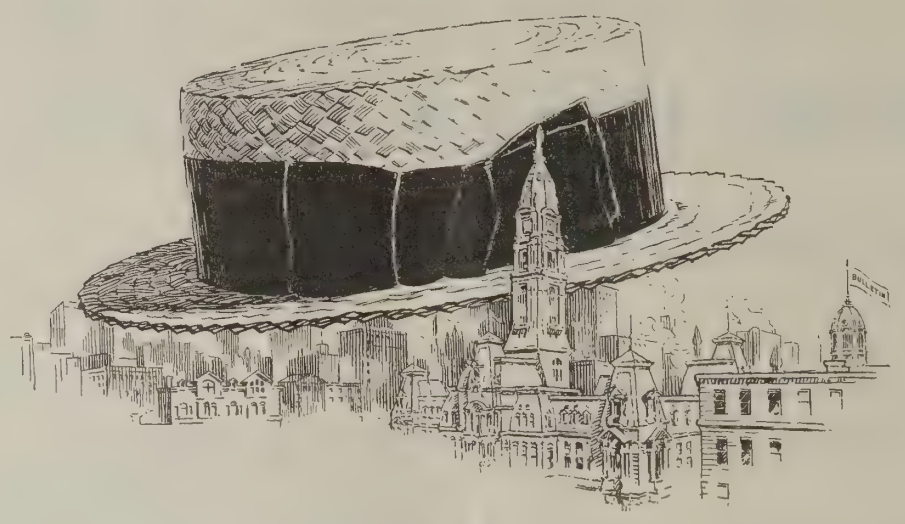
¶ The significant thing about Sun circulation is that it is simply the reflection of a growing town needing more copies of its favorite newspapers. It is clean, substantial circulation—secured without a single argument except the one, "Just a good newspaper."

Average Net Paid Circulation for 6 Months Ending March 31, 1925

Daily (M.&E.) . . 247,320

Sunday 182,031

A Gain of 3587 Daily and 4527 Sunday Over Same Period a Year Ago



JOHN B. WOODWARD
110 E. 42d Street, New York

GUY S. OSBORN
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE MORNING EVENING SUN SUNDAY

Baltimoreans Don't Say "Newspaper;" They Say "SUNpaper"

The Bulletin Reader Spends $762,000 for Straw Hats

STRAW hats are such a small item in a year's expenditures that few men count the cost—yet straw hats alone cost the male Bulletin Reader a tremendous sum. Purchasing power abounds in Philadelphia and the wise advertiser bends it to his advantage through the advertising columns of The Bulletin.

The reader confidence enjoyed by The Evening Bulletin is attested by the fact that The Bulletin's circulation is the largest in Philadelphia and one of the largest in the United States.

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Bulletin goes into practically every home in and around the great city of Philadelphia and makes it possible to reach this huge market of nearly three million people—third largest in America—through one newspaper at one cost.

With a circulation of over half a million copies daily The Bulletin dominates Philadelphia.

The Evening Bulletin.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEWSPAPER

518,357

Average Daily Net Circulation for Year ending Dec. 31, 1924

(Copyright 1925, Bulletin Company)

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 | NEW YORK, MAY 2, 1925 | No. 49

Pulitzer Prizes For Journalism, Arts and Letters Awarded For 1924

Two Chicago Reporters Rewarded for Leopold-Loeb Investigation—Kirby Wins His Second Cartoon Prize—Lathan's Editorial on "Plight of the South" Adjudged Best

WINNERS of the Pulitzer prizes in journalism and letters for 1924 were announced at Columbia University. The awards in journalism are:

"For the best editorial article written during the year, the test of excellence being clearness of style, moral purpose, sound reasoning and power to influence public opinion in the right direction, due account being taken for the whole volume of the editorial writer's work during the year—$500.

"Awarded to the Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier, for the editorial entitled 'The Plight of the South,' published Nov. 5, 1924.

"For the best example of a reporter's work during the year, the test being strict accuracy, terseness, the accomplishment of some public good commanding public attention and respect—$1,000.

"Awarded in duplicate to James W. Mulroy and Alvin H. Goldstein for their service, while members of the staff of the Chicago Daily News, toward the solution of the murder of Robert Franks, Jr., in Chicago, May 22, 1924, and the bringing to justice of Nathan F. Leopold and Richard Loeb.

"For the best cartoon published in any American newspaper during the year, the determining qualities being that the cartoon shall embody an idea made clearly apparent, shall show good drawing and striking pictorial effect and shall be helpful to some commendable cause of public importance, due account being taken for the whole volume of the artist's newspaper work during the year—$500.

"Awarded to Rollin Kirby of the New York World for the cartoon entitled 'News From the Outside World,' published Oct. 5, 1924."

There was no award "for the most disinterested and meritorious public service rendered by any American newspaper," the announcement declaring that no instance of such service of the notable qualities for which previous awards had been made had been submitted this year to the judges.

The award for the "best history of the services rendered to the public by the American press" was not made, for lack of competition.

The prizes in letters were as follows:

"For the American novel published during the year which shall best respect the wholesome atmosphere of American life and the highest standard of American manners and manhood—$1,000.

"Awarded to 'So Big,' by Edna Ferber, published by Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y., 1924.

"For the original American play, performed in New York, which shall best represent the educational value and power of the stage in raising the standard of good morals, good taste and good manners—$1,000.

"Awarded to 'They Knew What They Wanted,' by Sidney Howard, produced at the Klaw Theatre in New York during the season 1924-1925.

"For the best book of the year upon the history of the United States—$2,000.

"Awarded to 'A History of the American Frontier,' by Frederick L. Paxson, published by Houghton, Mifflin Company, Boston, Mass., 1924.

"For the best American biography teaching patriotic and unselfish services to the people, illustrated by an eminent example, excluding, as too obvious, the names of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln—$1,000.

"Awarded to 'Barrett Wendell and His Letters,' by M. A. DeWolfe Howe, published by the Atlantic Monthly Press, Inc., Boston, Mass., 1924.

"For the best volume of verse published during the year by an American author—$1,000.

"Awarded to 'The Man Who Died Twice,' by Edwin Arlington Robinson, published by the Macmillan Company New York, 1924."

CARTOON THAT TOOK $500 PRIZE

"News of the Outside World"

ROLLIN KIRBY'S cartoons have appeared in the New York World since 1913, and this is the second time he has won the Pulitzer award. The prior award was in 1921 for a cartoon entitled "On the Road to Moscow."

ROLLIN KIRBY

The cartoon, published in the World Oct. 5 is reproduced above.

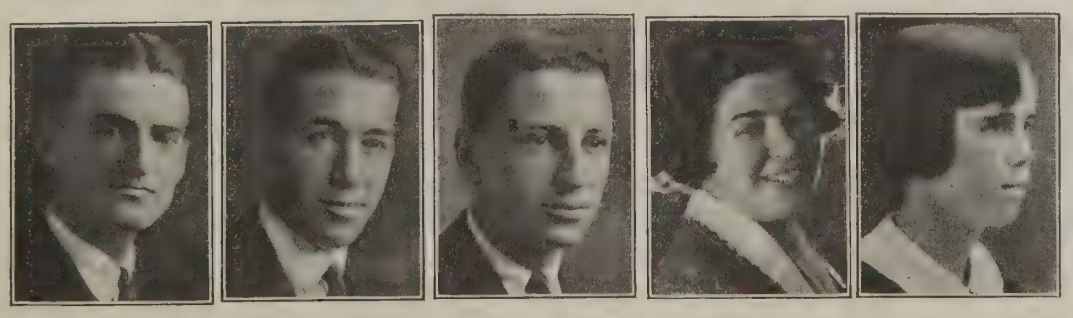
Mr. Kirby was born in Galva, Ill. He began his work in New York in 1901 as an illustrator for Collier's Magazine, McClure's, Life, American, Harper's and other publications. He became cartoonist for the New York Evening Mail in 1911, and the next year went to the New York Sun, after which he was employed by the World.

No award has been announced for the prize in art, pending a recommendation from the National Academy of Design, which is expected this week, and will be announced immediately.

The following awards of traveling scholarships were announced:

"Three traveling scholarships, having the value of $1,500 each, to graduates of the School of Journalism who shall have passed their examinations with the highest honor and are otherwise most deserving, to enable each of them to spend a year in Europe, to study the social, political and moral conditions of the people, and the character and principles of the European press."

On the nomination of the teaching staff of the School of Journalism, the following were appointed:



Daniel Robert Maue, Monticello, Minn.; William C. Worthington, Providence, R. I., and Richmond B. Williams, Brooklyn. Alternates: Theodore Bernstein, New York; Dorothy Dodd, Tallahassee, Fla., and Cicely Applebaum, New York.

"An annual scholarship, having the value of $1,500, to the student of music in America who may be deemed the most talented and deserving, in order that he may continue his studies with the advantage of European instruction.

"In view of the great merit of the works presented, two scholarships having a value of $1,500 each, were awarded to Douglas Moore of Cleveland, O., and to Leopold D. Mannes of New York City."

The members of the Advisory Board of the Pulitzer School of Journalism who were present and participated in making the awards were

Winners of Journalism Scholarships, and Alternates

WM. C. WORTHINGTON | DANIEL R. MAUE | T. N. BERNSTEIN | CICELY APPLEBAUM | DOROTHY DODD

HOW JURY JUDGED REPORTERS' WORK

THIS unusual recital of the prize winning work by Messrs. Mulroy and Goldstein is contained in the report of Charles P. Cooper, Pulitzer School of Journalism; William P. Beazell, assistant managing editor of the New York World; and H. M. Crist, managing editor of the Brooklyn Eagle. Mr. Mulroy is still on the Chicago Daily News staff,

ALVIN GOLDSTEIN

J. W. MULROY

while Mr. Goldstein has joined the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The jury's report follows:

"Your jury unanimously recommends that the award of the Pulitzer Prize "for the best example of a reporter's work during the year" be made to James W. Mulroy and Alvin H. Goldstein for their service, while members of the staff of the Chicago Daily News, toward the solution of the murder of Robert Franks, Jr., in Chicago on May 22, 1924 and the bringing to justice of Nathan F. Leopold and Richard Loeb.

We append to this recommendation a statement from Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney of Cook County, Ill., and a statement from Charles H. Dennis, managing editor of the Chicago Daily News, in which unqualified credit is given to these boys for:

1. Establishing the fact that Bobby Franks had been murdered, and by the identification of the body preventing the payment of the ransom demanded, when another ten minutes might have seen it paid and perhaps enabled the slayers to have escaped discovery entirely.

2. Securing from Richard Loeb, before his part in the crime had been even suspected, a stateemnt that suggested knowledge of it on his part and gave a new trend to the investigation.

3. Establishing the fact that Leopold did own the typewriter on which the demands for ransom had been written, thereby enabling the authorities to break his alibi and bring about the confession which cleared away all mystery surrounding a crime that had shocked the English-speaking world.

The evidence in support of these services is unequivocal, and supplies a vivid background for what must be, from every journalistic standpoint, regarded as an outstanding achievement, not only of the year 1924 but of a long period before.

This achievement of Mulroy and Goldstein was conspicuously an example of a reporter's work. "They were young—out of college less than a year—and the work to which they had been assigned in connection with the disappearance of Bobby Franks was merely to do the odds and ends that older, more experienced men would have no time for in following what seemed, in the beginning, a main trail of the mystery.

Yet these youthful reporters, quite "over and beyond the call of duty," worked twenty-four hours a day, "spelling" each other in eating, even; they worked through at least one storm that drenched them to the skin; they suffered the gibes of their companions because of their determination to do more than merely the obvious thing.

When the body of a boy was found in a suburban culvert they viewed it themselves and were satisfied that it was that of Bobby Franks. The father refused

(Continued on page 12)

MUSIC SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS

L. D. MANNES

DOUGLAS MOORE

"THE PLIGHT OF THE SOUTH"

ROBERT LATHAN, editor of the Charleston News & Courier, wrote this prize-winning editorial for his paper, Nov. 5, 1924:

"This article is being written on election day but before the result of the voting can possibly be known. No matter. The suggestions it contains will still be pertinent whatever the story told by the first page this morning. It makes very little difference what any of us think about the outcome of yesterday's balloting. It makes a considerable difference whether or not the people of the South realize the precarious situation which this section has come to occupy politically.

"As yet we doubt if very many of them do realize this; and yet it is, w think, the outstanding political develo ment of the time so far as we are co cerned. Look at the facts. They a not pleasant to contemplate but they ca not be ignored longer. We are in sad fix politically in this part of t country and if we are to find a remed for our troubles we must first of all d termine what they are. That will tak considerable discussion and all we ca hope to do now is to help start the ba of this discussion rolling. If that can b accomplished we may achieve the ne program and the new leadership whic we so much need.

"For at the root of the South's prese plight lies the fact that it has toda virtually no national program and vi tually no national leadership. Is strange that it should be treated by t rest of the country as such a negligib factor? What is it contributing today i the way of political thought? Wha political leaders has it who posses weight or authority beyond their ow states? What constructive policies a its people ready to fight for with t brains and zeal that made them a powe in the old days?

"The plight of the South in these r spects would be perilous at any tim In a period when political currents a deeper and swifter than ever befor with more violent whirlpools, more da gerous rocks and shoals, ours is truly perilous position. Changes which use to be decades in the making now swee over us almost before we know they a in contemplation. It is true everywher In all the countries of Europe the pendu lum is swinging, now far to the lef now far to the right. Center partie have lost their power. They are in very bad way. And the South has b longed to the school politically whic sought as a rule the middle of the roa eschewing ultra-conservatism on the or hand and radicalism on the other. Wit labor organized and militant, with rad calism organized and in deadly earnes with conservatism organized and draw ing the lines sharply, what is the Sout to do, what course shall she take, whe do her interests lie, what is due to ha pen to her?

"These are the questions which alread begin to press for answer. Who is t speak for the South? How many of h citizens are prepared to help formula her replies?"

CAREERS OF PULITZER WINNERS

THE following are brief sketches of the careers of the winners of the Pulitzer prizes in letters:

EDNA FERBER, winner of the novelists' prize, was born Aug. 15, 1887, in Kalamazoo, Mich., and began writing as a reporter on the Appleton (Wis.) Daily Crescent at the age of 17. She was employed later in the Milwaukee Journal and the Chicago Tribune. A breakdown in her health turned her to short story writing. Her first story, "Dawn O'Hara," was sold to the American Magazine. Her Emma McChesney stories brought the working woman into fiction. Emma McChesney later was dramatized with the collaboration of George S. Kaufman, who recently dramatized Miss Ferber's story, "Old Man Minnick," which appeared on the New York stage as "Minnick."

EDNA FERBER

Other novels of Miss Ferber are "Fanny Herself" and "The Girls." Among her books or short stories are "Gigolo" and "Half Portions."

SIDNEY COE HOWARD, not yet 30, had made his place in the theatre before his "They Knew What They Wanted" won the Pulitzer award. His first notable work was the play "Swords," in which Claire Eames, now his wife, played the leading role. He translated Charles Vildrac's "Le Paquebot Tenacité." He also adapted "Sancho Panza" and translated "Casanova." Later he wrote "Bewitched" in collaboration with Edward Sheldon. Mr. Howard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Howard of San Francisco. He was educated at the University of California. During the war he was in the aviation service. He has written much for magazines and was for a time book reviewer for Life. Notable are his series of articles for the New Republic under the title of "The Labor Spy" and his investigation of narcotic traffic for Hearst's International Magazine. He has written many short stories, best known of which are contained in his book, "Three Flights Up."

DR. FREDERICK LOGAN PAXSON, of Madison, Wis., is the author of numerous distinguished works on American history, among them being "The Independence of South American Republics," "The Last American Frontier," "The Civil War," and "The New Nation." He is professor of American history in the University of Wisconsin, and also has taught history in the Universities of Chicago, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Michigan and California, and was research associate of Carnegie Institution in British archives in 1910. Dr. Paxson was editor of the War Encyclopedia published by the Committee on Public Information in 1917, and was a major in the United States Army in charge of economic mobilization in 1918 and 1919. He is a member and has been an officer in the American Historical Society and various other bodies interested in historical research.

M. A. DE WOLFE HOWE is the author of a voluminous list of histories and biographies, besides the prize winning "Barrett Wendell and His Letters." In addition he has found time for much verse and editorial work in connection with the Atlantic Monthly, of which he is vice-president; the Harvard Alumni Bulletin, Harvard Graduates' Magazine and other publications. Among his works are "Boston, the Place and the People," "Life and Letters of George Bancroft," "Harmonies, a Book of Verse," "Boston Common: Scenes from Four Centuries," "Life and Labors of Bishop Hare," "Memoirs of the Harvard Dead," in four volumes; "Memories of a Hostess," compiled from the diaries of Mrs. James T. Fields, and other books. Mr. Howe is editor of the Beacon Biographies, in 31 volumes, and author of "Phillips Brooks" in that series. He has long been interested in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and has written a history of it. He is a native of Bristol, R. I., and his home now is Boston.

M. A. DEW. HOWE

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, who won the award of the poetry prize for his "The Man Who Died Twice," also won the Pulitzer Prize in 1921 for his "Collected Poems." He was born in Tide Head, Me., in 1869, and has lived in New York for many years. He was graduated from Harvard and received the degree of Litt. D. from Yale in 1923. Among his best known poetical works are "Capt. Craig," "Merlin," "Lancelot," "The Three Taverns," "Avon's Harvest" and "Roman Bartholow." He is also the author of various plays and other literary works. His own words probably are the best estimate of his genius: "I am a fatalist as far as poetry is concerned. If a man has poetry in him, it will out; if not, he will produce only verse. There is too much verse and too little poetry in the world today."

E. A. ROBINSON

PULITZER PRIZE AWARDS FOR 1924

(Continued from page 3)

Ralph Pulitzer, New York World; Solomon B. Griffith, Springfield (Mass. Republican; Victor F. Lawson, Chicago Daily News; Melville I Stone, Associated Press; Alfred Ho man, San Francisco Bulletin; Arthur M Howe, Brooklyn Daily Eagle; Robe Lincoln O'Brien, Boston Herald; Roll Ogden, New York Times; Joseph Pulit zer, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and Ed ward Page Mitchell, New York Sun.

GIVES PRIZE TO FUND

Edna Ferber Donates $1,000 Pulitze Award to Author's League

Miss Edna Ferber, whose "So Big" wo the $1,000 Pulitzer prize for the be American novel in 1924, immediatel turned the check over to the Author League Fund for the care and assistanc of old, sick and needy artists and writer Miss Ferber has been a member of th board of directors since the fund's founda tion and her letter simply stated that he gift was the "partial discharge of a credi obligation."

In announcing the donation, Georg Creel, president of the fund, said that th Ferber spirit was what had enabled th league to take care of its own unfortu nates for a full ten years.

BUILDING A NEWSPAPER TO SUCCESS

(. P. J. Mooney, Memphis Commercial Appeal, States His Rules from Personal Experience—Daily Must Remedy Defects of Its City a Basic Principle

By PHILIP SCHUYLER

][E sat with his hat cocked sideways and pushed back to the top of his]ad. In his mouth was deeply thrust ashort and very black cigar. Behind rnd spectacles, lids often drooped down cer his eyes. He would think thus brief s:onds, eyes closed, while smoke puffs]loed him and vanished. Then, opening]s eyes, he would speak.

And C. P. J. Mooney, president of the lemphis Commercial Appeal, vice-presi-ɔit of the Associated Press, and one of t: most brilliant editors of this age, ns well worth hearing.

He talked to me last week on subjects t which so far he has given nearly all]: active life, the editorial, the making c newspapers, and newspapers in general.]: traced steps he considered best to tce in building a newspaper to success.

In skyrocket phrases his ideas streaked s:rlike into sentences. Rather than rrotechnic, however, they were electric i their precision and certainty. He did rt hedge opinions within the sputter of ' believe," or "I think." Every state-rnt could be taken or left, whichever p:ased.

Briefly surveyed, Mr. Mooney's road t newspaper success takes the following t·nings:

Know your own territory thoroughly: sgregate the defects and remedy them. Hint the news. Gather together a staff c specialists; and have a strong, fight-ig editorial page. To this must be added l the writer the need of a brilliant per-snality for chief executive.

"The first thing a newspaper editor ad publisher should do is to find out te needs of his own immediate territory, i peculiarlities, and the sources of liveli-lod for its people," Mr. Mooney be-gn. "Thoroughly understand your ommunity; segregate the defects and rmedy them."

From this beginning he proceeded to rlate from personal experience.

"When I went back South 15 years ao, I studied Memphis as I never had lfore. Its big defect was obvious. It ns a one crop country, and that crop ns cotton.

"I sought to get my people interested i diversified farming. A city with only ce crop is on the danger way. Witness (e rubber tire towns and their deflation.

"How to get them interested in cor-ɔcting this basic weakness. There was ı better way naturally than to adver-te—to advertise 'diversified advertising' i exactly the same way the English rwspapers advertise Beecham's pills.

"We started printing a three inch ad-rrtisement daily on the editorial page. ıder the same heading every day, we ted to fill this space with pertinent ɜggestions on farming, changing the text ɜery week. The heading was merely 'armers Attention!'

"It takes time to Burbank deep-rooted ɔstom. Other editors were first to no-te the copy. They began to clip and ɜprint it.

"In two years, the farmers and busi-ɜss men of the territory saw there was me reason in the idea, and they com-enced to form business and farmers' ɜganizations to study mutual problems.] five years, the farmers went in heavily r diversified farming and ours is no nger a one crop territory. Today the ɔmmercial Appeal continues to print e 'Farmers Attention!' advertisements.

"That's one thing a newspaper can do, ıd that's one thing a newspaper should] to build success and friendships.

"But, after all, the newspaper busi-ɜss is the simplest business in the world succeed with. Absolutely the main sential is to get the news and print it.

"News costs a lot of money, but it is e best investment that can be made. A ewspaper dependent on its features will e. A newspaper dependent on news ill not die.

"In addition to wire services, a news-paper's own system of correspondents is necessary. While many newspapers have given up their correspondents and rely on a press association for state and territory news, I prefer to be old-fashioned and keep mine going. We have 900 correspondents in my territory, which we bound from Cairo to the Gulf of Mexico and from Muscle Shoals, Ala., to the Ozark Mountains.

"News shouldn't be strong in one department merely. All should be well nourished, exercised and kept fit—foreign, domestic, state, local, sports, and financial. In the matter the Commercial Appeal has specialized in its cotton department, which we endeavor to make the final authority on growing cotton.

"A newspaper staff should be a co-operative organization of specialists. There was a time when self-made men could be effective. Now the world moves so fast, no man has time to make himself. Hire only university graduates on your newspaper is a good rule to follow.

"Personally, I prefer the old-time classical education as ground work. Greek gives the student the concept of beauty. Latin gives him accuracy.

"Every newspaper man should specialize on some subject, economics, philosophy, history, civics, or science. An ideal editorial staff would be made up of a specialist in every branch of knowledge.

"There are few great editorial pages left in this country, yet a strong editorial page more than anything else makes for stability of circulation. People don't read editorial pages today because most of them are not fit to read. They are stupidly written.

"One important thing to avoid is the 'machine-made' editorial. If there are only enough ideas to fill two columns, don't try to write three. Try to have one editorial fall simultaneously with the big news event of the day. Be sure that all your editorials are carefully written. Bright writing is usually trifling writing. The average man can't draw the correct distinction."

Mr. Mooney is one of the best authorities this country can offer on the editorial. His newspaper demonstrated the power of an editorial page, when in 1921-22 it was awarded the Pulitzer prize for the campaign it made against the Ku Klux Klan.

"We touched but little on the religious aspect of the Klan," he explained. "Instead we tried to reason with them. They were not, we told them, fundamentally in line with the best interpretation of the Constitution. All people must obey the law. All people must stand on an equal basis. Nothing can take the place of the courts. The courts are at least better than the people."

Mr. Mooney, during the interview, had created his ideal of a successful newspaper. Now he began to play with his fancy.

"Do you know what I would do if I had $10,000,000?" he asked. "I would start a newspaper in New York. It would keep to all the ideals I have enumerated. It would only run to 12 pages week days, with a maximum of 16 on Sunday. Advertisements would be limited to 20 columns week days, with 30 Sundays. The largest advertisement I would accept would be two columns. The front page I would set in leaded nonpareil, and I would pack it full of news. Do you think it would be successful?"

To turn from fancy to fact, I asked Mr. Mooney to give me his list of the best newspapers in the United States. The list he gave follows:

Boston Transcript
Indianapolis News
New York Times
Dallas News
Washington Star
Arkansas Gazette
Philadelphia Bulletin.

"I put the Boston Transcript at the head of the list," he explained, "because it is an all round newspaper and is in addition unique, in that it appeals to people of culture. Like no other newspaper in this country, the Transcript realizes the news value of the arts—painting, sculpture, poetry, and philosophy."

The man of these opinions was a former Hearst man, being at one time managing editor of the New York American. He started his working life, however, as a school teacher. After graduation from St. Mary's College in Kentucky, he taught school several years in Arkansas.

For 35 years now he has been in newspaper work. His first position was in 1890 with the old Memphis Avalanche, which later was merged into the Commercial-Appeal, the newspaper in which he now owns an interest and of which he is president. Later he became managing editor of the Commercial Appeal.

Coming to New York in 1902, he Munsey's New York News and then went over to the American, of which he became managing editor. While on the latter paper he had his first experience as editorial writer. One of the regular staff editorial writers was sick, and Mr. Hearst called upon Mooney to fill in.

He then wrote in a flowing Southern style. Mr. Hearst called him in.

"That Johnsonian style of yours is very fine," he said, "but everyone can understand plain English."

"Since then I have been trying to write plain English," Mr. Mooney recalled.

In 1905, Mr. Mooney was transferred to the Chicago Examiner as managing editor, where he remained until 1908. Then Mr. Hearst asked him to go to Los Angeles. Mr. Mooney declined, resigned, and went back to Memphis.

"I still use the title chiefly of managing editor," Mr. Mooney reminded me. "And I sit up with the paper every night."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER Photograph

C. P. J. MOONEY

LAUNCHES SUNDAY EDITION

Evansville (Ind.) Press Becomes Seven-Day Paper April 26

What the Evansville (Ind.) Press claims is a new record for carrier efficiency was made when the Press, on April 26, became a seven-day paper with the launching of a Sunday edition. Seventy-five per cent of the carriers are said to have signed up all of their week-day subscribers for the Sunday paper.

The first Sunday issue consisted of 32 pages, containing 151 columns of advertising. It had four pages of color comics.

It is the announced intention of the management to restrict the size of the Sunday issue to correspond with the average maintained other days and continue to make the seven-day price 18 cents or 15 cents for six days delivered by carrier.

"As shown in the first Sunday issue, it is our aim to make the Sunday paper consist largely of community and general news, with strong leanings to sport and social happenings," said Howard P. Jones, managing editor.

The Press is a Scripps-Howard newspaper, started 19 years ago, with F. R. Peters, editor, and Ward C. Mayborn, business manager. The former is now editor-in-chief and general manager of the Evansville Press and Terre Haute Post.

Jenkins Publicity Agent for New York

John Wilbur Jenkins, formerly managing editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News & Observer and later city editor of the Baltimore Sun, has been named by Mayor Hylan director of the bureau of publicity for the city of New York.

FIRE PROTECTION AND LOWER TAXES WILL BEST ADVANCE FORESTRY

Eighty Per Cent of Burned Woods Due to Human Carelessness—Tax Schedules Make Private Investment Impossible

By R. S. KELLOGG

TODAY about 20 per cent of our total remaining forest area and 30 per cent of our standing timber is in public ownership of some form—that is, state or national, chiefly the latter. Three-fifths of our timber supply is in the northern Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast States, while a large proportion of our total lumber consumption is east of the Mississippi River.

The home builder in New York, which in the '50s was the leading lumber producing state in the Union, now regularly uses wood which has come 1,000 miles from the South or 3,000 miles from the Pacific Coast, notwithstanding the fact that 40 per cent of the total area of the state is fit only for growing timber and should be supplying a large part of the home needs.

We have been a nation of wood users and, I fear, of wood wasters. Once so cheap and abundant that it was not worth saving, we have used wood lavishly for every conceivable purpose, and it has contributed greatly to our material progress. Without the wonderful pineries of the Lake States and later of the South to draw upon, the pioneers who opened up the great farming region of the Middle West would have been greatly handicapped for building material.

Without the spruce forests of the Northeast, we should not have the cheap and abundant supply of paper that has made possible the development of universal education, to say nothing of the multitude of other essential purposes served by paper. Without the finest hardwoods that the world ever saw, we should not have been supreme in the production of furniture and vehicle stock. Without the gigantic firs and redwoods of the Pacific Coast we should not have the timbers of tremendous size and great durability which have for so long been such important structural materials. Our whole civilization has been founded upon wood.

Our present problem is not to search for substitutes for wood in its essential uses, but to grow the wood that we now and always shall need. This is the problem of forestry. Forestry means the growing of timber crops for use, just as farming is the growing of food crops for use.

There are 50,000 forest fires a year in the United States, which, in addition to destroying much valuable timber, cause inestimable damage to young growth and to soil fertility. The inexcusable habit of burning over the woods in the spring prevails even within the limits of New York City. Fire everywhere is the most deadly enemy of the forest, and there is no use in trying to practice forestry where fire is not controlled. Sixty-five percent of the forest fires in New York State last year were caused by campers, smokers, fishermen and hunters—594 out of 904. Smokers alone caused 21 per cent of the fires. All of these fires were preventable and could have been avoided by proper care in the building and extinguishing of camp fires and in the use of cigarettes, pipes and matches in the woods. Eighty per cent of all forest fires are of human origin and preventable if the people will ever learn to be careful everywhere with fire.

The basic requirements of forest policy in the United States are:

1. Efficient forest protection. Forests must be made insurable risks if forestry is to succeed.

2. Forest surveys and inventories are necessary because we must know what we have before we can intelligently plan what to do.

3. Management of forests for continuous production through methods of cutting or replanting.

4. Research upon forest growth and reproduction through experiment stations similar to agricultural experiment stations.

5. More complete utilization of forest products through scientific investigation into the properties and uses of the various woods.

There is a widely prevalent misconception that there should be legal compulsion on the private owner to make him practice forestry whether or no, but it should be remembered that there is never a satisfactory political solution for an economic problem, although politicians are always trying to bring about a law-made millenium.

Legislative fiat frequently prevents capital from engaging in productive enterprises beneficial to society, but no governmental mandate can successfully compel the private landowner to grow trees unless it pays him to do so, any more than it can compel the farmer to grow wheat when he prefers to grow corn.

Until recent years, timber of natural growth was so cheap and abundant that the private owner could not afford to engage in forestry, where the time element is long, the hazards many, and the financial return often less than in many business enterprises. Now, however, the tide is turning, and there are many paper and lumber manufacturers, north, south and west, who are definitely planning for permanent timber production to supply their mills with raw material. Many more will do so when the fire hazard is reduced and an equitable system of forest taxation adopted by the states.

Nationally, we are doing a good job with 100,000,000 acres of National Forests, chiefly in the West, which are being managed for watershed protection, recreation for the people, and permanent timber production. In the year 1924 these National Forests returned over $5,000,000 to the Federal Treasury in receipts from sales of timber, the grazing of live stock, water power, and other special uses. More than a billion board feet of timber was cut, more than 6,000,000 head of live stock grazed on the National Forests, and over 11,000,000 people visited these forests to hunt, fish, camp, and enjoy their scenic beauties. The National Forests are fulfilling the Roosevelt policy of conservation through wise use.

Many of the states are carrying on notable work in forestry, which in due time will be of untold benefit. Of these, the foremost is Pennsylvania, where there are now 1,130,000 acres of State Forest, purchased at an average cost of only $2.26 per acre. These forests are being managed on a business-like basis to make all their resources of the greatest value to the residents of the state, through the cutting of timber wherever it can be cut under proper forestry practice, the development of recreation centers, and the leasing of camp sites. Since their establishment, these forests in Pennsylvania have returned nearly $600,000 to the state, and the annual receipts from them are now more than $100,000 per year. There have been planted more than 35,000,000 trees on these Pennsylvania forests, and during the past 15 years more than 32,000,000 trees have been planted by private individuals in the state.

Massachusetts has 90,000 acres in state forests, with an authorization of over $2,000,000 to continue their acquisition. Forest fire laws are being put in good shape in Massachusetts, the most equitable and progressive system of forest taxation has been adopted of that in any state, and in addition to over 50,000 acres of forests owned by the cities for the protection of municipal water supplies, 63 towns in Massachusetts have established town forests which will be managed for timber production. Massachusetts is making a splendid contribution to the development of local interest in forestry.

New York, while it has expended many millions of dollars in the acquirement of 2,000,000 acres of State Parks in the Adirondacks and the Catskills, has gone only half way in the practice of forestry, because of a section in the State Constitution which provides that these parks must be forever maintained as wild forest lands. The state is doing a splendid job in fire prevention and in the development of forest nurseries, and under the appropriations of the recent session of the Legislature, will in a short time have the most extensive forest nurseries in the United States. The young trees from these nurseries are being planted upon the state lands, furnished free of charge to municipalities, and supplied at cost to land owners for general forest planting. Private land owners planted nearly half the output from the State forest nurseries last year, and since the beginning of the planting program in 1902, nearly 80,000 acres of land has been planted by all agencies combined.

We have all the forest area needed in this country to produce our essential timber supply. This balance between production and consumption has long since been attained by the leading European countries in the practice of forestry—France, Germany and Scandinavia. To say that we shall eventually do less is no compliment to the energy, initiative and resources of the American people.

SPRING ARRIVALS FROM EUROPEAN TRIP

Robert P. Scripps, President Scripps-Howard Newspapers, and Mrs. Scripps retur this week on the S.S. Homeric from a European trip

CENSORSHIP SQUELCHED

Gov. "Ma" Ferguson Bars Hand System on State Pardons

Censorship of the public pardon ords of Texas was squelched last w before the end of the first day of cen ship by the return of Gov. Miriam Ferguson to her office from a week's about the state.

On Saturday, Austin state house respondents were informed at the se tary of state's office that all pardon would come from the governor's o through her secretary, Ghent Sanderf The latter declared no information w be given out until he had worked some new scheme for a weekly "handо The story of the censorship was pl by every principal newspaper on Satur night.

Immediately upon her return late urday night, Gov. Ferguson officially versed the order through Sanderford, questing him to announce to corres dents that the "books were to be open to all." At the same time San ford denied there had been any inten of closing the records to the public.

WANING EDITORIAL INFLUENCE A GOOD SIGN

Change Is Occurring It Means People Are Doing More Thinking for Themselves, Says Bruce Bliven —"Influential" Editorials Mean Sheep-Like Readers, He States

LTHOUGH no proof has been offered to show that the influence of newspaper editorials has declined in recent years, if such condition were true, it would be a good thing, according to Bruce Bliven, editor of the New Republic and former managing editor of the New York Globe.

BRUCE BLIVEN

Mr. Bliven expressed this idea in an address upon "Why Is an Editorial?" before the School of Journalism, Columbia University, April 30.

"These are the questions I am most frequently asked about editorial writing, with the answers as I see them," Mr. Bliven said.

"Why has the editorial declined in influence in recent years? In the first place, I am not at all sure that it has. The people who make that assumption never, so far as I know, attempt to prove it.

"There are a number of things which make it seem likely—the rise of the popular magazine, the divorce between newspaper ownership and the editorial function, the repeated modern instances where practically the whole press of a great city has been unable by united effort to influence the result of an election, the most universal lip service paid by the common man to the Upton Sinclair theory of a press bought up by 'the big interests.' But none of these things, nor all of them combined, offer any real proof that the proportion of newspaper readers who include the editorial page in their daily diet is any smaller than before, or that these are less influenced by what they see there than they once were.

"Yet if and insofar as it is true, and the editorial has declined in influence, it is a good thing. It means that people are doing their own thinking to a larger degree than formerly. It is a reflection of the same growing independence which causes the citizen to refuse to vote the straight party ticket in elections, which makes church members no longer fear to attend a service of some other denomination, which permits a wife to hold different views from her husband. The more 'influential' the editorial, in the old sense, the more sheep-like the readers.

"What is the true function of the editorial? We might begin by saying what the editorial should not be. It should not seek to do the reader's thinking for him: in the excellent phrase of Collier's Weekly, 'not to make up your mind, but to shake up your mind.' Give the reader the data, and let him be the judge. This is both good tactics and good strategy; he will hold a position all the more firmly if he feels he has arrived at it without any outside compulsion. This doesn't mean that you shouldn't let him see where your own sympathies lie; but you can do this without showing so much emotion that the reader's first instinctive impulse will be to take the opposite position.

"In these hustling days, people do not read newspapers carefully, and the headlines they gulp at a glance are soon forgotten. One of the most valuable things an editorial page can do, therefore, is to lift out for busy readers the important developments, day by day. One test of a good editorial page should be that if a man read nothing else in the paper he would still be fairly well informed. It should not only tell what is going on, but it should recall the important facts from the past, which most readers are likely to forget. Many editorials are so written as to be unintelligible unless one happens to have read the news articles on the same theme. That seems to me always a mistake. I agree with Glenn Frank, that editors constantly underestimate the public's intelligence, and overestimate its information.

"I once had a good illustration of the truth of that observation while I was managing editor of the New York Globe. MacSwiney, the Irish patriot, was starving himself to death in prison, and there was a cable every day about his condition, for more than a month.

"Following a standard practice of the paper, we put an indented 'shirt tail' under a three em dash with the daily cable, telling who MacSwiney was, why he was in prison, why he was fasting, and how long he had been at it. One day after we had run that matter on page 1 at least 35 times, I met a man on the street—a highly intelligent professional man, and a reader of the Globe. He asked me 'What's new?,' and when I mentioned that MacSwiney was still alive, 'By the way,' he said, 'who is this man MacSwiney, anyway?' I had a copy of the paper under my arm and was able to show him the facts which he had missed 34 times on page 1, of the Globe, and many other times in the pages of the other papers he read. Yet nearly any editorial writer would have taken it for granted that this man, or anybody like him, knew all about MacSwiney, and would have written an editorial which would have been, so far as he was concerned, meaningless.

"Among the papers I see every day, the New York World is doing a particularly fine job on its editorial page of just the sort I have been discussing. Not only does it explain the significance of the important stories running in the news columns, but it presents vitally important background material which, because it doesn't happen to be spot news, doesn't get into the news columns at all. If I may digress a moment, I should like to say that in my opinion most managing editors and copy desks are too much impressed with spot news, especially by wire. Every Washington correspondent has discovered that if he mails a story it is likely to be thrown out, but the same story put on the wire even a day or two later, will get a good play.

"Copy readers and editors follow the ins and outs of a story day by day, and therefore assume, incorrectly, that their readers do the same, and want, every day, only the new developments of the last twelve hours, plus a perfunctory phrase or two, 'who are on trial here for the murder of Bobby Franks.' On the contrary, most readers want to know, any day or every day, what it's all about.

"By the same token, there are any number of good stories, particularly in Washington, which never see the light of day at all, simply because they fail to develop a spot news angle.

"Should editorials be signed? In my salad days I used to think so; but I was wrong. Writing under a by-line has an entirely different psychology from that involved in expressing the viewpoint of a paper. For one thing, the man who writes under a by-line is likely to be made timid by that fact. He won't speak out freely, even when free speaking is wholy desirable, because of the personal responsibility for what he says.

"Moreover, a good editorial ought not to represent the viewpoint of one individual. It ought to represent his viewpoint as modified and clarified by debate and discussion with other members of the editorial staff. While the readers of a paper have no right to expect consistency to be maintained at the expense of honesty and the growth and alteration of viewpoint which all intelligent men undergo, they do have the right not to find the paper flopping from one position to another, day by day, merely because the articles on a given subject are being written by several men of several minds.

"A desirable compromise, I should think, would be to leave the individual editorials unsigned, but to print every day some such statement as: 'The editorial articles on this page are written, after conference and agreement, by the following men,' with their names.

"Any individual who didn't happen to agree with the group judgment on a particular issue should of course be permitted to 'write himself out from under' in a signed communication to be printed elsewhere in the paper.

"Do editorial writers express views with which they do not themselves agree? This sometimes happens; but I think it is much less common than critics of the Upton Sinclair school suppose. I once knew a man who wrote the leading editorials for a black Republican paper and also for the leading Democratic paper, in a large American city, though he was himself a rigid Marxian Socialist. A similar situation has been made the basis for the brilliant novel, 'A Hind Let Loose,' by C. E. Montague, of the Manchester (Eng.) Guardian. But so far as my information goes, such cases are quite rare, and becoming rarer as journalism increasingly puts on the habiliments of a full-fledged profession. In general, editorial writers by sheer process of mutual attraction drift to papers with whose general position they are in agreement. Also, of the members of any editorial board, the man selected to write on any topic will usually be a man in agreement with the group position. This is good expediency as well as good morals: no man can write well against his own convictions, and should not be asked to do so even if he is fool enough to want to.

"What I have said of course applies mainly to offices which employ more than one editorial writer. However, conditions are not greatly altered in offices where one man turns out the daily grist.

"Is the writing of editorials a desirable journalistic career? That depends altogether on the taste and abilities of the individual. It is entirely lacking in the thrill of reporting: no editorial writer ever has any exciting stories to tell of adventure in the pursuit of his occupation. Its great danger, indeed, is its cloistered character. The editorial writer is in peril of becoming a pedant, of dogmatizing freely and erroneously because he is never checked up by contact with practical men.

"On the other hand, such work does not exhaust one's physical and mental resources as reporting does. The editorial writer is almost the only newspaper man who can perform his duties as well at 60 as at 30—or better. Security of tenure is somewhat greater than in the city room, though far from complete. The financial rewards for competent men are usually somewhat higher than in news writing, and there is a little more leisure—but never enough.

"The key to success here, as in every other phase of newspaper work, lies in specialization. The rewards go (a) to those who have or can develop a personality which can be exploited interestingly in print, or (b) to those who master some one field so thoroughly that they become experts in it. And by experts I don't mean newspaper 'experts' but experts."

W. P. Hamilton, editor of the Wall Street Journal, also spoke. The meeting was under the auspices of the journalism school alumni. M. S. Rukeyser, financial editor of the New York American, presided.

"BASEBALL" SPELLS "AVERAGES" TO ELIAS

AL MUNRO ELIAS

Al Munroe Elias, the only man in the world who knows more about figures than Flo Ziegfeld. Elias compiles baseball statistics. He can tell how many hits Ty Cobb made in 1908, how often old Honus Wagner got his man at the half-way station, how many strikeouts Walter Johnson had to his credit at any given period in his career.

NEW AND AUTHENTIC HISTORY OF THE HERALD OF THE BENNETTS

By ALBERT EVANDER COLEMAN-41 Years on the New York Herald staff

COPYRIGHT 1924 BY EDITOR & PUBLISHER - ALL RIGHTS, INCLUDING FOREIGN RIGHTS, PROTECTED.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

The Herald's Achievements During the Spanish-American War—Mr. Bennett's Conflict with the Sun

THE Herald gave the earliest, fullest and most accurate reports of the progress of the Spanish-American War, though the Sun and other papers accused of "stealing" its special cables, poured a flood of abuse upon Mr. Bennett and his paper.

William S. Meriwether, an experienced nautical reporter, was in Havana for the Herald when the "Maine" was blown up on Feb. 15, 1898, and cabled thrilling word pictures of the tragedy.

Joseph L. Stickney, a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, represented the Herald during the operations against the Philippine Islands, and was on the bridge of the "Olympia" with Admiral Dewey during the battle of Manila Bay. The Herald was the first newspaper in the world to receive on May 3, 1898, direct from Manila, news of that great victory, and which was at once communicated to President McKinley, and was welcomed by him as giving him relief from all uncertainty. This, the only direct cablegram received from Manila, was, said the Herald, "'adapted' by the Sun as its own exclusive property. What a pity the Sun will not give credit where credit is due."

Admiral Dewey was so impressed with the Herald's enterprise that he cabled his appreciation of it.

Again on May 9, the Herald accused the Sun of "adapting" the Herald's dispatches, sent "at the cost of a small fortune." The Sun had surreptitiously obtained a copy of the Herald, hot off the press, and the "adaptation" was headed "Special Cable To The Sun."

The Sun retaliated in a bitter attack on Mr. Bennett, headed "A Man Without A Country," and accusing him of aiding the enemy. This editorial was generally denounced by the press of the United States, but was only the beginning of the Sun's savage warfare on the Herald and its proprietor.

In the meantime Mr. Bennett organized a numerous and able staff of newspaper men to cover the field of hostilities in the Caribbean Sea and Cuba, chartering four fast dispatch boats and an ocean steamship to convey them to the scenes of action, and to carry their messages to the cable stations at Kingston, Jamaica, and Mole St. Nicholas.

Mr. Henry S. Brown headed the corps of correspondents, having charge of their movements, and on the dispatch boat "Sommers N. Smith," scored a great beat over all the other papers by being present at the bombardment of Matanzas.

Mr. John Mitchell, who had been in charge of the Herald's night telegraph service for 17 years, was assigned to rush the messages to the Herald, and it was he who held the cable station at Kingston, Jamaica, for the Herald, for 48 hours at enormous expense, to insure the filing and sending of the great story of the destruction of Cervera's fleet.

Among the gentlemen who so ably represented the Herald, were Nicholas Biddle, Leo L. Redding, E. W. McCready, Thomas F. Millard, A. Betancourt, William S. Meriwether and Richard Harding Davis; while the Herald artists "on the spot" included Harry Dart, V. F. Campbell and W. O. Wilson.

Biddle was present at the land battle of Siboney, and tramped 20 miles through the brush to get the news to the coast, beating five mounted couriers of other papers. He was nearly dead from fatigue, but "he got there!"

Brown and McCready were on the dispatch boat "Golden Rod" at the naval battle off Santiago, while Mr. Davis, who had been cruising on the "New York," landed and joined Roosevelt's gallant Rough Riders in their advance on Santiago, plunging through the Mauser swept chaparral with the front line of the fearless heroes.

As early as July 3, the Herald complained of the theft of its costly "specials" by the Sun, while Western papers purchased the stolen news.

"Some of them," said the Herald, "taking advantage of the difference in time between New York and the West, receive war news from a man in this city, who makes his livelihood by stealing special dispatches from the Herald and other papers, early copies of which he surreptitiously obtains." In this connection a Pittsburg paper was specially complained of.*

The Sun replied vigorously to the Herald's complaints, abusing Bennett and poking fun at his representatives. The following attack on Richard Harding Davis was part of a long editorial published on July 1

"The appearance of Richard Harding Davis, the head of the marshmallow scho of fiction as a war correspondent for the Herald, has added distinctly to t world's enjoyment, but has necessarily increased among its readers misinform tion as to the situation at Santiago. Mr. Davis, who is innocent, is just the b for Bennett, who is not.

"Mr. Bennett's corps of inventors in the Venetian Palace sits up nights coini false news. The innocent Davis unconsciously contributes erroneous impressio and selections from his surprising stock of misinformation, and thereby furthe the plans and wins the smiles of his Franco-American proprietor. For as reade of Davids's magazine travels know, his peculiarity is an almost total inability to s anything as it is or where it is! * * *

"Mr. Davis is as incapable of treason as Bennett is of patriotism. Mr. Benne has no country; Mr. Davis has no correct information to give!"

Again on July 18, the Sun said:

"That distinguished and excellent gentlement, Mr. James Gordon Bennett, prin a picture in the Herald showing a terrific naval engagement in progress, with yacht in the forewater. He says it depicts, the destruction of Cervera's fleet, a that the yacht is the 'Golden Rod,' 'the only newspaper boat present during t engagement.

"It is our painful duty to reprove this worthy but erring gentleman.* * * It w a most unfortunate thing for him to say, for he had already proved that t 'Golden Rod' was elsewhere on the occasion."

The Herald refuted the truth of this accusation, by quoting t officers of the battleship "Texas," who confirmed the news that t "Golden Rod" was at hand while the destruction of Cervera's fleet w in progress, and it was the first press boat to enter Santiago harb after the gallant Hobson had tried to block the entrance.

The Herald and Sun Involved in Another Bitter Fight

The Herald in July, 1899, severed its connection with Mr. Laffan "United Press." The service was said to have been very unsatisfactor and it was simply a waste of money for the Herald to continue it. A a result the Sun made a series of malignant attacks on Mr. Bennett an the Herald.

As a sample, the Evening Sun said on Aug. 8:

"Mr. James Gordon Bennett prints this morning in his Herald every useful l about the Sun that he could lay his hands on. It is useless to call his attenti to the fact that he lies, or that he is a treacherous and vulgar sort of blackguar He is quite used to that sort of thing, and besides we object to the use of stron language.

"Otherwise Bennett might be exhorted in terms that would make the cicatr of well earned shame that he wears across his face even more livid than it was wh he got it."

Next morning the Herald came back at the Sun with a "red ho editorial, headed "Crazy Laffan," in which it said:

"The Sun at present is in the same wretched position as was any of those on flourishing railroads on which Jay Gould got his destroying grip. 'Crazy Laffa has somehow secured the direction of that once prosperous newspaper, and being Jay Gould of journalism, is galloping it to destruction."

On the following morning the Herald declared that Laffan woul destroy the Associated Press if he could, remarking:

"How about the Sun? What has become of it since he laid authoritative han on that once very valuable concern? Discredited; strike beset; crippled; strug gling to keep its feet; going to destruction about as fast as Laffan can get it ther And what will become of Laffan? Follow the wrecks he has made, and land the same place, if he continues his present course, taking with him such associat as blindly continue to follow."

Next day the Sun began an agitation to suppress "the Herald indecent personals," speaking of the paper as "a vile pander."

Mr. Bennett's indignation was roused, and on the 12th the Hera carried the following amusing retort:

"Laffan, the whole world laughs at you!"

The Sun's Printers Strike

To add to the Sun's distress, at this juncture, its union printe went on strike, claiming that Laffan had arranged to discharge them and "rat the office!" The angry printers started a vigorous boycot backed up by Typographical Union No. 6.

As the Herald rather exultingly said on the morning of the 12th

"Although the paper still appears, its typographical defects show that many o the new workmen are unskilled. Most of the composition has been done in th office of the Evening Post, a non-union paper. The boycott of the paper is activel maintained, and the newsboys held a mass meeting in Teutonia Hall last night t help 'Big Six' in its fight against Laffan's action."

(To be continued next week)

*The Pittsburgh Dispatch.

CAREY ORR DISCUSSES POLITICAL CARTOONS

t Takes Hard Work and Years of Experience To Make Good Ones, Says Chicago Tribune Man—Calls Cartoonists "Editors and Publishers of Good Will"

By RUTH RUSSELL

IX floors up in a freight elevator, through stacks of excelsior, two-by-urs, and next Sunday's newspapers, I me at last into the sanctuary of Carey rr, eminent American cartoonist, in the hicago Tribune building.

"Have a chair", he invited cordially, oking around for one. "No, wait!"

There was no extra chair. Visitors are ot usually encouraged) "Come over here nd look at my latest cross-word puzzle."

I looked over his shoulder. On the asel before him was a large piece of ardboard with black and white splotches esembling, more than anything else, an nsolved puzzle. He took up a small aint brush from among a pile of pencils nd brushes lying on a dry goods box, ipped it in ink, and began deftly filling n the puzzle. In a second, Father Dear-orn appeared on the page, carrying Mayor Devor's traction plan in his hand. 'All in favor" he cried, as Mr. Orr put he words into his mouth. He could now e seen standing in a crowded Chicago treet car. The passengers, holding onto he straps for dear life, their hands up-aised, looked as though they were silent-y voting for bigger and better car ser-ice.

"It's splendid," I remarked. "In how nany days will this appear in the ribune?"

"Tomorrow morning" he answered.

Tomorrow morning! It was already ix o'clock. Seeing my amazement, Carey Orr laughed.

"The deadline is at six-thirty every evening" he said. "I always try to make t by seven o'clock! I work on one dea and then another up to the last minute, until there's less than no time to spare."

As he worked on the cartoon he rambled on leisurely, talking about every-thing from newspaper policies to fishing in Minnesota. Mr. Orr is cosmopolitan, and interested in no end of things.

Every morning, he said, the cartoonists and editors of the paper meet in confer-ence from ten thirty until someone moves to adjourn. They talk over the import-ant topics of the day and decide what attitude the paper shall assume. During this conference, and on the way back from it through the noisy aisles of the building to his little office over the proof room, on the sixth floor, Carey Orr gets the idea for his next day's feature. The most difficult thing is to decide upon a subject; the next most difficult, to decide what to say about it. He has the day's important political questions in mind and knows the newspaper's policy. The editorial idea has to be carried over into the cartoon idea.

"There has never been invented a good system for making up ideas," Mr. Orr re-marked. "Hard work, and years of ex-perience go into the formation of an excellent political cartoon.

"The comic strip artists," he continued, "have recourse to various sources, in seek-ing ideas. They go to life itself, to the situations which seem so serious to us, oftentimes and which are really very funny, seen in perspective; they go to pet beliefs and hobbies, and customs of people, and conceive their humorous situation from these. These failing, however, at times they even dig into joke books for inspiration! The task of the political car-toonist is more difficult."

Carey Orr at work

Sitting down before his easel, after the morning conference, Mr. Orr commences working out his idea. Sometimes he makes eight or ten preliminary sketches before one suits him. The finished car-toon must appear to be hurriedly drawn; it takes making and remaking, however, to achieve a sense of action, in the picture, which will keep it from looking dead.

All this sketching is done in pencil. When the pencil sketch is satisfactory, Mr. Orr takes a big art gum eraser and erases the whole picture. Seeing him do this for the first time makes you want to grab the eraser away and throw it out the window. But the eye of the cartoonist can see, after the pencilling is gone, faint marks in the cardboard that guide him when he "inks in" the picture with a brush. The cardboard drawing is two and a half times larger than the newspaper reproduction. It has to be "drawn in the rough" so the lines won't appear too small when printed. For inking, Mr. Orr uses a fine pointed camel's hair brush, rather than a pen.

"Have you a hobby?" he asked me, sud-denly, out of the clear sky.

"Well," I reflected, "I don't know. Have you?"

"Yes" he answered emphatically. "I have one of the finest hobbies in the world....mechanics".

I thought it strange that a cartoonist and artist should be interested in me-chanics.

"My father owned a saw-mill in Wash-ington, out on the coast," he explained, "so I come by mechanics naturally, I have a complete set of tools at home for fash-ioning things. This morning on the train coming in from Wilmette I designed this."

He held out a pictured design for a fire-place shield.

"I'm going to make this screen for my drawing room," he said. "A hobby like this is the only thing to keep your mind active. It keeps the interest keen all the time, and the mind in shape. It's as neces-sary to keep mentally fit as physically. Thinking about your work is not enough. It dulls your brain. You have to have a separate, outside interest besides."

"McCutcheon," he said, "makes travel-ling his hobby. He's travelling around the world now. That's how I happen to have his place on the Tribune as well as my own. McCutcheon has been with the Tribune 23 years, and is my senior part-ner. I have been here eight years."

Carey Orr does not look old enough to be chief political cartoonist for the Tribune. In his blue suit with his shirt sleeves folded back, his light hair falling over his eyes as he worked, he might have been 25, instead of 35, which he says he really is.

"My greatest accomplishment" he con-fided, "was winning the Gold Medal from the United States government, for the best cartoon submitted during the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. It was called the 'Chief Joins his Legions', and was in commemoration of President Wilson. When he died, and went back to the boys, the Tribune distributed 1,000 copies of this, at first, and were asked to print 10,000 more."

Carey Orr commenced drawing before he learned to write and has been at it ever since. It came naturally to him to draw, and he made a hobby of it, while attending school out in Washington. During the summer he was 19, he played professional baseball and earned enough money to go to college. After being graduated from the University of Washington he attended the Academy of Fine Arts in Chicago for one year and then received an opportunity as sketch artist with the Chicago Exam-iner. From here he went to work on the Nashville Tennessean and remained there four years, then came to Chicago where he has been ever since.

His "Kernel Kootie" strip ran a half year but Carey Orr didn't like to draw strip comics. He conceived the idea for the "Tiny Tribune," World's Smallest Newspaper" which ran six years, but was dropped eventually because of the diffi-culty of syndicating the name. Since be-coming political cartoonist for the Tribune, Mr. Orr has received many of-fers to lecture on art and cartooning but he prefers to let nothing interfere with the work he enjoys so much.

"There's great danger of getting too many irons in the fire," he said.

"Uncle Sam" is Carey Orr's best known and favorite character.

"I put a little bit of Abraham Lincoln into his eyes and nose," he explained. "Lincoln's face is perfectly adapted to the Uncle Sam features. The artist must un-derstand the ungainly character of Lin-coln, his loose-jointedness, combined with the idea of primeval strength. Great strength is shown in the face....Lin-coln's type is anything but a dude."

"The success of the cartoon", said Mr. Orr, "depends as much upon the reader as upon the artist. If the reader likes it, and appreciates the humor, the carton ac-complishes its purposes.

"There is really nothing finer than a good cartoon that makes people smile. It lightens up the day's work. If the American citizen begins the morning smiling, the American cartoonist has done a big thing. He is both editor and publisher of good will. He seizes hold of the busy man's attention the first thing in the morning, while he eats his breakfast, or on the train, as he com-mutes into town, and shows him the funny side of problems that seem ter-ribly in earnest, out of perspective. I should rather be the editor of the day's front page cartoon, than of any other de-partment in the city newspaper."

HALIFAX HERALD ANNIVERSARY

Nova Scotia Daily Celebrates 50th Birthday with Special Edition

Fifty years ago last January the Hali-fax Herald commenced publication as a morning daily newspaper and on April 15, the passing of the half century was marked by the publication of a 24-page anniversary number containing reviews of the progress Nova Scotia has made in that time and describing the place the Herald has occupied in the development of the province. Several members of the staff who helped bring out the first num-ber of the paper were in the office with 50 years of continuous service to their credit. The most interesting figure among the old employees was John Trider, who turned out the first copy of the paper on a slow-working hand-fed Adams press. On April 15 he turned out the fiftieth anni-versary edition.

A tablet commemorative of the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Hali-fax Herald was presented to W. H. Den-nis, managing director, on behalf of the staffs of the Herald and the Evening Mail, in the editorial rooms of the Her-ald. At the same time, baskets of flow-ers were presented to Mrs. Dennis, wid-ow of the late Senator William Dennis, and to Mrs. W. H. Dennis. The presen-tations were made by Hiram Wier, ed-itor of the Mail, who has been with the papers almost from the time the Herald was established.

GRAPHIC ADDS SUNDAY ISSUE

Macfadden's N. Y. Tabloid Becomes 7-Day Paper May 3

New York will have a new Sunday morning newspaper when the New York Evening Graphic, Bernarr Macfadden's tabloid, enters the field May 3. The Graphic has been printing as a 6-day paper with special Saturday rotogravure and magazine sections.

The Sunday Graphic, according to an-nouncements, will consist of an 8-page colored comic section; 8-page rotograv-ure; 20-page magazine; and 20-page news.

Woodman Morrison, editor of the Saturday Graphic, will be in charge. Size of the Saturday Graphic will be de-creased certain features being switched to Sunday. Four pages of the 8-page comic section are strips created by the Graphic's own staff.

The tabloid recently added a "Pink Final" to its daily editions except Satur-day, giving complete sport news. This edition, previously held up by the bulk of the Saturday issue, will now be run on that day also.

WISCONSIN SOLONS, DISLIKING A STORY, BAR REPORTER FROM PRESS GALLERY

Correspondent of Long Experience, Who Wrote Story on Another Reporter's Facts, Victim of Resentment of Assembly, He Says

LEGISLATURE LIFTS BAN ON REPORTER ALLEN

COMPREHENDING apparently the dangerous precedent they had set, and impressed by editorials in newspapers throughout Wisconsin, all of which had been stirred by the action, the members of Assembly of the Wisconsin Legislature reversed Tuesday by a vote of 73 to 3 the previous resolution barring Robert S. Allen, reporter for the Wisconsin State Journal, from further access into the assembly. The vote to bar him last Friday was 38 to 32.

MADISON, WIS., April 25.—Unprecedented in the history of the Wisconsin legislature, the assembly yesterday passed a resolution by a vote of 38 to 32 to bar for the remainder of the session Robert S. Allen, reporter for the Wisconsin State Journal.

ROBERT S. ALLEN

Mr. Allen, who for years has covered the legislature for this newspaper, was charged with deliberately falsifying an account of a floor discussion during the previous day's session. The assembly ruled further in the resolution that the "Wisconsin State Journal be requested to print a correction of the account of the debate to correspond with the facts."

The part of Mr. Allen's legislative story that caused the action is this:

"During the debate on the measure today Assemblyman Eber, Milwaukee, who, while claiming to be an administration supporter, opposed the governor during the tax bill fight, came in for caustic comment from Assemblyman Frank Prescott, Milwaukee, conservative leader. Eber was urging 'all us progressives sticking together and defeating this measure.' He was interrupted by Prescott, who asked him if he attended the progressive caucus the night before.

"'Yes,' Assemblyman Eber replied.

"'Then what were you doing at our caucus,' Prescott demanded, at which the house roared. . . . ."

The resolution denied that Prescott had put this question or that Eber had replied and declared that Allen in his account "sought to discredit a member of the house."

Mr. Allen, called to explain his story on the floor of the assembly, declared that he was not present in the legislature at the time, but that he had obtained his facts from another reporter. Confusion exists now in the house, some assemblymen maintaining that the alleged false statements were actually made by Assemblyman Prescott.

The same evening, the editor in a front page editorial backed up his reporter to the limit, declaring that the action of the assembly was an "astounding effort to muzzle newspaper men in a state known as the most progressive in the union." A black two-line top streamer heralded the fact that "ASSEMBLY VOTES TO GAG PRESS: BARS REPORTER."

The editorial of A. M. Brayton, publisher of the Journal, declared in closing:

"Therefore the Wisconsin State Journal serves notice on all assemblymen who participated in the exclusion of Mr. Allen, that it will protect the representatives of this newspaper, and its pages, in the full exercise of the constitutional rights to discuss members of the assembly and other servants of the state, and their official actions, and in every way to exercise the rights of individuals and of publications whether in the form of news, opinion, or interpretation."

Mr. Allen's statement follows:

"I have explained to Mr. Eber my source of information. I am sorry if the story appeared as it did if he says the incident did not take place as it was related to me. I told him so and I repeated it to the house.

"Mr. Eber is absolutely incorrect when he says in the resolution he offered in the house today barring me from the floor of the assembly that I was present during the debate on the bill and that having been there I deliberately falsified my account.

"But as I pointed out to Mr. Eber I can't help but feel from what was demanded of me by several members when I appeared before the house that the resolution was the result of an attempt to discipline me and threaten my colleagues for stories I and they have written about events in the lower house and the activities of various members.

"It is the rule of the legislature that every bill and resolution have a hearing and that those concerned have an opportunity to be present and be heard. This action was taken this morning without my having the slightest intimation of what was taking place. It was taken by a house in which more than a quarter of the members were present. Members who later admitted that they had personal grievances against accounts of mine of their actions hurtled the measure through.

"Ever since the tax fight in the assembly the press has from a certain group been critized and "growled" against. This resolution just as Assemblyman J. C. Thompson said to me today on the floor of the house was the culmination of disapproval of "my actions," meaning my accounts of what has been taking place.

"Mr. Eber is entitled to fair play. I have always given him and every other legislator and official this. If the information I carried in Thursday's story was garbled it was done so unintentionally. The associate who gave me the story is a friend and a man I have only the highest respect for, professionally and personally. He is a man of great and varied experience. He is a man of ability. Mr. Eber says the story was incorrect. As I told him if that is the case I regretted it deeply.

"That I was not given fair play is a matter that cannot be overlooked. The story is a mooted question. After talking to Mr. Eber and expressing regret I am unable to say just what took place. Some say this, others that. The gentleman involved in the debate is uncertain himself as to what he said.

"The resolution as jammed through is more than a personal matter between Assemblyman Eber and Reporter Allen. It is an attempt to discipline the press, without giving the defendant a chance to protect himself."

SONGS OF THE CRAFT

(Written Exclusively for EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

By Henry Edward Warner

THE WISH

I wish I were an Editor! . . .
I have no love for work!
The life that suits my fancy most
Is of the lordly Turk.
The Turk, they say, who know him.
Does nothing all the day
But frolic like an Editor
And frivol Time away.

I wish I were an Editor!
I hate to think of toil!
I'd rather fish and catch a tan
Where suns of summer broil!
The fisherman is lazy,
Sport is his hardest chore;
He loafs and thinks and thinks and loafs
Just like an Ed-i-tor!

I wish I were an Editor!
It's such a cinch to write—
To sit an easy chair all day
And dreamless, sleep all night!
To quaff the wines of idleness
And smoke the pipe of peace,
To buddy with the turbaned Shah
And with the King of Greece!

And so, I wish sincerely,
I were an Ed-i-tor!
No other joy on Earth is half
As worth the wishing for!
And so I hope I get my wish—
If with your help I do,
I promise I will help to wish
Some sinecure for You!

Daily Celebrates 35th Birthday

The Fullerton (Cal.) Daily Tribune entered upon its 35th year April 8.

TO RADIO JOURNALISM WEEK ADDRESSES

Nightly Programs to Be Broadcast During U. of Missouri Gathering of Editors — Prominent Speakers on Program

Station WOS at Jefferson City, Mo. will broadcast this evening programs of the Sixteenth Annual Journalism Week at the University of Missouri, beginning Tuesday night, May 5, and lasting through the "Book Banquet" on Friday night of the week. The programs will begin at 8 o'clock each evening, and will consist of speeches by prominent visitors and music furnished by the School of Fine Arts.

Station WOS is enabled to broadcast the entire week's programs through the courtesy of Station KLDS at Independence, the usual custom being for the two stations to alternate every three days during the week. Remote control will be used, and a telephone wire will carry the programs to Jefferson City to be broadcast.

This year's banquet will be a "Book Banquet" and everything will be carried out in the "book" spirit; the addresses, the printed menus, the food, the decorations and the favors.

The salient features of the week's program will be:

MONDAY: "What Women Readers Want," Miss Ida Mighlario, editor of The Household, Topeka, Kan.

"Novels and Novelists," Jay W. Hudson, author and philosopher, University of Missouri.

"The Free Lance Writer and His Opportunities," E. B. Barnett, editor, Kansas City Star Magazine.

Baseball: Washington University vs. Missouri University.

Annual Subscription Banquet, Missouri Writers' Guild.

TUESDAY: "The Cartoon and the Newspaper," Roy H. James, cartoonist, St. Louis Star.

"Advertising a City," Gus V. Kenton, director of St. Louis News Service.

Baseball: Washington University vs. Missouri University.

Kappa Tau Alpha (honorary journalistic fraternity) banquet for members and invited guests.

Evening: "Journalism as Public Service," Marcellus E. Foster, president and general manager, Houston Chronicle.

"The World Day by Day," O. O. McIntyre.

Reception at Delta Upsilon House.

WEDNESDAY: Theta Sigma Phi breakfast.

Evening: "Modern Tendencies in Journalism," Elbert H. Baker, president the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"The News of the World," George Gershon Shor, editor and manager, International News Service.

Reception at Pi Kappa Alpha house.

THURSDAY: "The Freedom of the Press," Harry B. Hawes, representative in Congress from 11th Missouri district.

Commercial Club luncheon for out-of-town guests.

Journalism Class of 1915 reunion luncheon.

"Advertising from Standpoint of the Country Merchant," John J. DeWild, manager merchants' service department, Ely-Walker Dry Goods Company, St. Louis.

"Getting National Advertising for the Country Newspaper," James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary, A. A. A. A.

"Does a Fighting Editorial Policy Pay?" Walter M. Harrison, managing editor the Oklahoma City Daily Oklahoman.

Evening: "Reporting for the United States in Foreign Lands," J. H. Furay, vice-president in charge of foreign service, United Press Associations.

FRIDAY: "Watching for Fake Advertising," R. C. Ferguson, editor, Buffalo Reflex.

Baseball: Ames University vs. Missouri University.

Evening: "Book Banquet."

Round table discussions and music will form a part of each day's program.

$50,000

Feature Edition

Now Going to Press

THURSDAY, May 7th, The Memphis (Tenn.) Commercial Appeal will issue a Prosperity Feature Edition carrying more than $50,000.00 in advertising, of which in excess of $38,000.00 was secured OUTSIDE of Memphis.

More than $30,000.00 was collected in ADVANCE.

Briggs' Super-Selling Organization Did It

This edition was handled entirely by our FEATURE EDITION UNITY, composed of the highest type salesmen, trained to sell in a manner that reflects credit to the newspaper and ourselves and assures satisfaction to the advertisers.

This is the seventh large edition we have handled for the Commercial Appeal during the past twelve years.

We Are Now Ready to Produce Another Feature Edition

With this unit of our organization now available, we would like to hear from metropolitan newspapers interested in issuing an edition of this kind. Only those having a real reason for one will be considered.

Our twenty years experience in this work with the larger newspapers throughout the United States and Canada qualifies us to handle large editions in a successful and satisfactory manner to all concerned.

Correspondence Invited Immediately

Write us direct for a copy of the Commercial Appeal Feature Edition

Thomas W. Briggs Co.

Home Office: Columbian Mutual Tower, Memphis, Tennessee

Ask Dun or Bradstreet about our RELIABILITY Ask any Newspaper about our SERVICE

ANCIENT LONDON POST CHANGES FORMAT

New Management Increases Pages, While Reducing Their Size, Modernizes Type and Ads Supplement

The London Morning Post is about to undergo a physical transformation. This statement may not cause the raising of an eyebrow among those who are not familiar with the paper but to those who know it well it will be startling news. The Morning Post is the oldest London newspaper and is the mainstay of Conservatism in the British Isles. It has also the reputation of being the most conservative in its character and methods. Its page is the largest in London and in other respects it has brought into the 20th century some of the ways of the Middle 19th. It was founded 153 years ago and has always been best known for the excellence of its literary contributions and for its record of the movements of the aristocratic and fashionable world.

H. A. Gwynne

In the course of its career it has had on its staff some of the greatest literary men of the day. In recent times it was for many years the property of Lord Glenesk and at his death it passed to his daughter, Countess Bathurst. Last year, however, under the stress of war taxation, Countess Bathurst parted with its control.

Now, under an active board at the head of which is the Duke of Northumberland, changes are being made which will bring the paper into line with the most modern ideas of journalism and even advance it a little further. Every feature of its news and editorial sections has been braced up to date and many additions have been planned; the mechanical departments have been re-equipped with the latest machinery; and with the issue of April 27 appears, its pages increased in number, but minus their old unwieldiness by reduction to limits which have long been recognized in America as best for busy readers.

The Morning Post has always prided itself on the pure whiteness of its paper and the clean black of its printing. A week or two ago a friendly critic said in the presence of the general manager that he believed that this combination was injurious to the sight. Prompt reference of the point to an eminent oculist determined the matter.

The oculist's report stated that a good black on a good white was helpful to the sight and better than the best of black on a tinted surface.

He added, however, that there was room for improvement in the character of the type used. This question was referred to an expert in typography. The advice which he gave meant the scrapping of nearly all the fonts of type in the equipment, but it was carried out. Another innovation was a pictorial and literary supplement.

While the changes which the paper has made are therefore, almost revolutionary; there are two that will not be made. The Morning Post will maintain the same political policy as in the past and, under the continued direction of H. A. Gwynne as editor-in-chief, it will be produced by the same staff.

Fire Wrecks Perry Paper

Fire on April 17, destroyed the building housing the offices and mechanical departments of the Perry (N. Y.) Herald... Much of the machinery was damaged beyond repair while the records and office equipment were destroyed. The loss will exceed $25,000, it is estimated.

HEARSTS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Give Dinner Celebrating 22nd Year of Their Marriage

Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst gave a dinner Tuesday night in the small ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in celebration of the 22nd anniversary of their marriage. The room was decorated with spring flowers and palms, while cherry and apple blossoms were placed on each of the small tables arranged for the party. Afterward, additional guests came in for dancing.

At the dinner were Mayor and Mrs. Hylan, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary, Judge and Mrs. William Young, Mr. and Mrs. William Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brisbane, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Blake, Mr. and Mrs. George Hearst—son and daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Hearst—Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. E. Clarence Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Irwin.

Mr. and Mrs. Hearst plan to spend the early summer on their ranch at San Simeon, Cal.

HOW JURY JUDGED WORK OF REPORTERS

(Continued from page 4)

peremptorily to view it, and went ahead with his plans to pay the $10,000 ransom demanded. Member after member of the family connection followed the father's example, but Mulroy and Goldstein persisted until an uncle yielded, viewed the body and established the identification. It was they, therefore, who first established it that murder had been done.

Still "spelling" each other to irregular meals and snatched hours of sleep. Mulroy and Goldstein systematically interviewed neighbors of the Franks family in search of clews to the identify of the murderer. Fantastically, Loeb himself helped in part of their search, and let drop for the first time the remark that if he "had ever thought of killing anybody it would be just such a cocky little . . . . as Bobby Franks." Eventually this came, in the words of the State's Attorney, to be "very material in that it showed malice on the part of the murderer and showed that it was a cool and collected plot lasting over some period.

When it had been established that the ransom letters had been written on an Underwood portable typewriter and Leopold had denied ever having had such a machine, Mulroy and Goldstein took up this new trail. They found that Leopold had written some school papers on such a typewriter. They interviewed every fellow student they could find; they delved in lockers and desks, and finally found some of these papers. The typewriting on them tallied exactly with that of the ransom letters.

"This evidence," says Mr. Crowe, "was very material in helping to break down the alibi of Leopold, he being confronted with the evidence produced solely by Goldstein and Mulroy. He became bewildered and was unable to explain what had become of the typewriter. This was one of the first material pieces of evidence that was built up against the alibi of the boys and it, along with other facts and circumstances, was responsible for the boys confessing their guilt."

The terms of the reporter's prize require that the test shall be "strict accuracy, terseness, the accomplishment of some public good commanding public attention and respect."

Strict accuracy was the very heart of the service rendered by Mulroy and Goldstein.

Terseness cannot be submitted as an element, since Mulroy and Goldstein did no writing, but writing is only one of the functions of a reporter; it is, indeed, a secondary function.

The "accomplishment of some public good, commanding public attention and respect" in this matter seems to your jury to be self-evident. It is no stretch of the imagination to see the Franks murder unsolved and its perpetrators unpunished save for the enthusiasm and resourcefulness of Mulroy and Goldstein. Contemporary records are filled with instances where the authorities have been helpless under circumstances less forbidding.

We have said that writing is only one of the functions of a reporter. Before he may write he must gather his facts, he must determine their accuracy and values, he must pass judgment on them. He may write well or poorly, but his rating will be fixed finally by his mastery of facts and their gathering. It was in this field of fact-gathering that Mulroy and Goldstein performed their exploit.

News-gathering and news-distributing agencies are playing an unprecedented part in the production of newspapers. A perhaps inevitable result is that opportunity and incentive to individual achievement in the traditional field of reporting have been decreased. A perhaps inevitable result of this, in turn, has been a narrowing of the newspaper's activity in its truest realm of public service. Under such conditions the exploit of Mulroy and Goldstein stands forth as peculiarly meritorious and peculiarly in the spirit of the terms of the reporter's prize.

BRITISH AD MEET PLANNED

District 14 to Hold First Convention July 4-11—Secretary Named

The first purely British advertising convention will be held July 4-11 at Harrogate, England, it was decided at a recent meeting of the executive council of District 14, English branch of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. C. Harold Vernon is district chairman.

Formation of the national organizing committee for the convention is in the hands of Mr. Vernon, J. C. Akerman, Eric Field, and Andrew Milne. It is planned to hold some of the sessions at Bradford and Leeds in addition to Harrogate.

Mr. Vernon reports the growing work of the district has necessitated appointment of a general secretary and Walter Stonhold was unanimously appointed to this position, replacing Andrew Milne, now honorary secretary.

Every once in a while we meet "a man of the world" who inclines us to believe that the world is flat.—Cleveland Times.

PUBLISHERS are saving thousands of dollars annually by eliminating costly duplication, assuring an even flow of copy over their copy desks and into the composing rooms and reducing their tolls and the cost of specials by utilizing the 100% non-duplicating leased wire dispatches of

The Consolidated Press Assn.

Executive Offices, Evening Star Building, Washington, D. C.

The A.B.C. Trading Radius of Cincinnati

The Audit Bureau of Circulations fixes the trading radius of the Cincinnati newspapers at thirty-seven miles. This includes eight large towns in Ohio and Indiana in addition to Cincinnati proper, with the contiguous suburbs on both sides of the Ohio River.

Within this territory the Times-Star has a total daily net paid circulation of 136,840, A. B. C.

The leading morning newspaper of Cincinnati is not a member of the Audit Bureau of Circulations, but the publishers claim a daily circulation of 54,655 copies within a radius of fifty miles of Cincinnati.

But in last analysis, the shopping that is most responsive to local advertising in the Cincinnati newspapers is the local shopping,—the daily buying of the families that live within the city and suburbs.

Within this area the Cincinnati Times-Star has a daily A. B. C. circulation which is 50 per cent more than the combined circulations of both Cincinnati morning newspapers.

There are approximately 141,000 families in the city and suburbs of Cincinnati. Of these, 10,575 families are colored. This leaves a net white population of 130,425 families,—an average of a little more than nine copies of the Times-Star daily for every ten white families within the city circulation area.

With such coverage it is superfluous to argue the question of the quality of the Times-Star circulation. The space buyer need not bother himself to discover in what residential sections, on what streets or in what economic level the readers of the Times-Star are to be found because they are in every section, on every street, in every social stratum and in every house from which advertisers can hope to secure customers.

And for seventeen consecutive years the Times-Star has dominated the Cincinnati field in display advertising as completely as in circulation.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

"Once Upon a Time"

A Fairy Tale Strip

By WALTER J. ENRIGHT

THE FAMOUS ILLUSTRATOR

Another New One Already Over the Top

SIX-COLUMN DAILY FOR CHILDREN AND GROWNUPS

These sections give only a slight idea of the imaginative and whimsical quality of Enright's work

LET US SEND YOU SAMPLES

Philadelphia Bulletin
Cleveland Plain Dealer
St. Louis Times
Buffalo Times
Providence Bulletin
Spokane Chronicle
Oakland Tribune
Schenectady Union Star
Newburgh News
Sioux City Tribune
Everett Herald
Youngstown Vindicator
Knoxville Journal
Syracuse Herald
Sacramento Bee
Fresno Bee
St. Louis Times
Pittsburgh Gazette Times

have already ordered

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

A. N. P. A. BANS RADIO FREE PUBLICITY, RAISES AGENCY REQUIREMENTS

Urge Elimination of Trademarked Names in Programs and of Advertising Talks from Newspaper Stations—Fall Meeting About Oct. 20

TWO resolutions of importance were adopted at the final two-hour session of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Friday morning. Both carried out committee recommendations which were noted in EDITOR AND PUBLISHER last week. The first, offered by Walter A. Strong, Chicago Daily News, chairman of the radio committee, read as follows:

"Whereas, it has been called to the attention of your Radio Committee that free publicity in the newspapers has been offered to advertisers as an inducement to sign a contract for broadcasting paid direct advertising; and

"Whereas, direct advertising by radio is likely to destroy the entertainment and educational value of broadcasting and result in the loss of the good-will of the public; therefore, be it.

"RESOLVED, That members of the A. N. P. A. refuse to publish free publicity in their news columns concerning programs consisting of direct advertising; also, that they eliminate from program announcements the name of trade-marked merchandise or known products obviously used for advertising, and that newspaper broadcasters eliminate all talks which are broadcast for direct advertising purposes.

The meeting adopted a resolution that the minimum requirement for recognition of advertising agencies should be a net surplus of not less than $10,000 for all applicants located in cities having a population in excess of 500,000. This doubles the present requirement. Its purpose was to improve credit rating conditions.

Another resolution ratified and approved all official acts of the board of directors since the 1924 meeting. All officers were re-elected as noted in EDITOR AND PUBLISHER last week.

The first of the Fall conventions will be held about Oct. 20 in some city of the Central South."

BAGGAGE RATE RAISE POSTPONED BY I. C. C.

Petition of 40 Eastern Papers Against 60% Higher Schedules Defers Action Until Aug. 29, 1925

Eastern newspapers won an important decision April 29, when the Interstate Commerce Commission temporarily restrained railroads in trunk line and central territories from increasing the rates for transporting newspapers in baggage cars. The new schedule is deferred, pending further hearings, until August 29.

The petition for the investigation and suspension order was filed by forty newspapers and has been vigorously prosecuted by a committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

The new tariffs, which were to have gone into effect May 1, are: In trunk line territory from 30 cents to 50 cents a 100 pounds, and between trunk line and central territories, from 60 cents to $1 a 100 pounds.

The railroads involved are the Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Reading, Western Maryland, Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic and Baltimore & Eastern.

The commission set the contest for hearing before Examiner Hillyer on May 18.

In submitting the protest on which the order was issued, Charles M. Galloway, counsel for the newspapers, asserted that the expense to the railroads in transporting newspapers was less than that of any other commodity. The great bulk of the newspaper hauls is less than 100 miles, he said, and when all factors are taken into consideration "protestants will be subjected to the payment of charges for transportation which will be unjust and unreasonable and in violation of Section 1 of the Interstate Commerce Act."

Attention of the commission was called to the fact that "there is nothing in the life of the nation comparable to the daily newspaper in so far as the public welfare is concerned. It may be said to be the very heartbeat of the people. It is not too much to say that the very existence of the republic depends upon a free and virile press," and "the newspaper, therefore, occupies a unique field which entitles it to special and unusual consideration by the carriers."

In Philadelphia alone, it was pointed out, the proposed increase would tax the newspapers an additional $300,000 a year, while one paper in that city would have to carry an additional expense burden of $70,000 a year.

The railroads claim, on the other hand, that all rates except those on newspapers were increased on August 26, 1920, when the general scale of rate increases went into effect, and that the newspapers should pay a share proportionate to other commodities.

RADIO ADVERTISING TEST

Agencies Will See if Prejudice Impairs Its Efficiency

Whether it really pays to advertise—by radio—will be the subject of a study to be made by the American Association of Advertising Agencies, according to an announcement this week by Thomas F. Logan, Chairman of the association's Radio Committee.

Through a gentlemen's agreement, Mr. Logan pointed out, seven men have been able thus far to block indiscriminate advertising which might have damaged seriously the popularity of the radio. These men are Secretary of Commerce Hoover; David Sarnoff, Vice President and General Manager of the Radio Corporation of America; Walter Gifford, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company; Owen D. Young and Gerard Swope, Chairman of the Board and President of the General Electric Company, and Guy Tripp and H. P. Davis, Chairman of the Board and Vice President of the Westinghouse Electric Company.

Mr. Logan said the association would endeavor to learn whether public prejudice against radio advertising would impair its efficiency. The public itself must make the final decision, he declared.

Another
HOLLISTER
Achievement!

Following the example of many other of the largest and most successful newspapers in the United States, careful consideration has led The Cincinnati Enquirer to engage the services of the Hollister Circulation Organization to conduct its campaign.

Address the above paper un i further notice

HOLLISTER
CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
717-718 COM'L EXCHANGE BLDG.
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Foster Leaves St. Louis Times

W. L. (Larry) Foster has resigned from the St. Louis Times, effective at once. He has been acting general manager since the resignation of Frank W. Rostock as general manager.

JACOB L. ADLER RETIRES

San Francisco Call Business Manager to Spend Time in Travel

Jacob L. Adler, business manager of the San Francisco Call, has resigned, effective May 1.

It is his intention to spend the balance of his life traveling, fishing, playing golf, and otherwise enjoying a well-earned rest from business.

Mr. Adler says that, after 35 years of hard work in the newspaper business, he has accumulated enough money to keep him and his family, and, at the same time, has developed "a large yearn to quit worrying about business."

It was 35 years ago that Mr. Adler, then a youngster, started his career in journalism as assistant to Franklin K. Lane, then publisher of the Tacoma News. The "assistance" consisted in running errands, calling on people for classified advertisements, handling newspapers out to newsboys, sweeping out and other duties of like character.

Having gone to Tacoma from Baltimore, his birthplace, he later returned to Baltimore, where, for many years, he was advertising manager of the Baltimore Herald.

He returned to the Pacific Coast, where he was made business manager of the San Francisco Bulletin, leaving there six years ago to go to the Call, when Fremont Older was made editor of that paper.

It is Mr. Adler's intention to start out of San Francisco in May and motor leisurely to New York.

From there he intends to sail, the first port of call being Naples.

Mr. Adler's successor has not been announced.

LOWER FREIGHT RATE WON BY PUBLISHERS

Washington Gets 6 Cent Reduction on Newsprint from Northern Mills—Is Retroactive to September 1, 1921

Publishers of Washington (D. C.) daily newspapers won most of their claims in a decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission ordering a reduction in the freight rate on shipments of newsprint paper from mill points to that city and awarding reparation in the amount of the overcharge made by several railroads since Sept. 1, 1921.

The decision effects an average reduction of 6 cents per cwt., or $1.20 a ton from Canadian and New England points. The average rates from these points to Washington, which have been about 40 cents per hundred, will become 40 or 46 cents under the decision.

The decision ended a case which has been before the Interstate Commerce Commission since September, 1923.

While the commission found the freight rates on newsprint from New England, New York and Canada and from Philadelphia to Washington unreasonable and prejudicial, it decided against a similar complaint brought by the Baltimore American, also alleging overcharge, and ordered the complaint dismissed.

The report of the commission came as a result of the joint complaint of the Washington Publishers' Association, made up of publishers of the five daily newspapers in Washington, but also included similar findings in the case of the Evening Star, which had filed a separate complaint.

Reductions in the rates were ordered by the commission and reparation awarded to all the Washington complainants. The commission has before it at the present time complaints against the rates on steel cores and on newsprint ink to Washington and return.

"Not the Cheapest but by far the Best"
—that's Certified!

The stereotype mat is but a very small item in the cost of production of any newspaper. A daily printing an average of 20 pages spends about $3 a day for Certified Dry Mats.

But while the cost of stereotype dry mats is very small the part played by them is not by any means negligible. There are cheaper mats than Certifieds but their cheapness is reflected in the printing plates cast from them and in the pages printed from these plates.

Where is the publisher who is not constantly striving to improve the appearance of his paper; where is the publisher who will permit a few pennies to stand between him and the best possible printing results?

Publishers and stereotypers tell us that with Certifieds they are able to get wet mat printing results regularly—not once in a while—but day after day. They are enthused about the ease of handling Certifieds, the uniformity of shrinkage, and above all the CLEARLY and CLEANLY printed pages.

Just try some Certifieds—they are yours free of any charge or obligation; compare the printed pages, and we'll leave it to you if the few extra pennies paid for Certifieds are not more than well spent and a true economy.

Certifieds are made with one thought uppermost in mind and that is not how cheap but how good can we make them and still sell at an honest price which leaves only a legitimate profit.

That publishers and stereotypers appreciate such a policy is best shown by the support they are giving us.

CERTIFIED DRY MAT CORPORATION
342 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.
"For wet mat printing with DRY MAT facility—use Certifieds"
Made in the U. S. A.

PROVED BY SERVICE

Models 25 and 26

ENDORSED

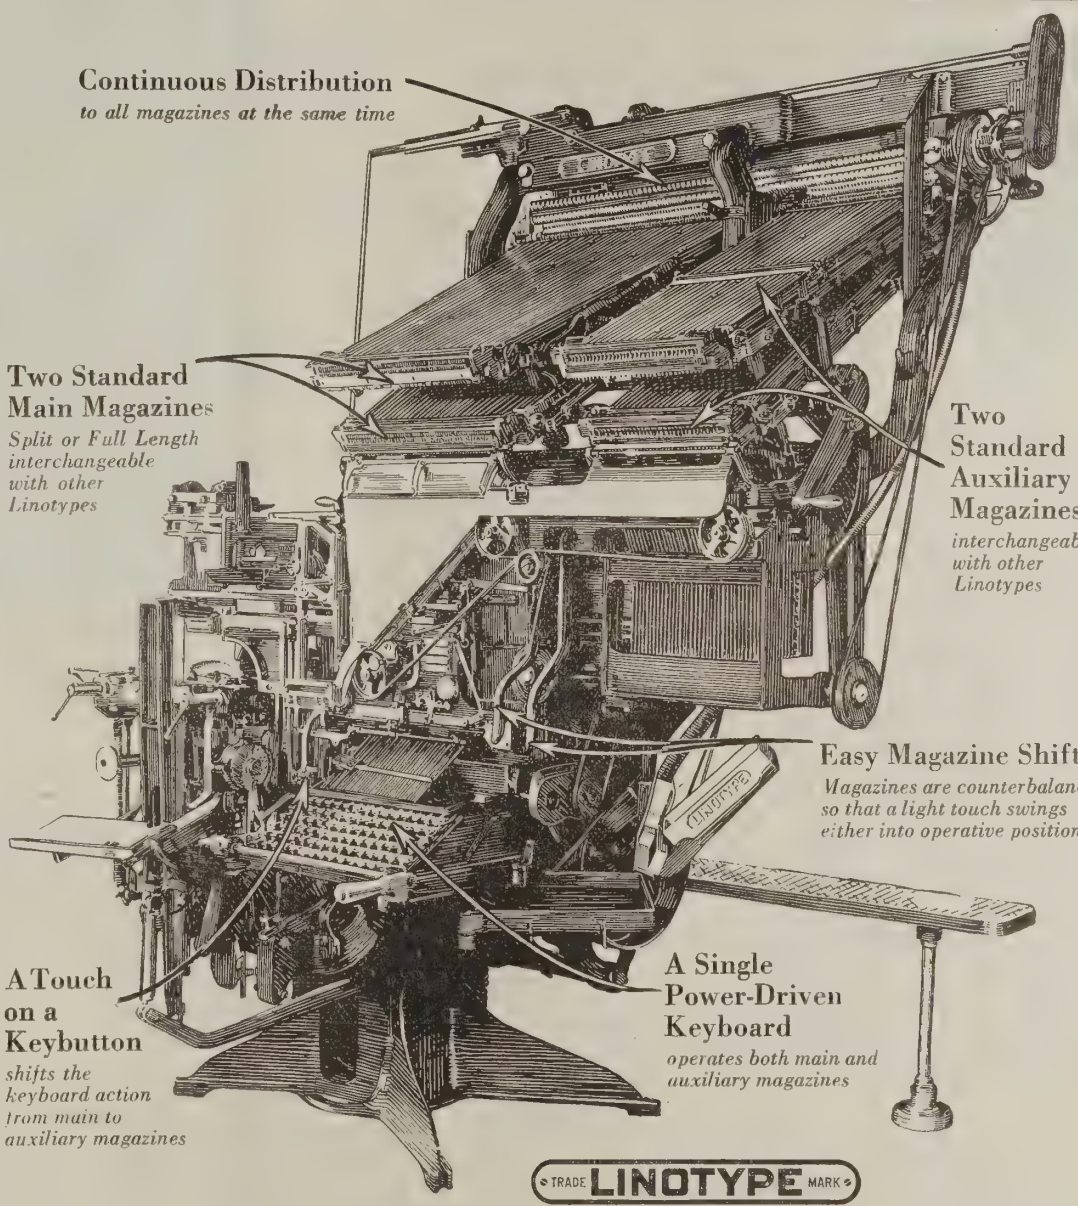
by the operator, machinist and owner. Here are a few quotations from letters in our files commenting on the Models 25 and 26:

"For thirty-two years I have been handling various models of Linotype machines, and have no hesitancy in stating that these machines are by far the most satisfactory and generally useful machines I have ever had the pleasure to use."

"I know of no better testimonial to the satisfaction they have given than the additional order for twenty-one of them now in process of installation."

"Mixed distribution feature great advantage."

"Have been operating Model 25 and refuse to change back to another mill."



"Have found nothing that will equal Model 26 Linotype for heads and straight matter. Simplicity and quickness of shifting magazines are wonderful."

"I much prefer it to other models for convenience of operation and general suitability to the work of a job shop."

"We are turning out more jobs each day than ever before and at a lower cost per hour."

"We have been especially interested in the new distributor system. Frankly speaking, we expected trouble in this respect. From the time it was installed to the present there has not been the slightest hitch from this source."

"The small jobs that require a wide divergence of types, formerly taken care of by hand compositors, are now readily and much more quickly disposed of by this model."

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

FACES FROM ALL MAGAZINES

Mixed in the Same Line

The Model 25 is the same as the Model 26 (shown above) except that it does not have the auxiliary magazines.

Ask the nearest Linotype Agency for further information on the Models 25 and 26 and for literature showing their application to the rapid setting of Newspaper Headings, Display Advertising, Publication Work, Job Work, Intricate Composition of all Kinds.

MERGENTHALER LINOTYPE COMPANY

San Francisco Chicago New Orleans — Brooklyn, New York — Canadian Linotype, Ltd. Toronto

AGENCIES IN THE PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE WORLD

520.25.5-F

COMPOSED ON THE LINOTYPE IN THE BODONI SERIES EXCEPT FOR HAND-SET TITLE LINE

ESSARY PRESIDENT OF GRIDIRON CLUB ENTERING ITS 40TH YEAR

Charles Michelson of World, and "Jim" Preston Initiated—Chauncey Depew, Only Survivor of First Club Dinner Guests, Reminesces

By J. BART CAMPBELL
(Washington Correspondent of Editor & Publisher)

J. FRED ESSARY, chief of the Baltimore Sun Washington Bureau, and nationally know political writer, is now president of the Gridiron Club.

J. Fred Essary

Essary was inducted into office at the fortieth anniversary dinner of the club April 23 after much amusement was provided by a cardboard imitation of the famous Coolidge hobby horse which the new club president was told he must ride to uphold the dignity of a presidential office.

President Coolidge was among the national notables present who enjoyed the fun-making.

"No one can be inaugurated president of anything now unless he rides a hobby horse," Essary was told.

The president's gavel was presented to Essary by Col. Francis A. Richardson, for 39 years a member of the club, and Essary's predecessor for 35 years on the Baltimore Sun.

Two new members were initiated, Charles Michelson, chief of the New York World Washington Bureau, and James D. Preston, custodian of the Senate Press Gallery. Both were toasted on the club gridiron.

President Coolidge, in addressing the club members, paid a nice tribute to the veteran Charles A. Hamilton, Buffalo Times, who, he recalled, is the only present member of the Senate Press Gallery who helped organize the Gridiron Club forty years ago.

The atmosphere of 40 years ago on Newspaper Row in Washington was recreated when a group made up as "old timers" in silk hats and cutaway coats, buttoned up high to the neck, entered the dining room, two of them pushing the old-fashioned bicycles and another adorned by side whiskers of the mid-Victorian variety.

A letter from Chauncey M. Depew, the only surviving guest of the club's first dinner, sent in response to a telegram from the club members, felicitating him on his 91st birthday, read as follows:

"That April 23 was to be the 40th anniversary of the Gridiron Club and also the 91st of my birth is a gratifying coincidence and the remembrances which surround the two would fill a volume.

"I remember with keenest interest that first gathering of your association which has accomplished so much and has become so famous, and it is one of the sad limitations of life that I should be the only surviving guest of that wonderful evening. It has been my good fortune to have met at your festive board all the Presidents of your period except Cleveland who would not come; all the Cabinet ministers, most of the justices of the Supreme Court, and those who made themselves famous either permanently or temporarily on Capitol Hill.

"Harrison, who became so unpopular because of his harsh mannerisms, developed under your genial influence his rare talents and superior gifts. McKinley exhibited with you that wonderful good-fellowship which was his greatest political asset.

"Roosevelt, child of nature, never tamed, entered with the most infectious enthusiasm in your play and lost his temper because your skit revealed a weakness in his policy. His furious quarrel with Foraker made a memorable night, but it was outside Gridiron rules. Taft's geniality radiated many a night of glorious time under the Gridiron.

"Wilson enjoyed immensely his evening with you, but never gave an indication that he thoroughly understood the humor of the evening. I recall the havoc he created one night when he essayed the Wilson idea of humor. The dollar a year men who were famous in many departments of American enterprise were all present. I sat that night in a group of them. Turning to them the President said:

"'My troubles with the war are very slight compared with the difficulties of satisfying my distinguished dollar-a-year associates. Each of them thinks he ought to have all attention and is unhappy if any is given to others of his group. The result is that I am like an opera impressario, every member of whose troup wants to be recognized, honored and applauded as the prima donna.'

"I said to the dollar-a-year statesmen who looked very gloomy, 'To whom of you gentlemen does he refer?' They answered in a chorus, 'Not me.'

"Harding on Girdiron evenings distributed joy, happiness and good-fellowship, as was his nature. I am sure that everybody appreciates the wisdom when he speaks and the personality when he does not, of that symbol of sense and sensibility, President Coolidge.

"It was a revelation and all embracing happiness to be with Mark Hanna on a Gridiron night. Among all events of that remarkably active and dormant life none equaled his enjoyment of Gridiron nights.

"The Gridiron Club is a mirror. It reveals the statesman to himself as he is; it is the greatest, most benevolent and beneficial creation to reduce the abnormal swelling of the head and the enlargement of the chest. It has done and is doing a great work in giving to its guests the best evening to be found anywhere in the United States. It rescues a large number of statesmen who are so obsessed with the idea that they may become President that they live in a rarefied atmosphere and can do no work.

"The Gridiron dissipates the brainstorms and makes them useful Senators. For many years Punch has restored sanity to English public life; the Gridiron Club has done and is doing the same patriotic work for the United States.

"With all good wishes that the Gridiron Club may pursue its successful mission perpetually.

Faithfully yours,
"Chauncey M. Depew."

FLASHLIGHTS OF FAMOUS PEOPLE

Pictorial Celebrity a Day Series

Gives your readers a "Face to Face" with over three hundred folk who are doing things worth while.

A Business Builder For Your Paper

Joe Mitchell Chapple
THE ATTIC
WALDORF-ASTORIA, NEW YORK

BACK FROM EUROPE

Miss Zoe Beckley, famous reporter and feature-writer was among the ocean travelers reaching New York this week.

"COMMANDMENTS" FOR DESK ME

Chicago Man Compiles Ten Terse On for Copy and Heads

"The Ten Commandments of the Co Desk" have been compiled by Irwin S John Tucker of the Chicago Herald Examiner.

Mr. Tucker's commandments, whi observe his fifth rule, "boil it dow follow:

On Copy

1. Clean Your Copy
   Delete unnecessary marks.
2. Watch Your Slugs
   Get title slug, folios, more and cu off marks correct.
3. Get It Right
   Check on spelling; be careful your grammar.
4. Pep It Up
   Substitute descriptive, vigoro words for dead ones.
5. Boil It Down
   Reporters' jargon is always su ceptible of condensation.

On Heads

6. Tell the Story
   Get the nub of the yarn in yo top.
7. Make It Fit
   Type is not made of rubber.
8. Dodge Barred Words
   Don't use sickening or commo place expressions.
9. Make It Talk
   The head is not merely a labe it must say something.
10. Type It
    Printers can't guess; they want know.

G. W. Lemons Goes to El Paso

George W. Lemons, for five years a vertising director of the Dallas News a Dallas Journal, has joined the El P Herald and El Paso News-Herald as vertising sales director.

"The Ludlow has Increased Our Business and Reduced Composition Costs"

Says Fred Naeter, Southeast Missourian, Cape Girardeau, Missouri

"WHEN we bought the Ludlow every man in our office was of the opinion that ordinary type would serve more economically and better, but no one here now believes this. The Ludlow gives us an endless amount of type of a great variety. Our men produce the composition quicker and better. Our paper always looks clean and bright and our advertisers have learned the importance of this condition.

"The special edition shows you a picture of our new building which we hope to have completed soon. We say it is the finest, most ornate, most costly, most complete printing building to be found in the United States in a city of this size, or even several times this size. The Ludlow has had much to do with the making of a building of this kind possible and necessary. We have had our Ludlow two years without a dollar of upkeep and one publisher who bought an outfit because we talked him into it, has written us that it was the best investment he ever made."

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
San Francisco: 5 Third Street
Boston: 261 Franklin Street
New York: 63 Park Row
Atlanta: 41 Marietta Street

LUDLOW QUALITY COMPOSITION

TRADE BODY ADOPTS NO PUBLICITY RULE

J. S. Commission to Settle Complaints Without Making Them Public—Thompson Voices Strong Objection

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 30.—The Federal Trade Commission today adopted rule regarding publicity as follows:

"From and after this date, in the settlement of any matter by stipulation before complaint is issued, no statement in reference thereto shall be made by the Commission for publication. After a complaint is issued, no statement in regard to the case shall be made by the Commission for publication until after the final determination of the case.

"After a complaint has been issued and the answer of the respondent has been filed, or in case the respondent fails to file an answer by the rules provided, the papers in the case shall be open to the public for inspection, under such rules and regulations as the secretary may prescribe."

It has been the rule, which is now abolished, to issue a statement upon the filing of a complaint stating the charges against a respondent. In the opinion of the majority of the commission this statement, which is given wide publicity, has resulted in many cases in damage to the respondent, and if such a case is later dismissed the publicity given the dismissal does not repair the damage thus resulting in injustice. Of course, the proceedings in the case must become public, but the majority believes it to be fair to withhold publicity until the respondents answer is filed and then to make the complaint and the respondent's answer available to the press and public at the same time.

Concerning the withholding of publicity where cases are settled by stipulation without complaint, the custom has always been not to issue any statement. The so-called applicant, or complaining party, has never been regarded as a party in the strict sense. The Commission is not supposed to act for any applicant, but wholly in the public interest. It has always been, and now is, the rule not to publish or divulge the name of an applicant or complaining party, and such party has no legal status before the Commission except where allowed to intervene as provided by the statute.

The final order in a case is one against the party to cease and desist from a practice, and if this end can be accomplished by means of an agreement in the form of a stipulation by the proposed respondent without complaint and trial, the majority believes it should be done. It saves time and expense both to the Commission and respondent and accomplishes the result much sooner.

The previous practice of filing complaints in all cases, even where the party has already ceased the practice and will probably never resume it, the majority deems to be a useless and oppressive procedure, clogging the docket with cases not necessary to be tried: taking the time of the attorneys of the Commission uselessly, wasting the money of the Commission, and delaying the prosecution of cases which are contested and must be tried.

No good can be served by publishing these agreements, only harm to the respondent, and the majority holds that the proper function of the Commission is corrective and not punitive. Parties whose acts deserve punishment should be dealt with by the courts and it is not within the province of the Commission to usurp that function.

Commissioner Thompson dissented to this rule, and made the following statement:

"I vote 'no' and I wish the record to show that I protest against the enactment of this rule.

"The State—the Federal Trade Commission Act—in its first paragraph, clearly authorizes the right of a minority to be heard and to have representation.

"If the proposed rule had been in vogue at the time some 2,500 steel fabricators initiated before the Federal Trade Commission an application for complaint against the United States Steel Corporation on the so-called Pittsburgh-base method of pricing steel, the application could have been dismissed without any statement and thus the public would not have been informed, and, in that case, I would not have been, under the proposed rule, permitted to state my dissent.

"I am against this rule because it is contrary to the letter and spirit of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Constitution of the United States because it will permit of star chamber proceedings to be carried on and the applicant not informed as to what is taking place; and because it will deprive a minority of the right to express its views publicly, and hence is wholly dangerous and perversive of the public welfare.

"I request that this statement shall be attached to and given out with any publicity in regard to this proposed rule."

M. E. HAS NARROW ESCAPE

M. Andersen of Austin Flees Forest Fire Trap

Martin Andersen, managing editor of the Austin (Tex.) American and Austin Statesman, had an exciting race with a forest fire in the cedar-covered hills near Austin recently, when taking pictures of a devasting fire which swept 5,000 acres clear of valuable timber and was menacing the town of Cedar Valley. Andersen, keeping ahead of the flames which crawled a mile in 20 minutes, suddenly discovered himself looking down a 75-foot cliff of a dry creek-bed, while the fire advanced less than 200 feet away. He and the staff photographer with him, found it impossible to descend the cliff. They were forced to run several hundreds of yards through the thick scrub timber across the path of the fire, before the precipice curved away, and then to fight their way through several miles of the cedar brakes to skirt the fire and get back to the road.

Anderson brought back excellent pictures of the fire which were printed in red on the first page of the Austin American.

In addition to covering Des Moines

—with one copy each evening to every four persons—one copy Sunday to every four persons . . . and one copy morning to every eight persons

The Des Moines Register and Tribune-News has more subscribers in Iowa outside Des Moines —than The St. Louis Globe-Democrat or Post-Dispatch in Missouri or Illinois outside of St. Louis,

—than The Kansas City Star in Kansas or Missouri outside of Kansas City,

—than The Omaha World Herald in Iowa and Nebraska outside of Omaha,

—than The St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press in Minnesota outside of St. Paul, —than The Minneapolis Tribune or Journal in Minnesota outside of Minneapolis,

—than The Milwaukee Journal in Wisconsin outside of Milwaukee,

—than The Indianapolis Star or News in Indiana outside of Indianapolis,

—this refers to Sunday as well as daily editions—state circulation figures were secured from the publishers.

For March, 1925, the net paid circulation of The Des Moines Register and Tribune-News averaged 164,456 Daily (80,741 Morning—83,715 Evening) and 144,069 Sunday

The
DES MOINES REGISTER and TRIBUNE-NEWS

Circulation Homeward Bound

Evening newspaper circulation is either carrier-delivered or carried home by purchasers—it is all homeward bound.

In the morning the family separates—in the evening the family congregates. The evening paper goes home, stays home, reaches every member of the family.

In practically every retail sale there is a woman. "Cherchez la femme!" as the French say. Reach the woman, interest the woman, sell the woman! In fact, daughter, sister, wife, mother, son and father all have preferences and all influence the buying of merchandise. The evening paper is the family paper.

The day is divided into three parts: Sleep, Work, Leisure. The evening paper reaches the family at the only period of leisure. Scripps-Howard Newspapers are evening newspapers and are also preferred advertising mediums because they have the "undivided loyalty and confidence of their readers."

SCRIPPS-HOWARD NEWSPAPERS

The Pittsburgh Press	The Columbus Citizen	The Evansville Press
The Youngstown Telegram	The Oklahoma News	The Washington News
The Akron Times-Press	The Knoxville News	The Terre Haute Post
The Birmingham Post	The Fort Worth Press	The Albuquerque State Tribune
The Denver Express	The Cleveland Press	The Toledo News-Bee
The Baltimore Post	The Cincinnati Post	The Memphis Press
The Indianapolis Times	The San Francisco News	The El Paso Post
The Kentucky Post	The San Diego Sun	The Houston Press

Represented in the National Advertising Field by
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.

New York Chicago Cleveland Cincinnati San Francisco Los Angeles Seattle

Much Talk as to who is "Second"— No Doubt as to who is FIRST!

"Classified figures indicate the way the tide is going in Pittsburgh," announces a secondary Pittsburgh paper in comparing its lineage (somewhat obscurely) with a third paper.

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS is FIRST in classified lineage. During 1924, the people of Pittsburgh used in The daily Press 7,917,000 MORE lines of classified advertising than in all other evening papers COMBINED.

"More display advertising than its next nearest competitor," announces another Pittsburgh paper, comparing its lineage (again obscurely) with a third paper.

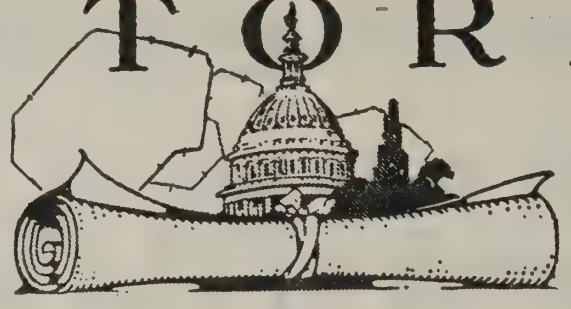
THE PITTSBURGH PRESS is FIRST in local display lineage. During 1924, the merchants of Pittsburgh, 6 evenings a week, used in the daily Pittsburgh Press 1,373,100 MORE lines of advertising than the second paper.

During the same period the Pittsburgh SUNDAY Press carried 2,550,000 MORE lines of advertising than the second Sunday paper and 319,200 MORE lines of classified "from the people of Pittsburgh" THAN ALL OTHER SUNDAY PAPERS COMBINED.

The Pittsburgh Press has no near competitor.

First in Everything

APRIL 1, 1925, CIRCULATION COMPARED WITH October 1, 1924



PAPER	CIRCULATION
Evening
PRESS	172,102	GAIN 9,115
Chronicle Telegraph	104,788	gain 1,158
Sun	85,560	loss 1,583
Sunday
PRESS	235,934	GAIN 13,504
Post	185,899	gain 3,586
Gazette Times	147,194	gain 5,488
Morning
Gazette Times	105,145	loss 4,018
Post	128,119	loss 2,772

THE PITTSBURGH PRESS

A SCRIPPS-HOWARD NEWSPAPER

MEMBER OF THE A. B. C.
REPRESENTED IN THE NATIONAL ADVERTISING FIELD BY
ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
NEW YORK CHICAGO CLEVELAND SAN FRANCISCO
LOS ANGELES CINCINNATI

EDITORIAL

APPLYING COMMON SENSE

LIBERAL doses of the grand old salve, common sense, were applied to the newspaper business by organized journalism at last week's meetings of the Associated Press and American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the organizers of the new American Inter-Regional Newspaper Council.

A new, progressive spirit dominated the deliberations of the A. N. P. A. It was frankly recognized that the power of this organization was not being used to full capacity and that the time had come for A. N. P. A. to accept a more vigorous policy of action.

It is gratifying to learn that the A. N. P. A. contemplates the establishment of a service to solve by experts diversified plant, mechanical and supply problems which have become increasingly vexatious to publishers since city newspaper business has developed into a huge mass-production operation wherein the processes are highly intricate, with speed a leading essential.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER in recent editorials has stressed the need of such a bureau in A. N. P. A. because it has seemed to us that there is waste and loss in many plants and that the lack of mechanical standards has become a serious burden. When A. N. P. A. tackles this practical work it will do a splendid job for the daily press, and incidentally will contribute a grateful stabilization of the business of manufacturers who cater to newspapers. All this is in line with science and economy.

Another gratifying action last week was that which empowered the directors of A. N. P. A. to take over from a special committee the negotiation of new international arbitration contracts with the international labor unions. This puts the full force of the A. N. P. A. behind an urgent and indispensable movement. Ways and means looking to a greater service will surely be found at the Autumn meeting in the South and the future usefulness of A. N. P. A. looms big.

An extremely delicate problem in Associated Press was handled firmly, when it was decided by a large vote to permit the news of that organization to be broadcast by radio. There were some who feared that this might break down the principle of exclusive publication right. The new rule is merely an extension of the bulletin board service by-law. Only news of "transcendent national or international importance" may be given to air transmission. Naturally it lies in the judgment of the general management to interpret this rule. If news is not exclusive and if it is of such importance that the public cannot be kept waiting for announcement it may be admitted to radio uses.

Radio broadcasting of news is in its infancy. It is still a mighty unsolved newspaper problem. It is in competition with newspaper circulation. It cannot be met by mere denial of radio, which has entered our lives. It may be captured for the press. Expensive as has been the experimentation of publishers who have pioneered in radio in their respective fields, still there must be sound satisfaction in the thought that this important means of local communication has not been yielded to outside interests. Fortunes await those who can find legitimate means through which radio broadcasting may be made self-sustaining. It is the economic puzzle of the day.

George D. Lindsay and those who were associated with him in the creation of the National Inter-Regional Council have earned the plaudits of newspaperdom. This new rib in the body of the organized press means an exchange of experience and common aims among the members of the Inland Daily Press Association, Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, Northwest Daily Newspaper Association, New England Daily Newspaper Association and the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association, and doubtless other sectional groups will later be joined. The controlling idea is co-operation. The success of one becomes the success of all. That's common sense and good business.

Chicago Tribune encourages reporters and editors by publishing in a neat booklet, under the title "Bellringers," the best stories and headlines of the Tribune's staff.

Serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing.

Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise; be thankful unto him, and bless his name.

For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations.—Psalm C; 2, 4, 5.

A CLASSIFIED "NEST-EGG"

"I HAD never thought much about our classified advertising or its possible development, until two years ago, when someone discussed with me the wonderful service that such a department renders to the smaller interests of the city," said a Middle West publisher at the Waldorf, last week. "I had looked upon it merely as a necessary, but unimportant, feature of the business. It seemed to me that, from the commercial point of view, the profits would surely all be eaten by the costs of obtaining and handling the business. But this public service idea woke me up.

"Alongside the column where a neighbor of mine was offering a used automobile I found the little advertisement of a colored woman who, as I knew, was supporting a large family of children by washings done at home, and that little line was her source of a livelihood. Where else may one turn to find employment, or a man for a job, or a house to live in, or any of the endless minor and major wants and needs of average people? I decided to educate our readers to make use of our classified service.

"The rewards in newspaper service are automatic. You set out to do something for your readers and bread floats right back into your hands. I made it a rule, when I started to develop our classified, to bank all the revenue thus obtained in a separate account and call that a 'nest egg.' Well, this year I am building a new plant which will cost more than $100,000 and it all comes out of the 'nest-egg' account."

The advertising manager of a large national distributor made this significant inquiry this week: "Will newspapers charge extra position rates for space in segregated crime columns, and what will be the probable per cent of added cost?"

May 2, 1925 Volume 57, No. 49

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Published Weekly by
THE EDITOR & PUBLISHER CO.,
1115 World Building, 63 Park Row, New York

Marlen E. Pew, Editor
Arthur T. Robb, Jr., Managing Editor
Associate Editors
Warren L. Bassett Philip N. Schuyler

James Wright Brown, Publisher.
J. B. Keeney, Business and Advertising Manager.
Fenton Dowling, Promotion Manager.
George Strate, Circulation Manager.

Washington: J. Bart Campbell, Homer Building.
St. Louis: Roy M. Edmonds, 1332 Syndicate Trust Building.
Chicago: L. B. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn Street.
Pacific Coast Office: Room 201 Sharon Building, 55 New Montgomery St., San Francisco, Calif. Telephone Douglas 5220. H. R. Drummond, representative.
London: The Advertising World represents EDITOR & PUBLISHER for the British Isles, 14 King Street, Covent Garden, London, W. C. 2.
Paris: G. Langelaan, 47 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris.
Tokio: John R. Morris, Japan Advertiser.
Toronto: W. A. Craick, 60 Lympstone Avenue, Lawrence Park.
10 cents a copy; $4 a year; foreign $5; Canadian $4.50.

WHO WON THE WAR?

THE communiques prepared by reporters with t fleet at the kriegspiel in the Hawaiian Islar give the thing a touch of reality for reade 5,000 miles distant.

"Hawaii defeats attacking fleet," headlines t New York World, adding the details that "air forc sink ships—all troops they landed are captured planes fight in relays—Gen. Mitchell's theory vin cated, officers say."

"Hawaii loses heavily in 'war' against fleet," ports the Herald-Tribune, with the further inform tion that "'casualties' of defenders 40 per cent battleships' fire, officers say, awaiting verdict umpires." The Herald-Tribune report also has plane carrier Langley sunk and the battleship Wyo ing crippled by hostile fire.

"Hawaii vulnerable; battle reveals Oahu can taken," is the Times' view, supported by statemer that "war game shows that enemy who will pay pr can seize key to our Pacific defense—'Blues' la with a rush—suffer heavily in the first onslaug but soon carry all before them—outguess 'Bla forces. Main attack is made on the north sho while it was expected on the south."

The American, 24 hours before any of these d patches appeared, chronicled the complete failure the attacking fleet to attain its objectives and approximate destruction by the defending airplan The Universal Service correspondent claimed to ha seen this destruction and to have been the only pr association man so fortunate.

We await the press statements of the Co Artillery General, the Admiral of the Fleet, Commandant of Marines, the Corporal of the Bea Patrol—and, oh, yes—the verdict of the board umpires.

Meanwhile, we pay our taxes and take our cho

Chili newspaper men are asking their government for old age pensions and relief measures. How would Washington react to such a proposal?

A TWISTED IDEA

TO "give the public what it wants" is an possible order for a newspaper editor. Moral of a type propose to prevent the publication the news of crime. But when a few newspapers periment with this idea they find that the majo of readers do not want news denatured.

This whole "crimeless" agitation is twisted in minds of newspaper men and others urging it. Th is no legitimate complaint against the publication real news of crime, but there is legitimate compl against newspapers that glorify crime, titillate lower elements of society with exaggerated "heroi of sneaks and brutes, excite sexual appetite with word and picture, and pander to the cheapest hun curiosity.

It is queer that newspapers which are about blameless as any in the land should be the ones take upon themselves the implied burden of involved in crimeless news experiments. This a is proof that editors are not clear on this subjec

No honest editor should attempt to give the pu what it wants. He cannot lend his type to indece and unquestionably large sections of the public just that. He cannot yield to the restrictive dem of theorists, however sincere, who do not underst the processes of civilization half so well as does practical editor because they are not in touch life in all its phases.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER repeats: There is a which governs newspaper editing, superseding others. It is the application of the conscientious telligence of a trained editor who seeks to tell public all the news of the day that may be dece told.

One of the best local advertising solicitations we know of is a letter which offers a concrete business-building idea to a merchant followed by a personal interview which opens "Mr. Blank, have you considered my letter," etc.

PERSONALS

GEORGE MORAN, chairman of the Cleveland News and Sunday News Leader, has returned from a winter vacation spent in Florida.

Ed M. Smith, former state Senator, and author of the Iowa budget law, has been appointed a member of the state budget board of appeals by Gov. John Hammill. Mr. Smith is editor and owner of the Winterset Madisonian.

A. O. Moreaux, publisher of the Luverne (Minn.) Herald and secretary of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Commission, has been named secretary for the new highway project to connect Chicago and the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Fred L. Tipton, editor of the Girard (Ill.) Gazette, president of the Central Illinois Newspaper Association, has become treasurer of the International Life Insurance Company of Springfield.

Major William H. Dearden, editor of the Ware (Mass.) Ware River News, has been notified by orders from the War Department to report for duty May 25, Washington, to serve six weeks in the military intelligence division.

James Morgan, chief editorial writer of the Boston Globe, has been appointed trustee of the Lynn Public Library. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan are at present touring Italy, but are expected to return June 1.

James S. Gibbons, editor and manager of the Scranton (Pa.) Sunday Despatch, back at his desk after a brief illness.

John A. Muehling, treasurer of the Manchester (N. H.) Union-Leader, has returned from a Mediterranean cruise.

Barrett C. Andrews, publisher of the Boston American, has returned to Boston after a week's stay in Chicago where he attended a conference of publishers and managing editors of the Hearst papers.

W. O. Hart, editor of the Orange (Cal.) Daily News, was recently elected president of the Orange Rotary club.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

HUBERT F. LEE has resigned from the Atlanta bureau of the United Press to become advertising manager of the Anderson (S. C.) Independent-Tribune.

R. E. Shannon, advertising manager of the Washington (Ia.) Journal, left recently for Arkansas for his health. Mr. Shannon is president of the Ninth District of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

William M. McIntosh, business manager of the San Antonio Light, addressed Southwest Texas editors and publishers gathered in San Antonio at a banquet as guests of the Chamber of Commerce and Fiesta Association during the recent Fiesta San Jacinto.

Charles C. Swearingen, until April 10 connected with the Louisville Courier-Journal and Louisville Times for many years, has been appointed assistant advertising manager of the Miami (Fla.) Herald.

Bernard Penrose has joined the Atlantic City Gazette-Review advertising staff, succeeding Keene Woolbert, resigned.

Otway B. Shearer has been transferred from the editorial staff to the advertising department of the Springfield (O.) Daily Sun.

Arthur J. Flynn, formerly business manager of the New York Evening Bulletin, has returned to the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News where he has resumed his former position as business manager.

W. W. Courtney, auditor and assistant manager of the Centralia (Ill.) Evening Sentinel has returned to his desk after an eight months' stay in Asheville, N. C.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

R. GEORGE, city editor of the Des Moines Register, is acting news editor, succeeding John S. Piper, who left last week for San Francisco where he will take a position May 15 with the News. Mr. Piper is driving to the coast.

George Murray, city hall reporter, is acting city editor.

Henry P. Edwards, sporting editor, Cleveland Plain Dealer; Joe Williams, sporting editor, Cleveland Press, and Francis J. Powers, baseball writer, Cleveland News, accompanied the Cleveland baseball team on its opening swing through the western circuit.

Robert Hughes, feature writer for the Cleveland Press, in order to make "news" for his paper, bought a 1909 Mercedes made-in-Germany limousine that originally cost $16,000 for $50. He has since been writing a series of stories on his adventures with the car.

Ford Wagner has joined the Cleveland Times, as staff photographer.

Miss Hildegarde Darmstadter, society editor, Cleveland Times, who has been undergoing treatment in a hospital, is back at her desk after three weeks' absence.

John Carroll, formerly with the Buffalo News, has joined the sports department of the Buffalo Times.

Lauriston F. Bullard, of the Boston Herald, recently addressed the students of the Northeastern School of Engineering, Boston.

C. H. Derby, formerly managing editor of the Scranton Sunday Telegram, has resigned to go to Altoona, Pa.

James A. Stuart, city editor, Duluth Herald, has recovered from a ten days' illness.

Miss Roberta Clay, of the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri, has joined the staff of the Wichita (Kan.) Daily Times.

Harry L. Hewes, who has been writing a series of travel articles from Europe for the Toledo Blade, has rejoined the Blade's local staff.

Julius R. Young, suburban editor of the Long Beach (Cal.) Press-Telegram, and Mrs. Young are parents of a son born April 16.

Phil Oby, formerly of Canton, O., has joined the news staff of the Columbus Ohio State Journal.

William T. Igleheart, city editor of the Salt Lake City Tribune, has been elected secretary-treasurer of the new Utah Polo and Equestrian Association.

Paul Pennock, cartoonist, has joined the staff of the Cleveland Times.

Wayne Weishaar, Des Moines Evening Tribune-News reporter, will leave in May for New York, to join the Associated Press. His successor on the city hall beat has not been chosen.

Donald McDonald has been made managing editor of the Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald, succeeding Keeton Arnett.

R. W. Akers, formerly of the City News Bureau, Chicago, has joined the San Antonio Evening News reportorial staff.

Miss Virginia Lee Bossert is now social editor of the Atlantic City Gazette-Review.

Harry Sutton, editor of the Smith's Falls (Ont.) Record-News, was elected president of the Smith's Falls Rotary Club at the annual meeting, April 24.

Mandus E. Bridston has resigned the editorship of the Grand Forks (N. D.) Wheat Grower

James E. Grube, former city editor of the Cleveland Times, has joined the staff of the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Miss Florence Larson has resigned as society editor of the St. Peter (Minn.) Herald, and is succeeded by Mrs. O. L. Davis.

James D. Ashley is the new sporting editor of the Sioux Falls (S. D.) Daily Argus-Leader. Roger Atkinson, of Brookings, has become commercial editor of the same paper.

Alfred Alexander, for four years with the Buffalo Times, is now on the Buffalo Star.

Wilson Harris, staff photographer of the Buffalo Post, has joined the Buffalo Star staff.

John Loughey, telegraph editor of the Buffalo Star, is now telegraph editor of the Buffalo Post, succeeding Joseph Riley who left to join the staff of the Baltimore News.

Beverely Webster, formerly of the Rochester Journal & Post Express, is covering the federal assignment for the Buffalo Times, succeeding Alfred Alexander.

David S. Taylor, managing editor of the Buffalo Morning Courier, will be honored at a testimonial dinner on May 2 on the occasion of twenty-five years of service with the Courier.

Edith Natalie Stark has joined the staff of the Buffalo Times as a feature writer.

George Looms, former reporter and dramatic critic Denver (Col.) Express and, later, the Rocky Mountain News and Denver Times, has just published his third novel, "The Caraways."

Gene Flack, for ten years on the staff of the Chicago Herald-Examiner, has resigned to become publicity director for the "Phone for Food" campaign of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association. Associated with him is Arthur Turney, formerly city editor of the Los Angeles Evening Express, and recently day city editor of the Herald-Examiner.

Ernest T. Jenkins, formerly on the Boston Advertiser and more recently of New York, has joined the city staff of the Boston Traveler.

Charles Nickerson, for several years on the day copy desk of the Boston American, has been made sporting editor succeeding James Murphy who has been acting in that capacity since the death of John Gillooley last December. Murphy has resumed his former position as make-up man on the day staff.

William H. Smeltzer has been placed in charge of the Federal run of the Springfield (O.) Daily News.

John J. O'Flanigan, of the copy desk, Boston American, has been named to take charge of the new sunrise edition of that paper published at midnight.

Jack Casey, of the rewrite staff of the New York Mirror, was the recent guest of William Stonebreaker, rewrite man on the Boston American, formerly on the Philadelphia Ledger.

Miss Helen Bissett, of Montreal, has joined the reportorial staff of the Boston American.

Francis P. ("Tip") O'Neill has been transfered from the Cambridge office of the Boston American to Police Headquarters, succeeding Frank A. McLean, who is seriously ill in the Boston City Hospital.

S. J. Duncan-Clark, chief editorial writer for the Chicago Evening Post, spoke on "Internationalism" before foreign students of the University of Illinois, May 2.

Tiffany Blake, editorial writer for the Chicago Tribune, was recently elected president of the Lake Forest Garden Club, of Lake Forest, Ill.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

GENEVA, April 30.—Paul Hymans, president of the first League of Nations assembly, has conferred the decoration of the Order of the Crown of Belgium upon Henry Wood, in charge of the United Press bureau here. The decoration carries the rank of Chevalier and is in recognition of Mr. Wood's five years' service in reporting the meetings and work of the League.

HENRY WOOD

At the United Press Associations' New York headquarters it was stated Mr. Wood left Geneva April 30 on a three months leave of absence during which he will visit in this country and South America. While in South America he will call upon the United Press Bureaus in Buenos Aires, Rio Janeiro and Valpariso.

The present decoration is the fourth conferred upon Mr. Wood. He already has been presented the Star of Serbia, the Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and the Chevalier of the Crown of Italy.

Mr. Wood is a former Omaha newspaper man. In 1912 he was sent to Europe by the United Press, being first manager of the U. P. Paris bureau, later going to Rome. He was one of the first American correspondents assigned permanently to Geneva, and he has become internationally known as an expert on League of Nations affairs.

HOLDING NEW POSTS

ROBERT COULSON, from Buffalo Times to Buffalo Evening Post.

John Koessler, from city hall reporter, Buffalo Times, to Buffalo Star.

Frank Weir, from assistant telegraph editor, Buffalo Post, to copy desk, Buffalo Times.

Miss Betty Penrose, from social editor, Atlantic City (N. J.) Ventnor News, to social editor, Atlantic City Daily Press.

Norval Neil Luxon, from assistant city editor, Columbus Citizen, to telegraph editor, the Canton (O.) Daily News.

Jess M. Carver, from Pittsburgh Associated Press bureau staff to Cleveland Plain Dealer, sports staff.

Ralph Pool, from assistant city editor,

April is a "Poor Business" Month, But not for Central Press

New clients obtained in April: Anaconda, Mont. Standard, full general service; Charlotte, N. C., Observer, full general service; Santiago, Cuba, Capital, news mat service; Sterling, Col., Advocate, full general service; Great Falls, Mont., Tribune, full general service; Brooklyn Standard-Union, children's pictorial cross-word puzzles; Casper, Wyo., Tribune, full general service; Fort Collins, Colo., Express, full page pictorial; Louisville Evening Post, full page pictorial; Evansville, Ind., Journal, full general service; St. Joseph, Mo., Gazette, full general service, morgue service and full page pictorial; Livingston, Mont., Enterprise, pony news mat and feature service; Austin, Tex., Statesman, full page pictorial; Helena, Mont., Record-Herald, full general service; Hanover, Pa., Record-Herald, Sord's sport cartoons; Mt. Vernon, Wash., Herald, pony news mat and feature service; Seattle Union Record, full general service and morgue service; Bremerton, Wash., News Searchlight, full general service; Coatesville, Pa., Record, full general service; Marlboro, Mass., Enterprise, full general service; Southbridge, Mass., News, full general service; Westfield, Mass., Journal, full general service.

The Central Press Association

V. V. McNITT, President. Central Press Bldg., Cleveland, O. H. A. McNITT, General Manager.

Norfolk (Va.) Virginian-Pilot, to Elizabeth City (N. C.) Daily Advance staff.

Ed Mayl, from Dayton Journal, to Springfield (O.) Daily Sun staff.

PRESS ASSOCIATION NOTES

ASSOCIATED PRESS has opened a state mail service bureau in the Daily News Building at Jackson, Miss. H. C. Plummer, transferred from the Baton Rouge (La.) Associated Press bureau, is in charge of the Jackson bureau. T. M. Davenport, transferred from New Orleans, succeeds Mr. Plummer at Baton Rouge.

MARRIED

M. X. GARINGER, classified advertising director, Johnson City (Tenn.) Chronicle, to Miss Hilda Marie Gasteiger recently.

Evelyn Wells, well-known San Francisco newspaper writer, to Loyal James Podesta, a San Francisco florist, in Florence, Ariz.

Edward F. Scannell, sporting editor of the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Post, to Miss Marion C. Power on April 28 in Worcester.

Carl F. Morrison, assistant advertising manager of the Bangor (Me.) Daily Commercial, to Miss Lois B. Hodgkins in Bangor recently.

Philip Hadley Sanderson, Boston (Mass.) Globe correspondent, to Miss Doris Marguerite Yeaton in Portsmouth, N. H., recently.

Sylvester Lynott, editor of the Woodstock (N. B.) Sentinel, to Isabel Kate Watts, of Woodstock, recently.

N. Rogers Bayly, in charge of the Long Beach (Cal.) Sun's automobile advertising, to Mrs. Gertrude Bryant, a bookkeeper with the same paper.

ON THE MECHANICAL SIDE

JOSEPH HOSIE has resigned as foreman of the Scranton Republican composing room. Edward Golden, assistant foreman, has gone with the Scranton (Pa.) Times.

CHANGES OF OWNERSHIP

POSTMASTER WILLIAM BOYD, of Sausalito, Cal., has sold his weekly, the Sausalito News, to W. Elliott.

Lincoln (Cal.) News-Messenger, recently bought by E. J. Ford, of Sacramento, has been sold to W. E. Butler, a printer, and Edward Finney, both of Lincoln.

T. B. Hardaway, former postmaster of Jasper, Mo., has purchased the Jasper News from Carl Kennedy. He was formerly a member of the News staff.

John L. Brady, of Salem, Ore., has purchased stock in the Pocatello Idaho State Journal and will act as its editor. The editorship became vacant recently on the death of Howard P. Pinkney.

O. L. Browning, former advertising manager of the Anthony (Kan.) Bulletin has purchased the paper from George Van Dyke, owner, and is in charge.

WITH THE SPECIALS

KIMBALL-MOGENSEN COMPANY, publishers' representatives, with offices in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle, have been appointed national advertising representatives of the following California newspapers: Anaheim Bulletin, Chico Enterprise, El Centro Imperial Valley Press, Fullerton Daily News, Marysville Appeal, Monterey Peninsula Herald, Palo Alto Times, Redwood City Tribune, Riverside Press, Salinas Index, San Bernardino Sun, San Bernardino Telegram, San Luis Obispo Herald; San Luis Obispo Telegram, Santa Ana Mirror, Tulare Advance, Ventura Post & Democrat.

Jacob I. Friedman, who, for the past 18 years has been connected with the editorial staff of the New York Jewish Daily News, during the last 11 years of which he was city editor, has resigned to join the organization of Keilson & Waxelbaum, Jewish newspaper representatives, as chief of their copy department.

S. C. Theis Company, Inc., publishers' representative, on April 25 occupied new quarters at 1440 Broadway, New York. The company has added the Nevada (Ia.) Journal to its list.

Henry D. Clerque, Inc., publishers' representatives, Chicago, on May 1 moved to new offices in the Tribune Tower, 435 North Michigan avenue.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

ELLWOOD CITY (PA.) LEDGER, 40-page Civic and Industrial edition, April 15.

Lake Wales (Fla.) Highlander, 32-page Builders of the Ridge edition, April 8.

Niagara Falls (N. Y.) Gazette, 56-page edition commemorating the opening of the new Niagara Hotel, April 8.

Cleveland Times, 56-page House-Warming edition, April 17.

Halifax (N. S.) Evening Mail, 18-page 50th anniversary number, April 15.

Washington (Ia.) Democrat, 48-page Historical edition of Washington county, April 29.

Boston (Mass.) Transcript, special Home Beautiful Exposition section, Saturday, April 25.

Springfield (Ill.) Illinois State Register, 10-page section Sunday, April 19, on opening of new St. Nicholas Hotel.

Joliet (Ill.) Herald-News, eight-page section for Boston Store, April 10.

Fairview (N. J.) Bergen County Journal, fourth anniversary edition, April 24.

Clarksburg (W. Va.) Daily Telegram, 10-page special section April 22, upon opening of new addition to Chicago Dairy and Baking Company's store.

NEW PLANTS AND EQUIPMENT

AMBOY (MINN.) HERALD has installed a typesetting machine and a revolution press and increased its floor space 400 square feet.

LaMoure (N. D.) Chronicle recently installed a Model 8 linotype.

Michigan (N. D.) Arena has added a Cottrell-Babcock cylinder and a Chandler & Price 8 x 12 Gordon.

Aurora (Ill.) Beacon-News has installed a new 32-page Goss Octuple press, doubling its printing speed and production.

ASSOCIATIONS

OLD TIME PRINTERS ASSOCIATION, Chicago, elected Thomas Knapp president for the third consecutive time at the fortieth annual meeting of the society at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, last Saturday, April 18. Other officers elected were John W. Hastle, vice-president; Mark Crawford, secretary, and Clara Jane Shepard, treasurer.

American Association of College News Bureaus will hold its annual meeting at the University of Wisconsin June 25-27. Prof. W. R. Kirkwood, University of Minnesota, president of the association, is now completing the program. The Madison committee to make plans for the convention consists of Prof. Willard Grosvenor Bleyer, director of the journalism course; Prof. Grant M. Hyde, and Prof. Andrew W. Hopkins, director of the Wisconsin agricultural journalism course.

Muscatine (Ia.) Ad Club has elected officers for the year as follows: Ludy Bosten, president, re-elected; George Koenigsaecker, vice-president; S. A. Pritchard, secretary-treasurer, re-elected. Gene Rosenthal was elected head of the vigilance committee.

Nebraska Press Association, Hastings district, will meet at Hastings Friday, May 8. A part of the program wil be broadcast from KFKX Westinghous station. The broadcasting will star promptly at 12.30 and continue one hou

Eighth District Kansas Editoria Association will meet at Halstea Kan., May 16, as guests of E. J. Book walter and sons, owners of the Halstea Independent. E. F. Glock, editor of th Moundridge Journal, is president.

Kansas Editorial Golf Associatio will hold its annual spring tournamer on the Newton (Kan.) Country Clu links May 22 and 23.

Oklahoma Press Association wi hold its spring meeting at Sulphur, Okla May 8 and 9. Among the program fea tures are a golf tournament, gridiron ban quet and a trip through Platt Nationa Park.

Association of Young Advertisin Men, New York, were addressed b Henry Morganthau, former U. S. Am bassador to Turkey and Mexico, wh discussed conditions in the Near East.

News Photographers' Association o New York attended a theater party a the Century Theatre, where "The Lov Song" is playing Tuesday evening, Apr 28. About 140 members and their wive attended the performance.

Boston Proofreaders' Association a its April meeting heard an address b Charles W. Birtwell, who spoke on th work of the Traders' Credit Union.

Missouri Valley Typographical Con ference re-elected W. G. Waters Des Moines, Ia., president at the twelf annual meeting held in Springfield, Mo

(Continued on page 24)

Norwegian Paper Mills Agency

(INCORPORATED)

33 West 42nd Street
NEW YORK CITY

Telephone: PENNsylvania 7443

SELLING AGENT IN THE U. S. FOR

NEWS PRINT PAPER

Representing Seven Largest Norwegian News Print Mills with an Annual Capacity of 200,000 Tons.

SOLE SELLING AGENT IN U. S. FOR

Ankers Traesliperi & Papirfabrik A/S
Bohnsdalen Mills, Ltd.
A/S Randsfjo d Traemasse & Papirfabrik
A/S Holmen-Hellefos
Hunsfos Fabrikker
Union Paper Co., Ltd.

Agent for FOLLUM TRAESLIPERI

Prompt Shipments . . Inquiries Solicited

Directory of Leading Features

FOR DAILY, SUNDAY AND WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS.

Editorials

TIMELY TOPICS, DAILY SERVICE
Exclusive Territory
Three Days' Service and Rates
Gladly Sent
Reid Editorial Service
Harrisburg, Pa.

Fiction

"STORIES"
Lewis Wilson Appleton, Jr.,
2044 Margaret St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Come. come. You must have run it.
THE DARK CHAPTER, by E. J. Rath.
Service for Authors, 33 West 42d St., New York

Radio

FOR LARGE AND SMALL PAPERS
A non-technical, weekly radio review
By CARL H. BUTMAN
Washington Radio News Service
1422 F St. Washington, D. C.

Religious Features

A "DIFFERENT" SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
The Standard Religious Feature of American Newspaperdom. Twenty-five years of continuous publication. Non-Controversial, Readable, Timely.
The Ellis Service, Swarthmore, Pa.

Pennsylvania

THE KEYSTONE STATE

Pennsylvania has continued to maintain her place as the keystone of the country and nothing it seems can move her from that position.

Pennsylvania stands first in total production of mineral wealth, first in coal, coke, cement, stone, sand, gravel, natural gas, clay products and pig iron.

Pennsylvania is largely an urban state with 8,720,017 people, of which fifty-four per cent live in cities of 5,000 or more.

Pennsylvania is a producer of wealth, both individual and collective, and is more fertile as an advertising field than ever before. Every successful National Advertiser uses Pennsylvania daily newspapers in a big regular way, many started years ago.

Persistent newspaper advertising promotes and maintains supremacy. Put your advertising message intothe daily newspapers below, inspire your salesmen to stir up the distributors and your reward is waiting for you.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call .....(M)	29,545	.10	.10
Allentown Call .....(S)	19,382	.10	.10
††Beaver Falls Tribune .....(E)	6,033	.03	.03
††Bloomsburg Press .....(M)	7,400	.029	.029
Chester Times .....(E)	16,576	.055	.055
††Coatesville Record .....(E)	6,650	.035	.03
Connellsville Courier .....(E)	6,233	.02	.02
Easton Express .....(E)	22,416	.07	.07
Erie Times .....(E)	27,456	.08	.08
Harrisburg Telegraph .....(E)	40,022	.095	.095
††Hazleton Plain Speaker....(E) ††Hazleton Standard-Sentinel.(M)	19,680	.07	.06
Mount Carmel Item .....(E)	4,581	.025	.021
Oil City Derrick .....(M)	6,377	.035	.035
Pottsville Republican and Morning Paper .....(E&M)	16,109	.08	.07
Scranton Times .....(E)	43,200	.12	.11
Sharon Herald .....(E)	7,514	.0285	.0285
Stroudsburg Record (E) Press...(M)	8,078	.045	.045
Sunbury Daily Item .....(E)	4,564	.025	.021
Warren Times-Mirror .....(E&M)	8,780	.04	.04
Washington Observer and Reporter .....(M&E)	17,181	.06	.06
††West Chester Local News .....(E)	11,252	.04	.04
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader . (E)	24,374	.08	.06
Williamsport Sun .....(E)	20,149	.07	.07
††York Dispatch .....(E)	19,139	.05	.05

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1925.

††Government Statement, March 31, 1925.

(Continued from page 22)

last week. Pittsburgh, Kan., was awarded the 1926 convention.

New England Newspaper Alliance met last week in Boston when plans were made for the next meeting which will be held in May in conjunction with the annual meeting of the New England Daily Newspaper Association.

New England Women's Press Association members heard a lecture on Shakespeare by John E. Hannigan, son of Mrs. Annie Judson Hannigan, president, at its meeting April 23. Miss Helena B. Chapman was in charge of the program.

New England Goodfellowship Club composed of Associated Press Telegraphers employed on New England newspapers held their annual meeting and banquet in Boston April 26. Members of the news department of the A. P. were guests. John J. Keating of Boston was elected president; M. L. Deane of Fitchburg, vice-president; C. F. Whitney of Boston, secretary and treasurer, and C. G. Rogers of Boston, a director. The retiring president, Palmer C. Booth, of Boston, was presented a billfold by the club.

SCHOOLS

PROF. C. E. ROGERS, for the past six years a member of the Department of Industrial Journalism at the Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan, has been made acting head of the department during the absence of Prof. N. A. Crawford, recently appointed assistant to Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine and director of information for the United States Department of Agriculture. Professor Crawford has been issued a one-year leave of absence, and his appointment becomes effective May 1, 1925.

Seth Thompson, superintendent of the School of Printing of the South Dakota State College at Brookings, resigned recently, leaving the institution without a head. It was merged with the rural journalism department and the two concerns are working together. C. D. Byrne, agricultural editor and head of the rural journalism department, is head of the new organization. E. B. Harding, of the School of Printing staff, is supervising the printing plant.

Twenty-eight students from the advanced classes in journalism, Louisiana State University, took complete charge for a day recently of the editorial department of the Baton Rouge State-Times, an afternoon daily, and edited the two editions of the paper. This was the fourth annual "Student Edition" of the State-Times.

P. E. Burton, former editor and publisher of the Joplin (Mo.) News-Herald and now a member of the publicity firm of Ledbetter, Burton & Marshall, of St. Louis, addressed the students in the School of Journalism of the University of Missouri last week.

Assuming complete management of three country weekly newspapers, twelve students of the University of Wisconsin journalism course, forming three teams, edited the Waupun Leader, Ripon Press and Tomohawk Leader, all of Wisconsin, during the university spring recess.

University of Nevada journalism students took entire charge of the editorial work of the Reno Nevada State Journal, and issued that paper on April 17.

Twenty-five students of the University of Illinois will be candidates for the degree of bachelor of arts in journalism in June.

DEAN OF COMPOSITORS DIES

Myron Jupp, 81, Served on N. Y. Tribune and Herald Tribune 61 Years

Myron Jupp, dean of New York compositors, died of pneumonia in his home at Rutherford, N. J. He had been with the New York Tribune and the Herald Tribune for 61 years, and, although nearing his 81st birthday, came to work until a week ago Monday, when he was compelled to go home with a severe cold.

Mr. Jupp was night assistant foreman of the Tribune for 28 years.

ASSOCIATION CHIEFS

GEORGE E. DURNO, of the Washington bureau of the International News Service, who will be 26 this month is the youngest newspaper man so far elected to hold office of president of the White House Correspondents' Association.

GEORGE E. DURNO

Durno has spent all his newspaper career in Washington. He has never been on a local newspaper. His first experience was in 1917 when he went to work for the Wall Street Journal in its Washington bureau. Two years later he joined the staff of the Central News of America, where he remained until 1922, when he became connected with the United Press. Several months later he transferred to the I. N. S. and has remained with that press association since. He was first assigned to the White House when employed by the Central News.

Durno was aboard the army dirigible C-2 when it made the first all-night flight from Washington to New York and return. The dirigible was up 13½ hours, got lost, broke the compass, ran into terrific wind and electrical storms, and the passengers had parachutes attached to them for nine hours, expecting disaster.

He reported the anthracite strike of 1923, when Pinchot effected the settlement. During the past political campaign he covered the Republican, Democratic, and La Follette conventions, and travelled with Coolidge.

Business Publisher Dies

A. C. Backert, president of the Penton Publishing Company and the Penton Press, both of Cleveland, died at his home in Cleveland, April 25. He was publisher of The Iron Trade Review Daily, The Metal Trade, The Foundry and other business publications. He was forty-nine years old. Mr. Backert was a member of the executive committee and a former president of the National Publishers Association and a former president of the Associated Business Papers.

T. C. Camp Left $1,194,498

Theodore C. Camp, vice-president of the Lanston Monotype Company of Philadelphia, who died last July left an estate of $1,194,498 an appraisal by the State Tax Department shows. The estate is left to the family.

Omaha Agency Head Dies

P. H. Dearmont, head of the Warfield Advertising Company, Omaha, Neb., died here April 23. Mr. Dearmont was stricken with heart trouble while on a business trip to Blair, Neb. He came to Omaha in 1900 and entered the advertising business soon after that. He started the Omaha trade journals known as The Motorist and The Trade Exhibit.

NEWSPAPER STYLE

The New Haven Register, one of New England's oldest and best known daily newspapers, with a background of more than a century of historic success, has issued its style book for general circulation.

In addition to instructions on grammar, capitalization, punctuation, use of adjectives, abbreviations, etc., there are concise rules for story and head writing, law of libel and other valuable data. Single Copies, 50c.

Paper edition for office distribution, $3.00 per dozen.

THE REGISTER
NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT

C. P. Traffic Chief Dies

Frank Augustus MacDougall, 38, superintendent of traffic and mechanical equipment of the Canadian Press, died on April 22. He was born in Chesley, Ont., and after service as operator with the C. P. and G. N. W. Telegraph Companies, joined the Canadian Press in 1911, rising steadily in the service of the company.

Crane, Former Hoe President, Dead

Frederick W. H. Crane, 80, who retired three years ago as president of R. Hoe & Co., printing press manufacturers, died April 28, at his Brooklyn, N. Y., home. He was a close friend of Robert Hoe and was the executor of his large estate.

Katherine Hughes, Writer, Dies

Miss Katherin Hughes, former Canadian newspaper woman and writer, and one time vice-president of the Canadian Women's Press Club, died April 27, in New York. She began her newspaper career on the staff of the Montreal Star in 1903.

Oliver Left $100,000 Estate

Edwin A. Oliver, humorous writer and former owner of the Yonkers (N. Y.) Statesman, who died recently left an estate of $100,000.

Obituary

JOSEPH MAIRE, 79, one of the editors of Montreal La Presse, died in Montreal on April 14. A native of Toulouse, France, he came to Canada in 1868 and saw service on several French newspapers in Quebec and Montreal. From 1886 to 1912 he resided in France, returning in the latter year to join the staff of La Presse.

HENRY DEAN CARMAN, 56, for several years financial editor of the Toronto Daily Star, died suddenly on April 24. He was born in Sarnia, Ont., and started his career on the Sarnia Post, adjoining the Toronto Star in 1903. During the last few years devoted his attention exclusively to writing a humorous column for the Star.

J. M. GALUSHA, 62, former manager of the Western Newspaper Union, Des Moines, Ia., died April 20.

HARRY DUNFORD, editor and publisher of the Lexington (Mo.) News, died recently following a brief illness.

E. W. BOOTON, 70, of Allison, Ia., veteran newspaper publisher, died at his home last week. He was associated with the Allison Tribune until a few years ago.

THOMAS H. WALSH, leading man in "Hell's Bells," now running on Broadway, who died this week, was at one time a reporter for the Chattanooga Times, joining that newspaper after being graduated from high school. He later became an actor.

JOSEPH L. CHECKETTS of the financial news department of the New York Evening Journal died April 27, at his residence in Brooklyn, aged 43, after a week's illness.

DR. LEWIS W. KNAPP, 53 advertising manager of the Tivoli Products Company, Detroit, died last week at his home in Grosse Pointe, Mich. He had been in the advertising business for the past 15 years.

CHARLES H. ST. JOHN, 95, a former editor of the Youth's Companion and newspaper writer, died at his home in Cambridge, Mass., recently.

EDWARD B. LOWTHER, editor of Town Topics, New York, for the last 25 years and former Chicago newspaper man died recently.

ANGUS HEATH, 40, accountant of the Virginia (Minn.) Daily Enterprise, formerly of the circulation department of the Duluth News Tribune and publisher of papers at Worthington and Macintosh, Minn., died April 18.

OSCAR R. SCHUMACHER, 60, editor of the Fredericksburg (Tex.) Standard and the Fredericksburg Wachenblatt, the latter a German publication, died in Fredericksburg last week. He was a native of Germany.

JOHN D. KINNURE, a member of the Boston (Mas.) Herald's composing room staff for more than forty years died at his home in Everett last week after a short illness.

MRS. STEPHEN OLNEY METCALF, wife of Stephen O. Metcalf, president of the Providence Journal died recently at a hospital in that city.

THOMAS WILSON DELANEY, veteran member of the Chicago Evening Post composing room staff, died recently at his home in Chicago. He was a member of the Chicago Evening Post chapel and was with the paper when its first number was published.

JOHN C. MCDONALD, member of the mechanical staff of the Chicago Evening American since its founding 25 years ago, died on April 25, at his home in Chicago following an illness of several weeks.

JOHN C. MCGUIRE, former editor of the Yazoo City (Miss.) Herald and for many years secretary of the Mississippi Press Association, fell dead recently while teaching a Sunday school class in Yazoo City.

SPORTS PICTORIAL

Part of the Rotogravure Section

The New York Times

Every Sunday

The new Rotogravure Sports Section of the Sunday edition of The New York Times reproduces the latest available pictures of sports events and contestants throughout the world.

Baseball	Football
Bicycling	Wrestling
Rowing	Tennis
Racing	Boxing
Track and Field	Soccer
Swimming	Golf
Shooting	Basketball

Advertising forms close twelve days in advance.

Regular rotogravure advertising rates apply.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

Invests

$250,000.00 in the 5% Second Mortgage Gold Bonds of the

BROADWAY TEMPLE

IS THE INVESTMENT SOUND?

Well, other notable business men who are with Mr. Rockefeller in the building of this great people's Cathedral and Community Center that will raise the Cross high above the skyline of New York are:

Arthur J. Baldwin, Vice-Pres. McGraw-Hill Pub. Co.

E. F. Albee, President Keith-Albee Circuit.

Col. Amos L. Beatty, Pres. the Texas Co.

John McE. Bowman, Pres. Bowman Hotels.

William Fox, Pres. Fox Film Corporation.

Marshall Field.

J. L. Kraft, Pres. Kraft Cheese Co.

J. C. Penney, Chairman of the Board, J. C. Penney, Inc.

S. S. Kresge, Pres. Kresge Stores.

Samuel Untermeyer, Attorney.

R. E. Reeves, Pres. Textile Industry, N. Y.

William B. Joyce, National Surety Co.

Samuel McRoberts, Chatham-Phenix Nat'l Bank and Trust Co.

John A. Hartford, Pres. A. P. Tea Co.

AND A HOST OF OTHERS

Only $500,000 of the $4,000,000 needed to erect Broadway Temple remains to be subscribed.

We offer you the opportunity of helping as a partner with such men as are listed above in selling the remainder of the Bonds.

MAIL THE COUPON TO-DAY

A GOOD PUBLIC INVESTMENT

FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD

COUPON MAIL TO-DAY

SAMUEL McROBERTS, Chairman

Chatham-Phenix Nat'l Bank and Trust Co.

140 Broadway, New York City

Without obligation to me, please send me details about the Broadway Temple Second Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds.

Name .....

Street .....

City ..... State .....

WHAT'S WHAT IN THE FEATURE FIELD

Harmon Completes "Carpenter's World Travels"—Pearson Interviews Kansas Editors—Tom Brown, Cartoonist, Signs Contract with Cosmos

DUDLEY HARMON, of Washington, D. C., editor of Carpenter's World Travels, and manager of the newspaper syndicate of the late Frank G. Carpenter, sailed from New York recently to spend several months in England.

While abroad, Mr. Harmon will gather material for the 20th and final volume of Carpenter's World Travels, of which 15 volumes have already been published. Five will appear during 1925. These books are based on the syndicated newspaper travel letters which Mr. Carpenter wrote throughout a lifetime of journeys over the globe and up to the moment of his death in China last year.

Tom Brown, cartoonist, has signed a contract to furnish the Cosmos Newspaper Syndicate, Inc., New York, a two column daily comic strip called "Obedient Benny."

Eleanore Browne, writer, whose work is being syndicated in America by Thompson Features Syndicate gave a reception and musicale to a number of editors attending last week's conventions at her studio 15 West 67th street, April 23 at 4:30 p. m.

Among the artists who assisted Miss Browne were Rafaelo Diaz, the Metropolitan Opera Company tenor, and soloists of the Artists' Choir and the stars of the American Choral Symphony. Miss Browne returned from Europe recently.

Charley Paddock, champion sprinter, has started on a tour "Sprinting Around the World." Paddock is accompanied by Loren Murchison, another noted track star. They will race the champion sprinters of the Orient and Europe. Paddock will write of these meetings, and of athletic conditions as he finds them in 20 foreign countries. These articles are being syndicated by the Christy Walsh Syndicate, New York. There are two stories a week.

"McDuffer," a new daily golf humor feature, has been announced by Associated Editors, Inc., Chicago. "McDuffer" has been created by Barrie Payne, well-known Southern humorist, and will be in one-column cartoon form, original in treatment, and picturing golf wit every day.

Three of the McClure and Wheeler Syndicate staff are now in Europe, Clinton T. Brainard, president; Miss E. Edith O'Dell, editor-in-chief of McClure's, and Violet Dare, author of Married Life serials.

"Once Upon a Time" is the title of the new fairy tale strip by Walter J. Enright which the McClure Newspaper Syndicate announced this week.

A statue of "Andy Gump," comic strip character created by Sydney Smith of the Chicago Tribune Syndicate, was unveiled on the front steps of the Douglas County Courthouse in Omaha, April 25. Sydney Smith missed the unveiling, arriving in Omaha Monday, April 27, to speak before a meeting of the Omaha Ad-Sell League.

ADVERTISING AGENCY AFFAIRS

Landis Joins Matteson-Fogarty-Jordan Company—Strasser Rejoins Dorrance, Sullivan & Co.—Several Agencies Move Offices

MAJOR REED G. LANDIS has joined the Matteson-Fogarty-Jordan Company, advertising agency, Chicago, as an account executive. Major Landis has been in the advertising business for ten years, both in agency work and as an advertising manager.

In 1917 he was advertising manager of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company. He left that position to go into the army, serving 18 months overseas in the Air Service.

Alfred Strasser, who for the past year and a half has had supervision of art and mechanical production work for the General Motors Export Company, has joined the New York staff of Dorrance, Sullivan & Co., as art director. Mr. Strasser was connected with Dorrance, Sullivan & Co. prior to his connection with General Motors.

The Warner P. Simpson Lithographing and Printing Company at Columbus, O., has established an advertising service with R. E. Trubee, formerly of the Mumm-Romer-Jaycox Company, in charge.

Mr. P. B. Littlehale, president of the Littlehale Advertising Agency, Inc., New York, has just been appointed a member of the Council of the New Jersey Branch of the Founders and Patriots of America. His term of office is until 1928. The Littlehale Agency, which for the past five years has occupied offices in the Flatiron Building, 175 Fifth avenue, has recently doubled its space there. The additional space it has acquired is that which was formerly occupied by the Henry Decker, Ltd., Agency.

The Bott Advertising Agency, Little Rock, Ark., has moved to larger quarters in the Home Insurance Building.

Rudolph Guenther, president of the Rudolph Guenther-Russell Law Advertising Agency, sailed for abroad on the Aquitania April 29.

Adolph L. Bloch Advertising Agency of Portland, Ore., on May 1 moved to new offices in the Chamber of Commerce Building, rooms 437-439.

Franklin E. Quinn, formerly with the Newark (N. J.) Ledger, has joined the Frederick N. Sommer Advertisement Agency, 810 Broad street, Newark.

WHAT DOES YOUR ADVERTISING DO IN IOWA?

Your advertising in these Iowa Newspapers will reach most of the 2,404,021 people that live in Iowa.

Your advertising in these Iowa Newspapers will open up a market possessing $10,511,682,000 in wealth.

Your advertising in these Iowa Newspapers will reach the eyes of people residing in the state that leads all the other states in literacy—a truly worth-while body of readers.

Your advertising in these Iowa Newspapers will be certain sales creators since the papers are possessed of unequalled prestige. They are among the most influential in the Middle West and have a staunch following of thorough believers and boosters.

USE THEM NOW— USE THEM ALWAYS

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Burlington Gazette	(E)	10,206	.045
Cedar Rapids Gazette	(E)	21,300	.07
Davenport Democrat & Leader	(E)	14,811	.06
Davenport Democrat & Leader	(S)	17,626	.06
††Davenport Times	(E)	25,031	.07
Iowa City Press-Citizen	(E)	6,416	.035
*Mason City Globe Gazette	(E)	12,622	.04
Muscatine Journal	(E)	7,777	.035
Ottumwa Courier	(E)	13,455	.05
*Waterloo Evening Courier	(E)	17,071	.06

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1925.
*A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1925.

ATURDAY CIRCULATION IS VALUABLE TO NEWSPAPER ADVERTISERS

cal and National Firms Are Offered by Many Papers—Peak Circulation When Readers Are Free to Buy and Have Money

By EDWIN S. FRIENDLY

Business Manager of the New York Sun

R years there has been a superstition ttached to national advertising in rday evening newspapers—a belief that there was little profit in it; at least as compared with other weekday issues.

IN S. FRIENDLY

Beliefs of this kind are usually accepted without sound logical reasoning, but this one was originall based on fact. For years, until recently when social and economic changes brought about newspaper changes, the day newspapers had had appreciless circulations on Saturday than her days.

A the present time many newspapers a greater circulation on Saturday on other days, due to the fact that aturday evening paper has become and more devoted to special feae such as special book reviews, radio ments, financial reviews, resort and y news.

Saturday a larger proportion of a aper's circulation is sold around than on other days—sold apparently n and women free for the remainder day and bent on immediate shopor amusement tours.

lt newspapers so sold are read carey s the testimony of many advertisers ising the Saturday evening editions. advertisers in particular report immediate sales on Saturday after- in response to their Saturday adiments. To prove that evening e are carried home whenever they e bought, the same advertisers re- profitable effect from their Saturdvertising during the early days of suing week.

elief has also persisted in certain rs, especially among large retail isers, whose feeling has been comated to some national advertisers, s Sunday is not a shopping day ention value of their advertisement Sturday newspapers will not hold until Monday or Tuesday. A cor- to this belief is that the huge dy newspapers completely blanket aturday newspapers and prevent rom being read thoroughly.

h is not a fact, and even if it were c would have little bearing on most ol advertising which aims at esing good will and not "to adis today to sell tomorrow" as many rment stores and other retail shops

h purpose of most national adversis to create a desire to buy the ut advertised because of price, high ity, style, usefulness, healthfulness, o forth. The desire created, ed in many instances by reiternis translated into the act of buying as "tomorrow," a week from the rth date, or a month from then. en in the field of retail advertising are striking instances that refute liefs that the attention value of rsements in Saturday newspapers t hold over the week-end or that ray newspapers are not carefully h Wanamaker in New York is one re. John Wanamaker has never unday newspapers for advertising. store advertises extensively on ry. Business during the early f the ensuing week is excellent. Chago, Marshall Field has had some- he same experience. Lord & Taylor in New York, one of the finest large high-quality stores, has practically abandoned Sunday newspapers for advertising, and apparently has profited as this policy is continued.

EDITOR GOES TO JAIL IN LIBEL FIGHT

Yuma Man Refuses to Give Bond and Will Battle Suit to Finish —Wife Editing Paper

While her husband, George Lynn, editor of the Yuma (Ariz.) Evening Herald, was in jail, April 25, 26, 27 and 28, on charges of criminal libel, his wife, Mrs. Georgette Lynn, got out his paper on schedule. More than that, the paper continued the editorials which caused Lynn's arrest.

Lynn was jailed last Saturday, April 25, on complaint of E. F. Sanguinett, millionaire rancher, who charged that Lynn falsely accused him of selling polluted milk to babies, and that he failed to make proper tax returns. Friends obtained the $3,000 bail money asked, but Lynn refused to accept it.

To hundreds who visited him in jail, Lynn expressed his determination to "rot in jail" rather than surrender his constitutional rights of free speech. Between conversations with visitors, Lynn busied himself at his typewriter, making notes, about which Mrs. Lynn later wrote editorials in the Tuesday edition of the Herald.

Mrs. Lynn ran the following editorial: "When my husband gets out of jail, I shall return to my housework, but I serve notice that if he is convicted and sent to prison, I am going to buy the Herald and print the truth as long as Washington sends no official notice that the Constitution of the United States has been repealed."

Brought into Justice Court Wednesday, Editor Lynn refused to allow Justice H. S. Smith to dismiss the charges and said he would take his fight for freedom of the press to a jury. He accepted bail, however, and is free on $20,000 bond.

TO PERPETUATE FUND

Sun-Roxy Radio Fund for Veterans Put on Endowment Basis

An unexpended sum of $80,000 remaining from the Sun-Roxy Radio Fund, raised to buy radio sets for hospitalized World War veterans, will be made into a permanent endowment fund to provide radio entertainment for hospital veterans, it was announced this week.

The Sun-Roxy Radio Fund was organized in May, 1924, when S. L. Rothafel, radio announcer, known to all fans as "Roxy," came to Washington to attend the National Radio Show. He visited Walter Reed Hospital, and saw an opportunity to perform a service for the disabled veterans. He enlisted the cooperation of the New York Sun, the Washington Star, the Chicago Daily News, several Boston newspapers, and newspapers and organizations in other cities in the work of raising money.

Cushing Evening Citizen Sold

Richard Elam and O. H. Lachenmeyer who formerly owned the Pawhuska (Okla.) Daily Capital, which was recently consolidated with the Pawhuska Daily Journal have purchased from E. M. Green of Cushing Okla., the Cushing Evening Citizen.

Briefs for Space Buyers

ON

Indiana

Indiana has 737,707 families, average four persons to the family.

The wealth of Indiana exceeds $8,829,000,000.

Indiana farms number 205,126 and are valued at $3,042,311,000.

The value of farm crops is $274,800,000 and animal products $267,600,000.

Indiana raises annually 170,000,000 bushels of corn, about 5 per cent of the national crop.

Her wheat crop averages 25,000,000 bushels.

Every twelve months 45,000,000 bushels of oats are harvested.

Indiana ranks sixth in coal production with a value of $56,926,000.

There are also oil wells, the State ranking twelfth in production.

Indiana's industrial value is tremendous, ranking ninth in point of value of products with $1,901,846,000.

Indiana is thoroughly American. Only 5.1% of its 2,930,390 people are foreign born.

Indiana's leading papers listed below cover the state like a blanket. Their circulation represents 100% buying power.

Tell your message in Indiana through their columns.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Columbus Republican		3,618	.03
††Connersville News-Examiner		4,805	.025
††Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,194	.025
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	32,662	.08
Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	34,487	.08
Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	42,860	.10
Gary Evening Post-Tribune	(E)	14,772	.055
††Hammond Times	(E)	15,610	.07
Huntington Press	(M&S)	3,655	.025
Indianapolis News	(E)	133,880	.25
Lafayette Journal & Courier	(M) 7,915 (E) 13,302	21,217	.06
††La Porte Herald-Argus	(E)	6,432	.025
††Shelbyville Democrat		3,968	.02
South Bend News-Times	(M) 9,803 (E) 14,225	24,028	.06
South Bend News-Times	(S)	22,275	.06
††South Bend Tribune	(S) 19,388 (E)	21,031	.06
Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	23,710	.06

A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1925.
††Government Statement, March 31, 1925.

CANADIAN PRESS HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING IN TORONTO

President E. Norman Smith Honored by Members for Faithful Service—C. P. Finances on Sound Basis —Labor Conditions Good

TORONTO, April 28.—Affairs of the Canadian Press, as revealed in the reports presented by the management at the annual meeting here today, are in satisfactory condition, with finances on a sound basis. Technically the C. P. is now operating an open shop, though the management stated in its traffic report that it did not seek or desire to employ Morse telegraphers not holding union cards. Relations with the men as a whole are excellent and output on all Morse wire circuits satisfactory. It was reported that a wage reduction in the Maritime Division had permitted a resumption of leased wire service out of Montreal to Halifax and intervening points and proposals for continuing the night circuit to Sydney, N. S., were being considered.

E. Norman Smith

The C. P. is now operating two pointer circuits, one between Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto and one between Ottawa and Winnipeg. The setting up of the former presented rather a difficult mechanical problem but this was successfully met and the average wordage cleared is very considerably in excess of what was possible over the old Morse circuit. The latter circuit has been a success from the first, average output having increased from about 12,000 words a trick under Morse to from 17,000 to 18,000 under printer operation. The weakness of C. P. service as a whole was the difficulty of free interchange between east and west over the single Morse wire connecting Ottawa and Winnipeg and both east and west have suffered. There is now the freest interchange of news for the benefit of every member from coast to coast.

As to future policy with regard to printer installation, the management reported that such circuits as Toronto-London at night and Montreal-Quebec, day and night, were obviously suitable for economical printer operation but urged one essential development, which was the authorization of a printer circuit between Vancouver and Victoria. It was also reported that during the year the position of Western chief traffic manager had been abolished and traffic management concentrated at Toronto under a superintendent of traffic and mechanical equipment.

In its news report, the management referred to the remarkable development in news service which had resulted from the introduction of the automatic printer. First, it had greatly increased the output of the Montreal-Ottawa-Toronto day and night circuits. Especially in the rush hours there has been much less congestion and important news has been pushed forward more rapidly. Second, it had for the first time in the history of the C. P. permitted a full and free interchange of news between Eastern and Western Canada. The wire being duplexed, news can be sent either way simultaneously, with beneficial results. One result of this new service, pointed out by J. F. B. Livesay, the general manager, has been in effect to move from Ottawa to Winnipeg the assembly point for the Western Canadian news service, because the printer was able under normal conditions to take care pretty well of the entire news service as laid down in Ottawa. Under old conditions, practically all the news laid down in Winnipeg could be cleared for the West. This was not now possible because the Morse wire could not look after all the news. Consequently news selection and editorial work had become of special importance in Winnipeg and staff adjustments had been made to this end.

Increased wire capacity, stated Mr. Livesay, had come in the nick of time, for never in the history of the Canadian Press had there been such a busy news period as since last fall. Reference was also made to the increasing importance of the direct reportorial work of the C. P. staff, particularly at Bureau points and to the value of the results being obtained.

In reviewing the work of the various bureaus, the general manager stated, "Mr. Deacon, superintendent of our New York bureau, maintains excellent relations with the executive and staff of the Associated Press, whose co-operation along all lines with the Canadian Press becomes mutually every year more close and intimate."

With reference to cable service, it was stated that the C. P. had felt the loss of the $8,000 grant of the Dominion Parliament toward cable service, which had terminated on March 31, 1924. However, by careful and intensive editing and condensation, the London office, in collaboration with Reuters, had succeeded in carrying on the service practically unimpaired, notwithstanding the loss in wordage, though it was necessary to be very careful in exploiting any big news feature.

"I don't believe that radio can ever compete with the newspaper in providing the public with news," declared Melville E. Stone, counsellor and former general manager of the Associated Press, in addressing the Canadian Press at their annual general meeting this morning. Mr. Stone said that there were fundamental difficulties in the collection and transmission of news by radio that could not meet the organized facilities of the co-operative associations of the newspapers for gathering and distributing news.

Mr. Stone was introduced to the meeting by E. Norman Smith, president of the C. P. Mr. Stone remarked that the Associated Press owed its origin and early progress to Canada. In 1893 when telegraph facilities from New York and Chicago to the western states was closed to the Associated Press, the Canadian Pacific Railway opened its wires to the coast for the Associated Press for the transmission of news to the coast papers of the United States.

In moving the vote of thanks to Mr. Stone, J. A. Woods, first vice-president of the C. P., said no man had created for himself throughout the entire world so profound a respect as a news-gatherer as Mr. Stone.

Directors of the Canadian Press for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

British Columbia, B. C. Nicholas, Victoria Times.

Alberta, J. H. Woods, Calgary Herald.

Saskatchewan, Burford Hooke, Regina Leader.

Manitoba, E. H. Macklin, Manitoba Free Press, and M. E. Nichols, Winnipeg Tribune.

Ontario and Quebec, E. J. Archibald, Montreal Star; Arthur Ford, London Free Press; Henri Gagnon, Quebec Le Soleil; E. Norman Smith, Ottawa Journal; T. H. Preston, Brantford Exposition; John Scott, Montreal Gazette; W. J. Taylor, Woodstock Sentinel Review and W. J. Wilkinson, Toronto Mail and Empire.

At a subsequent meeting of the Board of Directors, officers for the year were elected as follows:

Honorary President, E. H. Macklin; president, J. H. Woods; first-vice-president, E. Norman Smith; second vice-president, G. Fred Pearson; J. F. B. Livesay is general manager and secretary.

The annual meeting unanimously passed a vote of thanks to Mr. Norman Smith for his fine work for the association during his five-year-tenure of office as president, and it was on the unanimous request of the Board of Directors that he consented to continue in office as first vice-president.

Important matters occupying the attention of the meeting included the question of news by radio. In accordance with the contractual relations of the Canadian Press with the Associated Press it was then stringently laid down that no member of the Canadian Press must broadcast, or permit to be broadcast any news of the Associated Press, which has successfully established its property right in news. Broadcasting of domestic news was confined by resolution to the day and night field of the member broadcasting as the case might be.

In recognition to the unique services to the association rendered by Norman Smith, Ottawa Journal, for five years president of the Canadian Press, a presentation was made to him on the evening of April 28, by his fellow members. This took the form of a modern grandfather's clock, accompanied by an illuminated address, as follows:

"At the last annual general meeting of the Canadian Press, held in Vancouver June 4, 1924, it was unanimously resolved:

" 'That this annual general meeting of members of the Canadian Press desires to express to Mr. Norman Smith the lively sense of obligation its membership throughout the Dominion feel toward him for his work as president during the past four years, for his courageous leadership, his vision, his devotion to the ideal of co-operative news service, and the free expenditure of his time and energy in bringing the association through the most critical period in its history.'

"During your five years' term of office you have striven unceasingly for the ideal laid down by resolution at the last annual meeting, namely, 'towards an enduring policy looking to the maintenance of the Canadian Press as a national organization on a truly co-operative basis for the mutual advantage of its members and the people in every section of Canada.' This ideal has been clarified and determined by the recent difficulties through which the Company has passed, and never before has its membership presented so united front. They now desire to express to you their gratitude in this more formal fashion, and to mark their affection by the accompanying gift, which it is their hope may long tell out to you and your family its clear and ringing message of the love and esteem of your fellow members of the Canadian Press, the undersigned Daily Newspaper Publishers of Canada."

BLANCHARD HONORED

Tendered Dinner on Completing Years As Advertising Instructor

In recognition of his contribution to advertising, educators, business men and students alike honored Frank Le Rowe Blanchard, dean of advertising instructors who has just completed his twentieth year as director of the Blanchard Advertising course of the Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A., the first advertising course to be established in the country.

The dinner was in the nature of a farewell party for owing to the pressure of work in his present position as director of public relations for the Henry L. Doherty Company, Mr. Blanchard ceases his connection with the course May 1.

Ex-Governor Charles S. Whitman presided at the dinner which was held at the McAlpin Hotel, Thursday evening, April 30. At that time, not only was Mr. Blanchard honored, but the importance of training as a factor in advertising, was emphasized. Other speakers included George B. Hotchkiss, New York University, Ernest Elmer Calkins of Calkins and Holden, and Burt B. Farnsworth, Professor of Psychology at Springfield College.

The committee on the dinner included Frank Presbrey, W. T. Mullally Earl, G. Pearson, F. H. Lawrence, Lou Holland, president of the A. A. C. W., H. L. Charles, president of the Advertising Clubs of New York and James Wright Brown of Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Men—BETHLEHEM Welcomes You to the Brass Tacks Convention
Associated Advertising Clubs of the World—Second District
Comprising members of the States of New York, Pennsylvania New Jersey and Delaware HOTEL BETHLEHEM, Bethlehem, Pa.
Summer Training Camp for Ad Men
A truly great Post Graduate Course in Practical Advertising
Business Sessions: Mornings and Afternoons of June 1 and 2.
Social Activities: Start Sunday Evening, May 31 and will wind up Wednesday, June 3.
Registration Fee $5 per person includes sessions, dances and entertainment
Hotel Reservations at Hotel Bethlehem, guaranteed only if registration is made on or before May 20th.

DAILY PAPERS FROM OTHER CITIES
HOTALING'S NEWS STAND
BROADWAY AND 43RD ST.
NORTH END THE TIMES BUILDING
"Perhaps the most cosmopolitan spot in New York City is Forty-third Street at Broadway . . . Here is a mammoth news stand which sells newspapers from every city in the world. . . Every cown has similar stands, but none as huge as this and none as varied and as picturesque in its patronage."
—Boston Transcript, Oct. 29, 192
HOTALING'S NEWS AGENCY, 308 WEST 40th STREET, NEW YOR

IAGAZINE REVENUE TOPPED $110,000,000 IN 1924, BY CROWELL SURVEY

ven Manufacturers Spent More Than $1,000,000 Each—Revenue of 30 Magazines Grew from $26,000,000 Ten Years Ago

XPENDITURES in thirty magazines of national circulation by advertisers nding at least $10,000 totalled $110,-15,851 in 1924, according to a statement en out this week by Lee W. Maxwell, sident of the Crowell Publishing mpany. This is a gain of $12,000,000 er the advertising investments in these gazines in the previous year and is re than 4 times the amount spent in 15.

Figures compiled by EDITOR & PUBLISHER for 108 newspapers in 23 cities er the total volume in agate lines carried by these papers for the eleven-year riod 1925-1914. This volume increased from 668,738,839 agate lines in 5 to 1,178,517,239 agate lines in 1924—10-year period covered by the Crowell rvey. Newspaper rate schedules are available on any comprehensive de for years prior to 1919, but the inrease in the average newspaper minimum te on contract national advertising approximates 70 per cent. The combination of factors indicates that newspaper dvertising revenues have about tripled ring the decade. The newspaper figures clude all lineage, while the Crowell tistics exclude accounts of less than 0,000 a year. Accounts of this size were re abundant in 1915 than they are ay, and their inclusion would probably ll the 1915 total to a greater extent n it would affect the 1924 figures.

a statement given out yesterday Lee Maxwell, President of the Crowell blishing Company, pointed to the fact business last year spent more for adsing in national magazines than in previous year, topping the expendis of the year before by about $12,-000. "The significant thing is that rtising seems to have attained the is of an economic index," said Mr. lcwell, "and many authorities on ecnic matters now consider advertising ds in judging business conditions, g with car loadings, building conrtion, grain production, bank clear-etc.

As we look back over the past ten s, and note how advertising totals increased it is not difficult to under-d the importance of advertising in its lion to the whole economic picture," eCrowell statement reads.

n 1915, for example, the manufacrs of the United States expended $26,-82 for magazine advertising alone. year the amount of money expended magazine advertising was $110,116,851 again, in ten years, of $83,607,298, or 3 per cent, and a gain of $1,938,837 e 1920, the previous peak year.

otal investments in 30 leading nonr magazines, of manufacturers spendat least $10,000 for national adverig in magazines, were as follows:

.....	$26,509,382
.....	35,091,861
.....	44,620,813
.....	48,625,821
.....	78,055,825
.....	108,178,014
.....	77,360,411
.....	79,762,673
.....	98,697,012
.....	110,116,851

"The largest advertiser in 1924, Campbell Soup Company, expended $1,519,250, while in 1915 the largest advertiser was Quaker Oats Company, with an expenditure of $738,289.

"In 1924, moreover, seven manufacturers—Campbell Soup Company, Proctor & Gamble Company, Lever Bros. Company, Postum Cereal Company, Inc., Congoleum Company, Inc., Victor Talking Machine Company, and Colgate & Company—each spent more than a million dollars for magazine advertising.

"Of the twenty-three main classes of business, foods and food beverages (third in 1923) led in 1924, with an expenditure of $15,791,337. The automotive industry (first in 1923) came next, with expenditures totalling $15,744,732. Drugs and toilet goods (second in 1923) was third with an aggregate expenditure of $15,-074,880.

"The number of products advertised in leading magazines in 1924 was 2,005, compared with 978 in 1915, an increase of 1,027, or 105 per cent.

"The average magazine advertising investment per product, in 1924 was $54,-921.

"These figures, from the latest Crowell study of national markets and national advertising, are based on the advertising carried by 30 national non-farm magazines, and represent approximately 90 per cent of all money expended in such magazines by the manufacturers of this country."

CALIFORNIA DAILY SOLD

Schell and McSorley Buy Pacific Grove Review from W. J. Thyes

Fred W. Schnell and J. P. McSorley, treasurer and managing editor respectively of the San Francisco Journal during the five years previous to its consolidation with the San Francisco Bulletin have announced their purchase of the Pacific Grove (Cal.) Review, evening daily, from W. J. Thyes, publisher.

The new publishers stated that their policy would be two-fold, "First to publish as good a daily newspaper as possible, and second to work indefatigably for the future prosperity and present good of Pacific Grove."

Portland Broadcasting Station Assured

With the organization last week of the Forest City Broadcasting Corporation a radio broadcasting station in Portland, Me., is assured. The plant, which will be of 1,000 watt power, will be located on the roof of the Portland Press-Herald building.

GEORGIA EDITORS IN N. Y.

200 Make Trip by Boat from Savannah Headed by Rountree

Members of the Georgia Press Association and their guests, numbering 200 persons, arrived in New York, April 28, on the Savannah Line's newest steamer, City of Chattanooga, from Savannah. Elaborate plans were made to entertain the editors who made the trip at the end of their mid-year meeting in Savannah.

They were entertained at a luncheon Tuesday at the plant of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company. In the evening the Georgia Society gave a dinner-dance in their honor at the Strand Roof Cascades, Robert Adamson, newly elected president of the Southern Society of New York, was toastmaster. On Wednesday they were guests at a luncheon of the Hammermill Bond Company. In the evening they were entertained by the American Press Association at a dinner and theatre party, followed by a visit to the New York Times. On Thursday they had breakfast aboard the United States liner Leviathan at the foot of West Forty-sixth street and were luncheon guests of the American Type Foundry Company at its plant.

The visiting Georgia editors were headed by Charles P. Rountree, editor of the Wrightsville (Ga.) Headlight, as president of the Georgia Press Association.

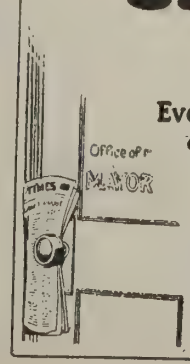
Broadcasting Facilities Increased

Instead of decreasing attention paid to radio during summer months, the San Antonio Express and Evening News, broadcasting through Station WOAI of the Southern Equipment Company, are increasing the attention. This has been made possible, according to A. W. Grant, managing editor of the Express, by the rebuilding of the station to the super-broadcasting class, making WOAI the first super-station in the south. It is now using upward of 1,000 watts and has increased the number of weekly programs.

GASOLINE PRICES

Are they fixed by the Standard Oil Company?

Or are they fixed by competition and supply and demand?



The facts and figures, by which you may reach your own conclusion, are set forth in detail in our report on this difficult and complex question.

Our report mailed April 11 gives a clear picture of "The French Financial Problem," the factors contributing to the downfall of the Herriot ministry, and the situation confronting the new Cabinet.

EDITORIAL RESEARCH REPORTS

1425 G Street Washington, D. C.

Detroit Times

Evening 220,000

Sunday 250,000

In New Orleans It's

THE MORNING TRIBUNE
(Published week-day mornings)

THE NEW ORLEANS ITEM
(Published week-day afternoons)

THE ITEM TRIBUNE
(Published Sunday mornings)

Sold to National Advertisers at a combination rate 15c a line week-days and 18c a line Sundays.

For those who accept the principle that want-ads furnish the surest test of reader confidence—and who will doubt it?—the want-ad pages of The Dallas News tell a convincing story.

Still, the fact that The News leads all Texas papers in number of want-ads will occasion no surprise among those who know their Texas.

The DALLAS MORNING NEWS
Supreme in Texas

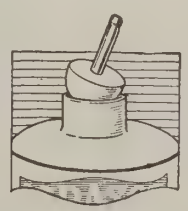
QUICK STICK PASTE POWDER

For

Single and Bundle Wrapping

For the mailing room of a newspaper Quick-Stick has no equal. It is mixed in a minute—possesses greater strength than the paper itself and when once applied it will not let go. Use Quick-Stick for single and bundle wrapping. Mixed thin and strained it forms a highly efficient paste for facing and backing matrices.

No. 705 A Superior Paste



for the

Mailing Machine

A smooth, easy flowing white paste that permits the fastest labeling possible. It will not sour or mould regardless of weather conditions and will not clog or gum up the fountain. It will pay you to give No. 705 a trial in your mailing machine.

COPASCO

Let the boys use it

Copasco is a convenient desk paste—economical—never dries out—never needs water—won't cake—spreads smoothly and evenly at all times. Let the men at the desks give Copasco a trial.

THE COMMERCIAL PASTE CO.
Makers of the Largest Line of Adhesives
DEPT. 51 COLUMBUS, OHIO

NEWSPAPERS AS BACKBONE OF AD DRIVE TOPIC AT A. N. A. CHICAGO MEET

M. B. Bates, Advertising Manager, Life Savers, Inc., Will Talk on Value of Press to Advertisers—Program Announced for Convention May 6-8

"GETTING the Most out of Newspapers" is a theme chosen for discussion before the Association of National Advertisers, Inc., at its semi-annual meeting scheduled to be held at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago, May 6-8, according to the program announced this week by Robert K. Leavitt, secretary of the association.

Slated as speakers on this topic are M. B. Bates, advertising manager of Life Savers, Inc., Bennett Chapple, of the American Rolling Mill Company, and E. M. Swasey, formerly advertising manager of the New York American, now connected with the American Weekly.

Other convention topics are listed in the program as "Strengthening the Chain of Distribution," "Description of Noteworthy Campaigns by Their Directors," and "Radio Advertising."

G. Lynn Sumner, vice-president of the International Correspondence Schools, and associated president, will preside.

The subject chosen by Mr. Bates is "Newspapers as the Backbone of the Life Savers Campaign." Mr. Bates in an interview printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Feb. 21, told how newspapers were being put to test in his firm's 1925 drive. He declared scientific study had been made to reach the conclusion dailies were the best media.

"By study we had divided the nation into a combination of many local units, instead of just a conglomerate mass," Mr. Bates explained at that time. "What we wanted of course, was contact with people. But we wanted moreover to reach as many people as we possibly could in each unit. The newspapers, therefore, appeared to be the obvious and natural selection."

Remaining speakers and their subjects will be: E. D. Gibbs, National Cash Register Company, "How the Advertising Department Helps the Sales Department Get Business"; M. Garver, Garver Brothers, Strasburg, O., "How National Advertising Looks to the Man Behind the Counter"; J. M. Townley, Townley Metal and Hardware Company, Kansas City, Mo., "Looking Both Ways at National Advertising—a Jobber's Viewpoint"; J. W. McIver, Edison Lamp Works, "Dealer Helps that Really Help"; W. K. Towers, Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company, "Securing Dealer Co-operation for the Manufacturer's Advertising"; and R. D. Baldwin, Simonds Saw & Steel Company, "Getting Closer to the Dealer through Direct Mail from Branch Offices."

Advertising managers who directed noteworthy campaigns this past year who will speak are F. H. Camp, Log Cabin Products Company; A. D. Welton, Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago; P. B. Zimmerman, National Lamp Works; Eben Griffiths, Vacuum Oil Company; W. S. Rowe, Estate Stove Company; and H. M. Bourne, H. J. Heinz Company.

Radio advertising will be discussed by R. C. Lang, Gold Dust Corporation and L. R. McQueen, B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company.

The speaker at the semi-annual dinner to be held May 7 will be Ralph Parlette of Chicago.

HEARST EXECUTIVES MEET

One Hundred Representatives from All Papers Confer in Chicago

The annual convention of the Hearst newspaper executives was held in Chicago, April 16-18, and was attended by more than one hundred publishers, display and classified advertising managers, circulation managers, and other Hearst executives.

The program was so arranged that four separate departmental meetings were in progress at the same time on the first day of the convention. On the second and third days, the display, classified and circulation managers besides continuing their own meetings held joint meetings with the publishers.

Topics for discussion and action at the different departmental meetings were strictly in keeping with the problems and activities of the respective departments.

The publishers' meetings and the joint sessions were presided over by D. E. Town of the executive council, New York.

Chairmen of the other departmental meetings were, display managers, M. C. Meigs, Chicago Evening American; classified, R. E. Seiler, Los Angeles Examiner; circulation, M. L. Annenberg, circulation director and member executive council, New York.

On Friday Mr. Hearst and Mr. Brisbane addressed the assemblage, emphasizing the desirability and value of co-operation, exchange of ideas, and newspaper promotion.

Des Moines Churches to Advertise

A combined advertising campaign participated in by virtually every church in Des Moines will shortly be launched under the direction of Graham Stewart, advertising manager of the People's Popular Monthly of that city. The campaign is sponsored by the Advertising Club of Des Moines, and is being laid out with the assistance of the "Church Advertising Campaign" booklet prepared by Durant F. Ladd, of the Advertising Club of Boston and published by the Associated Advertising Clubs, New York.

Fowler Joins New York Agency

George S. Fowler, advertising manager for Colgate & Co., has resigned to join the J. Walter Thompson Company, advertising agency, New York.

DROP IN LYNCHINGS CREDITED TO PRESS

Inter-Racial Commission Says Newspaper Condemnation Largely Responsible for 70 Per Cent Decrease in Past 3 Years

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

ATLANTA, Ga., April 27.—Newspapers of the South are leading the way to total eradication of the lynching evil, according to reports of the officials of the Inter-Racial Commission submitted at a meeting April 24-26 in Atlanta.

R. B. Eleazer, publicity director for the Commission, in his annual report, declared that as a result of newspaper condemnation largely emanating from Southern states, race redations today are better than ever before, and lynchings have undergone a sensational decrease of 70 per cent during the past three years.

He exhibited numerous clippings from southern papers expressing unanimous and vigorous condemnation of lynching.

The report showed also a wide and general use of the Commission's press service, clippings being in evidence from 450 newspapers, the majority of them in the South. The purpose of this service, according to Mr. Eleazer, is to promote better understanding and more helpful relations between the races, to the advantage of both.

Another speaker at the session who emphasized the importance of anti-lynching work being done by newspapers was Dr. Monroe Work, statistician of Tuskegee University, in Alabama, who had been in charge of records on lynchings in the United States for many years.

He declared there has been a marked increase in years in public and editorial condemnation of mob violence, adding that the influence resulting therefrom ranked alongside of passage of adequate anti-lynching laws in a number of states and increased vigilance on the part of officers of the law in bringing about a rapid decline in lynching.

"ESPIONAGE" BILL PASSED

Wisconsin Measure Makes Criticism of Banks a Crime

Called a new espionage act, a bill that has just passed both houses of the Wisconsin legislature and goes to the governor for signing, will make it a crime to print or circulate in any form statements derogatory to the financial conditions of banks or co-operative institutions of the state.

Be it by inference or by direct statement or by inducing another to issue a statement or rumor that may question the financial condition or affect the "solvency, standing, or credit of any banking institution, trust company or co-operative establishment," the person or newspaper violating this law is punishable by a fine of $100 to $1,000, by one year's imprisonment, or by both.

The text of the bill follows:

"Any person who shall wilfully and maliciously make, calculate or transmit to another or others, any false statement, rumor or suggestion, written, printed or by word of mouth, which is directly or by inference derogatory to the financial condition or affects the solvency, the standing, or the credit of any bank, savings bank, banking institution, trust company, or co-operative association organized under the laws of the state of Wisconsin, doing business in this state, or who shall counsel, aid, procure or induce another to start, transmit or circulate any such statement or rumor, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for a term of not more than one year, or both. This act shall take effect upon passage and publication."

FIRST IN OHIO

4,923,701 LINES

JANUARY 1st to MARCH 31st, 1925

The Dispatch published during the first three months approximately 54% of all Columbus newspaper advertising and 785,638 lines more than all other Columbus newspapers combined.

In 1924 it exceeded the next largest Ohio newspaper by 2,500,909 lines.

NET PAID CIRCULATION

City	54,851
Suburban	28,024
Country	22,944
GRAND TOTAL	105,819

LARGEST IN CENTRAL OHIO

Columbus Dispatch

OHIO'S GREATEST HOME DAILY

Church People in Your Town

The people in your town who are headed for church on Sunday morning constitute an impressive total. They are the real, substantial folk in any community. They are interested in religion because they know that it is a good thing for them and for their town.

The newspaper which helps Christianity in any community does a real service.

And any institution which serves its community will profit.

The Church Advertising Department has available suggestive copy for joint advertising of Christianity. The price for use is only 3 cents per week per thousand circulation.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A.A.C.W.

383 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

DR. C. F. REISNER, President

NEWSPAPER CONTEST STIMULATING STUDY OF THE CONSTITUTION

National Oratorical Contest Finals to Be Held in Washington, May 8, With Coolidge Presiding—Backed by 28 Newspapers

ONE of the most remarkable educational movements in the history of American journalism is the National Oratorical Contest on the Constitution, which will come to its climax in Washington on May 8, with President Coolidge presiding and members of the United States Supreme Court as judges to pass upon the speeches of the seven best high school orators out of the 1,400,000 pupils in all parts of the country who have taken part in the contest.

The contest is financed and conducted by the following newspapers: Chicago Daily News, Detroit News, Los Angeles Times, Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Indianapolis News, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, Washington Star, Atlanta Constitution, Birmingham Age-Herald, Montgomery Journal, Mobile News-Item, Nashville Tennessean, New Orleans Item, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Kansas City Star, Mobile Register, Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, Buffalo Express, Oklahoma City Oklahoman, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch, Huntington Herald-Dispatch, Des Moines Capital, Hartford Courant, Syracuse Post-Standard, Rochester Democrat-Chronicle, Columbia State and Charlotte Observer.

The scope of the project is shown in the following summary for the entire country:

Participants, 1,400,000.
Schools, 16,216.
All awards, $46,650.
All publications giving publicity to contest, 1,120.

The project is now in its second year, and the participation this year is 40 per cent larger than it was in 1924. President Coolidge, in an address at the final meeting last year said:

"This is the most effective method for interesting young men and women in American institutions."

Dr. E. L. Saner, the president of the American Bar Association, said of the project: "It is the most distinguished piece of disinterested newspaper service of a decade."

Randolph Leigh, 323 Star Building, Washington, D. C., is the organizer and director of the Contest, while the advisory committee consists of Frank B. Noyes, Washington Star; Victor F. Lawson, Chicago Daily News; W. L. McLean, Jr., Philadelphia Bulletin; F. Thompson, Birmingham Age-Herald; R. E. Stout, Kansas City Star; Harry Chandler, Los Angeles Times.

For the purposes of the contest the country is divided into seven major zones: Northeastern, Eastern, Southeastern, Southern, Central, Mid-western and Pacific. Their clearing centers are New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Nashville, Indianapolis, Kansas City and San Francisco. These zones are subdivided into newspaper territories. Each newspaper territory is divided into from one to 49 districts, according to its size and geographical requirements. The districts are apportioned according to school enrollments and geographical location. From the national standpoint the working unit is the newspaper territory. From the school standpoint it is the school.

Any bona-fide secondary school pupil, under 19 years of age on February 1, 1925, was eligible. A pupil who has graduated from a High School and is taking post-graduate work of any kind in the same or a similar institution is not a bona-fide pupil in this use of the term and is, therefore, ineligible, even though within the age limit. In the case of an educational institution offering collegiate as well as secondary courses, only those pupils in the grades paralleling the public high schools are eligible.

The orations must be original, must not require more than ten minutes for delivery, and must be on any one of the following subjects:

The Constitution
Washington and the Constitution
Hamilton and the Constitution
Jefferson and the Constitution
Marshall and the Constitution
Madison and the Constitution
Webster and the Constitution
Lincoln and the Constitution

Local judges are appointed and both local and sectional elimination contests are held. Sectional contests are now underway and the winners will report in Washington for the finals May 8.

The contest is a potent force in stimulating study of the Constitution among school children. Since the first contest was held 33 states have passed laws making study of the Constitution compulsory.

PRESENT TESTIMONIALS

N. Y. Publishers Honor Frank Munsey, F. D. White, B. Merrill, W. C. Field

Four testimonials, handsomely framed, were presented to Frank A. Munsey, of the Munsey publications; Florence D. White, of the New York World; Bradford Merrill, of the Hearst publications, and William C. Field, of the New York Daily News, by the New York Publishers' Association at a recent meeting in recognition of their services in drafting a new contract with the striking New York pressmen in 1923. The testimonials were signed by 22 New York publishers.

Presentation was made at a luncheon-meeting at the Hardware Club by Hugh O'Donnell, of the New York Times. Herbert F. Gunnison, of the Brooklyn Eagle, chairman of the association, presided. In addition to the testimonials, each of the four men was given a walking stick engraved with his initials. Mr. Munsey acted as chairman of the committee which drew up the contract.

J. Mora Boyle Promoted

J. Mora Boyle, who has been advertising manager of the New York Daily Mirror since shortly after it started publication, has been made advertising director in full charge of advertising.

WEEK'S AD TIPS

Sterling Beeson, Inc., 612 Second National Bank Building, Toledo. Now handling account of the Air-Way Electric Appliance Company, Toledo, manufacturers of radio products.

Burns-Hall Advertising Agency, Merrill Building, Milwaukee. Handling account of F. Mayer Boot & Shoe Company, Milwaukee, manufacturers, shoes.

Dorrance, Sullivan & Company, 130 West 42nd street, New York. Has secured the account of Pathex, Inc., New York City, manufacturers of the Pathex Motion Picture Camera and Projector.

Hicks Advertising Agency, 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York. Handling the Richard J. Hickson Fashions account.

Charles W. Hoyt Company, Inc., 116 West 32nd street, New York. Has secured account of the Dentinol & Pyorrhocide Company, New York City, manufacturers, "Pyorrhocide" powder dentifrice.

H. W. Kastor & Sons Company, Inc., 52 Vanderbilt avenue. New York. Placing account of M. J. Breitenbach Company, New York, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan."

Lord & Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Will make up lists for the American Walnut Manufacturers Association, Chicago, during May and June, to advertise "American Walnut Wood."

H. K. McCann Company, 61 Broadway, New York. Handling account of the Publicity Bureau State of Maine.

Massengale Advertising Agency, 121 Peachtree street, Atlanta. Handling account of the Savannah Fence & Roofing Company, Savannah.

Peck Advertising Agency, Inc., 6 East 39th street, New York. Appointed agents for the Eastern part of the United States by the Corcoran Mfg. Company, Not-A-Toy Division, Cincinnati.

Ruthrauff & Ryan, Inc., 136 West 31st street, New York. Placing account of A. V. Victorious, New York City, "Protectolite" auto guide light.

PINKERTON PLANS DAILY

Former San Diego Sun Editor to Launch Paper in Ventura

A new afternoon newspaper will make its appearance in Ventura, Cal., about June 1, according to Roy D. Pinkerton, until recently editor of the San Diego (Cal.) Sun. Pinkerton has signed a five-year lease on a new building in which will be located the newspaper plant.

BUILDINGS
PLANT LAYOUTS
PRODUCTION
OPERATION

An organization specializing solely in newspaper building design, manufacturing and production problems.

S. P. WESTON
Newspaper Buildings
Plant Layouts
Production, Operation
West 42d Street New York

Beaumont and 20 mile area
Population over 150,000
Ranks in importance to the other four large Texas markets. Sales managers cannot cover Texas with only four papers.
The BEAUMONT ENTERPRISE
AND
The BEAUMONT JOURNAL
cover the Fifth Market in Texas and the Third Market in Louisiana.
"Ask Beckwith—He Knows"

A Dependable Means of Increasing Classified Lineage
Write for Particulars
Associated Editors, Inc.
440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Vanderbilt means
Newspapers Clean Enough For Every Home!
Where do you want your advertising to go?

Another Group

Selects Imperial

THE Imperial Plus Metal Plan is just as popular with publishers of Newspaper Groups as it is with publishers of individual newspapers. The James M. Cox Group consisting of the Dayton News, The Canton News, The Springfield News and the Miami Daily News, four splendid papers, is one of many newspaper groups that depends upon the Plus Plan.

The Plus Plan is unusually adaptable. It serves equally well the village weekly, the metropolitan daily and the group of newspapers published under one management. It is within the scope of the Plus Plan to keep the type metal of each of the three classes fit at all times, thereby increasing the working life of the metal.

How About Your Metal?

Is it being kept efficient by means of a systematical, economical Plan? Is it giving as many years of work as it should? Send for a copy of the Plus Plan that tells you how you can get the most from your type metal.

Imperial METAL
Linotype—Monotype—Intertype
Stereotype
Elrod—Ludlow—Linograph—Thompson
Imperial Type Metal Co.
Philadelphia—Cleveland—New York—Chicago

BROOKLYN TIMES OPENS PLANT TO PUBLIC

Occupancy of New Home Celebrated with Special Supplement—Prominent Men Send Congratulations

The new plant of the Brooklyn Times, at 540 Atlantic avenue, was formally opened to the public Wednesday, April 29, and the event celebrated with the publication of a 96-page New Home supplement.

In addition to greetings by Governor Smith, Theodore Roosevelt, Mayor Hylan, Arthur S. Somers, president of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, United States Senator Copeland, Borough President Guider and other leading officials, the supplement contained a biography of Carson C. Peck, former publisher of the Times, a chronicle of the Brooklyn Times during the seventy-seven years of its history, with reference to the distinguished men who were on its editorial staff.

It also included a poem dedicated to the Brooklyn Times by John A. Heffernan, associate editor, which reads as follows:

THE SOUL OF A NEWSPAPER

What am I? From rushing presses hurled
To tell a day's tale to an eager world?

I am the pictured story on the cliff;
I am the record of the hieroglyph.

I am the bard's recital to the tribe;
I am the writing of the watching scribe.

I am the palmer's narrative relayed
Of strange adventures on the last Crusade.

I am the whisper that runs through the throng;
The burden of the ballad singer's song.

The gypsy's tale the road-edge fire beside;
The warrior's victories. the chieftain's pride.

I am the echo of the battle's din;
The wand'rers' stories in the village inn.

I am the message come from distant clime;
The Night Watch tidings; the cathedral chime.

The long news-letter to the country squire
That tells of court's intrigue and king's desire.

The measured rhetoric from Senate halls;
The chatter of the busy market stalls.

I am the merchant's guide, the wit's applause;
The voice of people's or of party's cause.

I am the Winged Tongue that rapid flies . . .
Ephemeral who ever lives and dies!

I am the picture of the race's strife:
The mirror of the pageantry of life!

* * *

Thus am I! . . . From spinning presses whirled
To tell a day's tale to an eager world!

The opening of the new plant took place ten years after the death of Carson C. Peck, vice-president and general manager of the F. W. Woolworth Company, who purchased the stock of the Brooklyn Times when the newspaper was on the verge of bankruptcy after 67 years of existence, and who died on April 29, 1915, after laying down the policies which have been the guiding principles along which the newspaper has been since conducted by his widow, Mrs. Carson C. Peck, and his son, the present publisher, Fremont Carson Peck, under the immediate supervision of John N. Harman.

The present executives of the Times are Fremont Carson Peck, publisher, John N. Harman, vice-president and general manager, John A. Heffernan, associate editor, Walter M. Oestreicher, managing editor and John W. Smith, city editor.

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD

Los Angeles, Calif.

Gained 3,749 Daily Average Circulation Sworn Government Statement, Six Months Ending March 31, 1924, 173,549 Daily. Six Months, Ending March 31, 1925, 177,298 Daily. Increase in Daily Average Circulation, 3,749.

IT COVERS THE FIELD COMPLETELY

REPRESENTATIVES:
H. W. Moloney, 604 Times Bldg., New York.
G. Logan Payne Co., 401 Tower Bldg., 6 North Michigan Ave., Chicago.
A. J. Norris Hill, 710 Hearst Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

DAILY OCCUPIES NEW PLANT

Five Thousand Persons Visit New Home of Hannibal (Mo.) Courier Post

The Hannibal (Mo.) Courier Post recently completed its new building and issued a 70-page special edition commemorating the event. This is the second time the plant has been completed within the year, fire having badly damaged the structure Feb. 21, on the eve of occupancy.

The new building is modern in every detail and houses a 24-page Scott press. More than 5,000 persons inspected the plant on the day it was formally opened.

The Courier Post is a member of the Lee Syndicate. J. B. Jeffries, president of the Missouri Associated Press, is publisher. E. L. Sparks is business manager.

CANADIAN DAILIES MEET IN TORONTO

George E. Scroggie, Toronto Mail and Empire, Elected President at Annual Meeting—Agency Contacts Discussed

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

TORONTO, April 30.—With large attendance and keen interest in various matters discussed, the annual meeting of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Association held in the King Edward Hotel here yesterday was the best in the history of the organization. Reports presented indicated the association to be in a healthy condition both as regards membership and finances, while the work of committees has been actively prosected throughout the year. The report of the board of directors stated that definite and substantial progress had been made in the direction of increasing the value of the Association's service to members.

Of outstanding importance was the strengthening of the work in advertising promotion, a special appropriation having been made for this purpose last November and office arrangements adjusted to permit of a manager devoting practically his entire time to it. The manager is now making personal contact with present and prospective national advertisers and agencies, supplemented by carefully prepared promotional literature.

Another achievement was placing on an entirely new basis relations with recognized advertising agencies. For several years the directors and the advertising committee had been in negotiation with agencies looking to standardization of practice and relations through a signed agreement.

Difficulties had been encountered but the agencies were hopeful these could be overcome. During the past year they had come into an agreement with the Association's views. An attempt to conclude a long debated agreement has been abandoned and it has been decided that further efforts to secure improved conditions should be along the lines of conference and education rather than to attempt to regulate by agreement. A joint standing committee has been appointed and is doing good work. Another important development was securing an incorporation under the Dominion Companies Act removing the element of personal individual liability and placing the Association in a better position to carry on its work.

The first international arbitration agreement was negotiated during the year this being with the International Printing Pressmen's Union which should be acceptable to those desiring protection of arbitration for press rooms and are not members of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. There were no developments requiring special action by the paper and circulation committees.

The officers elected were: president, George E. Scroggie, Toronto Mail and Empire; vice-president, Hon. Frank Carrel, Quebec Telegraph; treasurer, N. T. Bowman, Toronto Telegram.

Directors: W. H. Dennis, Halifax Herald; T. F. Drummie, St. John Telegraph Journal and Times Star; L. J. Tarte, Montreal LaPatrie; Henri Gagnon, Quebec Le Soleil; J. R. Henderson, Montreal Gazette; V. E. Morrill, Sherbrooke Record; L. H. Dingman, St. Thomas Times-Journal, F. I. Ker, Hamilton Spectator; R. M. Glover, Peterboro Examiner; J. W. Curran, Sault Ste. Marie Star; Hugh Graybiel, Windsor Border Cities Star; E. H. Macklin, Manitoba Free Press; Burford Hooke, Regina Leader Post; J. H. Woods, Calgary Herald; F. J. Burd, Vancouver Province; John M. Imrie, Edmonton Journal; W. Buchanan, Lethbridge Herald; M. E. Nichols, Winnipeg Tribune; W. S. Marson, Montreal Star and Senator J. S. McLennan, Sydney Post.

Chairmen of standing committees: Paper, P. D. Ross, Ottawa Journal; Cost and Record, G. A. Disher, Ottawa Citizen; Advertising, W. B. Preston, Brantford Expositor; Postal, and Parliamentary, F. R. Parkinson, Ottawa Journal; Labor, J. R. Henderson, Montreal Gazette; Circulation, George McTaggart, Toronto Mail and Empire.

The convention concluded with a banquet addressed by Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, Premier Ferguson of Ontario and C. A. Magrath, International Waterways Commission.

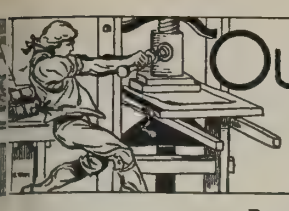
Book Dedicated to C. M. Palmer

The name of Charles M. Palmer, newspaper broker, appears on the dedication fly-leaf of Irvin S. Cobb's new book, "Alias Ben Alibi," a story of New York newspaper days of the recent past.

Some day they may round up all the rum runners, but they'll never get all the paragraph pirates.—J. R. W. in Milwaukee Journal.

Why so much talk about it? Riding an electric horse is merely a current event.—Cleveland Times.

NEW YORK STATE
Westchester County's
Fastest Growing Cities
Mount Vernon and New Rochelle and The Vicinity Towns
Are Covered Completely by
THE DAILY ARGUS
of
Mount Vernon
THE STANDARD STAR
of
New Rochelle
(Both Members of ABC)
Westchester Newspapers, Inc.
Franklin A. Merriam, Pres.
Mount Vernon—New Rochelle



DURING 1924
The Plain Dealer
published
51% of ALL the National lineage appearing in
ALL Cleveland Newspapers
The Plain Dealer
ONE Medium—ONE Cost ALONE Will sell it
J. B. Woodward, 110 E. 42d St., New York
Woodward & Kelly, Security Bldg., Chicago

A Traveling Salesman recently said:
"The shopkeepers in Norristown, Pennsylvania, will not stock my line because it is not advertised in the Norristown Times Herald"
Montgomery County's
Great Home Newspaper

A Security Market
with complete newspaper financial service.
Buffalo offers a promising market for high grade securities. The Buffalo Evening News financial and business pages are complete, interesting, prompt; carrying TO-DAY'S news of activities in commerce and markets TO-DAY.
The News with its effective coverage and responsive reader interest, offers the financial advertiser the complete audience in the Buffalo territory.
A. B. C. Sept. 30, 1924, *124,468 total net paid.
Cover the Buffalo Market with the
BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
*Present average circulation 129,834
Edward H. Butler, Editor and Publisher
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives
Marbridge Bldg., New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Los Angeles Times
California's Great Newspaper
More news, reading matter and advertising than any other Pacific Coast newspaper.
Circulation 96% home delivered and 95% concentrated in the Los Angeles metropolitan market.

Packing your grip for New York? So are we . . .
THE BASIL L. SMITH SYSTEM, Inc.
International Classified Advertising Counsellors
Packard Building, Philadelphia

Our Own World of Letters

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

ERLE THORPE, the editor of The Nation's Business, asks in his May the question "Have You Ever ught of a Great Cartoonist as a t Teacher?" He answers this ques- by printing an article by Henry tt on Jay N. Darling—better known Ding," famous for his cartoons in the York Herald Tribune and other spapers to which they are syndicated. r. Darling, according to this article, ucts a course in picture economics. distinguishing characteristics of his ures is the absence of a picric pen. the contrary, a smile is inserted in his cartoons dealing with economic cts.

r. Darling is quoted as saying:

"hadn't thought of them in that way. What to be is fair, honest. If I can't treat ject honestly, I drop it. You can't fool ublic even part of the time these days getting mad at it only drives away your nce; so what else is there to do but be natured—and reasonable."

number of cartoons by Darling illus- the article.

* * *

E Labour Publishing Co., Ltd., of 38 Great Ormond street, W. C. 1, lon, England, announces for early cation "The Miracle of Fleet Street" George Lansbury, M. P. Briefly, ook is the story of the Daily Herald, bor newspaper published in London. reasons doubtless known to most ers, the Daily Herald became, for ile, a weekly journal but later re- d daily publication. Incidentally, it be remarked that the author of the was the founder of the Herald.

* * *

THOUT a doubt the most complete library relating to printing and its il arts is the one that has been ght together by the American Type ders Company of Jersey City—a ry of more than 12,000 volumes. A pamphlet describing this typo- hic library and museum, may be ned upon application to Henry s Bullen, Librarian, 300 Commuti- avenue, Jersey City, N. J.

* * *

the "hot air page" which announces ne features, Harper's Magazine that it will print next month an le on "Wild Journalism in News- Circulation" by a "prominent paper man." The blurb adds that ill present unanswerable facts about papers where their own editors read only "to see if we're handing out arly what the boobs like for break- "

* * *

SYMPOSIUM "The Editor and His People" appears in The Bookman May. To it contribute Robert H. s of the Frank A. Munsey Com- ; John O'Hara Cosgrave, editor, unday magazine section of the New World; and George Jean Nathan, f the editors of the American Mer- speaking of the whimsical reading ic, Mr. Davis says that "it sips its tainment from every flower that blooms, not infrequently pausing at some weed in search of pungent cordial." He also believes that editing is both a grave responsibility and a dangerous occupation—"an enterprise equal in peril to that encountered by one who walks a desert only to be lured from the right path by an inviting mirage that suddenly appears on the distant horizon."

What is an editor? Mr. Cosgrave thinks that an editor may be a promoter, showman, artist, or evangelist—preferably all of them, if he be heaven born. He points out that the editor is limited by his medium—"either he is conveyed by his subjects or cruises under his own power."

Mr. Nathan, on the other hand, believes that there are three types of editing. First, he lists pure commercial editing—"editing for circulation with profit from circulation and from advertising as the sole end in view." The next type of editing he calls the Messiah editing—a type that has as its aim "the improvement of the condition of mankind and the uplifting of the cosmos in one particular or another." The third type which he mentions is "editing for the pure fun and exhilaration of the thing, like riding a good horse, listening to good music, or drinking good wine."

* * *

IN this issue The Independent for April 18, Willis J. Abbot describes the paper which he so ably edits—the Christian Science Monitor, a journalistic success in which crime, disaster, disease, scandal, and death have no place. He outlines somewhat in detail the news which the Monitor prints but which is omitted in its contemporaries. One explanation given for the selection of material for the Monitor is the international character of its circulation.

Mr. Abbot frankly admits that there are different types of readers which must be served as the following quotation will show:

> As a matter of fact, there are many distinct publics with sharply divergent tastes. An editor is skillful if he can determine what any considerable body of readers desires; no editor is shrewd enough to determine the tastes of the whole reading public, nor could he satisfy them in one publication. Sooner or later the individual reader will find the paper which appeals to his mind. It is for the editor, then, to choose the public to which his paper shall appeal. If he believes that there are more morons in the field than any other class and is indifferent to all save mass circulation, he will make a paper for morons and exult in the volume of circulation thereby gained.

To his article Mr. Abbot gives the picturesque head "Headlining Happiness."

* * *

THE School of Journalism at University of Iowa, Iowa City, Ia., has started a monthly periodical called The Iowa Journalist. It is mailed free to the newspapers of that state; others pay a dollar a year.

* * *

IT is difficult to answer a correspondent who wants to know what newspaper first had a humorous column. Some light, however, on this subject is shed by Charles Lamb in an article "Newspapers Thirty-Five Years Ago" which he published in The Englishman's Magazine for October, 1831, and which contained the following paragraph:

> In those days every Morning Paper, as an essential retainer to its establishment, kept an author, who was bound to furnish daily a quantum of witty paragraphs. Sixpence a joke—and it was thought pretty high too—was Dan Stuart's settled remuneration in these cases. The chat of the day, scandal, but above all, dress, furnished the material. The length of no paragraph was to exceed seven lines. Shorter they might be, but they must be poignant.

* * *

The New Yorker for April 18 has an article entitled "Mr. Hearst Retires," but recent newspapers carry stories that Mr. Hearst returns.

WOULD PURIFY MAGAZINES

Massachusetts Group to Confer With Publishers May 8

For the announced purpose of "purifying" certain alleged objectionable magazines which have flooded Massachusetts, a conference of publishers, newsdealers and representatives of the Watch and Ward Society will be held in Boston May 4.

The Massachusetts magazine committee will be represented by John J. Tracey of the New England News Company, chairman; Frank J. Perry of Newton, and Oscar Blaisdell of the Armstrong Company, and the New England Suburban Newsdealers' Association.

Those representing the magazines will be Henry Altimus, editor of Saucy Stories; Douglas W. Cook, publisher of Snappy Stories; Charles W. Nelson, president of Excella; C. Pomeroy, editor of Breezy Stories; George T. Delacourt, Jr., of the Dell Publishing Company, publishers of I Confess; Fulton Oursler, supervising editor of the Macfadden publications; S. W. Jenkins of Telling Tales, and David Gordon, editor of the Merit Publishing Company.

The Watch and Ward Society will have as its representatives at the conference Rev. Raymond Calkins, president; Bernard J. Rothwell, former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce; Prof. Julia L. Coolidge and Attorney Grousvenor Calkins.

Darling Continues to Improve

The condition of Jay Darling, Des Moines cartoonist, is much improved, his physicians say. He is now able to sit up a number of hours each day. A radio has been installed in Mr. Darling's room, and he has been able to listen to stations broadcast the state of his health, as well as to hear regular programs. It will be some time before Mr. Darling will be released from the hospital, it is thought.

"FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE"

The World. MORNING EDITION

The World and the Evening World have a combined circulation daily, of 750,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. These two papers are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
Mallers Bldg. Chicago
General Motors Bldg. Detroit

Ever Ready Razors

is another of the nationally famous accounts which has recognized the fact that the Washington, D. C., territory cannot be adequately covered without

The Washington Times

The futility of the "one paper buy" argument is nowhere better illustrated than in the experiences of its national advertisers.

PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH
New York City—Boston
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
Chicago - Detroit - St. Louis - Los Angeles

America's most complete newspaper

The New York Herald Tribune

covers an ideal test market used by National Advertisers

TRENTON (N.J.) TIMES

KELLY-SMITH CO.
National Representatives
Aubridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

Dominates its field

The Circulation of the New York Evening Journal is larger than the next two evening papers combined.

Such an enormous circulation of 666,886 daily is one reason why the Evening Journal publishes more advertising than any other New York evening paper and why it has done so for ten years.

NEW YORK JOURNAL

Largest Evening Circulation in America

Detroit

Fourth Largest City

Complete coverage with one paper.

The Detroit News

Offers advertisers unusual opportunities

San Francisco Chronicle

PAYING circulation determines the logical choice of an advertising medium. In San Francisco and Northern California it is a recognized fact that The Chronicle following has the buying power.

National Representatives
Williams, Lawrence & Cresmer Co.
360 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago
225 Fifth Ave., New York

NEW INTERTYPE "MIXER"

Four Magazine Machine a Feature of Convention Exhibit

The Intertype Corporation exhibited at the A. N. P. A. Convention last week, a "standardized mixer" machine, which without the side unit, will be known as the Intertype with standard equipment E, and with side unit as Intertype with standard equipment E-s.m.No. 3. The machine is equipped with two main magazines and the side unit with two side magazines with distributing mechanism that automatically distributes matrices into all magazines at the same time. Matrices are drawn or assembled from either the upper or lower main and side magazines by shifting a light finger lever. The magazines are stationary in operation. The changing from one magazine to another is accomplished by shifting of the keyboard reeds. There is one set of keyboard reeds which are adapted to engage either of two sets of escapement reeds above them. The assembler entrance is double at the top leading into one entrance at the bottom.

Standard Intertype main magazines are used. There are two distributors on the same horizontal plane and a double channel entrance leading from them to the magazines. The only distributor box is mounted on an arm and adapted to swing horizontally from one distributor to another.

Sorting of mixed fonts is done entirely by the distributor box and its shifting mechanism.

The only change in the matrices is the cutting of the regular font notch one thirty-second of an inch deeper and the addition of another font notch. The machine, which is furnished with or without the side unit, is standardized in conformity with the Intertype A, B, and C equipment.

Camden Daily to Have Crimeless D

J. David Stern, publisher of the Co den (N. J.) Courier, has taken a banke dare and on May 5, will issue a crir less newspaper for a day. The banker John B. Kates, president of the Bro way Trust Company, Camden. Cri news, in the opinion of Mr. Kates has place in the world of journalism. would, he said in a speech the other d present in newspapers only the sunny s of life. Mr. Stern heard this stateme and agreed to turn over his newspaper the banker and a staff of business as ciates to run one day as they wished.

SUPPLIES AND EQUIPMENT
FOR NEWSPAPER MAKING

For Sale.
25 all steel galley cabinets, each containing 152 steel galleys 8¾ x 13 inches, in four tiers, 38 galleys in each tier, all in good condition. Wire or write for price on No. 679. Baker Sales Company, 200 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

For Sale.
Several Linotype Magazines usable on Models 5, 8, 14, 19, 25 or 26 Linotypes. Owner has just installed an entire new Linotype equipment of models which will not take these magazines. Wire or write for price on No. 678. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York City.

Printers' Outfitters.
Printing Plants and business bought and sold. American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Wilke's METALS
THE HIGHEST STANDARD
Write for Information Concerning
Wilke's Metal Insurance Plan
It Will Save You Money
Metals Refining Company
Hammond, Indiana
Warehouses in Principal Cities

MODERNIZE
your COMPOSING ROOM
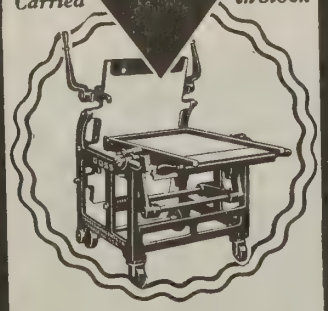
with
HAMILTON EQUIPMENT
Made in both wood and steel.
Manufactured by
The Hamilton Mfg. Co.
Two Rivers, Wis.
For sale by all prominent Type Founders and Dealers everywhere.

Used Newspaper Presses

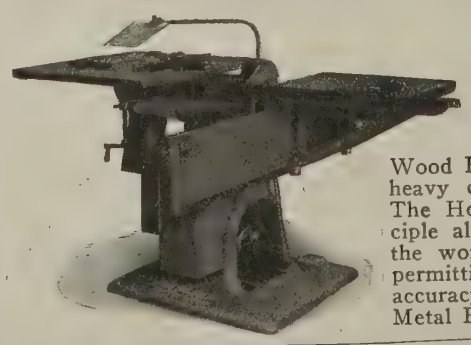
SCOTT	16, 24 and 32 Page Presses.
GOSS	24-Page Press for black or color work.
HOE	Quadruple, Sextuple and Double Sextuple Presses.

Send for list of presses which are available for early delivery.



WALTER SCOTT & CO.
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY
441 Monadnock Block CHICAGO
1457 Broadway NEW YORK

Cline-Westinghouse Double Motor-Drive with full automatic push button control
USED BY THE
Los Angeles Shopping News
Los Angeles, Calif.
We refer you to them for their opinion
QUALITY NAME SERVICE FAME
CLINE ELECTRIC MANF'G. CO CHICAGO
CLINE WESTINGHOUSE
MAIN OFFICE Conway Bldg. 111 W. Washington St. CHICAGO
EASTERN OFFICE Marbridge Bldg. Broadway at 34th St. NEW YORK



Don't "Pig" Metal
It Wastes Money
Don't melt your metal twice to use it once. Write for trial offer. The Monomelt "Single Melting System." References gladly furnished.
MONOMELT SLUG FEEDER
Eliminates the Metal Furnace
Printers Manufacturing Co.
417 South Dearborn St.
Chicago Ill.

N.Y. DAILY NEWS
HALF-TONES
Best in the World
Made by
POWERS
NEW PROCESS

FOR ALL NEWSPAPERS
DUPLEX PRESSES
"OUR CUSTOMERS WRITE OUR ADS"
DUPLEX TUBULAR
"The TUBULAR is on the jo all the time."
Sedalia, Mo., Democrat
Duplex Printing Press Co
BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

GOSS STEREOTYPING MACHINERY
Carried in Stock

Fastest, most easily operated, most accurate and durable flat casting box you can buy. Perfectly balanced. New design lock-up bar allows for quick change when regulating thickness of casts. Positive quick lock-up at four points on box with one lever movement. Write for complete catalog of Goss Stereotyping Machinery.
THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO., CHICAGO

You Can Save A Lot of Space in your shop by advertising your used machinery in a small space in the equipment section of
EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Hoe Combined Saw Table and Mono-Rail Trimmer

This Machine combines the advantages of the H Pedestal Saw Table a the Hoe Mono-rail Trimm The Trimmer is suppli with either Style "A" C ter Head for trimmi Wood Blocks or Style "B" for ex heavy cutting on Zinc or Copp The Hoe Patented Mono-Rail pr ciple allows the Operator to foll the work beyond the Cutter He permitting more speed and grea accuracy in trimming Wood Metal Blocks of varied sizes.
IF IT'S A HOE, IT'S THE BEST
R. HOE & CO., INC. 504-520 Grand St., New York C
7 South Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.
also at DUNELLEN, N. J.
7 Water Street BOSTON, MASS.

THE MARKET PLACE OF THE NEWSPAPER

er word per insertion, cash with order, or advertisements under the classifica- "Situations Wanted."

per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bot- advertisement.

er word per insertion, cash with order, or advertisements under any other cation.

per line per insertion, cash with order, if white space is used at top and bot- advertisement.

ITUATIONS WANTED

tising Manager.
gressive, capable man, 31 years old and d, wants place where hard work mixed telligence is needed. Unlimited enthusiasm, and love of work, together with practical ence and sound ideas are my greatest Experienced as advertising manager on in cities twenty to hundred thousand I know selling, advertising and mer- sing, and can lead men both by theory hrough practical sales demonstrations. roduce results. Am looking for a per- t place. Best of references. Address Box Editor & Publisher.

ising Solicitor.
rs old, 10 years' display experience, mar- ollege education and of good address. employed. Best of reference. Prefer West location. Address Box C-939, ditor & Publisher.

nd Newspaperman.
ou use a man who writes, draws car- speaks French and can work a press in an emergency. C-901, Editor & her.

ss Manager advertising and circulation experience, to connect with small town daily. Will r buying small amount of stock. Ad- C-960, care Editor & Publisher.

ation Manager.
practical working experience on morn- vening and Sunday papers desires posi- with progressive publication. With t publication past ten years, last 6 in charge. Can furnish satisfactory nces and reason for making change. ar with conditions in and prefer middle thwest. Address Box C-951, care Edi- Publisher.

ation Manager.
made good with present employer. Have wn the job. Am looking for hard cir- n proposition, where opportunity will more importance than salary. Have specially successful installing and oper- Independent boy system of delivery. an offer better reference. Age 30— d. Available at once. Box C-952, & Publisher.

ied Manager.
install, operate all or part of highly ed system of lineage building. Tried, very successful many papers. Per- services. Bonus or commissions. Best nces. C-950, Editor & Publisher.

ued Manager.
tly employed but seeking larger field sent connections have been outgrown. of past performances will convince you can also build your volume. For fur- information address Box C-962, Editor & lher.

le Man.
more in college with some newspaper ence desires permanent work with city untry paper in Middle West. C-956, & Publisher.

pportunity Awaits

You in the Classified Section of DITOR & PUBLISHER ead it every week and use to advertise your wants.

Situations Wanted

Classified Manager—Solicitor.
Has proven ability to increase, hold business under adverse conditions, daily, 12,000 circulation. Thoroughly experienced with successful modern methods; classified development. Present connections outgrown. Good personality. Finest references. Age 23. Bonus proposition preferred. C-949, Editor & Publisher.

Competent Layout Man.
Now available. Know type and how to use it. Desire position with growing newspaper or magazine. Married. Best references. Robert F. Dempsey, 168 West Liberty street, Bridgeport, Conn.

Desk Expert.
Copy desk expert or rewrite man available for summer as vacation supply. C-953, Editor & Publiher.

Desk Man.
Open; sports, telegraph or general news. G. E. F., 833 West 3rd St., Plainfield, N. J.

Editor
of daily and Sunday morning paper in east seeks connection with afternoon publication. College and university education, married, 6 years in present position; 34 years old. C-959, Editor & Publisher.

Editor and Writer with six years' newspaper experience desires position for summer or few months on small town or resort paper. Excellent feature and news writer. Can run paper or will work on staff. Reasonable salary acceptable; report immediately. Best of references. Trebor, 99 North Nineteenth Street, Flushing, New York.

Editorial and Feature Writer.
Can also handle dramatic page and special staff correspondence, and have telegraph desk experience. Box C-954, care Editor & Publisher.

Editorial Writer-Paragrapher.
Who has rendered satisfactory service on large well known daily would like to receive offer from some sane, constructive and progressive newspaper. Address Box C-940, care Editor & Publisher.

Experienced Editor of Copy.
I seek employment on the staff of a New York periodical. Skilled in detail work; intelligent punctuation; systematic use of capital letters; correct spelling; proper conjunctions and prepositions, construction of sentences, paragraphing; suitable subheads (also main heads). Not addicted to unnecessarily altering author's work; sympathetic in assistance, always considerate of writer's style. Expert proofreader also; useful for work on revised proofs or page proofs from publisher. Technical to extent desired by editor; schooled in exactness, but not given to insistence upon personal ideas. Efficient copy-editing prevents waste of time and labor in print-shop; better results, perhaps at less cost. Age 63; health excellent; vigorous. A degree of deafness prevents employment as proofreader (union) with copy-reader. Perhaps I am just the man you need in your office. Ready for "tryout." References: The Hon. Leslie Sutherland, Mr. William Rees Williams, Mr. Rudolf Eickemeyer, Mr. Charles E. Skinner, the Rev. Dr. Richard E. Bell, Mr. Walter F. Haskett, Dr. Bertram Ball and many others. Box C-965, Editor & Publisher.

Lady Society Editor Wants position with growing newspaper or magazine. Several years' experience. Best references. Reasonable salary. Will go anywhere but prefer Southern California. Write Society Editor, 1400 Santee St., Los Angeles, Cal.

Mechanical Superintendent.
Press Superintendent wants position on daily newspaper. Practical experience in all mechanical departments. In charge of plant or dept. for the last twenty years. Can give A-1 references. Box C-957, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Man.
Capable, energetic man (36) as assistant to busy executive. Ten years' newspaper office experience Advertising, Circulation and Business Departments. Knowledge of gravure, color, etc. Stenographer, and can take care of affairs in absence of chief. Good reference. C-958, Editor & Publisher.

Reporter.
Young woman, university graduate, trained in journalism. Ambitious and willing to work. Best references in regard to ability and character. Am available at once. C-948, Editor & Publisher.

Situations Wanted

Newspaper Executives!
Are you tired out? Do you want to drop some of the wear and tear of your office? Do you want time to play golf or time for a restful vacation? Do you want some one on which to unload these responsibilities? If you do I am your man. I have been a managing editor in New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles. I have been a Washington correspondent. I have been stationed in London for two years as correspondent of a great leading daily. Do you think you can use me? I am capable, industrious and know the game. Communicate with Mr. Brown of the Editor & Publisher who knows me and my work. Box C-966, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Executive.
I am a young man of proven executive ability in newspaper work. Special training and experience in all branches of the business. Am desirous of making contact with a publisher who wants to be relieved of details to devote his time to other activities and in return will give me an opportunity to become a vital factor in the business. My experience covers newspaper advertising, promotion, circulation, accounting and management. A broad conception of the business and wide acquaintance among publishers and advertisers. Can furnish several good men for publisher requiring new blood or contemplating establishment of new property. Am not a floater, but student and lover of the business seeking an opportunity to build a permanent, profitable business for party appreciative of ability, energy and vision. Prefer Central States, but will consider other territory. All replies confidential. Address Box C-955, Editor & Publisher.

Two Men.
Who have just accepted attractive offer for their newspaper property want to take charge of the business and advertising departments of paper that needs new enthusiasm and constructive ideas. Such a paper may also be benefited by economies that these two hard-workers can effect. They have built new and successful business in face of keen competition, have served on big dailies, and have experience in various departments. Taking your paper as a team, you will overcome the possibility of friction between department heads and insure immediate results. Age 30. Both married. Box C-947, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted Position.
Circulation Manager, eighteen years' experience, wishes to connect with progressive newspaper. Have made good record papers connected with. Can furnish the best of reference. Wire or write. W. T. Buck, care Herald, Augusta, Ga.

HELP WANTED

News Editor
for fast growing Florida newspaper wanted at once, splendid opportunity for first class news writer. Wire or write, Roderick Arkell, Sebring, Florida. State salary and experience.

Circulation Managers.
Two ambitious circulation managers must be over 30 years of age with experience in hiring and training canvassers. Further expansion of large circulation organization opens two desirable positions with earning possibilities from $2,600 to $5,000 per year. Answer with full particulars regarding last ten years' experience and references as to personal habits and character. Ernest A. Scholz, Circulation Manager, Butterick Publishing Company, Butterick Building, New York.

Circulation and Promotion Manager for fast growing Local Daily near New York. Must be experienced and furnish first class references. Excellent opportunity for live wire. Box C-961, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Live Manager to take complete charge of oldest Newspaper in Hanover. Plant recently equipped with modern machinery, full leased wire service, etc. Apply by letter giving age, experience, references and salary expected. Box C-964, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted.
Successful newspaper reporter who has been interested enough in getting into advertising to have studied it and who sees in advertising a better future for himself—for this man there is an opening in the advertising department of a large department store. State fully age, experience, salary required, etc. Advertising Manager, J. L. Hudson Company, Detroit, Michigan.

FOR SALE AT ALBANY, N. Y.

Hoe Lightning Sextuple Web Press

This press was new in 1918, but has been run less than one hour per day. No breaks, not worn enough to affect it in any way. Can be seen at Albany Journal Building until sold. Has complete stereotype equipment.

Also, one Model 17 Linotype, No. 22214, with two fonts matrices and motor, fine working order.

Two Model 9 Linotypes, Nos. 22076 and 23193, four magazine, with four fonts matrices and motor, fine working order.

PALMER, DeWITT & PALMER
350 Madison Avenue, New York City

Successful Performance

This firm has a record of almost 15 years of successful performance in the difficult work of

PURCHASE, CONSOLIDATION, SALE AND APPRAISAL

of newspaper and magazine properties throughout the U. S.

HARWELL & CANNON
Times Bldg. New York

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

CAN YOU SELL display advertising space and create retail copy and lay-outs? If you have newspaper experience in this line and are ready for new connection at around $40 to $50, we have openings that will interest you. Tell us your story. Ask for our free registration terms. You make money, or we make nothing.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

General Manager
who can invest few thousand dollars in proposition requiring development. Opportunity to treble investment in 2 years. Key C-946, Editor & Publisher.

Daily Newspaper for Sale.
Creston (Iowa) Daily Advertiser; population 8,034. Only daily in ideal field; north 60 miles; east 115 miles; south 60 miles; west 100 miles. Price $125,000. No alibis; just want to sell at a price that means a profit.

Newspaper Properties.
Omar D. Gray, Sturgeon, Missouri, specializes in consolidating newspaper properties in same city. If you want to buy property of your competitor or sell write Gray. He has seven clients who want to purchase daily newspapers.

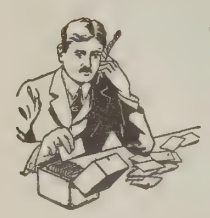
Pacific Coast Newspaper property with large commercial printing department. Doing $100,000.00 annually. Carried five million lines advertising last year. Now dominating almost exclusive field of more than 50,000 population. Own building and wonderful mechanical equipment. This is a real opportunity for one or two practical men able to make first payment of not less than $50,000. Property is ideally located from transportation standpoint, both rail and water. Climatic conditions hard to excel. Substantial and growing community having a real future. This is high class proposition in every sense of the word and now on the market for the first time for reasons instantly recognized as legitimate. Replies should be accompanied by evidence of financial ability, and will be treated in strictest confidence. Address P. O. Box 2672, Station "D," San Francisco.



FEATURED ARTICLES

Publishers—Attention!
We furnish MSS. on all subjects by competent authors. Will take advertising in exchange for all or part of our service. Reasonable rates. Write up your wants. Literary Bureau Pub. Dept. MOJ4, Hannibal, Mo.

DOLLAR $ $ $ $ PULLERS

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH IDEA PUBLISHED

BUSINESS TICKLER

WHAT will your newspaper do, both editorially and in advertising, with this year's school graduations? When you appeal to this class of readers you are in the company of the city's most interesting citizens. See to it that each one is cited for honor in your columns. Tell your enterprising merchants to address these future business and professional men and women and home-makers.

A CLEVELAND furniture store notified customers of their approaching anniversary sale in a novel way recently. Invitations were printed in the exact style of theatre tickets, and a pair sent to each home. It permitted customers to participate before the event was advertised in the papers, and a valuable souvenir was given upon presentation of the tickets at the store.—H. H. Hudson, Cleveland Press.

It isn't to late yet to work up a page or a double-page spread around your home-town nine, either professional or amateur, using its schedule, with half-col. pictures of players, and other news layout through the center. A few minutes planning in the ad department will uncover a surprising number of stores, athletic shops, sport goods dealers, tobacco stores, barber shops, florists, awning dealers, auto men and supplies dealers, etc., who cater to baseball fans and would buy space if the copy has a baseball tang.—J. L.

A way of ridding a city of house-to-house canvasser, with his false assertion of lower prices and small profits, was pointed out by the merchants of Madison, Wis., recently, when 28 of them cooperated in a window display drive and a four-page newspaper ad showing why the public should patronize the regular retail store for hosiery. Ad men will find that mills will co-operate and proves good for a big spread.—L. J. Jellison.

The Marysville (Cal.) Democrat recently obtained a full page of advertising from the National Automobile Club featuring the club's state-wide service at the charge of $10 a year. The service includes towing, roadside repairing, transportation of gasoline and oil, and tire changing. The ad solicited memberships in the club.—W. B.

The Houston (Tex.) Post-Dispatch is running photographs of old ten homes in Houston, during ten successive weeks, and to the persons who can tell to whom they belong, by whom they were built, and where they are located, two tickets to a local theatre is given each week. Owners of the homes are barred from participation, but only when their home is being featured. This is done, so the Post-Dispatch says, to interest people of Houston in the romance and history of the fine, old homes of the city. This could be made an interesting feature for papers elsewhere.—A. W. Roe.

Under a large caption—SAVE—Don't Throw It Away!—may be grouped ads of shoe repairers, dyers and cleaners, upholsterers, doll hospitals, dish cements, mend shops and all the list of businesses who specialize in making something old "as good as new." This is a particularly timely page to run right now during spring housecleaning and should be easy to solicit.—F. J. McEniry.

"Tips to the Home Builder," makes a "spot" center for a weekly page featuring advertisements of all classes of trade appealing to the home builder or home owner. The "tips" can be obtained from the various houses, architects, etc., and should be such as to guide the average man in planning his home.—B. A. T.

One of the best pullers in working up farm auction sale advertising is to keep an up-to-the-minute calendar of the sales as fast as the dates are made. Arrangement should be made with all auctioneers to report all sale dates made to the office immediately. Auctioneers are generally glad to make this arangement as it prevents conflicts of sales in the same locality. This point should be stressed in all the newspaper's auction publicity, as a definite service to the sale holder. Incidentally it is a good idea to carry a line to this effect on all auction hand bills put out concurrently with the advertising. Eventually this service will strengthen itself, until the newspaper will be making most of the dates for the auctioneers. This entails a little extra work in the office but is the inside track to get the sale advertising.—W. Webb McCall, Mt. Pleasant (Mich.) Times.

An index to local store advertisements is run on the second title page of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) News-Sentinel, on days when the paper must be more or less packed with ads. Stores and the pages on which their display ads appear are listed. This appeases to some extent the advertiser whose ad runs in a less favorable position than his compeitor and at the same time renders a valuable service to the busy reader.—Glenn E. Hopper.

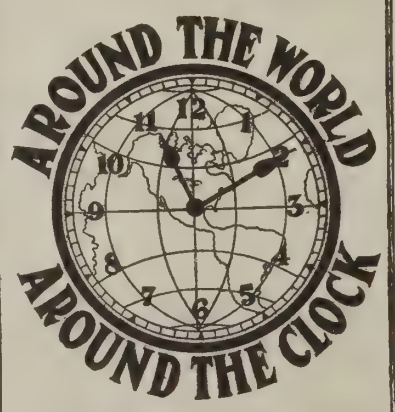
HUNCHES

ONE DOLLAR WILL BE PAID FOR EACH "HUNCH" PUBLISHED

PUBLIC interest in New York has recently been centered on the grand jury investigation of the "easy child marriages." This gives opportunity for a timely local feature regarding the age at which Cupid's darts strike oftenest in your city, legal marriage age, etc. Divorce age records should give an important angle to the story.—Glenn E. Hopper, Fort Wayne.

The Santa Ana (Cal.) Register publishes a column of personal news under the heading "You and your Friends, Please Phone or Mail Items," and the number of such items printed indicates that readers of the paper are responding to the invitation—L. C. Pratt, Pasadena, Cal.

If you have a Zoo in your city, a good animal story can always be obtained by getting a couple of musicians to play, first the violin and classical music and then the saxophone and "jazz" before the cages of the various animals. The reactions are sometimes very funny—almost human! For example, at the Denver zoo, foxes ran to cover when the wild, wailing "jazz" began, the buffalo grew angry, snorted and pawed the ground and the bears started to dance. All responded in some manner to "jazz" while the classical music did not seem to register at all.—F. J. McEniry.



Check up on the number of transient autos in your town for a day by having a reporter keep a close lookout for the state license and city nameplates. A good automobile story can be written from the tabulations.—Robert B. Miller.

Run a prize contest to find out whi local man belongs to the most differe lodges. Offer a prize of $5 or $10 to t man. Get the contestants to write giving their names and addresses and t names of the lodges to which they belor Publish all letters just as written. T would be of great interest to every lod member in your city.—Frank Williams.

Some time ago, we discovered, in round-about way that our subscrib wanted more news from the court ho so we started such a department. T county officers have taken a great inter in it so we carry about two columns court house news each week under a he using the cut of the court house. It one of the most valuable features carry.—Donald O. Ross, Washing (Ia.) Democrat.

BY UNITED PRESS

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS
World Building New York

SPOT A BIG NATIONAL SUCCESS When You See It Coming

ELLA CINDERS

Comedy Strip With An All-Star Comic Cast

Starts June 1

Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Genl. Mgr.
150 Nassau Street, New York City

WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
World Building, New York

GUS and GUSSIE
By JACK LAIT
Great new daily comic strip will amuse millions. Don't watch it grow—grow with it!
KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, Inc.
241W. 58th St. New York City

The World's Greatest Newspaper Feature Service
Supplying a complete and exclusive daily illustrated feature service to newspapers throughout the United States and in foreign countries.
4 page ready-print color comics.
Magazine Feature Pages.
Write for samples and rates
NEA SERVICE INC. 1200 W. 3RD. STREET, CLEVELAND, OHIO

THE WELFARE COMMITTEE of the INTERNATIONAL CIRCULATION MANAGERS ASSOCIATION
Can supply you with competent circulation men of capacity and ability capable to take entire charge of your department or to fill important posts in the department
Address the Secretary Treasurer please, Mr. Clarence Eyster, care Sta Building, Peoria, Ill.

The Advertising Situation

IN

THE SOUTH

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA
*Birmingham News ..... (E)	78,337	.18	.18
*Birmingham News ..... (S)	89,196	.18	.18
Mobile News-Item ..... (E)	11,722	.05	.05
*Mobile Register ..... (M)	20,192	.08	.07
*Mobile Register ..... (S)	32,440	.025	.036
FLORIDA
*Daytona Daily News..... (ES)	4,036	.035	.035
*Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville.. (M&S)	41,293	.10(S.12)	.10(S.12)
*Miami Herald ..... (M)	31,499	.07	.07
*Miami Herald ..... (S)	36,498	.08	.08
*Orlando Sentinel ..... (M&S)	5,749	.035	.035
††St. Petersburg Independent..... (E)	10,087	.04	.04
*Tampa Times ..... (E)	18,021	.05	.05
*Tampa Tribune ..... (M&S)	29,481	.08(.09S)	.07(.08S)
GEORGIA
*Augusta Herald ..... (E)	15,753	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald ..... (S)	15,190	.05	.05
††Macon Telegraph ..... (M)	25,137	.07	.07
††Macon Telegraph ..... (S)	25,137	.07	.07
Savannah Morning News (M), 21,372. (S)	22,671	.06(.07S)	.06(.07S)
KENTUCKY
*Lexington Leader ..... (E)	19,498	.06	.06
*Lexington Leader ..... (S)	19,376	.05	.05
*Paducah Sun ..... (E)	9,275	.04	.04
NORTH CAROLINA
†Asheville Citizen ..... (M)	14,066	.055	.055
†Asheville Citizen ..... (S)	14,540	.055	.055
††Greensboro Daily News..... (M)	25,543	.08	.07
††Greensboro Daily News..... (S)	32,547	.07	.07
††Raleigh News and Observer..... (M)	29,982	.07	.07
††Raleigh News and Observer..... (S)	34,169	.07	.07
*Winston-Salem Sentinel ..... (E)	16,031	.06	.06
SOUTH CAROLINA
Columbia Record ..... (E)	16,107	.05	.05
Columbia Record ..... (S)	15,907	.05	.05
Columbia State ..... (M)	24,246	.07	.07
Columbia State ..... (S)	24,442	.07	.07
Greenville News ..... (M)	20,190	.065	.06
*Spartanburg Journal ..... (E)	4,086	.05	.05
*Spartanburg Herald (M) 6,901..... (S)	9,606
TENNESSEE
*Chattanooga Times ..... (M)	27,545	.08	.08
*Chattanooga Times ..... (S)	27,606	.08	.08
*Nashville Banner ..... (E)	55,560	.11	.11
*Nashville Banner ..... (S)	55,471	.12	.12
VIRGINIA
Danville Register and Bee..... (M&E)	12,128	.05	.05
Danville Register (Sunday)	7,134
*Newport News Times-Herald..... (E)	7,827	.05	.05
*Newport News Daily Press..... (S&M)	5,706
*Roanoke Times & World News.... (M&E)	26,188	.07	.07
*Roanoke Times ..... (S)	17,815	.06	.06
Staunton News-Leader (M), Leader.. (E)	6,424	.035	.035

* A. B. C. Statement, March 31, 1925.
†† Government Statement, March 31, 1925.
 A. B. C. Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.
† Government Statement, Sept. 30, 1924.

The South, covering an area of over 945,000 square miles, has over 36,000,000 people. This represents about one-third of the population of the United States distributed over about one-third of its area. Beside this, these 945,000 square miles are endowed with natural resources such as are found in no similar area on earth.

The possibilities and opportunities for sales are increasing every day in proportion to the commercial and industrial expansion that is taking place. Advertising results are most promising in this territory since the purchasing power and merchandising facilities have attained a high point.

The bank deposits have increased nearly ten times during the past twenty years, until at present they are in excess of $6,000,000,000.

At present, billions of dollars are in circulation. Some of this is finding its way into banks, but the larger part will be used to buy daily needs as well as luxuries.

The daily newspapers will help you to convert its readers into buyers of your advertised products.

Consumer Demand and Acceptance

Food advertisers have found through experience that The Sun can be depended upon to create a demand for a new product and increase the sales of products already established in the New York market.

During 1924, The Sun published more than half a million lines of Food Advertising, and for the last six months of 1924 published more Food Advertising than any other New York newspaper.

During the first four months of 1925, The Sun published more than 135,000 lines of Foodstuffs advertising — has had the greatest gain in this classification of any New York evening newspaper, and was one of three papers to show a gain for these four months.

The Sun goes into the homes and is read by the family because it is a clean, honest, dependable newspaper, holding the confidence of its readers.

A rigid censorship is maintained on all advertising submitted.

The Sun

280 BROADWAY NEW YORK

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
to be taken from this room

HOUSTON, TEXAS, 1925 A. A. C. W. CONVENTION—PHILADELPHIA NEXT

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Newspaper Advocate 1925

SUITE 1700 TIMES BUILDING, NEW YORK,
42ND STREET AND BROADWAY

Original second class entry The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued Every Saturday.

Vol. 57. No. 50 | NEW YORK, MAY 9, 1925 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A. $4.50, Canada; $5, Foreign | 10c Per Copy

JOURNALISM LIBRARY
not to be taken from this room

Just out!

Bellringers of 1924

The second annual collection of news stories picked for their reportorial excellence from the thousands written by Tribune reporters during 1924; illustrated with news photos and pictures of the reporters represented.

Price 10 cents
(13 cents by mail)

Editorials of 1924

Illuminating and forceful Tribune editorials showing The Tribune's stand on the problems of 1924; illustrated with cartoons by John T. McCutcheon and Carey Orr.

Price 5 cents
(8 cents by mail)

Both books for two dimes

Address the Public Service Bureau
11 S. Dearborn St.
Chicago

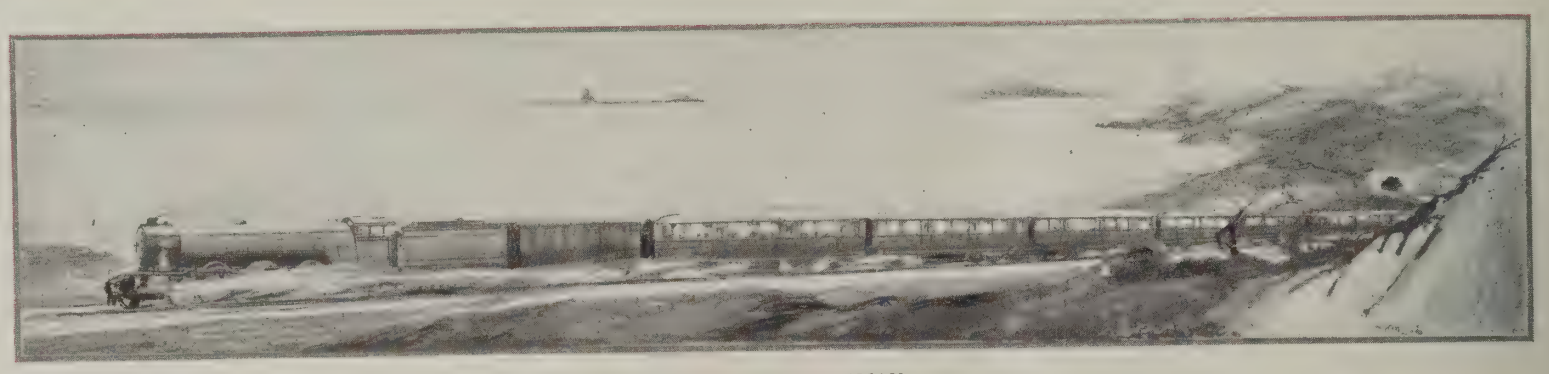
Buying Space to Sell Space

Did our newspapers cheat American business men when they sold them upwards of six hundred million dollars' worth of advertising space last year?

The attitude of many publishers toward advertising indicates that they regard it as blue sky and bunk. Like the old-time bartender, they sell it to suckers but don't touch it themselves.

They expect poorly paid, poorly equipped, unsupported solicitors to sell unlimited quantities of space to merchants, manufacturers, banks, want ad users, etc. But they can't even listen to suggestions that they themselves buy advertising space.

Many of these publishers attained their position through the reportorial and editorial departments. Yet they often fail to realize that editorial independence and reportorial enterprise must have a foundation of financial stability.



Newspapers live on advertising. Without revenues from the sale of space the whole publishing business would collapse. Subscription rates would soar. Circulations would decline. Influence, profits, importance, would drop swiftly. The American press would fall to the subsidized, unstable insignificance of newspapers in countries where volume of advertising does not exist.

This advertising is not only the support of the American press. It it a dynamic, energizing force in American business and throughout American life.

We publish this booklet in the hope that it may stimulate newspaper publishers to greater use of the force which they manufacture

Above is reproduced the first page of a booklet "Buying Space to Sell Space" which will be mailed free on request.

The Chicago Tribune
The World's Greatest Newspaper

THE FLYING SCOTSMAN

The London & North Eastern Railway Sends Greetings to the Delegates to the International Advertising Convention at Houston

Give one thought to the convention of last year!

The same entertainment which you enjoyed then is available always.

A welcome to England, whether you come individually or collectively, awaits you at anytime.

The "Flying Scotsman" still leaves Kings Cross Station, London, daily at 10.00 a. m. for Scotland as it has done for 63 years.

The L. N. E. R. is the only railway in the world with a century's history—

It ought to know its job by now—and it does.

Remember W. M. Teasdale, Advertising Manager, L. N. E. R., Kings Cross Station, London.

He remembers you and is sorry he cannot be at Houston, but if you are contemplating a trip to Europe—

York, "the walled city of great antiquity," on the London and North Eastern Railway

Communicate with

H. J. Ketcham, General Agent
London & North Eastern Railway
311 Fifth Avenue, New York

LONDON AND NORTH EASTERN RAILWAY

OF ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND

Growth
—in circulation
—in advertising

For the fifth consecutive time The Times-Picayune showed a gain in both daily and Sunday circulation in its April 1 semi-annual statement to the United States Post Office Department. . . . No other New Orleans paper has shown such steady and consistent growth.

The Times-Picayune's circulation figures represent 28% excess daily and 22% excess Sunday over the figures published by the second paper, and 54% excess daily and 37% excess Sunday over the figures published by the third paper.

What is more important, The Times-Picayune's circulation figures are regularly substantiated by the audits of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

* * * * * * *

The Times Picayune printed 3,970,424 lines of paid advertising during the first quarter of 1925—a gain of 175,969 lines over the same period last year.

All the three major divisions of advertising—local display, national and classified—shared in this increase, which was markedly greater than that shown by any other New Orleans newspaper.

During this three months' period The Times-Picayune printed 55% more paid advertising than the second paper, seven issues a week against seven, and 84% more paid advertising than the third paper, seven issues a week against seven. It printed more paid advertising than an evening-morning-Sunday combination, seven issues a week against thirteen, despite the fact that a large proportion of the combination's lineage was sold on a basis of insertion in both evening and morning issues for the price of one. It maintained its undisputed leadership not only in all three main divisions of advertising, but in the great majority of standard classifications, whether the advertising appeal was directed to women buyers, to men buyers or to men and women alike.

Only outstanding, steadfast merit can account for the overwhelming preference shown for The Times-Picayune month after month, year in and year out, by newspaper readers and newspaper advertisers.

"Truth in Circulation"

The Times-Picayune

FIRST FOR THE SOUTH

Representatives: Cone, Hunton & Woodman, Inc. New York, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Kansas City end Atlanta; R. J. Bidwell Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles.

First In the Southwest

The Houston Chronicle leads all newspapers in the Southwest in National Advertising.

The total National advertising published during 1924

2,769,924 lines

This proves Houston to be a productive market and that the Chronicle covers this market at one cost.

In Houston the CHRONICLE is:

First in City circulation.
First in Country circulation.
First in Total circulation.
First in Local advertising.
First in National Advertising
First in Classified advertising.

First In Circulation Gain

For six months period ending April 1, 1925, the HOUSTON CHRONICLE gained 5360 subscribers, which is a greater gain than any other Texas newspaper.

73,331 Daily
84,934 Sunday

A merchandising Service Department is maintained to assist National advertisers to enter the HOUSTON market and maintain their sales standing.

DETAILED INFORMATION GLADLY FURNISHED

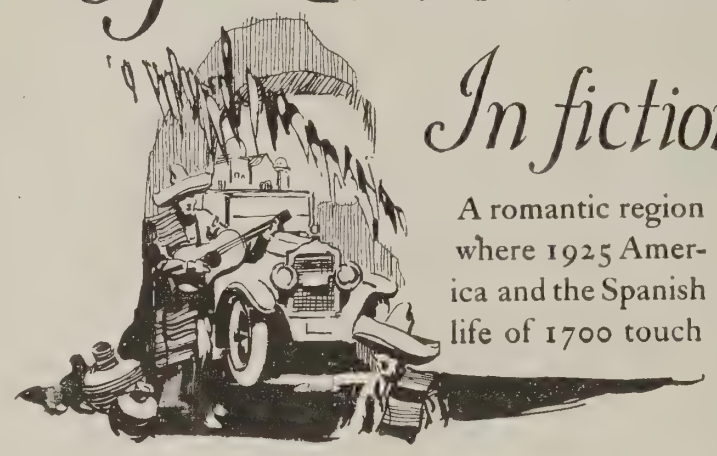
The HOUSTON CHRONICLE



HOUSTON, TEXAS

M. E. FOSTER, Publisher STEVE KELTON, Manager National Advertising

JOHN M. BRANHAM COMPANY, National Representatives

Get the facts about the Golden Center of America's Bright Spot

The Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas

In fiction:

A romantic region where 1925 America and the Spanish life of 1700 touch

In fact:

An intensively developed region that produces more wealth from the soil than any other equal area in the world.

Richer in soil than the far-famed delta of the Nile, tropical Mexico or Brazil; farther south than Miami or San Diego, yet cooled by Gulf breezes, the Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas is a region of wealth where 150,000 men and women are producing something every day in the year.

400,000 acres of irrigated land of unrivaled fertility in constant cultivation creates from the steady income of "new" money, a huge every-month-in-the-year buying power, and a continual demand for all the necessities and luxuries of life required by the cultured people of the Valley as well as for implements and machinery of all kinds.

Intensive cultivation of rich farms and citrus orchards by adequately financed landowners instead of "shoe string" operations by tenants, makes a demand for only the best of equipment and plenty of it.

Within the past 12 months, ending May 1, 1925, the Valley will have produced and shipped to market, 90,370 bales of cotton, 10,000 to 12,000 carloads of vegetables, and nearly 400 carloads of grapefruit, oranges, and lemons.

For further information about the richest territory in the United States for an intensive selling campaign, write any of the following publications:

THE BROWNSVILLE HERALD
Every afternoon and Sunday Morning
Brownsville Texas

SAN BENITO LIGHT
Thursdays
San Benito, Texas

THE VALLEY FARMER & CITRUS GROWER
Monthly
San Benito, Texas

THE HARLINGEN STAR
Fridays
Harlingen Texas

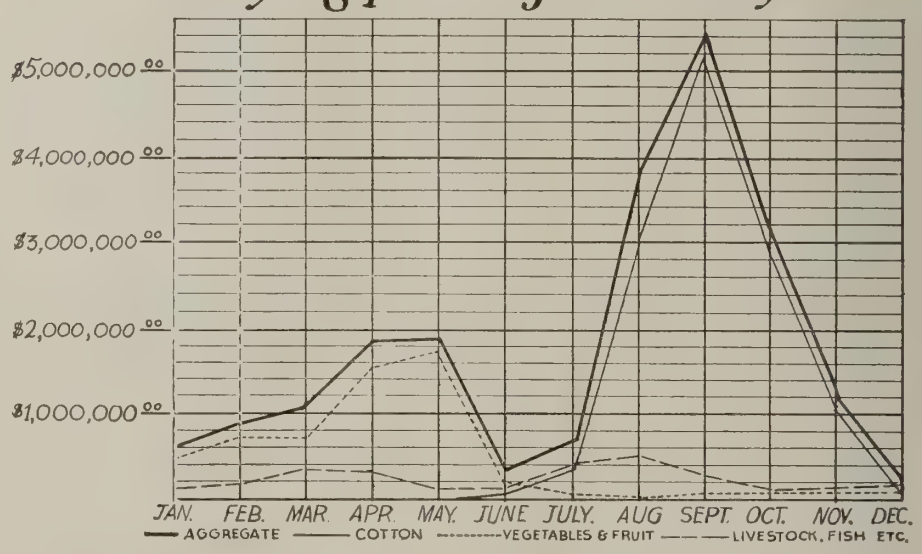
WILLACY COUNTY NEWS
Thursdays
Raymondville Texas

LOWER RIO GRANDE VALLEY MAGAZINE
Monthly
Mission, Texas

MERCEDES NEWS ITEM
Fridays
Mercedes, Texas

THE WESLACO NEWS
Thursdays
Weslaco, Texas

THE DONNA NEWS
Thursdays
Donna Texas



SAN JUAN-ALAMO SENTINEL
Thursdays
San Juan, Texas

MONTY'S MONTHLY
Monthly
McAllen, Texas

THE MISSION TIMES
Fridays
Mission, Texas

MERCEDES TRIBUNE
Thursdays
Mercedes, Texas

Buying power of the Valley

Come to the Lower Rio Grande Valley on the Circle Tour following the Houston Convention

Immediately following the Houston Convention, the most important of all the Circle Tours will be that to the Lower Rio Grande Valley-- Raymondville, Lyford, Harlingen, La Feria, Mercedes, Weslaco, Donna, Alamo, San Juan, Edinburg, Pharr, McAllen, Mission, San Benito, Brownsville, and across to Matamoras, Mexico.

In addition to seeing towns and cities typical of no other section of Texas, you will see the luxuriant semi-tropical section of Texas, exclusive to the Valley and at a time when climate and nature have have joined hands in making it beautiful beyond description.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday, forms closing ten P. M. Thursday preceding Publication by
The Editor & Publisher Co., J. W. Brown, Publisher; Marlen E. Pew, Editor;
Suite 1115, World Building, 63 Park Row, New York. Telephone, Beekman 5814-18.
Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 57 NEW YORK, MAY 9, 1925 No. 50

A. A. C. W. "Coming of Age" Convention Sees Truth Idea Firmly Established

Principle First Adopted on Texas Soil 13 Years Ago Now Permeates Advertising in All Its Phases—Clubs Now Advocating Universal Understanding and Outlawing War

"TRUTH IN ADVERTISING" as a working code for the nation's business was first written, read, and heard when the Associated Advertising Clubs met in 1912—in Dallas, Texas. The organization was then eight years old and ambitious for the great task that lay before it—the banishment of deceit from business announcements.

The Advertising Clubs return to Texas this week. Twenty-one years old, the Association celebrates its "coming of age" convention in the knowledge that the idea which came to life on the soil of Texas 13 years ago has been accepted and that it permeates the greater part of the stories that business tells the public in 1925. "Truth in Advertising" may be called established.

"Truth and Universal Understanding" is the word as the seventeen railroads that meet the sea at Houston bear thither their thousands of advertising men for the 1925 meeting. The resolution adopted at the London meeting in 1924 declared it the firm conviction of business men that war as a method of adjusting international misunderstandings is the supreme peril of humanity, and called upon the Advertising Clubs of the World to make a message of international goodwill part of their permanent program until war shall have a place only in history, and "world service, comradeship, and international co-operation shall become universal."

The international thought expressed in that resolution, and given force by the meeting in London last year, which brought delegates from all over both hemispheres, receives additional impetus at Houston.

Great Britain is represented by a score of forward-looking advertisers eager to maintain the contacts established two years ago. The international peace resolution which received the signatures of the British and 19 other nations at London will gain further adherents this year, when delegates from every state of the Mexican Republic and from practically every country of Central and South America will take part in the convention.

"Advertising and Its Influence for World Peace" will be the general topic of every one of the 15 speakers who will occupy the pulpits of Houston's churches Sunday morning.

And, to translate the convention's high thoughts into every-day business action, the Pan-American Trade Conference will go into session in Houston on May 15, the day after the A. A. C. W. convention adjourns.

All of this takes place, fittingly enough, within the borders of a State that has saluted six flags in its history of the last three hundred years.

Convention affairs open Saturday night with a reception in the magnificent new city auditorium of Houston, with the idea of compelling delegates who went to London last year to remember and as soon forget the great Albert Hall reception accorded the American visitors when Great Britain was a host. Details of this and of the Sunday inspirational program and of the business sessions which will keep the members of 21 departmental associations occupied from Monday to Thursday—all are given minutely on the pages which follow. Major aspects of the meeting, other than those mentioned so far and those detailed in the program, are the contest for the 1926 convention and the election of a new president to succeed Lou E. Holland, of Kansas City who was elected in 1922 and re-elected in 1923 and 1924. He has declined to serve another term, and his successor will take office with the association in the best financial condition of its history and enjoying the confidence of the public and of advertisers in particular on both sides of the Atlantic.

The prospect of a contest for the nomination for the first time in several years gives interest at this time to the A. A. C. W. method of nominating officers and the plan of suffrage.

The chief governing body of the association is the executive committee, three of whose seven members are elected on the floor of the annual convention—the president, secretary, and retiring president. Nominations for president and secretary-treasurer are made by the joint assembly, which comprises one representative from each of the departmental organizations, and representatives from the geographically-separated districts. Additional nominations for president may be made from the floor of the business meeting of the annual convention.

Other members of the executive committee, besides those named, are elected as follows:

One is chosen as their president by the board of advertising club presidents, meeting at the convention; another is elected chairman by the national advertising commission; a sixth is elected by the representatives of the women's advertising clubs, and the seventh is elected by the sustaining members.

In addition to electing a member of the committee, the advertising club presidents are also given the duty of nominating the next convention city, their choice being subject to ratification on the floor of the convention. Other nominations can be made from the floor, but it is the practice to ratify the choice of the club presidents.

The joint assembly, in addition to acting as a nominating committee, also serves as a committee on resolutions and both of these bodies are employed during the convention, for the presentation of important matters which require study before presentation to the convention business session.

Candidates who have been mentioned frequently for the presidency include C. K. Woodbridge, of New York; Rowe Stewart of Philadelphia; and Homer J. Buckley of Chicago. Mr. Woodbridge, whose candidacy has been aggressively forwarded by the New York Club, is advertising manager of the Dictaphone Company, and has been prominent in local club affairs for many years. He has taken an active part in the national movement also for several years and has many friends throughout the organization. Mr. Stewart, who is general manager of the Philadelphia Record, is a past president of the association and is well acquainted with the trials of the office. It might be stated, parenthetically, that none of the

(Continued on page 52)

GOV. FERGUSON WELCOMES ADVERTISERS ON BEHALF OF ALL TEXANS

GOVERNOR FERGUSON

ALL Texas will greet those who come to Houston for the Associated Advertising Clubs convention.

All Texas will welcome them.

Those who are not in Houston will be staying in Dallas and Fort Worth, San Antonio and Austin, so that when you make the post-convention tours your welcome and your entertainment over the State will be of the same quality as that you have had in Houston.

There is plenty in Texas for you to see. From the wind-swept plains of the Panhandle to the rice fields of the Southeast, from the lumber pine forests of East Texas to the flowering gardens of the Rio Grande Valley, from the rich cotton fields of the black land belt to the majestic beauty of the Davis Mountains, you can gather a story of the richness and the promise of the Lone Star State. From the battlefields of San Jacinto to the hallowed shrine of the Alamo you will learn the story of that fight; you will catch the romance and the glory of "Thermopylae had her messenger of defeat; the Alamo had none."

In the name of the State of Texas, I bid you welcome.

MIRIAM A. FERGUSON, Governor.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM

Twenty-First Annual Convention

Associated Advertising Clubs of the World

HOUSTON, TEXAS, MAY 9 to 14, 1925

SUMMARY OF PROGRAM AND CONVENTION FEATURES

THEME OF CONVENTION—"Advertising as a Means to World Progress."

SATURDAY, May 9.

Evening—

"Welcome to Texas" Reception—City Auditorium.

Concert by Mexican National Band (by courtesy of President Calles, Republic of Mexico).

Formal reception on stage, welcoming officials of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and official spokesmen of each Advertising Club and each Department of the National Advertising Commission.

Addresses of Welcome by

Miriam A. Ferguson, Governor of Texas:

Oscar F. Holcombe, Mayor of Houston;

Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth, chairman, Tenth District, Associated Advertising Clubs.

William S. Patton, president, Advertising Association of Houston;

Samuel R. Bertron, president, Houston Chamber of Commerce.

Response by Lou E. Holland, Kansas City, president, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

SUNDAY, May 10.

Morning—

Special services in various Houston churches with delegates at the convention as speakers.

Afternoon, 1:00—

Houston Club, Private Dining Room.—Joint Luncheon, Executive Committee, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and District Chairmen and Chairmen of Standing Committees, Associated Advertising Clubs.

Afternoon, 2:30—

Inspirational Meeting, City Auditorium.

Presiding: Lt. Governor Lynch Davidson of Texas.

Band Concert—2.30 to 3:00 P. M.

Music—Texas Prairie View Normal Chorus (100 negro voices).

Invocation—the Rev. F. M. C. Bedell, Christ Episcopal Church, Houston.

Speaker—Charles Aubrey Eaton, Congressman from New Jersey.

Keynote Address—"Advertising as a Means to World Progress."

Evening, 8:00—

City Auditorium.

Band Concert by Royal Scotch Highlanders Band, St. Petersburg, Florida.

Address by the Rt. Rev. Clinton S. Quin, Bishop of the Episcopal Church of Texas, Houston, "Moral Influence of World Peace."

Address by Morris Sheppard, United States Senator from Texas, "Economic Influence of World Peace."

Concert—The Mexican National Band (courtesy of President Calles of the Republic of Mexico).

MONDAY, May 11.

Morning—9:00—General Session, City Auditorium.

Convention formally opened by President Holland.

Addresses of welcome by delegates from other countries by President Holland and Mayor Holcombe.

Responses by

Sir Willian Veno, Manchester, England.

Arturo Elias, Mexico, special envoy, President Calles.

Samuel Tolon, official representative, Cuban Government.

Norman S. H. Catts, Sydney, Australia.

Message to the convention from President Calvin Coolidge.

Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, Washington, "The Influence of Advertising on Distribution."

L. W. Baldwin, president, Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, the Gulf Coast Lines and the International-Great Northern Railroad, St. Louis, "Advertising and Public Opinion."

Denick W. Dunlay, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, "Advertising the Farmer as a Business."

John H. Logeman, chairman, International Exhibit Committee, Chicago, "The Advertising Exhibits."

PROGRAM

Afternoon—12:30.

Annual Meeting National Advertising Commission for election of officers and other business, Rice Hotel.

Afternoon—2:00.

General Session, City Auditorium.
Presiding: William S. Patton, president, Advertising Association of Houston.
James W. Young, vice-president, J. Walter Thompson Company, Chicago, "Romance of Marketing."
Major Wynne Williams, advertising manager, Times, London, "Britain's Gain."
H. W. Wayne, director, E. Harris and Company, Ltd., and Kenway, Ltd., London, "Truth in International Publicity."
Meeting will adjourn early for Ship Channel trip to San Jacinto Battleground.

TUESDAY, May 12.

Morning—9:00.

General Session, City Auditorium.
Presiding: Edwin T. Meredith, president, Meredith Publications, Des Moines.
George Waverly Briggs, vice-president, City National Bank, Dallas, "Service, the Genius of Progress."
Edith McClure-Patterson, Dayton, Ohio, home budget specialist, General Federation of Women's Clubs, "How Advertising Serves the Consumer."
Mrs. Anita Simpson, Albert Frank & Company, Chicago, "How We Are Selling the Value of Advertising to Women in the Home."
Hiram Bingham, United States Senator from Connecticut, "Aviation for World Progress."
Martin J. Insull, president, Middle West Utilities Company, Chicago, "The Benefits of Public Utility Advertising to the Consumer."

Afternoon—12:30.

Meeting of Joint Assembly, Brazos Hotel.

Afternoon—2:00.

Departmental Sessions.

Evening—6:30.

Annual Dinner Board of Club Presidents, Rice Hotel Ball Room.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

Morning—9:00.

Departmental Sessions.

Afternoon—1:00.

Trip to Galveston. Special trains from Union Station to convey all delegates to Galveston.

Afternoon—3:00.

General Session, Galveston City Auditorium,

INTERNATIONAL DAY.

Presiding: C. K. Woodbridge, president, Dictaphone Corporation, chairman General Program Committee, New York.
Address of Welcome—Baylis Harriss, Mayor of Galveston.
Address by George E. Roberts, vice-president, National City Bank, New York.
Address by delegate from South America (name to be announced).
Brief address by Roy Miller, president, Intracoastal Canal Association, Houston.

THURSDAY, May 14.

Morning—9:00.

Departmental Sessions.

Afternoon—2:30.

General Session, City Auditorium.
Presiding: President Holland.
Presentation of olive wood gavel, made in the Carpenter Shop in Nazareth by an orphan boy—a ward of America—by Miss L. MacKibbin, National Committee Near East Relief and Member of League of Advertising Women of New York.
Annual Business Meeting.
Report of secretary-treasurer, Jesse H. Neal.
Report of Federation of Women's Advertising Clubs, Miss Ethel B. Scully.
Report of National Advertising Commission, W. Frank McClure.
Report of Committees:
Constitution and By-Laws, T. W. LeQuatte, chairman, National Vigilance Committee.
National Vigilance Committee, by Herbert S. Houston, chairman.
Educational, Paul T. Cherington, chairman.
Speakers Bureau, George W. Hopkins, chairman.
International Advertising Club Development, Frederick M. Feiker, chairman.
Reforestation, Malcolm Muir, chairman.
Report on Resolutions by chairman of Joint Assembly.
Announcement of nomination of convention city, by president, Board of Club Presidents.
Announcement by Jesse H. Neal, secretary-treasurer, of previous selections to Executive Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the Word by the Sustaining Members, Board of Club Presidents, Federation of Women's Advertising Clubs and National Advertising Commission.
Election of president.
Election of secretary-treasurer.

Afternoon—4:30.

Delegates conveyed by motor to Hermann Park for rodeo exhibition and southern barbecue.
Miller Memorial Theatre (Hermann Park), Musical Revue, "South of 36."
Entertainment at City Auditorium.

Evening—10:30.

Delegates depart for Texas Post Convention Tours.

ASSOCIATION OF NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING EXECUTIVES

(Newspaper Department, A. A. C. W.)

COMPLETE PROGRAM

MONDAY, May 11.

(Unofficial Session.)
Assembly Hall, Chamber of Commerce.

Morning—9:00.

Informal "get-together" of newspaper men.

Morning—10:00.

Session opened by Frank T. Carroll, president, A. of N. A. E., and advertising manager, Indianapolis News.
Address of welcome—M. E. Foster, president, Houston Chronicle.
Response—Harvey R. Young, advertising director, Columbus Dispatch.

PROGRAM

Report of secretary and other introductory business proceedings.
Announcements.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Meeting place to be announced

TUESDAY, May 12.
(Unofficial Session.)
Morning—10:30.

Joint meeting of A. of N. A. E. and Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers. This session will be in charge of the Classified men. The A. of N. A. E. will be represented on the program by Carl P. Slane, Publisher, the Peoria Journal-Transcript, who will discuss the subject, "The Relation of Classified to Other Divisions of the Advertising Department."

LOCAL DISPLAY ADVERTISING PROBLEMS

Afternoon—2:00.
(Unofficial Session.)
Assembly Hall, Chamber of Commerce.

Thomas K. Kelly, president, T. K. Kelly Sales Company, Minneapolis, "The Development of Special Sales Through Newspaper Advertising."
Major Wynn Williams, advertisement manager, London Times, "How We Are Developing More Newspaper Advertising in England."
M. E. Foster, president, Houston Chronicle, "The Development of Advertising from Public Utilities."
George S. Cohen, president, Foley Brothers Dry Goods Company, Houston, "Department Store Advertising from the Inside."
Informal Discussions:

How often should sales meetings for salesmen be conducted? What information should be covered? Should they be confined to general discussions or assigned topics?
Stories of successful advertisers to be presented from the floor by members. Amount of space used, number of papers used, results secured, etc.
What is the relative value of special sales advertising, as compared with institutional and style advertising?
Should newspapers exact a minimum daily lineage from theatres? Should the lineage requirement be based upon the amount of publicity secured?
What should the closing hour for copy be, both for morning and evening paper, assuming that proofs are required? How many changes should be allowed on proofs without an extra composition charge?
Is direct mail advertising by retailers growing? How can direct mail competition be combated most successfully?

NATIONAL ADVERTISING PROBLEMS

WEDNESDAY, May 13.
(Official Session.)
Assembly Hall, Chamber of Commerce.
Morning—9:00.

Holland Hudson, National Vigilance Committee, A. A. C. of W., "The National Vigilance Committee and the Newspapers."
James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary, American Association of Advertising Agencies, "The Relationship Between Advertising Agencies and Newspapers."
Prof. Daniel Starch, Graduate School Business Administration, Harvard University, and director, Department of Research, A. A. of A. A., "Markets and Media Research."
Informal Discussions:

Should special positions be sold or should all advertisements be handled on the run of paper basis? What are the proper definitions of each kind of preferred position service? How much does it cost the newspaper to handle each kind of position?
What are acceptable methods of developing national newspaper advertising from manufacturers located in the immediate vicinity of the newspaper's publication city? (Newspapers should develop home city manufacturers for their own paper with the idea of the manufacturer extending his operations to newspapers in other markets instead of to magazines.)
Do present and future conditions justify a change in merchandising service policies, either from the standpoint of extending or curtailing such operations?
Will radio broadcasting become a greater or less factor as an advertising medium?

PROBLEMS AFFECTING COMPLETE ADVERTISING DEPARTMENTS

THURSDAY, May 14.
(Official Session.)
Morning—9:00.
Assembly Hall, Chamber of Commerce.

A. L. Carmical, director of publicity and promotion, Chicago American, "Promotion As a Factor in Newspaper Advertising."
Merle Sidener, president, Sidener-Van Riper Advertising Company, "Non-Skid Advertising."
R. A. Turnquist, advertising manager, Milwaukee Journal, "Effective Rulings to Differentiate National from Local Advertising."
Informal Discussion:

Should newspapers maintain a supply of many type styles or just a few that are well selected?
What suggestions can be offered covering effective sales arguments for newspaper advertising?
What plans are used to develop Saturday lineage for an evening newspaper with a Sunday issue and Monday lineage for a morning paper with a Sunday issue?
How can comparisons of lineage and circulation be handled in a solicitation without "Knocking" other newspapers?

Afternoon—2:00.
(Unofficial Session.)
Assembly Hall, Chamber of Commerce.

Completion of discussion of more important subjects remaining after adjournment of previous sessions.
Report of Resolutions Committee.
Report of Auditing Committee.
Report of Nominating Committee.
Election of Officers.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF ADVERTISING AGENCIES

H. S. Gardner, presiding.

TUESDAY, May 12.
Afternoon—2:30.

Welcome, Shelly E. Tracy, Southwestern Advertising Agency, Dallas.

PROGRAM

Response, H. S. Gardner.
"Function of Advertising in Distribution of Merchandise," John Benson, Benson, Gamble & Crowell, Chicago.
"Constructive Co-operation," James O'Shaughnessy, executive secretary, American Association of Advertising Agencies.
"How Agencies Can Use Vigilance Movement to Best Advantage," H. J. Kenner, manager, Better Business Bureau, New York.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.
Morning—9:30.
"Market and Media Research," Dr. Daniel Starch, American Association of Advertising Agencies.
"Co-ordinating Advertising With Sales," Arthur W. Sullivan, Joseph Richards Company, New York.
"Post-War Change in Overseas Marketing," Overseas Guests.

THURSDAY, May 14.
Morning—9:30.
"How Accessible to Public Should Manufacturer Aim to Make His Product?" A. B. Taylor, Ferry-Hanly Advertising Company, Kansas City.
"Planning the Copy Appeal," James W. Young, J. Walter Thompson Company, Chicago.
"Shall the Campaign be Sectional"? Harborough I. Lill, The Chambers Agency, New Orleans.

DIRECTORY AND REFERENCE MEDIA DEPARTMENT

TUESDAY, May 12.
Afternoon—2:00.
The principal paper at the meeting of the Directory and Reference Media Department will be presented by Col H. H. Burdick, R. L. Polk & Company, Detroit, president of the department.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

TUESDAY, May 12.
Afternoon—2:00.
Presiding: William N. Bayless, president, The Tiffany-Bayless Company, Cleveland, Ohio.
"A Remarkable Co-operative Interchurch Campaign," A. G. Corry, church advertising specialist, Philadelphia.
"The Church and the Newspaper," John T. Brabner Smith, in charge of secular press publicity, world service agencies, Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago.
"The Newspaper is Anxious to Co-operate," J. B. Fraser, promotion manager, Hamilton (Ont.) Herald.
"Broadcasting Religion to a Receptive World," Graham Stewart, advertising director, People's Popular Monthly, Des Moines.
"How to Win Newspaper Co-operation," Frank LeRoy Blanchard, director public relations, Henry L. Doherty & Co., New York.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.
Morning—9:00.
Presiding: Rev. F. M. C. Bedell, Christ Church Rectory, Houston.
"What Has the Church Got to Advertise?" Rev. Kerrison Juniper, pastor, First Congregational Church, St. Petersburg, Fla.
"Copy That Compels," William N. Bayless, president, Tiffany-Bayless Company, Cleveland.
"Some Effective Methods From My Experience," Rev. P. B. Hill, Pastor, First Presbyterian Church, San Antonio.
"The Advertising of Truth," Norman T. A. Munder, president, Norman T. A. Munder Company, Baltimore.
"Putting Religion on the Front Page," E. P. Beebe, assistant treasurer, Iron Age Publishing Company, New York.

THURSDAY, May 14,
Morning—9:00.
Presiding: W. Frank McClure, vice-president, Albert Frank & Co., Chicago.
"Can the Church Use Poster Advertising?" Clarence B. Lovell, advertising manager, Poster Advertising Company, Inc., New York.
"From the Publisher's End," Rowe Stewart, business manager, Philadelphia Record.
"Church Advertising in England," Sidney Joseph Fox, Hallett, Fox & White, London, England.
"Impressions of Current Church Advertising," Norman M. Parrott, secretary, Advertising Club of Baltimore.
"The Church's Outside Audience," Joseph M. Ramsey, business manager, The Expositor, Cleveland,

AGRICULTURAL PUBLISHERS ASSOCIATION

Three sessions will be held by the Agricultural Publishers Association. Marco Morrow of the Capper Publications, Topeka, president of the association, will preside.

Sessions begining at 2:30 p. m., Tuesday, May 12, and 9:30 a. m., Thursday, May 14, will be devoted solely to business and routine matters.

The program for the session at 9:30, Wednesday, May 13, follows:

Morning—9:30.
"A Tribute from Vigilance to the Agricultural Press," Holland Hudson, special representative, National Vigilance Committee, New York.
Morning—10:45.
"Some Recent Changes in the Rural and Small Town Market," Paul T. Cherington, director of research, J. Walter Thompson Company, New York.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF THEATRE PROGRAM PUBLISHERS

E. E. Brugh, Chicago, president of the association, presiding.
Time of the meeting to be announced.
"Fundamentals of Advertising," E. E. Brugh.
"Importance of Theatre Programs to the National Advertisers," Ralph Trier, president, New York Theatre Program Corporation.
"Establishment of National Rate and Uniform Program as Aid to National Advertiser Using Theatre Programs," D. R. Mills, president, Mills Advertising Company, Omaha.

DIRECT MAIL ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION

Joseph Meadon will preside at the session Tuesday afternoon, May 12, Frank L. Pierce Wednesday morning and Homer J. Buckley Thursday morning.

TUESDAY, May 12.
Afternoon—2:00.
"The Customer's Viewpoint on Direct Mail Advertising," Irene I. Donath, president, Donath Service, New York.

PROGRAM

"Writing Music for House Organs," R. Fullerton Place, editorial director for Business Papers, House Organs and Associated Magazines, St. Louis; president, Advertising Club of St. Louis.

"Agitation of Information," John H. Clayton, manager department of printed salesmanship, Beals & Morrison, Oklahoma City.

"The Fundamentals of Direct Mail Selling," John Howie Wright, editor, Postage, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

Morning—9:30.

"How to Improve Your Business Letters," S. R. Stauffer, letter counsellor, Minneapolis.

"Eliminating the Waste in Direct Mail Advertising," Homer J. Buckley, president, Buckley, Dement & Company, Chicago.

"Potentialities and Peculiarities of Direct Mail in the South," Jules J. Paglin, advertising manager, Sam Bonard, New Orleans, La.

THURSDAY, May 14.

Morning—9:30.

"Humanizing Advertising," Claude M. Bolser, Department of Journalism, Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana.

"Selling 30,000 Salesmen by Mail," A. Rasmussen, general sales manager, W. and H. Walker, Inc., manufacturing chemists, Pittsburgh.

"Some Notable Examples of Church Advertising," William N. Bayless, president, Tiffany-Bayless Company, Cleveland.

ASSOCIATED RETAIL ADVERTISERS

TUESDAY, May 12.

Afternoon—2:00.

Chairman: Theodore G. Morgan.

"The Advertisement Itself," Miss Catherine McNelis, advertising manager, Fowler, Dick & Walker, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

"Merchandising the Advertisement," George B. Forristall, advertising manager, Foley Bros. Dry Goods Company, Houston.

"Retail Copy," Speaker to be announced.

"How a Better Business Bureau Develops Retail Advertising Standards," Edward L. Greene, special representative, National Vigilance Committee.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

Morning—9:00.

Chairman: George B. Forristall, Foley Bros. Dry Goods Company, Houston.

"Changes in Retailing and the Advertiser," H. H. Maynard, professor of business organization, College of Commerce and Journalism, Ohio State University.

"Advertising, the Open Road to Profit," Martin L. Pierce, director of research, The Hoover Company, North Canton, Ohio.

"Store Publications," H. E. Hart, president, Hart Company, Chicago.

"Adapting the Other Fellow's Ideas," Amosh H. Weigel, Standard Corporation, New York and Chicago.

THURSDAY, May 14.

Morning—9:00.

Chairman: Theodore G. Morgan.

"Crediting Basement Readers with Average Intelligence," Miss Harriet Goodsite, Advertising Department, LaSalle & Koch Company, Toledo, Ohio.

"Big Town Advertising with Small Town Facilities," Roy G. McKinney, advertising manager, Baker-Hemphill Company, San Angelo, Tex.

"Teasers as a Help to Selling," R. D. Friend, advertising manager, Pelletier Company, Sioux City, Iowa.

"Human Appeal in Furniture Advertising," Mrs. Guy M. Locking, advertising manager, Buckeye Furniture Company, Toledo, Ohio.

"Building a $2,000,000 Business in a Town of 1,000 People," Bob Mooney, president, the B. & O. Cash Store, Temple, Okla.

COMMUNITY ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

TUESDAY, May 12.

Afternoon—2:00,

Presiding: Charles F. Hatfield, secretary and general manager, St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau; president, Community Advertising Department.

"Health Appeal in Community Advertising," Homer N. Calver, executive secretary, American Public Health Association, New York.

"How Advertising Specialties Advertise Communities," U. Rae Colson, president, U. Rae Colson Company, Paris, Ill.

"How Tourist Camps Advertise a Community," J. Lee Barrett, secretary-treasurer, International Association of Tourist Camps, Detroit.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

Morning—9:00.

Presiding: Don E. Mowry, general secretary, Chamber of Commerce, Madison, Wis.

"The Florida Mill Tax; How Distributed and What It Has Accomplished," Jefferson Thomas, president, Thomas Advertising Service, Jacksonville, Fla.

"Chamber of Commerce Publications as Medium for Community Advertising," Montague A. Tancock, manager, Bureau of Publicity, Chamber of Commerce, Omaha.

"How Missouri Has Organized to Sell Its Resources to the World," George A. Pickens, secretary, Missouri Association, Jefferson City, Mo.

"How Advertising Has Developed the Pacific Coast Country," Lloyd Spencer, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, president, Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs Association.

"The Place of the Motion Picture in Community Life and Development," J. Homer Platten, treasurer, Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc., New York.

"How the City of St. Louis Advertises," Walter B. Weisenburger, chairman, Publicity Committee, St. Louis Chamber of Commerce; past president, Advertising Club of St. Louis.

THURSDAY, May 14.

Morning—9:00.

Presiding: Charles F. Hatfield.

"The Good Will of the Community," William P. Green, associate director, National Vigilance Committee, New York.

Report of Committees:

Extension—Don E. Mowry, chairman.

Research—(Truth)—Montague A. Tancock,

PROGRAM

Chairman, manager, Bureau of Publicity, Omaha Chamber of Commerce.
Membership—Frank B. White, chairman, president, Agricultural Advertising Service, Chicago.
Miscellaneous reports and discussion; election of officers.

GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

Morning—9:00.

"How the Photo-Engraver Can Help the Printer," Edward Epstean, Walker Engraving Company, New York.
"Truth in Printing," Norman T. A. Munder, president, Norman T. A. Munder Company, Baltimore.
"Salesmanship As It Applies to Printing," G. C. Willings, vice-president, Intertype Corporation, New York, N. Y.
Subjects to be announced—Joseph Meadon, president, Franklin Press, Detroit; Fred Johnston, president, Johnston Printing & Advertising Company, Dallas.

ADVERTISING SPECIALTY ASSOCIATION

The Advertising Specialty Association will hold one session on Wednesday morning, May 13. Frank A. Geiger, president, Geiger Brothers, Newark, N. J., and president of the association, will preside. The program follows:

"Financial Advertising as a Field for Specialties," Paul Hardesty, manager of publicity, Union Trust Company, Chicago.
"Supplementing Direct Mail with Specialty Advertising," Harry Todd, vice-president and general manager, Kuhl & Bent Company, Chicago.
"Augmenting Community Advertising with Specialties," Charles F. Hatfield, president, Community Advertising Department, St. Louis.
"Advertising Specialties as an Aid to Screen Advertising," Douglas D. Rothacker, president, Screen Advertisers Association, Chicago.
"Good-Will—Its Value and Creation by Specialties," Bennett Chapple, advertising manager, American Rolling Mills Company, Middletown, Ohio.
"Making the Desert Blossom," L. H. Buckley, American Art Works, Coshocton, Ohio.

AMERICAN PHOTO-ENGRAVERS ASSOCIATION.

(Time and place to be determined.)

C. A. Stinson, president, Gatchel & Manning, Inc., Philadelphia, "The American Photo-Engravers Association's Contribution to Modern Advertising."
J. J. Walden, president, Southwestern Engraving Company, Ft. Worth, "The Development of the Great Southwest Through the Aid of Pictures."
Edward Epstean, Walker Engraving Company, New York City, "The Photo-Engraving Process" (Illustrated).
O. F. Kwett, president, Northern Engraving Company, Canton, Ohio, "Pictures as an Aid to Distribution of the World's Goods."
Lou E. Holland, "Harnessing the Power of Pictures in Advertising."
H. C. Campbell, president, Western Engraving & Colortype Company, Seattle, "Your Story in Pictures Leaves Nothing Untold."
Addresses by President Houser and by Louis Flader, Chicago, commissioner of the Photo-Engravers department.

FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S ADVERTISING CLUBS OF THE WORLD.

TUESDAY, May 12.

Afternoon—2:00.

Theme: "The Advertising Woman's Part in World Progress."
Greetings— Lou E. Holland, president, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, New York City.
"The Woman Proprietor Aiding World Progress," Miss Leno Osborne, advertising, Oklahoma City.
"World Progress Needs Women of Confidence!" Carl Hunt, manager, Associated Advertising Clubs, New York City.
"Advertising Responsibilities Assumed by Women in World Progress," Mrs. Carolyn Trowbridge Radner-Lewis, director of publicity, H. R. Mallinson & Co., Inc., New York City.
Federation Business Reports and Election of Officers.

POSTER ADVERTISING ASSOCIATION

TUESDAY, May 12.

Afternoon—2:00.

Presiding: Tom Nokes, secretary and general manager, Johnstown Poster Advertising Company, Johnstown, Pa.
Welcome Address—P. L. Michael, president, Houston Poster Advertising Company, Houston.
"Posters—The Greatest Common Denominator," Clarence B. Lovell, advertising manager, General Outdoor Advertising Company, Inc., New York.
"Posters and Their Co-ordination with Other Media," Harold Kayton, manager, Sunset System of San Antonio, San Antonio.
"A Message from Overseas," H. W. Wayne, director, E. Harris & Company, Ltd., London.
"The Future of Poster Advertising," Harry Crawford, president, Galveston Poster Service, Galveston.
"International Uniform Service in Poster Advertising," E. Allen Frost, counsel, Poster Advertising Association, Chicago.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

Morning—9:00.

"The Relation of Advertising to Distribution," Warren L. Hoagland, chief, Specialties Division, Department of Commerce, Washington.
"The Choice of Media as a Means of Elimination of Waste in Distribution," Richard F. O'Toole, chief, Latin American Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Washington.
"The Present Scope of Better Business Bureau Work," Harry W. Riehl, manager, Better Business Bureau, St. Louis.
"What Poster Advertising Has Done for Our Product," J. O. Cheek, president, Cheek-Neal Coffee Company, Nashville.
"Can the Church Use Poster Advertising?" William N. Bayless, president, Tiffany-Bayless Company, Cleveland.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL ADVERTISERS' ASSOCIATION AND THE ASSOCIATED BUSINESS PAPERS, INC.

TUESDAY, May 12.

Afternoon—2:00.

Julius Holl, advertising manager, Link-Belt Company, Chicago, and president, Industrial Advertisers, will preside.

PROGRAM

"The Industrial Advertiser and the Community," Bennett Chapple, director of publicity, American Rolling Mills Company, Middletown, Ohio.
"How Trade Advertising Benefits the Ultimate Consumer," Paul I. Aldrich, editor and manager, National Provisioner, Chicago.
"Improving Industrial Methods Through Advertising," Keith J. Evans, advertising manager, Joseph T. Ryerson & Sons Company, Chicago.
"The Economic Function of Business Paper Advertising," Jesse H. Neal, executive secretary, Associated Business Papers, Inc., New York.

FINANCIAL ADVERTISERS ASSOCIATION

Presiding: E. H. Kittredge, Hornblower & Weeks, Boston, president, Financial Advertisers' Association.

TUESDAY, May 12.

Afternoon—2:00.

"Greetings from the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World," President Holland.
"The Ideal Savings Bank," Alvin P. Howard, vice-president, Hibernia Bank and Trust Company, New Orleans, and president Savings Bank Division, American Bankers' Association.
"Home Banks and Premiums," Guy W. Cooke, assistant cashier, First National Bank, Chicago.
Discussion.
"Building a New Business Machine for a City Bank," H. J. Bernard, cashier, Second National Bank, Houston, Texas.
Discussion.
"Does Circulation of Savings Customers Pay?" Sam R. Lawder, vice-president, First National Bank, Houston.
"Out-Faking the Fake Publication," Sam P. Judd, publicity manager, Merchantile Trust Company, St. Louis.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

Morning—9:00.

"Your National Advertising Commission," Mr. McClure.
"Protecting the Good Will Investment of Financial Advertisers," Kenneth Bernard, manager, Better Business Bureau, Detroit.
"Some Major Problems in Investment Advertising," H. M. Tenney, advertising manager, First National Bank, Houston.
"Employees Contests," Paul Hardesty, publicity manager, Union Trust Company, Chicago.
"Educational Service in Financial Advertising," W. J. Kelley, assistant vice-president, Chicago Trust Company, Chicago.
"Yes, We Have Nothing to Advertise," W. B. Weissenburger, vice-president, National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, Mo.
"How to Finance Enduring Patriotism," Herbert S. Houston, publisher, Our World, New York.

PUBLIC UTILITIES ADVERTISERS

TUESDAY, May 12.

President's address, W. H. Hodge.
E. Paul Young, Illinois Power & Light Corporation, Chicago, "Costs and Results."
I. M. Tuteur, McJunkin Advertising Company, Chicago, "Better Copy."
Discussion, led by LaBert St. Clair, American Electric Railway Association, New York.
Edward J. Cooney, Lowell, Mass., "Interesting Facts about the Exhibit," Dana H. Howard, Commonwealth Edison Company, Chicago, "Membership Campaign Results," Donald M. Mackie, Consumers Power Company, Jackson, Mich. "The Association Bulletin."
Leonard Ormerod, Bell Telephone Company, Philadelphia, "Employment Opportunities."

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

P. C. Staples, Bell Telephone Company of Philadelphia, "Keeping the Organization Abreast of its Advertising."
C. R. Winters, Central Advertising Agency, Wichita, Kan., and George Ade Davis, Oklahoma Gas & Electric Company, Oklahoma City, discussing the agency and the direct advertising sides of the question, "Relation of Advertising Agency to Public Utility Advertising."
Marshall E. Sampsell, Illinois Public Service Company, Chicago, "The Use of Motion Pictures by Public Utilities."
J. C. Jordan, Pacific Gas & Electric Company, San Francisco, George McQuaid, Texas Public Utility Information Bureau, Dallas, and B. J. Mullaney, People's Gas, Light & Coke Company, Chicago, "Good Will and Institutional Advertising."

CLUB OFFICERS CONFERENCE

TUESDAY, May 12.

Afternoon—2:00.

Presiding: Norman M. Parrott, secretary, Advertising Club of Baltimore.
"The Qualifications of a Good Advertising Club Secretary," R. Fullerton Place, president, R. Fullerton Place & Co.; president, Advertising Club of St. Louis.
"The Clubs' Educational Work," Paul T. Cherington, chairman, Educational Committee, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; director of research, J. Walter Thompson Company, New York.
"Duties and Responsibilities of an Advertising Club," Joe Marshall, Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Company, Pasadena, Cal.
"How the Washington Bureau is Serving the Clubs," Robert E. Hutchinson, director, Washington, D. C.
"Better Business Bureau Benefits," William P. Green, associate director, National Vigilance Committee, New York.

WEDNESDAY, May 13.

Morning—9:00.

Presiding: Norman M. Parrott.
"Simple Methods of Accounting," Frank L. Galle, advertising manager, Wichita Eagle; chairman, Seventh District, Wichita, Kansas.
"The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World," Lou E. Holland, Kansas City, president.
"The Most Important Club in Town," Earle Pearson, educational director, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, New York.
"What Has the Association to Offer to the Junior Clubs?" C. C. Younggreen, Klau, Van Pietersom-Dunlap-Younggreen; chairman, Sixth District, Milwaukee, Wis.
"How the New England Clubs Stage a District Convention," Frederick W. Bliss, General Electric Company, Providence, chairman, First District.

STATISTICAL SNAPSHOT OF TEXAS AS A MARKET AND ITS NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING FACILITIES

CITY 1920 Population	Bank Resources	Value Manufactured Products	Chief Industries	Trading Area	Wholesale Houses	Retail Outlets	Daily Newspapers	Total Circulation
ABILENE 18,000	$6,000,000	.....	Grain elevator, gins, oil mill, cotton compress, broom factory, printing, auto springs, planing mills and railroad shops. Wholesale center.	25 to 50 miles to each direction. Retail shopping is not uncommon for a distance of 200 miles.	Groceries, 3; Meats, 3; Fruits, 2; Hardware, 1.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 75; bakers, 7; cigar stores and stands, 12; confectioners, 12; delicatessen, 3; dressmakers, 7; druggists, 13; dry goods, 12; department stores, 4; electrical supplies, 6; florists, 4; fruits, 6; furniture, 6; garages, 20; grocers, 84; hardware, 5; jewelry, 5; meat markets, 8; men's furnishings, 15; men's clothing, 12; merchant tailors, 1; milliners, 12; opticians, 6; photographers, 6; pianos and musical instruments, 3; radio supplies, 6; restaurants, 26; shoes, 20; sporting goods, 5; stationers, 4; women's apparel, 8.	Evening..... 1 Sunday..... 1	E6,731 S7,824
AMARILLO 15,494	9,816,000	$3,000,000	Railroad shops, zinc smelter, flourmill, creamery, oil refinery, leather goods, sheet metal, products, candy, ice, brick and tile, oil development.	22 miles in all directions.	Groceries, 4; Meats, 2. Fruits, 7; Hardware, 2; Dry Goods, 1; Miscellaneous Lines, Farm Implements, 14; Auto Accessories, 6; Auto Tires, 9; Miscellaneous, 19.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 66; bakers, 6; cigar stores and stands, 23; confectioners, 19; delicatessen, 2; dressmakers, 8; druggists, 20; dry goods, 17; department stores, 1; electrical supplies, 3; florists, 3; fruits, 5; furniture, 13; garages, 10; grocers, 90; hardware, 5; jewelry, 13; meat markets, 26; men's furnishings, 16; men's clothing, 16; merchant tailors, 6; milliners, 12; opticians, 6; photographers, 6; pianos and musical instruments, 3; radio supplies, 3; restaurants, 36; shoes, 16; sporting goods, 6; stationers, 1; women's apparel, 17.	Morning..... 1 Evening..... 2 Sunday..... 2	M8,206 E7,563 S16,238
ATHENS 3,176	2,443,693	1,250,000	Brick, building, tile, pottery and clay products, auto batteries, printing, mattresses.	Extends 25 miles north, south, east and west.	Groceries, 2.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 20; bakers, 1; confectioners, 2; dressmakers, 1; druggists, 5; dry goods, 9; department stores, 2; electrical supplies, 1; florists, 1; furniture, 2; garages, 6; grocers, 18; hardware, 2; jewelry, 3; meat markets, 4; men's furnishings, 3; milliners, 1; opticians, 1; photographers, 1; pianos and musical instruments, 1; radio supplies, 1; restaurants, 10; women's apparel, 2.	Evening..... 1	E680
AUSTIN 34,876	27,000,000	7,121,000	Furniture, chili factory, printing, foundries, machine shops, ice factories, fruit and meat canning, compresses, brick factories.	40 to 50 miles.	Groceries, 3; Meats, 2; Fruits, 2; Hardware, 7; Dry Goods, 1.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 51; bakers, 20; cigar stores and stands, 15; confectioners, 40; dressmakers, 40; druggists, 33; dry goods, 25; department stores, 4; electrical supplies, 7; florists, 8; fruits, 36; furniture, 18; furriers, 1; garages, 34; grocers, 132; hardware, 5; jewelry, 12; meat markets, 51; men's furnishings, 8; men's clothing, 25; merchant tailors, 1; milliners, 9; opticians, 5; photographers, 9; pianos and musical instruments, 6; radio supplies, 1; restaurants, 73; shoes, 13; sporting goods, 3; stationers, 6; women's apparel, 8.	Morning..... 1 Evening..... 1 Sunday..... 2	M11,511 E6,438 S22,173
BEAUMONT 40,422	.....	.....	Oil refining, lumbering, rice milling, iron manufacturing, shipbuilding, hardwood manufacturing.	Extends 40 miles west, 100 miles east, 125 miles northeast, 100 miles north, 30 miles south.	Groceries, 5; Meats, 6; Fruits, 3; Hardware, 3; Dry Goods, 1; Miscellaneous Lines, Drugs, 1; Miscellaneous, 5.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 116; bakers, 10; cigar stores and stands, 23; confectioners, 5; delicatessen, 5; druggists, 26; dry goods, 8; department stores, 7; electrical supplies, 6; florists, 5; furniture, 14; furriers, 2; garages, 8; grocers, 154; hardware, 4; jewelry, 10; men's furnishings, 15; men's clothing, 15; merchant tailors, 5; milliners, 7; opticians, 5; photographers, 5; pianos and musical instruments, 5; radio supplies, 5; restaurants, 18; shoes, 5; sporting goods, 4; stationers, 3; women's apparel, 3.	Morning..... 1 Evening..... 1 Sunday..... 1	M22,271 E7,316 S31,431
BONHAM 6,008	2,000,000	.....	Gasoline Pump Mfg. Co. and Mattress Mfg. Co., farming, truck and fruit raising, dairying.	15 to 20 miles.	Groceries, 1; Fruits, 1.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 21; bakers, 1; confectioners, 5; druggists, 3; dry goods, 6; electrical supplies, 2; florists, 1; fruits, 2; furniture, 3; garages, 5; grocers, 10; hardware, 4; jewelry, 2; meat markets, 4; men's furnishings, 2; men's clothing, 2; merchant tailors, 2; milliners, 4; opticians, 2; photographers, 2; pianos and musical instruments, 1; radio supplies, 2; restaurants, 4; shoes, 1; sporting goods, 1; stationers, 1; women's apparel, 1.	Evening..... 1	E1,568
BRENHAM 5,066	5,000,000	1,846,000	Cotton seed oil mill, cotton mill, creamery, ice cream, foundry, machine shops, gas light and electric plant, printing, chicken hatchery, two cotton gins,, planing mill.	Radius of 30 miles.	Groceries, 4; Fruits, 1.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 27; bakers, 3; cigar stores and stands, 21; confectioners, 8; delicatessen, 1; dressmakers, 19; druggists, 4; dry goods, 12; department stores, 3; electrical supplies, 1; florists, 2; fruits, 12; furniture, 3; garages, 8; grocers, 26; hardware, 4; jewelry, 3; meat markets, 7; men's furnishings, 3; men's clothing, 6; merchant tailors, 2; milliners, 5; opticians, 2; photographers, 1; pianos and musical instruments, 1; radio supplies, 2; restaurants, 7; shoes, 11; sporting goods, 4; stationers, 2; women's apparel, 4.	Evening..... 1	E1,068
BROWNSVILLE 11,791	6,500,000	75,000	Winter truck and citrus fruit and average 5,000 bales of cotton. Farming community all about here. Tourist city, also manufacture 10,000 dozen palm hats, mattresses, shirts and suits.	North and westerly 26 miles. Across river into old Mexico, truck farming, cotton and citrus fruit communities with 15 miles and Point Isabel on the Gulf of Mexico have bus lines and good roads connecting.	Groceries, 5; Meats, 4; Fruits, 3; Dry Goods, 1; Miscellaneous Lines, Fruit and Truck, 4; Candy, 1; Drugs, 1.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 36; bakers, 3; cigar stores and stands, 6; confectioners, 20; dressmakers, 4; druggists, 5; dry goods, 15; department stores, 4; electrical supplies, 1; florists, 3; fruits, 40; furniture, 8; furriers, 1; garages, 6; grocers, 20; hardware, 5; jewelry, 4; meat markets, 20; men's furnishings, 10; men's clothing, 10; merchant tailors, 10; milliners, 4; opticians, 4; photographers, 5; pianos and musical instruments, 3; restaurants, 12; shoes, 10; sporting goods, 2; stationers, 3; women's apparel, 12; curio stores, 4.	Evening..... 1 Sunday..... 1	E3,150 S3,150
BROWNWOOD 12,500	3,726,144	.....	Railroad lines, rock crushers, candy and pecan products, brick, women's clothing, printing, mattress factories, woodwork plants, cotton oil, gasoline refineries, shale products, cream products, cigars.	50 miles each side.	Groceries, 4; Meats, 2; Fruits, 2; Hardware, 3; Dry Goods, 1.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 37; bakers, 4; cigar stores and stands, 12; confectioners, 8; delicatessen, 1; dressmakers, 3; druggists, 10; dry goods, 14; department stores, 3; electrical supplies, 3; florists, 2; fruits, 3; furniture, 6; garages, 8; grocers, 42; hardware, 7; jewelry, 3; meat markets, 10; men's furnishings, 6; men's clothing, 6; merchant tailors, 5; milliners, 3; opticians, 4; photographers, 5; pianos and musical instruments, 4; radio supplies, 1; restaurants, 27; shoes, 5; sporting goods, 2; stationers, 2; women's apparel, 7.	Evening..... 1	E1,844
BRYAN 6,800	4,379,712	1,500,000	Ice and bottling; laundry, cotton gins, general merchandise, oil mills.	West and south 20 miles, and to north and west 20 to 30 miles.	Groceries, 2; Hardware, 1; Miscellaneous Lines, 1 Ice, 1 Cotton Seed Oil, Coke and Fertilizer.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 25; bakers, 2; cigar stores and stands, 4; confectioners, 6; delicatessen, 2; dressmakers, 5; druggists, 7; dry goods, 14; department stores, 2; electrical supplies, 2; florists, 1; fruits, 2; furniture, 3; garages, 8; grocers, 22; hardware, 4; jewelry, 2; meat markets, 6; men's furnishings, 7; men's clothing, 11; merchant tailors, 2; milliners, 2; opticians, 2; photographers, 3; pianos and musical instruments, 2; radio supplies, 1; restaurants, 8; shoes, 2; sporting goods, 1; stationers, 1; women's apparel, 3.	Evening..... 1	E1,300
CISCO 10,000	2,000,000	.....	Oil and gas, nitro glyc. plants, oil well supplies headquarters for the larger oil companies.	30 miles in each direction.	Groceries, 3; Meats, 1; Fruits, 1; Miscellaneous Lines, 2.	Automobile agencies and accessories, 18; bakers, 3; cigar stores and stands, 5; confectioners, 2; delicatessen, 1; dressmakers, 10; druggists, 6; dry goods, 5; department stores, 3; electrical supplies, 1; florists, 2; fruits, 1; furniture, 1; garages, 15; grocers, 20; hardware, 3; jewelry, 1; meat markets, 2; men's furnishings, 2; men's clothing, 6; merchant tailors, 1; milliners, 5; opticians, 1; photograpers, 2; pianos and musical instruments, 1; radio supplies, 1; restaurants, 25; sporting goods, 1; women's apparel, 2.	Evening..... 1 Sunday..... 1	E2,000 S2,000
